EDITOR'S PREFACE

THE present is the first complete edition of the poetical works of JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER issued on this side of the Atlantic. It is a reprint of the Cambridge Edition issued in 1894 by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston. That was based on the Riverside Edition issued by the same house in America, and by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. in this country. For it, four years before his death, Mr. Whittier wrote introductions and head-notes, revised the text, arranged the poems in the order he thought best, and relegated to an appendix the poems he would, if the public had permitted, have allowed to pass into oblivion. He did indeed discard certain altogether. Up to that time therefore the Riverside was, in the poet's judgment, the definitive edition of his works.

In the four years of his life which followed the issue of that edition he wrote, from time to time, poems which were gathered into a tiny volume printed for private circulation. He seems to have felt that, so far as the general public was concerned, the Riverside Edition represented his completed works. But the verse of so dearly loved a writer could not be kept within a select circle; and after his death these privately printed verses, with certain others of later composition, were gathered into a small volume called At Sundown, and put at the service of the public at large. These poems were included in the Cambridge Edition here reprinted, and also those which afterwards appeared in his 'Life' by S. T. Pickard. The present Oxford Edition differs from the Cambridge in two particulars—it does not include the verses written by his sister Elizabeth H. Whittier, nor the biographical sketch of the Poet.

I have endeavoured to make the notes more easy of reference than in the Cambridge Edition, and have corrected a few obvious printer's errors. With these differences the British public is now offered the poems of Whittier in an edition similar to that regarded as the best on the other side of the Atlantic.

It would not be in harmony with the plan adopted in the Oxford Poets to attempt any critical estimate or indicate the place which Whittier fills among the poets of his own country, or of the larger English-speaking world. Those who love him best would not on the ground of pure poetry place him among the Immortals. A large portion of his verse was written in the heat of the great conflict against slavery, when he had not the time, and perhaps not the ability, to 'squeeze out the whey' of the didactic or commonplace. But it may be affirmed with safety that even in the least poetic of his verses there is a purity of motive and a passion for humanity that make for righteousness. Samuel Taylor Coleridge once said: 'I should almost despair of the man who could peruse the life of John Woolman without an amelioration of heart.' Surely a like remark might be made concerning the verses of JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER. Probably his most poetic, and therefore most enduring, work is to be found in Poems Subjective and Reminiscent; and in his Religious Poems, where his keenly ethical, and at the same time deeply spiritual, nature finds fullest expression. In these there is a simplicity, a reality, a pathos of expression all too rare in verse of this order.

W. GARRETT HORDER.

INTRODUCTION

THE edition of my poems published in 1857 contained the following note by way of preface :—

‘In these volumes, for the first time, a complete collection of my poetical writings has been made. While it is satisfactory to know that these scattered children of my brain have found a home, I cannot but regret that I have been unable, by reason of illness, to give that attention to their revision and arrangement which respect for the opinions of others and my own afterthought and experience demand.

‘That there are pieces in this collection which I would “willingly let die,” I am free to confess. But it is now too late to disown them, and I must submit to the inevitable penalty of poetical as well as other sins. There are others, intimately connected with the author’s life and times, which owe their tenacity of vitality to the circumstances under which they were written, and the events by which they were suggested.

‘The long poem of “Mogg Megone” was in a great measure composed in early life; and it is scarcely necessary to say that its subject is not such as the writer would have chosen at any subsequent period.’

After a lapse of thirty years since the above was written, I have been requested by my publishers to make some preparation for a new and revised edition of my poems. I cannot flatter myself that I have added much to the interest of the work beyond the correction of my own errors and those of the press, with the addition of a few heretofore unpublished pieces, and occasional notes of explanation which seemed necessary. I have made an attempt to classify the poems under a few general heads, and have transferred the long poem of ‘Mogg Megone’ to the Appendix, with other specimens of my earlier writings. I have endeavored to affix the dates of composition or publication as far as possible.

In looking over these poems I have not been unmindful of occasional prosaic lines and verbal infelicities, but at this late day I have neither strength nor patience to undertake their correction.

Perhaps a word of explanation may be needed in regard to a class of poems written between the years 1832 and 1865. Of their defects from an artistic point of view it is not necessary to speak. They were the earnest and often vehement expression of the writer's thought and feeling at critical periods in the great conflict between Freedom and Slavery. They were written with no expectation that they would survive the occasions which called them forth: they were protests, alarm signals, trumpet-calls to action, words wrung from the writer's heart, forged at white heat, and of course lacking the finish and careful word-selection which reflection and patient brooding over them might have given. Such as they are, they belong to the history of the Anti-Slavery movement, and may serve as way-marks of its progress. If their language at times seems severe and harsh, the monstrous wrong of Slavery which provoked it must be its excuse, if any is needed. In attacking it, we did not measure our words. 'It is,' said Garrison, 'a waste of politeness to be courteous to the devil.' But in truth the contest was, in a great measure, an impersonal one,—hatred of slavery and not of slave-masters.

'No common wrong provoked our zeal,
The silken gauntlet which is thrown
In such a quarrel rings like steel.'

Even Thomas Jefferson, in his terrible denunciation of Slavery in the Notes on Virginia, says: 'It is impossible to be temperate and pursue the subject of Slavery.'

After the great contest was over, no class of the American people were more ready, with kind words and deprecation of harsh retaliation, to welcome back the revolted States than the Abolitionists; and none have since more heartily rejoiced at the fast increasing prosperity of the South.

Grateful for the measure of favor which has been accorded to my writings, I leave this edition with the public. It contains all that I care to republish, and some things which, had the matter of choice been left solely to myself, I should have omitted.

POEMS

BY

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

PROEM.

[Written to introduce the first general collection of Whittier's Poems.]

I LOVE the old melodious lays
Which softly melt the ages through,
The songs of Spenser's golden days,
Arcadian Sidney's silvery phrase,
Sprinkling our noon of time with freshest morning dew. 5

Yet, vainly in my quiet hours
To breathe their marvellous notes I try;
I feel them, as the leaves and flowers
In silence feel the dewy showers,
And drink with glad, still lips the blessing of the sky. 10

The rigor of a frozen clime,
The harshness of an untaught ear,
The jarring words of one whose rhyme
Beat often Labor's hurried time,
Or Duty's rugged march through storm and strife, are here. 15

Of mystic beauty, dreamy grace,
 No rounded art the lack supplies;
 Unskilled the subtle lines to trace,
 Or softer shades of Nature's face,
 I view her common forms with unanointed eyes. 20

Nor mine the seer-like power to show
 The secrets of the heart and mind;
 To drop the plummet-line below
 Our common world of joy and woe,
 A more intense despair or brighter hope to find. 25 •

Yet here at least an earnest sense
 Of human right and weal is shown;
 A hate of tyranny intense,
 And hearty in its vehemence,
 As if my brother's pain and sorrow were my own. 30

•
 O Freedom! if to me belong
 Nor mighty Milton's gift divine,
 Nor Marvell's wit and graceful song,
 Still with a love as deep and strong
 As theirs, I lay, like them, my best gifts on thy shrine! 35

Narrative and Legendary Poems

THE VAUDOIS TEACHER.

This poem was suggested by the account given of the manner in which the Waldenses disseminated their principles among the Catholic gentry. They gained access to the house through their occupation as peddlers of silks, jewels, and trinkets. 'Having disposed of some of their goods,' it is said by a writer who quotes the inquisitor Rainerus Sacco, 'they cautiously intimated that they had commodities far more valuable than these, inestimable jewels, which they would show if they could be protected from the clergy. They would then give their purchasers a Bible or Testament, and thereby many were deluded into heresy.'

The poem, under the title Le Colporteur l'auchois, was translated into French by Professor G. de Felice, of Montauban, and further naturalized by Professor Alexandre Rodolphe Vinet, who quoted it in his lectures on French literature, afterwards published. It became familiar in this form to the Waldenses, who adopted it as a household poem. An American clergyman, J. C. Fletcher, frequently heard it when he was a student, about the year 1850, in the theological seminary at Geneva, Switzerland, but the authorship of the poem was unknown to those who used it. Twenty-five years later, Mr. Fletcher, learning the name of the author, wrote to the moderator of the Waldensian synod at La Tour, giving the information. At the banquet which closed the meeting of the synod, the moderator announced the fact, and was instructed in the name of the Waldensian church to write to me a letter of thanks. My letter, written in reply, was translated into Italian and printed throughout Italy.

'O LADY fair, these silks of mine are beautiful and rare,—
The richest web of the Indian loom, which beauty's queen might wear;

And my pearls are pure as thy own fair neck, with whose radiant light they vie;

I have brought them with me a weary way,—will my gentle lady buy?'

The lady smiled on the worn old man through the dark and clustering curls

Which veiled her brow, as she bent to view
his silks and glittering pearls;

And she placed their price in the old man's hand and lightly turned away,

But she paused at the wanderer's earnest
call,—'My gentle lady, stay!

'O lady fair, I have yet a gem which a purer lustre flings,

Than the diamond flash of the jewelled
crown on the lofty brow of kings;

A wonderful pearl of exceeding price,
whose virtue shall not decay,

Whose light shall be as a spell to thee and a blessing on thy way!'

The lady glanced at the mirroring steel where her form of grace was seen,

Where her eye shone clear, and her dark locks waved their clasping pearls between;

'Bring forth thy pearl of exceeding worth,
thou traveller gray and old,

And name the price of thy precious gem,
and my page shall count thy gold.'

The cloud went off from the pilgrim's brow,
as a small and meagre book,

Unchased with gold or gem of cost, from his folding robe he took!

'Here, lady fair, is the pearl of price, may it prove as such to thee !
Nay, keep thy gold,—I ask it not, for the word of God is free !' 20

The hoary traveller went his way, but the gift he left behind Hath had its pure and perfect work on that highborn maiden's mind,
And she hath turned from the pride of sin
to the lowliness of truth,
And given her human heart to God in its beautiful hour of youth !

And she hath left the gray old halls, where an evil faith had power, 25
The courtly knights of her father's train,
and the maidens of her bower ;
And she hath gone to the Vaudois vales
by lordly feet untrod,
Where the poor and needy of earth are rich in the perfect love of God !

THE FEMALE MARTYR.

Mary G——, aged eighteen, a 'Sister of Charity,' died in one of our Atlantic cities, during the prevalence of the Indian cholera, while in voluntary attendance upon the sick.

'BRING out your dead !' The midnight
street
Heard and gave back the hoarse, low
call ;
Harsh fell the tread of hasty feet,
Glanced through the dark the coarse white sheet,
Her coffin and her pall. 5
'What—only one !' the brutal hack-man
said,
As, with an oath, he spurned away the
dead.

How sunk the inmost hearts of all,
As rolled that dead-cart slowly by,
With creaking wheel and harsh hoof-
fall ! 10
The dying turned him to the wall,
To hear it and to die !

Onward it rolled ; while oft its driver stayed,
And hoarsely clamored, 'Ho ! bring out your dead.'

It paused beside the burial-place ; 15
'Toss in your load !' and it was done.
With quick hand and averted face,
Hastily to the grave's embrace
They cast them, one by one, 19
Stranger and friend, the evil and the just,
Together trodden in the churchyard dust !

And thou, young martyr ! thou wast there ;
No white-robed sisters round thee trod,
Nor holy hymn, nor funeral prayer
Rose through the damp and noisome air,
Giving thee to thy God ; 26
Nor flower, nor cross, nor hallowed taper
gave Grace to the dead, and beauty to the grave !

Yet, gentle sufferer ! there shall be,
In every heart of kindly feeling, 30
A rite as holy paid to thee
As if beneath the convent-tree
Thy sisterhood were kneeling,
At vesper hours, like sorrowing angels,
keeping
Their tearful watch around thy place of sleeping. 35

For thou wast one in whom the light
Of Heaven's own love was kindled well ;
Enduring with a martyr's might,
Through weary day and wakeful night,
Far more than words may tell : 40
Gentle, and meek, and lowly, and unknown,
Thy mercies measured by thy God alone !

Where manly hearts were failing, where
The thorough street grew foul with
death,
O high-souled martyr ! thou wast there, 45
Inhaling, from the loathsome air,
Poison with every breath.
Yet shrinking not from offices of dread
For the wrung dying, and the unconscious
dead.

And, where the sickly taper shed 50
 Its light through vapors, damp, confined,
 Hushed as a seraph's fell thy tread,
 A new Electra by the bed

Of suffering human-kind !
 Pointing the spirit, in its dark dismay, 55
 To that pure hope which fadeth not away.

Innocent teacher of the high
 And holy mysteries of Heaven !
 How turned to thee each glazing eye,
 In mute and awful sympathy, 60
 As thy low prayers were given ;
 And the o'er-hoivering Spoiler wore, the while,
 An angel's features, a deliverer's smile !

A blessed task ! and worthy one
 Who, turning from the world, as thou, 65
 Before life's pathway had begun
 To leave its spring-time flower and sun,
 Had sealed her early vow ;
 Giving to God her beauty and her youth,
 Her pure affections and her guileless
 truth. 70

Earth may not claim thee. Nothing here
 Could be for thee a meet reward ;
 Thine is a treasure far more dear :
 Eye hath not seen it, nor the ear
 Of living mortal heard 75
 The joys prepared, the promised bliss
 above,

The holy presence of Eternal Love !

Sleep on in peace. The earth has not
 A nobler name than thine shall be.
 The deeds by martial manhood wrought,
 The lofty energies of thought, 81

The fire of poesy,
 These have but frail and fading honors ;
 thine

Shall Time unto Eternity consign.

Yea, and when thrones shall crumble
 down, 85

And human pride and grandeur fall,
 The herald's line of long renown,
 The mitre and the kingly crown,—
 Perishing glories all !

The pure devotion of thy generous heart 90
 Shall live in Heaven, of which it was a part.

EXTRACT FROM 'A NEW ENGLAND LEGEND.'

Originally a part of the author's Moll Pitcher.

How has New England's romance fled,
 Even as a vision of the morning !
 Its rites foredone, its guardians dead,
 Its priestesses, bereft of dread,
 Waking the veriest urchin's scorning ! 5
 Gone like the Indian wizard's yell
 And fire-dance round the magic rock,
 Forgotten like the Druid's spell
 At moonrise by his holy oak !

No more along the shadowy glen 10
 Glide the dim ghosts of murdered men ;
 No more the unquiet churchyard dead
 Glimpse upward from their turfy bed,
 Startling the traveller, late and lone ;
 As, on some night of starless weather, 15
 They silently commune together,
 Each sitting on his own head-stone !
 The roofless house, decayed, deserted,
 Its living tenants all departed,
 No longer rings with midnight revel 20
 Of witch, or ghost, or goblin evil ;
 No pale blue flame sends out its flashes
 Through creviced roof and shattered sashes !

The witch-grass round the hazel spring
 May sharply to the night-air sing, 25
 But there no more shall withered hags
 Refresh at ease their broomstick nags,
 Or taste those hazel-shadowed waters
 As beverage meet for Satan's daughters ;
 No more their mimic tones be heard, 30
 The mew of cat, the chirp of bird,
 Shrill blending with the hoarser laughter
 Of the fell demon following after !

The cautious goodman nails no more
 A horseshoe on his outer door, 35
 Lest some unseemly hag should fit
 To his own mouth her bridle-bit ;

The goodwife's churn no more refuses
 Its wonted culinary uses
 Until, with heated needle burned, 40
 The witch has to her place returned !
 Our witches are no longer old
 And wrinkled beldames, Satan-sold,
 But young and gay and laughing creatures,

With the heart's sunshine on their features; 45

Their sorcery—the light which dances
Where the raised lid unveils its glances;
Or that low-breathed and gentle tone,

The music of Love's twilight hours,
Soft, dream-like, as a fairy's moan 50

Above her nightly closing flowers,
Sweeter than that which sighed of yore
Along the charmed Ausonian shore!

Even she, our own weird heroine, -
Sole Pythoness of ancient Lynn,¹ 55

Sleeps calmly where the living laid her;
And the wide realm of sorcery,
Left by its latest mistress free,

Hath found no gray and skilled invader.
So perished Albion's 'glammerye,' 60

With him in Melrose Abbey sleeping,
His charmed torch beside his knee,
That even the dead himself might see

The magic scroll within his keeping.
And now our modern Yankee sees 65

Nor omens, spells, nor mysteries;
And naught above, below, around,
Of life or death, of sight or sound,

Whatever its nature, form, or look,
Excites his terror or surprise, — 70

All seeming to his knowing eyes
Familiar as his 'catechise,'
Or 'Webster's Spelling-Book.'

THE DEMON OF THE STUDY.

THE Brownie sits in the Scotchman's room,

And eats his meat and drinks his ale,
And beats the maid with her unused broom,

And the lazy lout with his idle flail;
But he sweeps the floor and threshes the
corn, 5

And hies him away ere the break of dawn.

The shade of Denmark fled from the sun,
And the Cocklane ghost from the barn-loft cheer,

The fiend of Faust was a faithful one,
Agrippa's demon wrought in fear, 10
And the devil of Martin Luther sat
By the stout monk's side in social chat.

The Old Man of the Sea, on the neck of
him

Who seven times crossed the deep,
Twined closely each lean and withered
limb, 15

Like the nightmare in one's sleep.
But he drank of the wine, and Sindbad cast
The evil weight from his back at last.

But the demon that cometh day by day
To my quiet room and fireside nook, 20

Where the casement light falls dim and gray

On faded painting and ancient book,
Is a sorrier one than any whose names
Are chronicled well by good King James.

No bearer of burdens like Caliban, 25
No runner of errands like Ariel,

He comes in the shape of a fat old man,
Without rap of knuckle or pull of bell;

And whence he comes, or whither he goes,
I know as I do of the wind which blows. 30

A stout old man with a greasy hat
Slouched heavily down to his dark, red nose,

And two gray eyes enveloped in fat,
Looking through glasses with iron bows.

Read ye, and heed ye, and ye who can, 35
Guard well your doors from that old man!

He comes with a careless 'How d' ye do?'

And seats himself in my elbow-chair;
And my morning paper and pamphlet new

Fall forthwith under his special care, 40
And he wipes his glasses and clears his throat,

And, button by button, unfolds his coat.

And then he reads from paper and book,
In a low and husky asthmatic tone,

With the stolid sameness of posture and look 45

Of one who reads to himself alone;
And hour after hour on my senses come
That husky wheeze and that dolorous hum.

The price of stocks, the auction sales,
The poet's song and the lover's glee, 50

The horrible murders, the seaboard gales,
The marriage list, and the jeu d'esprit,

All reach my ear in the self-same tone,—
I shudder at each, but the fiend reads on !

Oh, sweet as the lapse of water at noon 55
O'er the mossy roots of some forest tree,
The sigh of the wind in the woods of June,
Or sound of flutes o'er a moonlight sea,
Or the low soft music, perchance, which seems
To float through the slumbering singer's
dreams, 60

So sweet, so dear is the silvery tone,
Of her in whose features I sometimes
look,
As I sit at eve by her side alone,
And we read by turns, from the self-same book,
Some tale perhaps of the olden time, 65
Some lover's romance or quaint old rhyme.

Then when the story is one of woe,—
Some prisoner's plaint through his dungeon-bar,
Her blue eye glistens with tears, and low
Her voice sinks down like a moan afar ; 70
And I seem to hear that prisoner's wail,
And his face looks on me worn and pale.

And when she reads some merrier song,
Her voice is glad as an April bird's, 74
And when the tale is of war and wrong,
A trumpet's summons is in her words,
And the rush of the hosts I seem to hear,
And see the tossing of plume and spear !

Oh, pity me then, when, day by day, 79
The stout fiend darkens my parlor door ;
And reads me perchance the self-same lay
Which melted in music, the night
before,
From lips as the lips of Hylas sweet,
And moved like twin roses which zephyrs
meet !

I cross my floor with a nervous tread, 85
I whistle and laugh and sing and shout,
I flourish my cane above his head,
And stir up the fire to roast him out ;
I topple the chairs, and drum on the pane, 89
And press my hands on my ears, in vain !

I've studied Glanville and James the wise,
And wizard black-letter tomes which treat

Of demons of every name and size
Which a Christian man is presumed to
meet,
But never a hint and never a line 95
Can I find of a reading fiend like mine.

I've crossed the Psalter with Brady and Tate,
And laid the Primer above them all,
I've nailed a horseshoe over the grate,
And hung a wig to my parlor wall 100
Once worn by a learned Judge, they say,
At Salem court in the witchcraft day !

'*Conjuro te, sceleratissime,
Abire ad tuum locum!*'—still
Like a visible nightmare he sits by me,—
The exorcism has lost its skill ; 106
And I hear again in my haunted room
The husky wheeze and the dolorous hum !

Ah ! commend me to Mary Magdalen
With her sevenfold plagues, to the wandering Jew, 110
To the terrors which haunted Orestes when
The furies his midnight curtains drew,
But charm him off, ye who charm him
can,
That reading demon, that fat old man !

THE FOUNTAIN.

On the declivity of a hill in Salisbury, Essex County, is a fountain of clear water, gushing from the very roots of a venerable oak. It is about two miles from the junction of the Powow
River with the Merrimac.

TRAVELLER ! on thy journey toiling
By the swift Powow,
With the summer sunshine falling
On thy heated brow,
Listen, while all else is still, 5
To the brooklet from the hill.

Wild and sweet the flowers are blowing
By that streamlet's side,
And a greener verdure showing
Where its waters glide, 10

Down the hill-slope murmuring on, Over root and mossy stone.		Far behind was Ocean striving With his chains of sand ; Southward, sunny glimpses giving, 'Twixt the swells of land, Of its calm and silvery track, Rolled the tranquil Merrimac.	55
Where yon oak his broad arms flingeth O'er the sloping hill, Beautiful and freshly springeth That soft-flowing rill, Through its dark roots wreathed and bare, Gushing up to sun and air.	15	Over village, wood, and meadow Gazed that stranger man, Sadly, till the twilight shadow Over all things ran, Save where spire and westward pane Flashed the sunset back again.	60
Brighter waters sparkled never In that magic well, Of whose gift of life forever Ancient legends tell, In the lonely desert wasted, And by mortal lip untasted.	20	Gazing thus upon the dwelling Of his warrior sires, Where no lingering trace was telling Of their wigwam fires, Who the gloomy thoughts might know Of that wandering child of woe ?	65
Waters which the proud Castilian Sought with longing eyes, Underneath the bright pavilion Of the Indian skies, Where his forest pathway lay Through the blooms of Florida.	25	Naked lay, in sunshine glowing, Hills that once had stood Down their sides the shadows throwing Of a mighty wood, Where the deer his covert kept, And the eagle's pinion swept !	70
Years ago a lonely stranger, With the dusky brow Of the outcast forest-ranger, Crossed the swift Powow, And betook him to the rill And the oak upon the hill.	30	Where the birch canoe had glided Down the swift Powow, Dark and gloomy bridges strided Those clear waters now ; And where once the beaver swam, Jarred the wheel and frowned the dam.	80
O'er his face of moody sadness For an instant shone Something like a gleam of gladness, As he stooped him down To the fountain's grassy side, And his eager thirst supplied.	35	For the wood-bird's merry singing, And the hunter's cheer, Iron clang and hammer's ringing Smote upon his ear ; And the thick and sullen smoke From the blackened forges broke.	85
With the oak its shadow throwing O'er his mossy seat, And the cool, sweet waters flowing Softly at his feet, Closely by the fountain's rim That lone Indian seated him.	40	Could it be his fathers ever Loved to linger here ? These bare hills, this conquered river,— Could they hold them dear, With their native loveliness Tamed and tortured into this ?	90
Autumn's earliest frost had given To the woods below Hues of beauty, such as heaven Lendeth to its bow ; And the soft breeze from the west Scarcely broke their dreamy rest.	45	Sadly, as the shades of even Gathered o'er the hill, While the western half of heaven Blushed with sunset still,	95
	50		100

From the fountain's mossy seat
Turned the Indian's weary feet.

Year on year hath flown forever,
But he came no more
To the hillside on the river
Where he came before.
But the villager can tell
Of that strange man's visit well.

And the merry children, laden
With their fruits or flowers,— Roving boy and laughing maiden,
In their school-day hours,
Love the simple tale to tell
Of the Indian and his well.

PENTUCKET.

The village of Haverhill, on the Merrimac, called by the Indians Pentucket, was for nearly seventeen years a frontier town, and during thirty years endured all the horrors of savage warfare. In the year 1708, a combined body of French and Indians, under the command of De Chailions, and Hertel de Rouville, the infamous and bloody sacker of Deerfield, made an attack upon the village, which at that time contained only thirty houses. Sixteen of the villagers were massacred, and a still larger number made prisoners. About thirty of the enemy also fell, and among them Hertel de Rouville. The minister of the place, Benjamin Rolfe, was killed by a shot through his own door. In a paper entitled The Border War of 1708, published in my collection of Recreations and Miscellanies, I have given a prose narrative of the surprise of Haverhill.

How sweetly on the wood-girt town
The mellow light of sunset shone!
Each small, bright lake, whose waters still Mirror the forest and the hill,
Reflected from its waveless breast
The beauty of a cloudless west,
Glorious as if a glimpse were given
Within the western gates of heaven,
Left, by the spirit of the star
Of sunset's holy hour, ajar!

Beside the river's tranquil flood
The dark and low-walled dwellings stood,
Where many a rood of open land
Stretched up and down on either hand,

With corn-leaves waving freshly green 15
The thick and blackened stumps between.
Behind, unbroken, deep and dread,
The wild, untravelled forest spread,
Back to those mountains, white and cold,
Of which the Indian trapper told, 20
Upon whose summits never yet
Was mortal foot in safety set.

Quiet and calm without a fear,
Of danger darkly lurking near,
The weary laborer left his plough, 25
The milkmaid carolled by her cow;
From cottage door and household hearth
Rose songs of praise, or tones of mirth.
At length the murmur died away,
And silence on that village lay, 30
—So slept Pompeii, tower and hall,
Ere the quick earthquake swallowed all,
Undreaming of the fiery fate
Which made its dwellings desolate!

Hours passed away. By moonlight sped
The Merrimac along his bed. 36
Bathed in the pallid lustre, stood
Dark cottage-wall and rock and wood,
Silent, beneath that tranquil beam,
As the hushed grouping of a dream. 40
Yet on the still air crept a sound,
No bark of fox, nor rabbit's bound,
Nor stir of wings, nor waters flowing,
Nor leaves in midnight breezes blowing.

Was that the tread of many feet, 45
Which downward from the hillside beat?
What forms were those which darkly stood
Just on the margin of the wood?
Charred tree-stumps in the moonlight dim,
Or paling rude, or leafless limb? 50
No,—through the trees fierce eyeballs glowed,
Dark human forms in moonshine showed,
Wild from their native wilderness,
With painted limbs and battle-dress!

A yell the dead might wake to hear 55
Swelled on the night air, far and clear;
Then smote the Indian tomahawk
On crashing door and shattering look;
Then rang the rifle-shot, and then
The shrill death-scream of stricken men,—

Sank the red axe in woman's brain, 61
 And childhood's cry arose in vain.
 Bursting through roof and window came,
 Red, fast, and fierce, the kindled flame,
 And blended fire and moonlight glared 65
 On still dead men and scalp-knives bared.

The morning sun looked brightly through
 The river willows, wet with dew.
 No sound of combat filled the air,
 No shout was heard, nor gunshot there ;
 Yet still the thick and sullen smoke 71
 From smouldering ruins slowly broke ;
 And on the greensward many a stain,
 And, here and there, the mangled slain,
 Told how that midnight bolt had sped 75
 Pentucket, on thy fated head !

Even now the villager can tell
 Where Rolfe beside his hearthstone fell,
 Still show the door of wasting oak,
 Through which the fatal death-shot broke,
 And point the curious stranger where 81
 De Rouville's corse lay grim and bare ;
 Whose hideous head, in death still feared,
 Bore not a trace of hair or beard ;
 And still, within the churchyard ground,
 Heaves darkly up the ancient mound, 86
 Whose grass-grown surface overlies
 The victims of that sacrifice.

THE NORSEMEN.

In the early part of the present century, a fragment of a statue, rudely chiselled from dark gray stone, was found in the town of Bradford, on the Merrimac. Its origin must be left entirely to conjecture. The fact that the ancient Northmen visited the northeast coast of North America and probably New England, some centuries before the discovery of the western world by Columbus, is now very generally admitted.

GIFT from the cold and silent Past !

A relic to the present cast,
 Left on the ever-changing strand
 Of shifting and unstable sand,
 Which wastes beneath the steady chime 5
 And beating of the waves of Time !
 Who from its bed of primal rock
 First wrrenched thy dark, unshapely
 block ?

Whose hand, of curious skill untaught,
 Thy rude and savage outline wrought ? 10

The waters of my native stream
 Are glancing in the sun's warm beam ;
 From sail-urged keel and flashing oar
 The circles widen to its shore ;
 And cultured field and peopled town 15
 Slope to its willowed margin down.
 Yet, while this morning breeze is bringing
 The home-lifesound of school-bells ringing,
 And rolling wheel, and rapid jar
 Of the fire-winged and steedless car, 20
 And voices from the wayside near Come quick and blended on my ear,—
 A spell is in this old gray stone,
 My thoughts are with the Past alone ! 24

A change !—The steeped town no more
 Stretches along the sail-thronged shore ;
 Like palace-domes in sunset's cloud,
 Fade sun-gilt spire and mansion proud :
 Spectrally rising where they stood,
 I see the old, primeval wood ; 30
 Dark, shadow-like, on either hand
 I see its solemn waste expand ;
 It climbs the green and cultured hill,
 It arches o'er the valley's rill,
 And leans from cliff and crag to throw 35
 Its wild arms o'er the stream below.
 Unchanged, alone, the same bright river
 Flows on, as it will flow forever !
 I listen, and I hear the low
 Soft ripple where its waters go ; 40
 I hear behind the panther's cry,
 The wild-bird's scream goes thrilling by,
 And shyly on the river's brink
 The deer is stooping down to drink.

But hark !—from wood and rock flung
 back, 45
 What sound comes up the Merrimac ?
 What sea-worn barks are those which throw

The light spray from each rushing prow ?
 Have they not in the North Sea's blast
 Bowed to the waves the straining mast ? 50
 Their frozen sails the low, pale sun
 Of Thul's night has shone upon ;
 Flapped by the sea-wind's gusty sweep
 Round icy drift, and headland steep.
 Wild Jutland's wives and Lochlin's daughters 55
 Have watched them fading o'er the waters,

Lessening through driving mist and spray,
Like white-winged sea-birds on their way!

Onward they glide,—and now I view
Their iron-armed and stalwart crew; 60
Joy glistens in each wild blue eye,
Turned to green earth and summer sky.
Each broad, seamed breast has cast aside
Its cumbering vest of shaggy hide;
Bared to the sun and soft warm air, 65
Streams back the Northmen's yellow hair.
I see the gleam of axe and spear,
A sound of smitten shields I hear,
Keeping a harsh and fitting time
To Saga's chant, and Runic rhyme; 70
Such lays as Zetland's Scald has sung,
His gray and naked isles among;
Or muttered low at midnight hour
Round Odin's mossy stone of power.
The wolf beneath the Arctic moon 75
Has answered to that startling rune;
The Gael has heard its stormy swell,
The light Frank knows its summons well;
Iona's sable-stoled Culdee
Has heard it sounding o'er the sea, 80
And swept, with hoary beard and hair,
His altar's foot in trembling prayer!

'Tis past,—the 'wilderer vision dies •
In darkness on my dreaming eyes!
The forest vanishes in air, 85
Hill-slope and vale lie starkly bare;
I hear the common tread of men,
And hum of work-day life again;
The mystic relic seems alone
A broken mass of common stone • 90
And if it be the chiselled limb
Of Berserker or idol grim,
A fragment of Valhalla's Thor,
The stormy Viking's god of War,
Or Praga of the Runic lay, 95
Or love-awakening Siona,
I know not,—for no graven line,
Nor Druid mark, nor Runic sign,
Is left me here, by which to trace
Its name, or origin, or place. 100
Yet, for this vision of the Past,
This glance upon its darkness cast,
My spirit bows in gratitude
Before the Giver of all good,
Who fashioned so the human mind, 105
That, from the waste of Time behind,

A simple stone, or mound of earth,
Can summon the departed forth;
Quicken the Past to life again,
The Present lose in what hath been, 110
And in their primal freshness show
The buried forms of long ago.
As if a portion of that Thought
By which the Eternal will is wrought,
Whose impulse fills anew with breath 115
The frozen solitude of Death,
To mortal mind were sometimes lent,
To mortal musings sometimes sent,
To whisper—even when it seems
But Memory's fantasy of dreams— 120
Through the mind's waste of woe and sin,
Of an immortal origin!

FUNERAL TREE OF THE SOKOKIS.

Polan, chief of the Sokokis Indians of the country between Agamenticus and Casco Bay, was killed at Windham on Sebago Lake in the spring of 1756. After the whites had retired, the surviving Indians 'swayed' or bent down a young tree until its roots were upturned, placed the body of their chief beneath it, and then released the tree, which, in springing back to its old position, covered the grave. The Sokokis were early converts to the Catholic faith. Most of them, prior to the year 1756, had removed to the French settlements on the St. François.

AROUND Sebago's lonely lake
There lingers not a breeze to break
The mirror which its waters make. 90

The solemn pines along its shore,
The firs which hang its gray rocks o'er, 5
Are painted on its glassy floor.

The sun looks o'er, with hazy eye,
The snowy mountain-tops which lie
Piled coldly up against the sky. 95

Dazzling and white! save where the bleak, 10
Wild winds have bared some splintering peak, 100
Or snow-slide left its dusky streak.

Yet green are Saco's banks below;
And belts of spruce and cedar show, 14
Dark fringing round those cones of snow.

The earth hath felt the breath of spring,
Though yet on her deliverer's wing
The lingering frosts of winter cling.

Fresh grasses fringe the meadow-brooks,
And mildly from its sunny nooks 20
The blue eye of the violet looks.

And odors from the springing grass,
The sweet birch and the sassafras,
Upon the scarce-felt breezes pass.

Her tokens of renewing care 25
Hath Nature scattered everywhere,
In bud and flower, and warmer air.

But in their hour of bitterness,
What reck the broken Sokokis,
Beside their slaughtered chief, of this? 30

The turf's red stain is yet undried,
Scarce have the death-shot echoes died
Along Sebago's wooded side;

And silent now the hunters stand,
Grouped darkly, where a swell of land 35
Slopes upward from the lake's white sand.

Fire and the axe have swept it bare,
Save one lone beech, unclosing there
Its light leaves in the vernal air.

With grave, cold looks, all sternly mute,
They break the damp turf at its foot, 41
And bare its coiled and twisted root.

They heave the stubborn trunk aside,
The firm roots from the earth divide,—
The rent beneath yawns dark and wide.

And there the fallen chief is laid, 46
In tasselled garb of skins arrayed,
And girded with his wampum-braid.

The silver cross he loved is pressed
Beneath the heavy arms, which rest 50
Upon his scarred and naked breast.

'T is done : the roots are backward sent,
The beechen-tree stands up unbent,
The Indian's fitting monument !

When of that sleeper's broken race 55
Their green and pleasant dwelling-place,
Which knew them once, retains no
trace ;

Oh, long may sunset's light be shed
As now upon that beech's head,
A green memorial of the dead ! 60

There shall his fitting requiem be,
In northern winds, that, cold and free,
Howl nightly in that funeral tree.

To their wild wail the waves which break
Forever round that lonely lake 65
A solemn undertone shall make !

And who shall deem the spot unblest,
Where Nature's younger children rest,
Lulled on their sorrowing mother's breast ?

Deem ye that mother loveth less 70
These bronzed forms of the wilderness
She foldeth in her long caress ?

As sweet o'er them her wild-flowers
blow,
As if with fairer hair and brow
The blue-eyed Saxon slept below. 75

What though the places of their rest
No priestly knee hath ever pressed,—
No funeral rite nor prayer hath blessed ?

What though the bigot's ban be there,
And thoughts of wailing and despair, 80
And cursing in the place of prayer !

Yet Heaven hath angels watching round
The Indian's lowliest forest-mound,—
And they have made it holy ground.

There ceases man's frail judgment ; all 85
His powerless bolts of cursing fall
Unheeded on that grassy pall.

O peeled and hunted and reviled,
Sleep on, dark tenant of the wild !
Great Nature owns her simple child ! 90

And Nature's God, to whom alone
The secret of the heart is known,—
The hidden language traced thereon ;

Who from its many cumberings
Of form and creed, and outward things, 95
To light the naked spirit brings ;

Not with our partial eye shall scan,
Not with our pride and scorn shall ban,
The spirit of our brother man !

ST. JOHN.

The fierce rivalry between Charles de La Tour, a Protestant, and D'Aulnay Charnasy, a Catholic, for the possession of Acadia, forms one of the most romantic passages in the history of the New World. La Tour received aid in several instances from the Puritan colony of Massachusetts. During one of his voyages for the purpose of obtaining arms and provisions for his establishment at St. John, his castle was attacked by D'Aulnay, and successfully defended by its high-spirited mistress. A second attack however followed in the fourth month, 1647, when D'Aulnay was successful, and the garrison was put to the sword. Lady La Tour languished a few days in the hands of her enemy, and then died of grief².

'To the winds give our banner !

Bear homeward again !'

Cried the Lord of Acadia,

Cried Charles of Estienne !

From the prow of his shallop 5

He gazed, as the sun,

From its bed in the ocean,

Streamed up the St. John.

O'er the blue western waters

That shallop had passed, 10

Where the mists of Penobscot

Clung damp on her mast.

St. Saviour had looked

On the heretic sail,

As the songs of the Huguenot 15

Rose on the gale.

The pale, ghostly fathers

Remembered her well,

And had cursed her while passing,

With taper and bell ; 20

But the men of Monhegan,

Of Papists abhorred,

Had welcomed and feasted

The heretic Lord.

They had loaded his shallop 25

With dun-fish and ball,

With stores for his larder,

And steel for his wall.

Pemaquid, from her bastions

And turrets of stone, 30

Had welcomed his coming

With banner and gun.

And the prayers of the elders

Had followed his way,

As homeward he glided, 35

Down Pentecost Bay.

Oh, well sped La Tour !

For, in peril and pain,

His lady kept watch,

For his coming again. 40

O'er the Isle of the Pheasant

The morning sun shone,

On the plane-trees which shaded

The shores of St. John.

'Now, why from yon battlements 45

Speaks not my love !

Why waves there no banner

My fortress above ?'

Dark and wild, from his deck

St. Estienne gazed about, 50

On fire-wasted dwellings,

And silent redoubt ;

From the low, shattered walls

Which the flame had o'errun,

There floated no banner, 55

There thundered no gun !

But beneath the low arch

Of its doorway there stood

A pale priest of Rome,

In his cloak and his hood. 60

With the bound of a lion,

La Tour sprang to land,

On the throat of the Papist

He fastened his hand.

'Speak, son of the Woman 65

Of scarlet and sin !

What wolf has been prowling

My castle within ?'

From the grasp of the soldier

The Jesuit broke, 70

Half in scorn, half in sorrow,

He smiled as he spoke :

'No wolf, Lord of Estienne,
Has ravaged thy hall,
But thy red-handed rival, 75
With fire, steel, and ball!
On an errand of mercy
I hitherward came,
While the walls of thy castle
Yet spouted with flame. 80

'Pentagoet's dark vessels
Were moored in the bay,
Grim sea-lions, roaring Aloud for their prey.'
'But what of my lady?' 85
Cried Charles of Estienne.
'On the shot-crumbled turret
Thy lady was seen :

'Half-veiled in the smoke-cloud,
Her hand grasped thy pennon, 90
While her dark tresses swayed
In the hot breath of cannon!
But woe to the heretic,
Evermore woe!
When the son of the church 95
And the cross is his foe!

'In the track of the shell,
In the path of the ball,
Pentagoet swept over
The breach of the wall! 100
'Steel to steel, gun to gun,
One moment,—and then
Alone stood the victor,
Alone with his men!

'Of its sturdy defenders,
Thy lady alone 105
Saw the cross-blazoned banner Float over St. John.'
'Let the dastard look to it!'
Cried fiery Estienne, 110
'Were D'Aulnay King Louis,
I'd free her again!'

'Alas for thy lady!
No service from thee 115
Is needed by her
Whom the Lord hath set free;
Nine days, in stern silence,
Her thralldom she bore,
But the tenth morning came,
And Death opened her door!' 120

As if suddenly smitten
La Tour staggered back;
His hand grasped his sword-hilt,
His forehead grew black.
He sprang on the deck 125
Of his shallop again.
'We cruise now for vengeance!
Give way!' cried Estienne.

'Massachusetts shall hear
Of the Huguenot's wrong, 130
And from island and creekside
Her fishers shall throng!
Pentagoet shall rue
What his Papists have done,
When his palisades echo 135
The Puritan's gun!'

Oh, the loveliest of heavens
Hung tenderly o'er him,
There were waves in the sunshine,
And green isles before him; 140
But a pale hand was beckoning
The Huguenot on;
And in blackness and ashes
Behind was St. John!

THE CYPRESS-TREE OF CEYLON.

Ibn Batuta, the celebrated Mussulman traveller of the fourteenth century, speaks of a cypress-tree in Ceylon, universally held sacred by the natives, the leaves of which were said to fall only at certain intervals, and he who had the happiness to find and eat one of them was restored, at once, to youth and vigor. The traveller saw several venerable Jogees, or saints, sitting silent and motionless under the tree, patiently awaiting the falling of a leaf.

THEY sat in silent watchfulness
The sacred cypress-tree about,
And, from beneath old wrinkled brows,
Their failing eyes looked out.

Gray Age and Sickness waiting there 5
Through weary night and lingering
day,—
Grim as the idols at their side,
And motionless as they.

Unheeded in the boughs above
 The song of Ceylon's birds was sweet ;
 Unseen of them the island flowers 11
 Bloomed brightly at their feet.

O'er them the tropic night-storm swept,
 The thunder crashed on rock and hill ;
 The cloud-fire on their eyeballs blazed, 15
 Yet there they waited still !

What was the world without to them ?
 The Moslem's sunset-call, the dance
 Of Ceylon's maids, the passing gleam 20
 Of battle-flag and lance ?

They waited for that falling leaf
 Of which the wandering Jogeess sing :
 Which lends once more to wintry age
 The greenness of its spring.

Oh, if these poor and blinded ones 25
 In trustful patience wait to feel
 O'er torpid pulse and failing limb
 A youthful freshness steal ;

Shall we, who sit beneath that Tree
 Whose healing leaves of life are shed, 30
 In answer to the breath of prayer,
 Upon the waiting head—

Not to restore our failing forms,
 And build the spirit's broken shrine,
 But on the fainting soul to shed 35
 A light and life divine—

Shall we grow weary in our watch,
 And murmur at the long delay ?
 Impatient of our Father's time 40
 And His appointed way ?

Or shall the stir of outward things
 Allure and claim the Christian's eye,
 When on the heathen watcher's ear
 Their powerless murmurs die ?

Alas ! a deeper test of faith 45
 Than prison cell or martyr's stake,
 The self-abasing watchfulness
 Of silent prayer may make.

We gird us bravely to rebuke
 Our erring brother in the wrong,— 50
 And in the ear of Pride and Power
 Our warning voice is strong.

Easier to smite with Peter's sword
 Than 'watch one hour' in humbling
 prayer.
 Life's 'great things,' like the Syrian
 lord, 55
 Our hearts can do and dare.

But oh ! we shrink from Jordan's side,
 From waters which alone can save ;
 And murmur for Abana's banks
 And Pharpar's brighter wave. 60

O Thou, who in the garden's shade
 Didst wake Thy weary ones again,
 Who slumbered at that fearful hour
 Forgetful of Thy pain ;

Bend o'er us now, as over them, 65
 And set our sleep-bound spirits free,
 Nor leave us slumbering in the watch
 Our souls should keep with Thee !

THE EXILES.

The incidents upon which the following ballad has its foundation occurred about the year 1860. Thomas Macy was one of the first, if not the first white settler of Nantucket. The career of Macy is briefly but carefully outlined in James S. Pike's The New Puritan

THE goodman sat beside his door,
 One sultry afternoon,
 With his young wife singing at his side
 An old and goodly tune.

A glimmer of heat was in the air,— 5
 The dark green woods were still ;
 And the skirts of a heavy thunder-cloud
 Hung over the western hill.

Black, thick, and vast arose that cloud 45
 Above the wilderness, 10
 As some dark world from upper air
 Were stooping over this.

At times the solemn thunder pealed,
 And all was still again,
 Save a low murmur in the air 15
 Of coming wind and rain.

- Just as the first big rain-drop fell,
A weary stranger came,
And stood before the farmer's door,
With travel soiled and lame. 20
- Sad seemed he, yet sustaining hope
Was in his quiet glance,
And peace, like autumn's moonlight, clothed
His tranquil countenance,—
- A look, like that his Master wore
In Pilate's council-hall : 25
It told of wrongs, but of a love
Meekly forgiving all.
- 'Friend ! wilt thou give me shelter here?'
The stranger meekly said ; 30
And, leaning on his oaken staff,
The goodman's features read.
- 'My life is hunted,—evil men
Are following in my track ;
The traces of the torturer's whip
Are on my aged back ; 35
- 'And much, I fear, 't will peril thee
Within thy doors to take
A hunted seeker of the Truth,
Oppressed for conscience' sake.' 40
- Oh, kindly spoke the goodman's wife,
'Come in, old man !' quoth she,
'We will not leave thee to the storm,
Whoever thou mayest be.'
- Then came the aged wanderer in, 45
And silent sat him down ;
While all within grew dark as night
Beneath the storm-cloud's frown.
- But while the sudden lightning's blaze
Filled every cottage nook, 50
And with the jarring thunder-roll
The loosened casements shook,
- A heavy tramp of horses' feet
Came sounding up the lane,
And half a score of horse, or more, 55
Came plunging through the rain.
- 'Now, Goodman Macy, ope thy door,—
We would not be house-breakers ;
A rueful deed thou 'st done this day,
In harboring banished Quakers.' 60
- Out looked the cautious goodman then,
With much of fear and awe,
For there, with broad wig drenched with
rain,
The parish priest he saw.
- 'Open thy door, thou wicked man, 65
And let thy pastor in,
And give God thanks, if forty stripes
Repay thy deadly sin.'
- 'What seek ye?' quoth the goodman ;
'The stranger is my guest ; 70
He is worn with toil and grievous
wrong,—
Pray let the old man rest.'
- 'Now, out upon thee, canting knave !'
And strong hands shook the door.
'Believe me, Macy,' quoth the priest, 75
'Thou 'lt rue thy conduct sore.'
- Then kindled Macy's eye of fire :
'No priest who walks the earth,
Shall pluck away the stranger-guest
Made welcome to my hearth.' 80
- Down from his cottage wall he caught
The matchlock, hotly tried
At Preston-pans and Marston-moor,
By fiery Ireton's side ;
- Where Paritan, and Cavalier, 85
With shout and usalm contended ;
And Rupert's oath, and Cromwell's
prayer,
With battle-thunder blended.
- Up rose the ancient stranger then :
'My spirit is not free 90
To bring the wrath and violence
Of evil men on thee ;
- 'And for thyself, I pray forbear,
Bethink thee of thy Lord,
Who healed again the smitten ear, 95
And sheathed His follower's sword.
- 'I go, as to the slaughter led.
Friends of the poor, farewell !'
Beneath his hand the oaken door
Back on its hinges fell. 100

'Come forth, old graybeard, yea and nay,'

The reckless scoffers cried,
As to a horseman's saddle-bow
The old man's arms were tied.

And of his bondage hard and long 105
In Boston's crowded jail,
Where suffering woman's prayer was heard,

With sickening childhood's wail,
It suits not with our tale to tell;
Those scenes have passed away; 110
Let the dim shadows of the past
Brood o'er that evil day.

'Ho, sheriff!' quoth the ardent priest,
'Take Goodman Macy too;
The sin of this day's heresy 115
His back or purse shall rue.'

'Now, goodwife, haste thee!' Macy
cried.
She caught his manly arm;
Behind, the parson urged pursuit,
With outcry and alarm. 120

Ho! speed the Macys, neck or naught,—
The river-course was near;
The plashing on its pebbled shore
Was music to their ear.

A gray rock, tasselled o'er with birch, 125
Above the waters hung,
And at its base, with every wave,
A small light wherry swung.

A leap—they gain the boat—and there
The goodman wields his oar; 130
'Ill luck betide them all,' he cried,
'The laggards on the shore.'

Down through the crashing underwood,
The burly sheriff came:—
'Stand, Goodman Macy, yield thyself;
Yield in the King's own name.' 136

'Now out upon thy hangman's face!'
Bold Macy answered then,—
'Whip women, on the village green,
But meddle not with men.' 140

The priest came panting to the shore,
His grave cocked hat was gone;
Behind him, like some owl's nest, hung
His wig upon a thorn.

'Come back! come back!' the parson
cried, 145
'The church's curse beware.'
'Curse, an' thou wilt,' said Macy, 'but Thy blessing prithee spare.'

'Vile scoffer!' cried the baffled priest,
'Thou'lt yet the gallows see.' 150
'Who's born to be hanged will not be drowned,'
Quoth Macy, merrily;

'And so, sir sheriff and priest, good-by!'
He bent him to his oar,
And the small boat glided quietly 155
From the twain upon the shore.

Now in the west, the heavy clouds
Scattered and fell asunder,
While feebler came the rush of rain,
And fainter growled the thunder. 160

And through the broken clouds, the sun
Looked out serene and warm,
Painting its holy symbol-light
Upon the passing storm.

Oh, beautiful! that rainbow span, 165
O'er dim Crane-neck was bended;
One bright foot touched the eastern
hills,
And one with ocean blended.

By green Pentucket's southern slope
The small boat glided fast; 170
The watchers of the Block-house saw
The strangers as they passed.

That night a stalwart garrison
Sat shaking in their shoes,
To hear the dip of Indian oars, 175
The glide of birch canoes.

The fisher-wives of Salisbury—
The men were all away—
Looked out to see the stranger oar
Upon their waters play. 180

Deer Island's rocks and fir-trees threw
 Their sunset-shadows o'er them,
 And Newbury's spire and weathercock
 Peered o'er the pines before them.

Around the Black Rocks, on their left,
 The marsh lay broad and green; 186
 And on their right, with dwarf shrubs
 crowned,
 Plum Island's hills were seen.

With skilful hand and wary eye
 The harbor-bar was crossed; 190
 A plaything of the restless wave,
 The boat on ocean tossed.

The glory of the sunset heaven
 On land and water lay;
 On the steep hills of Agawam, 195
 On cape, and bluff, and bay.

They passed the gray rocks of Cape Ann,
 And Gloucester's harbor-bar;
 The watch-fire of the garrison
 Shone like a setting star. 200

How brightly broke the morning
 On Massachusetts Bay!
 Blue wave, and bright green island,
 Rejoicing in the day.

On passed the bark in safety 205
 Round isle and headland steep;
 No tempest broke above them,
 No fog-cloud veiled the deep.

Far round the bleak and stormy Cape
 The venturous Macy passed, 210
 And on Nantucket's naked isle
 Drew up his boat at last.

And how, in log-built cabin,
 They braved the rough sea-weather;
 And there, in peace and quietness, 215
 Went down life's vale together;

How others drew around them,
 And how their fishing sped,
 Until to every wind of heaven
 Nantucket's sails were spread; 220

How pale Want alternated
 With Plenty's golden smile;
 Behold, is it not written
 In the annals of the isle?

And yet that isle remaineth 225
 A refuge of the free,
 As when true-hearted Macy
 Beheld it from the sea.

Free as the winds that winnow
 Her shrubless hills of sand, 230
 Free as the waves that batter
 Along her yielding land.

Than hers, at duty's summons,
 No loftier spirit stirs,
 Nor falls o'er human suffering 235
 A readier tear than hers.

God bless the sea-beat island!
 And grant forevermore,
 That charity and freedom dwell
 As now upon her shore! 240

THE KNIGHT OF ST. JOHN.

ERE down yon blue Carpathian hills
 The sun shall sink again,
 Farewell to life and all its ills,
 Farewell to cell and chain!

These prison shades are dark and cold, 5
 But, darker far than they,
 The shadow of a sorrow old
 Is on my heart alway.

For since the day when Warkworth wood
 Closed o'er my steed, and I, 10
 An alien from my name and blood,
 A weed cast out to die,—

When, looking back in sunset light,
 I saw her turret gleam,
 And from its casement, far and white, 15
 Her sign of farewell stream,

Like one who, from some desert shore,
 Doth home's green isles descry,
 And, vainly longing, gazes o'er
 The waste of wave and sky; 20

So from the desert of my fate
 I gaze across the past;
 Forever on life's dial-plate
 The shade is backward cast!

I've wandered wide from shore to shore,
I've knelt at many a shrine ; 26
And bowed me to the rocky floor
Where Bethlehem's tapers shine ;

And by the Holy Sepulchre
I've pledged my knightly sword 30
To Christ, His blessed Church, and her,
The Mother of our Lord.

Oh, vain the vow, and vain the strife !
How vain do all things seem !
My soul is in the past, and life 35
To-day is but a dream !

In vain the penance strange and long,
And hard for flesh to bear ;
The prayer, the fasting, and the thong,
And sackcloth shirt of hair. 40

The eyes of memory will not sleep,—
Its ears are open still ;
And vigils with the past they keep Against my feeble will.

And still the loves and joys of old 45
Do evermore uprise ;
I see the flow of locks of gold,
The shine of loving eyes !

Ah me ! upon another's breast
Those golden locks recline ; 50
I see upon another rest
The glance that once was mine.

'O faithless priest ! O perjured knight !'
I hear the Master cry ;
'Shut out the vision from thy sight, 55
Let Earth and Nature die.

'The Church of God is now thy spouse,
And thou the bridegroom art ;
Then let the burden of thy vows
Crush down thy human heart !' 60

In vain ! This heart its grief must know,
Till life itself hath ceased,
And falls beneath the self-same blow
The lover and the priest !

O pitying Mother ! souls of light, 65
And saints and martyrs old !
Pray for a weak and sinful knight,
A suffering man uphold.

Then let the Paynim work his will,
And death unbind my chain, 70
Ere down yon blue Carpathian hill
The sun shall fall again.

1843.

CASSANDRA SOUTHWICK.

In 1658 two young persons, son and daughter of Lawrence Southwick of Salem, who had himself been imprisoned and deprived of nearly all his property for having entertained Quakers at his house, were fined for non-attendance at church. They being unable to pay the fine, the General Court issued an order empowering 'the Treasurer of the County to sell the said persons to any of the English nation of Virginia or Barbadoes, to answer said fines.' An attempt was made to carry this order into execution, but no shipmaster was found willing to convey them to the West Indies.

To the God of all sure mercies let my blessing rise to-day,
From the scoffer and the cruel He hath plucked the spoil away ;
Yea, He who cooled the furnace around the faithful three,
And tamed the Chaldean lions, hath set
His handmaid free !

Last night I saw the sunset melt through my prison bars, 5
Last night across my damp earth-floor fell the pale gleam of stars ;
In the coldness and the darkness all through the long night-time,
My grated casement whitened with autumn's early rime.

Alone, in that dark sorrow, hour after hour crept by ;
Star after star looked palely in and sank
adown the sky ; 10
No sound amid night's stillness, save that which seemed to be
The dull and heavy beating of the pulses of the sea ;

All night I sat unsleeping, for I knew that on the morrow
The ruler and the cruel priest would mock me in my sorrow.

Dragged to their place of market, and bargained for and sold, 15	Sore from their cart-tail scourgings, and from the pillory lame,
Like a lamb before the shambles, like a heifer from the fold !	Rejoicing in their wretchedness, and glorying in their shame. 40
Oh, the weakness of the flesh was there,— the shrinking and the shame ;	‘ And what a fate awaits thee !—a sadly toiling slave,
And the low voice of the Tempter like whispers to me came :	Dragging the slowly lengthening chain of bondage to the grave !
‘ Whysit’st thou thus forlornly,’ the wicked murmur said,	Think of thy woman’s nature, subdued in hopeless thrall,
‘ Damp walls thy bower of beauty, cold earth thy maiden bed ? 20	The easy prey of any, the scoff and scorn of all !’
‘ Where be the smiling faces, and voices soft and sweet,	Oh, ever as the Tempter spoke, and feeble Nature’s fears 45
Seen in thy father’s dwelling, heard in the pleasant street ?	Wrung drop by drop the scalding flow of unavailing tears,
Where be the youths whose glances, the summer Sabbath through,	I wrestled down the evil thoughts, and strove in silent prayer,
Turned tenderly and timidly unto thy father’s pew ?	To feel, O Helper of the weak ! that Thou indeed wert there !
‘ Why sit’st thou here, Cassandra ?—Be- think thee with what mirth 25	I thought of Paul and Silas, within Philippi’s cell,
Thy happy schoolmates gather around the warm, bright hearth ;	And how from Peter’s sleeping limbs the prison shackles fell, 50
How the crimson shadows tremble on foreheads white and fair.	Till I seemed to hear the trailing of an angel’s robe of white,
On eyes of merry girlhood, half hid in golden hair.	And to feel a blessed presence invisible to sight.
‘ Not for thee the hearth-fire brightens, not for thee kind words are spoken,	Bless the Lord for all His mercies !—for the peace and love I felt,
Not for thee the nuts of Wenham woods by laughing boys are broken ; 30	Like dew of Hermon’s holy hill, upon my spirit melt ;
No first-fruits of the orchard within thy lap are laid,	When ‘ Get behind me, Satan !’ was the language of my heart, 55
For thee no flowers of autumn the youthful hunters braid.	And I felt the Evil Tempter with all his doubts depart.
‘ O weak, deluded maiden !—by crazy fancies led,	Slow broke the gray cold morning ; again the sunshine fell,
With wild and raving railers an evil path to tread ;	Flecked with the shade of bar and grate within my lonely cell ;
To leave a wholesome worship, and teach- ing pure and sound, 35	The hoar-frost melted on the wall, and upward from the street
And mate with maniac women, loose- haired and sackcloth bound,—	Came careless laugh and idle word, and tread of passing feet. 60
‘ Mad scoffers of the priesthood, who mock at things divine,	At length the heavy bolts fell back, my door was open cast,
Who rail against the pulpit, and holy bread and wine ;	And slowly at the sheriff’s side, up the long street I passed ;

I heard the murmur round me, and felt,
but dared not see,
How, from every door and window, the people gazed on me.

And doubt and fear fell on me, shame burned upon my cheek, 65
Swam earth and sky around me, my trembling limbs grew weak :

'O Lord ! support thy handmaid ; and from her soul cast out

The fear of man, which brings a snare,
the weakness and the doubt.'

Then the dreary shadows scattered, like a cloud in morning's breeze,

And a low deep voice within me seemed whispering words like these : 70

'Though thy earth be as the iron, and thy heaven a brazen wall,

Trust still His loving-kindness whose power is over all.'

We paused at length, where at my feet
the sunlit waters broke

On glaring reach of shining beach, and shingly wall of rock ;

The merchant-ships lay idly there, in hard clear lines on high, 75

Tracing with rope and slender spar their network on the sky.

And there were ancient citizens, cloak-wrapped and grave and cold,

And grim and stout sea-captains with faces bronzed and old,

And on his horse, with Rawson, his cruel
clerk at hand,

Sat dark and haughty Endicott, the ruler of the land. 80

And poisoning with his evil words the ruler's ready ear,

The priest leaned o'er his saddle, with laugh and scoff and jeer ;

It stirred my soul, and from my lips the seal of silence broke,

As if through woman's weakness a warning spirit spoke.

I cried, 'The Lord rebuke thee, thou smiter of the meek, 85

Thou robber of the righteous, thou trampler of the weak !

Go light the dark, cold hearth-stones,— go turn the prison lock
Of the poor hearts thou hast hunted, thou wolf amid the flock !'

Dark lowered the brows of Endicott, and with a deeper red

O'er Rawson's wine-empurpled cheek the flush of anger spread ; 90

'Good people,' quoth the white-lipped priest, 'heed not her words so wild,

Her Master speaks within her,—the Devil owns his child !'

But gray heads shook, and young brows
knit, the while the sheriff read

That law the wicked rulers against the poor have made,

Who to their house of Rimmon and idol priesthood bring 95

No bended knee of worship, nor gainful offering.

Then to the stout sea-captains the sheriff,
turning, said,—

'Which of ye, worthy seamen, will take this Quaker maid ?

In the Isle of fair Barbadoes, or on Virginia's shore,

You may hold her 'at a higher price than
Indian girl or Moor.' 100

Grim and silent stood the captains ; and when again he cried,

'Speak out, my worthy seamen !'—no
voice, no sign replied ;

But I felt a hard hand press my own, and kind words met my ear,—

'God bless thee, and preserve thee, my gentle girl and dear !'

A weight seemed lifted from my heart, a pitying friend was nigh,— 105

I felt it in his hard, rough hand, and saw
it in his eye ;

And when again the sheriff spoke, that voice, so kind to me,

Growled back its stormy answer like the roaring of the sea,—

'Pile my ship with bars of silver, pack
with coins of Spanish gold,

From keel-piece up to deck-plank, the roomage of her hold, 110

By the living God who made me!—I would sooner in your bay Sink ship and crew and cargo, than bear this child away!

'Well answered, worthy captain, shame
on their cruel laws!'

Ran through the crowd in murmurs loud
the people's just applause.

'Like the herdsman of Tekoa, in Israel of old, 115

Shall we see the poor and righteous again
for silver sold?'

I looked on haughty Endicott; with weapon half-way drawn,

Swept round the throng his lion glare of bitter hate and scorn;

Fiercely he drew his bridle-rein, and turned in silence back,

And sneering priest and baffled clerk rode murmuring in his track. 120

Hard after them the sheriff looked, in bitterness of soul;

Thrice smote his staff upon the ground,
and crushed his parchment roll.

'Good friends,' he said, 'since both have fled, the ruler and the priest,

Judge ye, if from their further work I be not well released.'

Loud was the cheer which, full and clear, swept round the silent bay, 125

As, with kind words and kinder looks,
he bade me go my way;

For He who turns the courses of the streamlet of the glen,

And the river of great waters, had turned the hearts of men.

Oh, at that hour the very earth seemed changed beneath my eye,

A holier wonder round me rose the blue walls of the sky, 130

A lovelier light on rock and hill and stream and woodland lay,

And softer lapsed on sunnier sands the waters of the bay.

Thanksgiving to the Lord of life! to Him
all praises be,

Who from the hands of evil men hath set
His handmaid free;

All praise to Him before whose power
the mighty are afraid, 135
Who takes the crafty in the snare which for the poor is laid!

Sing, O my soul, rejoicingly, on evening's twilight calm

Uplift the loud thanksgiving, pour forth
the grateful psalm;

Let all dear hearts with me rejoice, as did the saints of old,

When of the Lord's good angel the rescued
Peter told. 140

And weep and howl, ye evil priests and mighty men of wrong,

The Lord shall smite the proud, and lay
His hand upon the strong.

Woe to the wicked rulers in His avenging
hour!

Woe to the wolves who seek the flocks to raven and devour!

But let the humble ones arise, the poor in heart be glad, 145

And let the mourning ones again with robes of praise be clad.

For He who cooled the furnace, and smoothed the stormy wave,

And tamed the Chaldean lions, is mighty still to save!

THE NEW WIFE AND THE OLD.

The following ballad is founded upon one of the marvellous legends connected with the famous General M—, of Hampton, New Hampshire, who was regarded by his neighbors as a Yankee Faust, in league with the adversary.
I give the story, as I heard it when a child, from a venerable family visitant.

DARK the halls, and cold the feast,
Gone the bridesmaids, gone the priest.

All is over, all is done,
Twain of yesterday are one!
Blooming girl and manhood gray, 5
Autumn in the arms of May!

Hushed within and hushed without,
Dancing feet and wrestlers' shout;

Dies the bonfire on the hill;
All is dark and all is still, 10

Save the starlight, save the breeze
Moaning through the graveyard trees ;
And the great sea-waves below,
Pulse of the midnight beating slow.

From the brief dream of a bride
She hath awakened, at his side.
With half-uttered shriek and start,—
Feels she not his beating heart ?
And the pressure of his arm,
And his breathing near and warm ?

Lightly from the bridal bed
Springs that fair dishevelled head,
And a feeling, new, intense,
Half of shame, half innocence,
Maiden fear and wonder speaks
Through her lips and changing cheeks.

From the oaken mantel glowing,
Faintest light the lamp is throwing
On the mirror's antique mould,
High-backed chair, and wainscot old,
And, through faded curtains stealing,
His dark sleeping face revealing.

Listless lies the strong man there,
Silver-streaked his careless hair ;
Lips of love have left no trace
On that hard and haughty face ;
And that forehead's knitted thought
Love's soft hand hath not unwrought.

'Yet,' she sighs, 'he loves me well,
More than these calm lips will tell.
Stooping to my lowly state,
He hath made me rich and great,
And I bless him, though he be Hard and stern to all save me !'

While she speaketh, falls the light
O'er her fingers small and white ;
Gold and gem, and costly ring
Back the timid lustre fling,—
Love's selectest gifts, and rare,
His proud hand had fastened there.

Gratefully she marks the glow
From those tapering lines of snow ;
Fondly o'er the sleeper bending
His black hair with golden blending,
In her soft and light caress,
Cheek and lip together press.

Ha !—that start of horror ! why
That wild stare and wilder cry,
Full of terror, full of pain ?
Is there madness in her brain ?
Hark ! that gasping, hoarse and low,
'Spare me,—spare me,—let me go !'

God have mercy !—icy cold
Spectral hands her own enfold,
Drawing silently from them
Love's fair gifts of gold and gem.
'Waken ! save me !' still as death
At her side he slumbereth.

Ring and bracelet all are gone,
And that ice-cold hand withdrawn ;
But she hears a murmur low,
Full of sweetness, full of woe,
Half a sigh and half a moan :
'Fear not ! give the dead her own !'

Ah !—the dead wife's voice she knows !
That cold hand whose pressure froze,
Once in warmest life had borne
Gem and band her own hath worn.
'Wake thee ! wake thee !' Lo, his eyes
Open with a dull surprise.

In his arms the strong man folds her,
Closer to his breast he holds her ;
Trembling limbs his own are meeting,
And he feels her heart's quick beating :
'Nay, my dearest, why this fear ?'
'Hush !' she saith, 'the dead is here !'

'Nay, a dream,—an idle dream.'
But before the lamp's pale gleam
Tremblingly her hand she raises.
There no more the diamond blazes,
Clasp of pearl, or ring of gold,—
'Ah !' she sighs, 'her hand was cold !'

Broken words of cheer he saith,
But his dark lip quivereth,
And as o'er the past he thinketh,
From his young wife's arms he shrinketh ;
Can those soft arms round him lie,
Underneath his dead wife's eye ?

She her fair young head can rest
Soothed and childlike on his breast,
And in trustful innocence
Draw new strength and courage thence :

He, the proud man, feels within
But the cowardice of sin !

She can murmur in her thought 105
Simple prayers her mother taught,
And His blessed angels call,
Whose great love is over all ;
He, alone, in prayerless pride,
Meets the dark Past at her side ! 110

One, who living shrank with dread
From his look, or word, or tread,
Unto whom her early grave
Was as freedom to the slave,
Moves him at this midnight hour, 115
With the dead's unconscious power !

Ah, the dead, the unforget !
From their solemn homes of thought,
Where the cypress shadows blend
Darkly over foe and friend, 120
Or in love or sad rebuke,
Back upon the living look.

And the tenderest ones and weakest,
Who their wrongs have borne the meekest,
Lifting from those dark, still places, 125
Sweet and sad-remembered faces,
O'er the guilty hearts behind
An unwitting triumph find.

THE BRIDAL OF PENNACOOK.

Winnepurkit, otherwise called George, Sachem of Saugus, married a daughter of Passaconaway, the great Pennacook chieftain, in 1662. The wedding took place at Pennacook (now Concord, N. H.), and the ceremonies closed with a great feast. According to the usages of the chiefs, Passaconaway ordered a select number of his men to accompany the newly-married couple to the dwelling of the husband, where in turn there was another great feast. Some time after, the wife of Winnepurkit expressing a desire to visit her father's house was permitted to go, accompanied by a brave escort of her husband's chief men. But when she wished to return, her father sent a messenger to Saugus, informing her husband, and asking him to come and take her away. He returned for answer that he had escorted his wife to her father's house in a style that became a chief, and that now if she wished to return, her father must send her back, in the same way. This Passaconaway refused to do, and it is said that here terminated the connection of his daughter with the Saugus chief.—Vide Morton's New Canaan.

We had been wandering for many days
Through the rough northern country.
We had seen

The sunset, with its bars of purple cloud,
Like a new heaven, shine upward from
the lake

Of Winnepiseogee ; and had felt 5
The sunrise breezes, midst the leafy isles
Which stoop their summer beauty to the lips

Of the bright waters. We had checked
our steeds,

Silent with wonder, where the mountain
wall

Is piled to heaven ; and, through the narrow rift 10

Of the vast rocks, against whose rugged
feet

Beats the mad torrent with perpetual roar,

Where noonday is as twilight, and the wind

Comes burdened with the everlasting
moan

Of forests and of far-off waterfalls, 15
We had looked upward where the summer sky,

Tasselled with clouds light-woven by the
sun,

Sprung its blue arch above the abutting crags

O'er-roofing the vast portal of the land Beyond the wall of mountains. We had passed 20

The high source of the Saco ; and bewildered

In the dwarf spruce-belts of the Crystal
Hills,

Had heard above us, like a voice in the cloud,

The horn of Fabyan sounding ; and atop
Of old Agiochook had seen the mountains 25

Piled to the northward, shagged with wood, and thick

As meadow mole-hills,—the far sea of Casco,

A white gleam on the horizon of the east ;
Fair lakes, embosomed in the woods and
hills ;
Moosehillock's mountain range, and Kear-sarge 30
Lifting his granite forehead to the sun !

And we had rested underneath the oaks
Shadowing the bank, whose grassy spires are shaken

By the perpetual beating of the falls
Of the wild Ammonoosuc. We had tracked
The winding Pemigewasset, overhung 36
By beechen shadows, whitening down its rocks,

Or lazily gliding through its intervals,
From waving rye-fields sending up the gleam

Of sunlit waters. We had seen the moon 40
Rising behind Umbagog's eastern pines,
Like a great Indian camp-fire ; and its beams

At midnight spanning with a bridge of silver

The Merrimac by Uncanoonuc's falls.

There were five souls of us whom travel's chance 45
Had thrown together in these wild north
hills :

A city lawyer, for a month escaping
From his dull office, where the weary eye
Saw only hot brick walls and close thronged streets ;

Briefless as yet, but with an eye to see 50
Life's sunniest side, and with a heart to take

Its chances all as godsend ; and his brother,

Pale from long pulpit studies, yet retaining
The warmth and freshness of a genial
heart,

Whose mirror of the beautiful and true, 55
In Man and Nature, was as yet undimmed
By dust of theologic strife, or breath
Of sect, or cobwebs of scholastic lore ;
Like a clear crystal calm of water, taking
The hue and image of o'erleaning flowers, 60
Sweet human faces, white clouds of the
noon,

Slant starlight glimpses through the dewy
leaves,

And tenderest moonrise. 'T was, in truth,
a study,

To mark his spirit, alternating between
A decent and professional gravity 65
And an irreverent mirthfulness, which often

Laughed in the face of his divinity,
Plucked off the sacred ephod, quite unshrined

The oracle, and for the pattern priest
Left us the man. A shrewd, sagacious merchant, 70

To whom the soiled sheet found in Craw-ford's inn,

Giving the latest news of city stocks
And sales of cotton, had a deeper meaning
Than the great presence of the awful mountains

Glorified by the sunset ; and his daughter,
A delicate flower on whom had blown too
long 76

Those evil winds, which, sweeping from the ice

And winnowing the fogs of Labrador, Shed their cold blight round Massachusetts Bay,

With the same breath which stirs Spring's opening leaves 80

And lifts her half-formed flower-bell on its stem,

Poisoning our seaside atmosphere.

It chanced
That as we turned upon our homeward way,
A drear northeastern storm came howling up 85

The valley of the Saco ; and that girl
Who had stood with us upon Mount Washington,

Her brown locks ruffled by the wind which whirled

In gusts around its sharp, cold pinnacle,
Who had joined our gay trout-fishing in the streams 90

Which lave that giant's feet ; whose laugh was heard

Like a bird's carol on the sunrise breeze
Which swelled our sail amidst the lake's
green islands,

Shrank from its harsh, chill breath, and visibly drooped

Like a flower in the frost. So, in that quiet inn 95

Which looks from Conway on the mountains piled

Heavily against the horizon of the north,
Like summer thunder-clouds, we made our home:

And while the mist hung over dripping
hills,

And the cold wind-driven rain-drops all day long 100

Beat their sad music upon roof and pane,
We strove to cheer our gentle invalid.

The lawyer in the pauses of the storm
Went angling down the Saco, and, returning,

Recounted his adventures and mishaps;
Gave us the history of his scaly clients, 106
Mingling with ludicrous yet apt citations
Of barbarous law Latin, passages

From Izaak Walton's Angler, sweet and fresh

As the flower-skirted streams of Staffordshire, 110

Where, under aged trees, the southwest
wind

Of soft June mornings fanned the thin, white hair

Of the sage fisher. And, if truth be told,
Our youthful candidate forsook his sermons,

His commentaries, articles and creeds, 115
For the fair page of human loveliness,
The missal of young hearts, whose sacred text

Is music, its illumining, sweet smiles.
He sang the songs she loved; and in his
low,

Deep, earnest voice, recited many a page
Of poetry, the holiest, tenderest lines 120
Of the sad bard of Olney, the sweet songs,
Simple and beautiful as Truth and Nature,
Of him whose whitened locks on Rydal
Mount

Are lifted yet by morning breezes
blowing 125

From the green hills, immortal in his lays.
And for myself, obedient to her wish,
I searched our landlord's proffered library:

A well-thumbed Bunyan, with its nice wood pictures

Of scaly fiends and angels not unlike them; 130

Watts' unmelodious psalms; Astrology's
Last home, a musty pile of almanacs,
And an old chronicle of border wars
And Indian history. And, as I read
A story of the marriage of the Chief 135

Of Saugus to the dusky Weetamoo,
Daughter of Passaconaway, who dwelt
In the old time upon the Merrimac,
Our fair one, in the playful exercise
Of her prerogative,—the right divine 140

Of youth and beauty,—bade us versify
The legend, and with ready pencils sketched
Its plan and outlines, laughingly assigning
To each his part, and barring our excuses
With absolute will. So, like the cavaliers Whose voices still are heard in the Romance 146

Of silver-tongued Boccaccio, on the banks
Of Arno, with soft tales of love beguiling
The ear of languid beauty, plague exiled
From stately Florence, we rehearsed our rhymes 150

To their fair auditor, and shared by turns
Her kind approval and her playful censure.

It may be that these fragments owe alone
To the fair setting of their circumstances,—

The associations of time, scene, and audience,— 155

Their place amid the pictures which fill up
The chambers of my memory. Yet I trust That some, who sigh, while wandering in
thought,

Pilgrims of Romance o'er the olden world,
That our broad land,—our sea-like lakes and mountains 160

Piled to the clouds, our rivers overhung
By forests which have known no other change

For ages than the budding and the fall
Of leaves, our valleys lovelier than those Which the old poets sang of,—should but figure 165

On the apocryphal chart of speculation
As pastures, wood-lots, mill-sites, with the privileges,

Rights, and appurtenances, which make up
A Yankee Paradise, unsung, unknown,
To beautiful tradition; even their names,
Whose melody yet lingers like the last 171
Vibration of the red man's requiem,
Exchanged for syllables significant.
Of cotton-mill and rail-car, will look kindly Upon this effort to call up the ghost 175
Of our dim Past, and listen with pleased
ear
To the responses of the questioned Shade.

I. THE MERRIMAC.

O child of that white-crested mountain whose springs
Gush forth in the shade of the cliff-eagle's wings,
Down whose slopes to the lowlands thy wild waters shine, 180
Leaping gray walls of rock, flashing
through the dwarf pine;

From that cloud-curtained cradle so cold and so lone,
From the arms of that wintry-locked mother of stone,
By hills hung with forests, through vales
wide and free,
Thy mountain-born brightness glanced down to the sea! 185

No bridge arched thy waters save that where the trees
Stretched their long arms above thee and kissed in the breeze:
No sound save the lapse of the waves on thy shores,
The plunging of otters, the light dip of oars.

Green-tufted, oak-shaded, by Amoskeag's
fall 190
Thy twin Uncanoonucs rose stately and
tall,
Thy Nashua meadows lay green and
unshorn,
And the hills of Pentucket were tasselled with corn.

But thy Pennacook valley was fairer than
these,
And greener its grasses and taller its
trees, 195
Ere the sound of an axe in the forest had rung,
Or the mower his scythe in the meadows had swung.

In their sheltered repose looking out from the wood
The bark-built wigwams of Pennacook stood;
There glided the corn-dance, the council-fire shone, 200
And against the red war-post the hatchet
was thrown.

There the old smoked in silence their pipes, and the young
To the pike and the white-perch their baited lines flung;
There the boy shaped his arrows, and there the shy maid
Wove her many-hued baskets and bright wampum braid. 205

O Stream of the Mountains! if answer of
thine
Could rise from thy waters to question of mine,
Methinks through the din of thy thronged banks a moan
Of sorrow would swell for the days which have gone.

Not for thee the dull jar of the loom and
the wheel, 210
The gliding of shuttles, the ringing of steel;
But that old voice of waters, of bird and
of breeze,
The dip of the wild-fowl, the rustling of
trees!

II. THE BASHABA⁴.

Lift we the twilight curtains of the Past,
And, turning from familiar sight and
sound, 215
Sadly and full of reverence let us cast
A glance upon Tradition's shadowy
ground,

Led by the few pale lights which, glimmering round
 That dim, strange land of Eld, seem dying fast ;
 And that which history gives not to the eye, 220
 The faded coloring of Time's tapestry,
 Let Fancy, with her dream-dipped brush, supply.

Roof of bark and walls of pine,
 Through whose chinks the sunbeams
 shine,
 Tracing many a golden line 225
 ' On the ample floor within ;
 Where, upon that earth-floor stark,
 Lay the gaudy mats of bark,
 With the bear's hide, rough and dark,
 And the red-deer's skin. 230

Window-tracery, small and slight,
 Woven of the willow white,
 Lent a dimly checkered light ;
 And the night-stars glimmered down,
 Where the lodge-fire's heavy smoke, 235
 Slowly through an opening broke,
 In the low roof, ribbed with oak,
 Sheathed with hemlock brown.

Gloomed behind the changeless shade
 By the solemn pine-wood made ; 240
 Through the rugged palisade,
 In the open foreground planted,
 Glimpses came of rowers rowing,
 Stir of leaves and wild-flowers blowing,
 Steel-like gleams of water flowing. 245
 In the sunlight slanted.

Here the mighty Bashaba
 Held his long-unquestioned sway,
 From the White Hills, far away,
 To the great sea's sounding shore ; 250
 Chief of chiefs, his regal word
 All the river Sachems heard,
 At his call the war-dance stirred,
 Or was still once more.

There his spoils of chase and war, 255
 Jaw of wolf and black bear's paw,
 Panther's skin and eagle's claw,
 Lay beside his axe and bow ;

And, adown the roof-pole hung,
 Loosely on a snake-skin strung, 260
 In the smoke his scalp-locks swung Grimly to and fro.

Nightly down the river going,
 Swifter was the hunter's rowing,
 When he saw that lodge-fire glowing 265
 O'er the waters still and red ;
 And the squaw's dark eye burned brighter,
 And she drew her blanket tighter,
 As, with quicker step and lighter,
 From that door she fled. 270

For that chief had magic skill,
 And a Panisee's dark will,
 Over powers of good and ill,
 Powers which bless and powers which
 ban ;
 Wizard lord of Pennacook, 275
 Chiefs upon their war-path shook,
 When they met the steady look
 Of that wise dark man.

Tales of him the gray squaw told,
 When the winter night-wind cold 280
 Pierced her blanket's thickest fold,
 And her fire burned low and small,
 Till the very child abed,
 Drew its bear-skin over head,
 Shrinking from the pale lights shed 285
 On the trembling wall.

All the subtle spirits hiding
 Under earth or wave, abiding
 In the caverned rock, or riding
 Misty clouds or morning breeze ; 290
 Every dark intelligence,
 Secret soul, and influence
 Of all things which outward sense
 Feels, or hears, or sees,—

These the wizard's skill confessed, 295
 At his bidding banned or blessed,
 Stormful woke or lulled to rest
 Wind and cloud, and fire and flood ;
 Burned for him the drifted snow,
 Bade through ice fresh lilies blow, 300
 And the leaves of summer grow
 Over winter's wood !

Not untrue that tale of old !
 Now, as then, the wise and bold
 All the powers of Nature hold 305
 Subject to their kingly will ;
 From the wondering crowds ashore,
 Treading life's wild waters o'er,
 As upon a marble floor,
 Moves the strong man still. 310

Still, to such, life's elements
 With their sterner laws dispense,
 And the chain of consequence
 Broken in their pathway lies ;
 Time and change their vassals making,
 Flowers from icy pillows waking, 316
 Tresses of the sunrise shaking
 Over midnight skies.

Still, to th' earnest soul, the sun
 Rests on towered Gibeon, 320
 And the moon of Ajalon
 Lights the battle-grounds of life ;
 To his aid the strong reverses
 Hidden powers and giant forces,
 And the high stars, in their courses, 325
 Mingle in his strife !

III. THE DAUGHTER.

The soot-black brows of men, the yell
 Of women thronging round the bed,
 The tinkling charm of ring and shell,
 The Powah whispering o'er the
 dead ! 330
 All these the Sachem's home had known,
 When, on her journey long and wild
 To the dim World of Souls, alone,
 In her young beauty passed the mother of his child.

Three bow-shots from the Sachem's dwelling 335
 They laid her in the walnut shade,
 Where a green hillock gently swelling
 Her fitting mound of burial made.
 There trailed the vine in summer hours,
 The tree-perched squirrel dropped his shell,— 340
 On velvet moss and pale-hued flowers,
 Woven with leaf and spray, the softened sunshine fell !

The Indian's heart is hard and cold,
 It closes darkly o'er its care,
 And formed in Nature's sternest mould,
 Is slow to feel, and strong to bear. 346
 The war-paint on the Sachem's face,
 Unwet with tears, shone fierce and red,
 And still, in battle or in chase,
 Dry leaf and snow-rime crisped beneath his foremost tread. 350

Yet when her name was heard no more,
 And when the robe her mother gave,
 And small, light moccasin she wore,
 Had slowly wasted on her grave,
 Unmarked of him the dark maids
 sped 355
 Their sunset dance and moonlit play ;
 No other shared his lonely bed,
 No other fair young head upon his bosom
 lay.

A lone, stern man. Yet, as sometimes
 The tempest-smitten tree receives 360
 From one small root the sap which climbs
 Its topmost spray and crowning leaves,
 So from his child the Sachem drew
 A life of Love and Hope, and felt
 His cold and rugged nature through 365
 The softness and the warmth of her young being melt.

A laugh which in the woodland rang
 Bemocking April's gladdest bird,—
 A light and graceful form which sprang
 To meet him when his step was
 heard,— 370
 Eyes by his lodge-fire flashing dark,
 Small fingers stringing bead and shell
 Or weaving mats of bright-hued bark,—
 With these the household-god had graced his wigwam well.

Child of the forest ! strong and free, 375
 Slight-robed, with loosely flowing hair,
 She swam the lake or climbed the tree,
 Or struck the flying bird in air.
 O'er the heaped drifts of winter's moon
 Her snow-shoes tracked the hunter's
 way ; 380
 And dazzling in the summer noon
 The blade of her light oar threw off its shower of spray !

Unknown to her the rigid rule,
 The dull restraint, the chiding frown,
 The weary torture of the school, 385
 The taming of wild nature down.
 Her only lore, the legends told
 Around the hunter's fire at night;
 Stars rose and set, and seasons rolled,
 Flowers bloomed and snow-flakes fell, unquestioned in her sight. 390

Unknown to her the subtle skill
 With which the artist-eye can trace
 In rock and tree and lake and hill
 The outlines of divinest grace;
 Unknown the fine soul's keen unrest, 395
 Which sees, admires, yet yearns alway;
 Too closely on her mother's breast
 To note her smiles of love the child of Nature lay!

It is enough for such to be
 Of common, natural things a part, 400
 To feel, with bird and stream and tree,
 The pulses of the same great heart;
 But we, from Nature long exiled,
 In our cold homes of Art and Thought
 Grieve like the stranger-tended child, 405
 Which seeks its mother's arms, and sees but feels them not.

The garden rose may richly bloom
 In cultured soil and genial air,
 To cloud the light of Fashion's room
 Or droop in Beauty's midnight hair;
 In lonelier grace, to sun and dew 411
 The sweetbrier on the hillside shows
 Its single leaf and fainter hue,
 Untrained, and wildly free, yet still a sister rose!

Thus o'er the heart of Weetamoo⁵ 415
 Their mingling shades of joy and ill
 The instincts of her nature threw;
 The savage was a woman still.
 Midst outlines dim of maiden schemes,
 Heart-colored prophecies of life, 420
 Rose on the ground of her young dreams
 The light of a new home, the lover and the wife.

IV. THE WEDDING. •

Cool and dark fell the autumn night,
 But the Bashaba's wigwam glowed with
 light,
 For down from its roof, by green withes
 hung, 425
 Flaring and smoking the pine-knots
 swung.

And along the river great wood-fires
 Shot into the night their long, red spires,
 Showing behind the tall, dark wood,
 Flashing before on the sweeping flood.

In the changeful wind, with shimmer and
 shade, 431
 Now high, now low, that firelight played,
 On tree-leaves wet with evening dew,
 On gliding water and still canoes.

The trapper that night on Turee's brook,
 And the weary fisher on Contoocook, 436 Saw over the marshes, and through the pine,
 And down on the river, the dance-lights
 shine.

For the Saugus Sachem had come to woo
 The Bashaba's daughter Weetamoo, 440
 And laid at her father's feet that night
 His softest furs and wampum white.

From the Crystal Hills to the far southeast
 The river Sagamores came to the feast;
 And chiefs whose homes the sea-winds
 shook 444
 Sat down on the mats of Pennacook.

They came from Sunapee's shore of rock,
 From the snowy sources of Snooganock,
 And from rough Coös whose thick woods shake
 Their pine-cones in Umbagog Lake. 450

From Ammonoosuc's mountain pass,
 Wild as his home, came Chepewass;
 And the Keenoms of the hills which
 throw
 Their shade on the Smile of Manito.

With pipes of peace and bows unstrung,
Glowing with paint came old and young,
In wampum and furs and feathers arrayed,
To the dance and feast the Bashaba made.

Bird of the air and beast of the field, 459
All which the woods and the waters yield,
On dishes of birch and hemlock piled,
Garnished and graced that banquet wild.

Steaks of the brown bear fat and large
From the rocky slopes of the Kearsarge ;
Delicate trout from Babboosuck brook,
And salmon speared in the Contoocook ;

Squirrels which fed where nuts fell thick
In the gravelly bed of the Otternic ; 468
And small wild-hens in reed-snares caught
From the banks of Sondagardee brought ;

Pike and perch from the Suncook taken,
Nuts from the trees of the Black Hills shaken,

Cranberries picked in the Squamscot bog,
And grapes from the vines of Piscataquog :

And, drawn from that great stone vase which stands ⁴⁷⁵
In the river scooped by a spirit's hands,
Garnished with spoons of shell and horn,
Stood the birchen dishes of smoking corn.

Thus bird of the air and beast of the field,
All which the woods and the waters yield,
Furnished in that olden day 481
The bridal feast of the Bashaba.

And merrily when that feast was done
On the fire-lit green the dance begun,
With squaws' shrill stave, and deeper hum
Of old men beating the Indian drum. 486

Painted and plumed, with scalp-locks flowing,

And red arms tossing and black eyes glowing,

Now in the light and now in the shade
Around the fires the dancers played. 490

The step was quicker, the song more shrill,

And the beat of the small drums louder
still

Whenever within the circle drew
The Saugus Sachem and Weetamoo.

The moons of forty winters had shed 495
Their snow upon that chieftain's head,
And toil and care and battle's chance
Had seamed his hard, dark countenance.

A fawn beside the bison grim,—
Why turns the bride's fond eye on him,
In whose cold look is naught beside 501
The triumph of a sullen pride?

Ask why the graceful grape entwines
The rough oak with her arm of vines ;
And why the gray rock's rugged cheek
The soft lips of the mosses seek : 505

Why, with wise instinct, Nature seems
To harmonize her wide extremes,
Linking the stronger with the weak,
The haughty with the soft and meek ! 510

V. THE NEW HOME.

A wild and broken landscape, spiked with firs,

Roughening the bleak horizon's northern edge ;

Steep, cavernous hillsides, where black hemlock spurs

And sharp, gray splinters of the windswept ledge

Pierced the thin-glazed 'ice, or bristling
rose, 515

Where the cold rim of the sky sunk down upon the snows.

And eastward cold, wide marshes stretched
away,

Dull, dreary flats without a bush or tree,
O'er-crossed by icy creeks, where twice a
day

Gurgled the waters of the moon-struck
sea ; 520

And faint with distance came the stifled
roar,

The melancholy lapse of waves on that low shore.

No cheerful village with its mingling
smokes,

No laugh of children wrestling in the snow,

No camp-fire blazing through the hillside
oaks, 525

No fishers kneeling on the ice below ;
Yet midst all desolate things of sound and
view,
Through the long winter moons smiled
dark-eyed Weetamoo.

Her heart had found a home ; and freshly
all

Its beautiful affections overgrew 530
Their rugged prop. As o'er some granite
wall

Soft vine-leaves open to the moistening
dew

And warm bright sun, the love of that young wife

Found on a hard cold breast the dew and warmth of life.

The steep, bleak hills, the melancholy
shore, 535

The long, dead level of the marsh between,

A coloring of unreal beauty wore
Through the soft golden mist of young love seen.

For o'er those hills and from that dreary
plain,

Nightly she welcomed home her hunter
chief again. 540

No warmth of heart, no passionate burst
of feeling,

Repaid her welcoming smile and parting kiss,

No fond and playful dalliance half concealing,

Under the guise of mirth, its tenderness ;
But, in their stead, the warrior's settled
pride, 545

And vanity's pleased smile with homage satisfied.

Enough for Weetamoo, that she alone
Sat on his mat and slumbered at his side ;

That he whose fame to her young ear had flown

Now looked upon her proudly as his bride ; 550

That he whose name the Mohawk trembling heard

Vouchsafed to her at times a kindly look or word.

For she had learned the maxims of her
race,

Which teach the woman to become a slave,

And feel herself the pardonless disgrace
Of love's fond weakness in the wise and brave, -- 556

The scandal and the shame which they incur,

Who give to woman all which man requires of her.

So passed the winter moons. The sun at last

Broke link by link the frost chain of the rills, 560

And the warm breathings of the southwest passed

Over the hoar rime of the Saugus hills ;
The gray and desolate marsh grew green
once more,

And the birch-tree's tremulous shade fell round the Sachem's door.

Then from far Pennacook swift runners
came, 565

With gift and greeting for the Saugus
chief ;

Beseeching him in the great Sachem's
name,

That, with the coming of the flower and
leaf,

The song of birds, the warm breeze and
the rain,

Young Weetamoo might greet her lonely
sire again. 570

And Winnepurkit called his chiefs together,

And a grave council in his wigwam
met,

Solemn and brief in words, considering whether

The rigid rules of forest etiquette
Permitted Weetamoo once more to look

Upon her father's face and green-banked Pennacook. 576

With interludes of pipe-smoke and strong
water,

The forest sages pondered, and at length
Concluded in a body to escort her

Up to her father's home of pride and strength, 580

Impressing thus on Pennacook a sense
Of Winnepurkit's power and regal consequence.

So through old woods which Aukeetamit's
hand?

A soft and many-shaded greenness lent,
Over high breezy hills, and meadow land

Yellow with flowers, the wild procession
went, 586

Till, rolling down its wooded banks between,

A broad, clear, mountain stream, the Merrimac was seen.

The hunter leaning on his bow undrawn,
The fisher lounging on the pebbled
shores, 590

Squaws in the clearing dropping the seed-
corn,

Young children peering through the wigwam doors,

Saw with delight, surrounded by her train
Of painted Saugus braves, their Weetamoo
again.

VI. AT PENNACOOK.

The hills are dearest which our childish
feet 595

Have climbed the earliest; and the streams most sweet

Are ever those at which our young lips drank

Stooped to their waters o'er the grassy bank.

Midst the cold dreary sea-watch, Home's hearth-light

Shines round the helmsman plunging through the night; 600

And still, with inward eye, the traveller sees

In close, dark, stranger streets his native
trees.

The home-sick dreamer's brow is nightly
fanned

By breezes whispering of his native land,
And on the stranger's dim and dying eye

The soft, sweet pictures of his childhood
lie. 606

Joy then for Weetamoo, to sit once more
A child upon her father's wigwam floor!
Once more with her old fondness to beguile

From his cold eye the strange light of a smile. 610

The long, bright days of summer swiftly
passed,

The dry leaves whirled in autumn's rising
blast,

And evening cloud and whitening sunrise
rime

Told of the coming of the winter-time.

But vainly looked, the while, young
Weetamoo 615

Down the dark river for her chief's canoe;
No dusky messenger from Saugus brought
The grateful tidings which the young wife
sought.

At length a runner from her father sent,
To Winnepurkit's sea-cooled wigwam
went; 620

'Eagle of Saugus,—in the woods the dove Mourns for the shelter of thy wings of love.'

But the dark chief of Saugus turned aside
In the grim anger of hard-hearted pride;

'I bore her as became a chieftain's
daughter, 625

Up to her home beside the gliding water.

'If now no more a mat for her is found
Of all which line her father's wigwam
round,

Let Pennacook call out his warrior train,
And send her back with wampum gifts
again.' 630

The baffled runner turned upon his track,

Bearing the words of Winnepurkit back.

'Dog of the Marsh,' cried Pennacook, 'no more Shall child of mine sit on his wigwam floor.

'Go, let him seek some meaner squaw to spread 635
The stolen bear-skin of his beggar's bed ;
Son of a fish-hawk ! let him dig his clams
For some vile daughter of the Agawams,

'Or coward Nipmucks ! may his scalp dry black
In Mohawk smoke, before I send her back.' 640
He shook his clenched hand towards the ocean wave,
While hoarse assent his listening council gave.

Alas, poor bride ! can thy grim sire impart
His iron hardness to thy woman's heart ?
Or cold self-torturing pride like his atone
For love denied and life's warm beauty flown ? 646

On Autumn's gray and mournful grave the snow
Hung its white wreaths ; with stifled voice and low
The river crept, by one vast bridge o'er-crossed, 649
Built by the hoar-locked artisan of Frost.

And many a moon in beauty newly born
Pierced the red sunset with her silver horn,
Or, from the east, across her azure field
Rolled the wide brightness of her full-orbed shield.

Yet Winnepurkit came not,—on the mat
Of the scorned wife her dusky rival sat ; 656
And he, the while, in Western woods afar,
Urged the long chase, or trod the path of war.

Dry up thy tears, young daughter of a chief ! 659
Waste not on him the sacredness of grief ;
Be the fierce spirit of thy sire thine own,
His lips of scorning, and his heart of stone.

What heeds the warrior of a hundred fights,
The storm-worn watcher through long hunting nights,
Cold, crafty, proud of woman's weak distress, 665
Her home-bound grief and pining loneliness ?

VII. THE DEPARTURE.

The wild March rains had fallen fast and long
The snowy mountains of the North among,
Making each vale a watercourse, each hill
Bright with the cascade of some new-made rill. 670

Gnawed by the sunbeams, softened by the rain,
Heaved underneath by the swollen current's strain,
The ice-bridge yielded, and the Merrimac
Bore the huge ruin crashing down its track.

On that strong turbid water, a small boat
Guided by one weak hand was seen to float ; 676
Evil the fate which loosed it from the shore,
Too early voyager with too frail an oar !

Down the vexed centre of that rushing tide,
The thick, huge ice-blocks threatening either side, 680
The foam-white rocks of Amoskeag in view,
With arrowy swiftness sped that light canoe.

The trapper, moistening his moose's meat
On the wet bank by Uncanoonuc's feet,
Saw the swift boat flash down the troubled stream ; 685
Slept he, or waked he ? was it truth or dream ?

The straining eye bent fearfully before,
The small hand clenching on the useless oar,

The bead-wrought blanket trailing o'er the
water—

He knew them all—woe for the Sachem's
daughter! 690

Sick and aweary of her lonely life,
Heedless of peril, the still faithful wife
Had left her mother's grave, her father's
door,

To seek the wigwam of her chief once more.

Down the white rapids like a sear leaf whirled, 695

On the sharp rocks and piled-up ices
hurled,

Empty and broken, circled the canoe
In the vexed pool below—but where was Weetamoo?

VIII. SONG OF INDIAN WOMEN.

The Dark eye has left us,
The Spring-bird has flown; 700

On the pathway of spirits
She wanders alone.

The song of the wood-dove has died on our shore:

Mat wonck kunna-monee! We hear it no
more!

O dark water Spirit! 705

We cast on thy wave
These furs which may never
Hang over her grave;

Bear down to the lost one the robes that
she wore:

Mat wonck kunna-monee! We see her no
more! 710

Of the strange land she walks in No Powah has told:

It may burn with the sunshine,
Or freeze with the cold.

Let us give to our lost one the robes that
she wore: 715

Mat wonck kunna-monee! We see her no
more!

The path she is treading
Shall soon be our own;
Each gliding in shadow
Unseen and alone! 720

In vain shall we call on the souls gone
before:

Mat wonck kunna-monee! They hear us
no more!

O mighty Sowanna!

Thy gateways unfold,
From thy wigwam of sunset 725
Lift curtains of gold!

Take home the poor Spirit whose journey is o'er:

Mat wonck kunna-monee! We see her no
more!

So sang the Children of the Leaves beside
The broad, dark river's coldly flowing tide; 730

Now low, now harsh, with sob-like pause
and swell,

On the high wind their voices rose and
fell.

Nature's wild music,—sounds of windswept trees,

The scream of birds, the wailing of the breeze,

The roar of waters, steady, deep, and
strong,— 735

Mingled and murmured in that farewell
song.

BARCLAY OF URY.

Among the earliest converts to the doctrines of Friends in Scotland was Barclay of Ury, an old and distinguished soldier, who had fought under Gustavus Adolphus, in Germany. As a Quaker, he became the object of persecution and abuse at the hands of the magistrates and the populace. None bore the indignities of the mob with greater patience and nobleness of soul than this once proud gentleman and soldier. One of his friends, on an occasion of uncommon rudeness, lamented that he should be treated so harshly in his old age who had been so honored before. 'I find more satisfaction,' said Barclay, 'as well as honor, in being thus insulted for my religious principles, than when, a few years ago, it was usual for the magistrates, as I passed the city of Aberdeen, to meet me on the road and conduct me to public entertainment in their hall, and then escort me out again, to gain my favor.'

Up the streets of Aberdeen,
By the kirk and college green,
Rode the Laird of Ury ;
Close behind him, close beside,
Foul of mouth and evil-eyed,
Pressed the mob in fury.

Flouted him the drunken churl,
Jeered at him the serving-girl,
Prompt to please her master ;
And the begging carlin, late
Fed and clothed at Ury's gate,
Cursed him as he passed her.

Yet, with calm and stately mien,
Up the streets of Aberdeen
Came he slowly riding ;
And, to all he saw and heard,
Answering not with bitter word,
Turning not for chiding.

Came a troop with broadswords swinging,
Bits and bridles sharply ringing, 20
Loose and free and froward ;
Quoth the foremost, ' Ride him down !
Push him ! prick him ! through the town
Drive the Quaker coward ! '

But from out the thickening crowd 25
Cried a sudden voice and loud :
' Barclay ! Ho ! a Barclay ! '
And the old man at his side
Saw a comrade, battle tried,
Scarred and sunburned darkly ; 30

Who with ready weapon bare,
Fronting to the troopers there,
Cried aloud : ' God save us,
Call ye coward him who stood
Ankle deep in Lützen's blood,
With the brave Gustavus ? ' 35

' Nay, I do not need thy sword,
Comrade mine, ' said Ury's lord ;
' Put it up, I pray thee :
Passive to His holy will,
Trust I in my Master still,
Even though He slay me. 40

' Pledges of thy love and faith,
Proved on many a field of death,
Not by me are needed. ' 45

Marvelled much that henchman bold,
That his laird, so stout of old,
Now so meekly pleaded.

' Woe's the day ! ' he sadly said,
With a slowly shaking head, 50
And a look of pity ;
' Ury's honest lord reviled,
Mock of knave and sport of child,
In his own good city !

' Speak the word, and, master mine, 55
As we charged on Tilly's line ¹⁰,
And his Walloon lancers,
Smiting through their midst we'll teach
Civil look and decent speech
To these boyish prancers ! ' 60.

' Marvel not, mine ancient friend,
Like beginning, like the end, '
Quoth the Laird of Ury ;
' Is the sinful servant more
Than his gracious Lord who bore 65
Bonds and stripes in Jewry ?

' Give me joy that in His name
I can bear, with patient frame,
All these vain ones offer ;
While for them He suffereth long, 70
Shall I answer wrong with wrong,
Scoffing with the scoffer ?

' Happier I, with loss of all,
Hunted, outlawed, held in thrall,
With few friends to greet me, 75
Than when reeve and squire were seen,
Riding out from Aberdeen,
With bared heads to meet me.

' When each goodwife, o'er and o'er,
Blessed me as I passed her door ; 80
And the snooded daughter,
Through her casement glancing down,
Smiled on him who bore renown
From red fields of slaughter.

' Hard to feel the stranger's scoff, 85
Hard the old friend's falling off,
Hard to learn forgiving ;
But the Lord His own rewards,
And His love with theirs accords,
Warm and fresh and living. 90

'Through this dark and stormy night
Faith beholds a feeble light

Up the blackness streaking ;
Knowing God's own time is best,
In a patient hope I rest
For the full day-breaking !'

So the Laird of Ury said,
Turning slow his horse's head
Towards the Tolbooth prison,
Where, through iron gates, he heard 100
Poor disciples of the Word
Preach of Christ arisen !

Not in vain, Confessor old,
Unto us the tale is told
Of thy day of trial ; 105
Every age on him who strays
From its broad and beaten ways
Pours its seven-fold vial.

Happy he whose inward ear
Angel comfortings can hear, 110
O'er the rabble's laughter ;
And while Hatred's fagots burn,
Glances through the smoke discern
Of the good hereafter.

Knowing this, that never yet
Share of Truth was vainly set 115
In the world's wide fallow ;
After hands shall sow the seed,
After hands from hill and mead
Reap the harvests yellow. 120

Thus, with somewhat of the Seer,
Must the moral pioneer
From the Future borrow ;
Clothe the waste with dreams of grain,
And, on midnight's sky of rain, 125
Paint the golden morrow !

THE ANGELS OF BUENA VISTA.

A letter-writer from Mexico during the Mexican war, when detailing some of the incidents at the terrible fight of Buena Vista, mentioned that Mexican women were seen hovering near the field of death, for the purpose of giving aid and succor to the wounded. One poor woman was found surrounded by the maimed and suffering of both armies, ministering to the wants of Americans as well as Mexicans with impartial tenderness.

95 SPEAK and tell us, our Ximena, looking northward far away,
O'er the camp of the invaders, o'er the Mexican array,
Who is losing ? who is winning ? are they far or come they near ?
100 Look abroad, and tell us, sister, whither rolls the storm we hear.

'Down the hills of Angostura still the storm of battle rolls ; 5
Blood is flowing, men are dying ; God have mercy on their souls !'
105 Who is losing ? who is winning ? 'Over hill and over plain,
I see but smoke of cannon clouding
through the mountain rain.'

Holy Mother ! keep our brothers ! Look,
Ximena, look once more.
'Still I see the fearful whirlwind rolling darkly as before, 10
Bearing on, in strange confusion, friend
and foe, man, foot and horse, 115 Like some wild and troubled torrent sweeping down its mountain course.'

Look forth once more, Ximena ! 'Ah !
the smoke has rolled away ;
And I see the Northern rifles gleaming down the ranks of gray.
Hark ! that sudden blast of bugles ! there the troop of Minon wheels ; 15
There the Northern horses thunder, with the cannon at their heels.

'Jesu, pity ! how it thickens ! now retreat and now advance !
Right against the blazing cannon shivers
Puebla's charging lance !
Down they go, the brave young riders ;
horse and foot together fall ;
Like a ploughshare in the fallow, through them ploughs the Northern ball.' 20

Nearer came the storm and nearer, rolling fast and frightful on !
Speak, Ximena, speak and tell us, who has lost, and who has won ?

'Alas! alas! I know not; friend and foe together fall,
O'er the dying rush the living: pray, my sisters, for them all!

'Lo! the wind the smoke is lifting.
Blessed Mother, save my brain! 25
I can see the wounded crawling slowly out from heaps of slain.
Now they stagger, blind and bleeding;
now they fall, and strive to rise;
Hasten, sisters, haste and save them, lest they die before our eyes!

'O my heart's love! O my dear one!
lay thy poor head on my knee;
Dost thou know the lips that kiss thee?
Canst thou hear me? canst thou
see? 30
O my husband, brave and gentle! O my Bernal, look once more
On the blessed cross before thee! Mercy!
mercy! all is o'er!'

Dry thy tears, my poor Ximena; lay thy
dear one down to rest;
Let his hands be meekly folded, lay the cross upon his breast;
Let his dirge be sung hereafter, and his funeral masses said; 35
To-day, thou poor bereaved one, the living ask thy aid.

Close beside her, faintly moaning, fair
and young, a soldier lay,
Torn with shot and pierced with lances,
bleeding slow his life away;
But, as tenderly before him the lorn
Ximena knelt,
She saw the Northern eagle shining on his pistol-belt. 40

With a stifled cry of horror straight she turned away her head;
With a sad and bitter feeling looked she back upon her dead;
But she heard the youth's low moaning,
and his struggling breath of pain,
And she raised the cooling water to his parching lips again.

Whispered low the dying soldier, pressed her hand and faintly smiled; 45
Was that pitying face his mother's? did she watch beside her child?

All his stranger words with meaning her woman's heart supplied;
With her kiss upon his forehead, 'Mother!' murmured he, and died!

'A bitter curse upon them, poor boy, who led thee forth,
From some gentle, sad-eyed mother,
weeping, lonely, in the North!' 50 Spake the mournful Mexic woman, as she laid him with her dead,
And turned to soothe the living, and bind
the wounds which bled.

Look forth once more, Ximena! 'Like a cloud before the wind
Rolls the battle down the mountains,
leaving blood and death behind;
Ah! they plead in vain for mercy; in the dust the wounded strive; 55
Hide your faces, holy angels! O thou
Christ of God, forgive!'

Sink, O Night, among thy mountains!
let the cool, gray shadows fall;
Dying brothers, fighting demons, drop thy curtain over all!
Through the thickening winter twilight,
wide apart the battle rolled,
In its sheath the sabre rested, and the cannon's lips grew cold. 60

But the noble Mexic women still their holy task pursued,
Through that long, dark night of sorrow,
worn and faint and lacking food.
Over weak and suffering brothers, with a tender care they hung,
And the dying foeman blessed them in a strange and Northern tongue.

Not wholly lost, O Father! is this evil world of ours; 65
Upward, through its blood and ashes,
spring afresh the Eden flowers;
From its smoking hell of battle, Love and Pity send their prayer,
And still thy white-winged angels hover dimly in our air!

THE LEGEND OF ST. MARK.

'This legend [to which my attention was called by my friend Charles Sumner], is the subject of a celebrated picture by Tintoretto, of which Mr. Rogers possesses the original sketch. The slave lies on the ground, amid a crowd of spectators, who look on, animated by all the various emotions of sympathy, rage, terror; a woman, in front, with a child in her arms, has always been admired for the lifelike vivacity of her attitude and expression. The executioner holds up the broken implements; St. Mark, with a headlong movement, seems to rush down from heaven in haste to save his worshipper. The dramatic grouping in this picture is wonderful; the coloring, in its gorgeous depth and harmony, is, in Mr. Rogers's sketch, finer than in the picture.'—Mrs. JAMESON'S Sacred and Legendary Art, i. 154.

THE day is closing dark and cold,
With roaring blast and sleety showers;
And through the dusk the lilacs wear
The bloom of snow, instead of flowers.

I turn me from the gloom without, 5
To ponder o'er a tale of old;
A legend of the age of Faith,
By dreaming monk or abbeſs told.

On Tintoretto's canvas lives 10
That fancy of a loving heart,
In graceful lines and ſhapes of power,
And hues immortal as his art.

In Provence (ſo the ſtory runs)
There lived a lord, to whom, as ſlave,
A peasant-boy of tender years 15
The chance of trade or conqueſt gave.

Forth-looking from the caſtle tower,
Beyond the hills with almonds dark,
The ſtraining eye could ſcarce diſcern 20
The chapel of the good St. Mark.

And there, when bitter word or fare
The ſervice of the youth repaid,
By ſtealth, before that holy ſhrine,
For grace to bear his wrong, he prayed.

The ſteed ſtamped at the caſtle gate, 25
The boar-hunt ſounded on the hill;
Why ſtayed the Baron from the chace,
With looks ſo ſtern, and words ſo ill?

'Go, bind yon ſlave! and let him learn,
By ſcath of fire and ſtrain of cord, 30
How ill they ſpeed who give dead ſaints
The homage due their living lord!'

They bound him on the fearful rack,
When, through the dungeon's vaulted 35
dark,
He ſaw the light of ſhining robes,
And knew the face of good St. Mark.

Then ſank the iron rack apart,
The cords releaſed their cruel clasp,
The pincers, with their teeth of fire,
Fell broken from the torturer's graſp. 40

And lo! before the Youth and Saint,
Barred door and wall of ſtone gave way;
And up from bondage and the night
They paſſed to freedom and the day!

O dreaming monk! thy tale is true; 45
O painter! true thy pencil's art;
In tones of hope and prophecy,
Ye whiſper to my liſtning heart!

Unheard no burdened heart's appeal
Moans up to God's inclining ear; 50
Unheeded by His tender eye,
Falls to the earth no ſufferer's tear.

For ſtill the Lord alone is God!
The pomp and power of tyrant man
Aſcattered at His lighteſt breath, 55
Like chaff before the winnow's fan.

Not always ſhall the ſlave uplift
His heavy hands to Heaven in vain.
God's angel, like the good St. Mark,
Comes ſhining down to break his chain!

O weary ones! ye may not ſee 61
Your helpers in their downward flight;
Nor hear the ſound of ſilver wings
Slow beating through the huſh of night!

But not the leſs gray Dothan ſhone, 65
With ſunbright watchers bending low,
That Fear's dim eye beheld alone
The ſpear-heads of the Syrian foe.

There are, who, like the Seer of old,
Can see the helpers God has sent,
And how life's rugged mountain-side
Is white with many an angel tent !

70

They hear the heralds whom our Lord
Sends down His pathway to prepare ;
And light, from others hidden, shines
On their high place of faith and prayer.

75

'Let such, for earth's despairing ones,
Hopeless, yet longing to be free,
Breathe once again the Prophet's prayer :
'Lord, ope their eyes, that they may see !'

KATHLEEN.

This ballad was originally published in my prose work, Leaves from Margaret Smith's Journal, as the song of a wandering Milesian school-master. In the seventeenth century slavery in the New World was by no means confined to the natives of Africa. Political offenders and criminals were transported by the British government to the plantations of Barbadoes and Virginia, where they were sold like cattle in the market. Kidnapping of free and innocent white persons was practised to a considerable extent in the seaports of the United Kingdom.

O NORAH, lay your basket down,
And rest your weary hand,
And come and hear me sing a song
Of our old Ireland.

There was a lord of Galaway,
A mighty lord was he ;
And he did wed a second wife,
A maid of low degree.

5

But he was old, and she was young,
And so, in evil spite,
She baked the black bread for his kin,
And fed her own with white.

10

She whipped the maids and starved the kern,
And drove away the poor ;
'Ah, woe is me !' the old lord said,
'I rue my bargain sore !'

15

This lord he had a daughter fair,
Beloved of old and young,
And nightly round the shealing-fires
Of her the gleeman sung.

20

'As sweet and good is young Kathleen
As Eve before her fall ;'
So sang the harper at the fair,
So harped he in the hall.

'Oh, come to me, my daughter dear !
Come sit upon my knee,
For looking in your face, Kathleen,
Your mother's own I see !'

25

He smoothed and smoothed her hair
away,
He kissed her forehead fair ;
'It is my darling Mary's brow,
It is my darling's hair !'

30

Oh, then spake up the angry dame
'Get up, get up,' quoth she,
'I'll sell ye over Ireland,
I'll sell ye o'er the sea !'

35

She clipped her glossy hair away,
That none her rank might know,
She took away her gown of silk,
And gave her one of tow,

40

And sent her down to Limerick town
And to a seaman sold
This daughter of an Irish lord
For ten good pounds in gold.

The lord he smote upon his breast,
And tore his beard so gray ;
But he was old, and she was young,
And so she had her way.

45

Sure that same night the Banshee howled
To fright the evil dame,
And fairy folks, who loved Kathleen,
With funeral torches came.

50

She watched them glancing through the
trees,
And glimmering down the hill ;
They crept before the dead-vault door,
And there they all stood still !

55

'Get up, old man! the wake-lights
shine!'

'Ye murdering witch,' quoth he,
'So I'm rid of your tongue, I little care
If they shine for you or me.' 60

'Oh, whoso brings my daughter back,
My gold and land shall have!'
Oh, then spake up his handsome page,
'No gold nor land I crave!

'But give to me your daughter dear, 65
Give sweet Kathleen to me,
Be she on sea or be she on land,
I'll bring her back to thee.'

'My daughter is a lady born,
And you of low degree, 70
But she shall be your bride the day
You bring her back to me.'

He sailed east, he sailèd west,
And far and long sailed he,
Until he came to Boston town, 75
Across the great salt sea.

'Oh, have ye seen the young Kathleen,
The flower of Ireland?
Ye'll know her by her eyes so blue,
And by her snow-white hand!' 80

Out spake an ancient man, 'I know
The maiden whom ye mean;
I bought her of a Limerick man,
And she is called Kathleen.

'No skill hath she in household work, 85
Her hands are soft and white,
Yet well by loving looks and ways
She doth her cost requite.'

So up they walked through Boston town,
And met a maiden fair, 90
A little basket on her arm
So snowy-white and bare.

'Come hither, child, and say hast thou
This young man ever seen?'
They wept within each other's arms, 95
The page and young Kathleen.

'Oh give to me this darling child,
And take my purse of gold.'
'Nay, not by me,' her master said,
'Shall sweet Kathleen be sold. 100

'We loved her in the place of one
The Lord hath early ta'en;
But, since her heart's in Ireland,
We give her back again!'

Oh, for that same the saints in heaven
For his poor soul shall pray, 106
And Mary Mother wash with tears
His heresies away.

Sure now they dwell in Ireland;
As you go up Claremore 110
Ye'll see their castle looking down
The pleasant Galway shore.

And the old lord's wife is dead and gone,
And a happy man is he,
For he sits beside his own Kathleen, 115
With her darling on his knee.

THE WELL OF LOCH MAREE.

Pennant, in his Voyage to the Hebrides, describes the holy well of Loch Maree, the waters of which were supposed to effect a miraculous cure of melancholy, trouble, and insanity.

CALM on the breast of Loch Maree
A little isle reposes;
A shadow woven of the oak
And willow o'er it closes.

Within, a Druid's mound is seen, 5
Set round with stony warders;
A fountain, gushing through the turf,
Flows o'er its grassy borders.

And whoso bathes therein his brow,
With care or madness burning, 10
Feels once again his healthful thought
And sense of peace returning.

O restless heart and fevered brain,
Unquiet and unstable,
That holy well of Loch Maree 15
Is more than idle fable!

Life's changes vex, its discords stun,
Its glaring sunshine blindeth,
And blest is he who on his way
That fount of healing findeth! 20

The shadows of a humbled will
And contrite heart are o'er it ;
Go read its legend, 'TRUST IN GOD,'
On Faith's white stones before it.

THE CHAPEL OF THE HERMITS.

The incident upon which this poem is based is related in a note to Bernardin Henri Saint Pierre's Études de la Nature.

'We arrived at the habitation of the Hermits a little before they sat down to their table, and while they were still at church. J. J. Rousseau proposed to me to offer up our devotions. The hermits were reciting the Litanies of Providence, which are remarkably beautiful. After we had addressed our prayers to God, and the hermits were proceeding to the refectory, Rousseau said to me, with his heart overflowing, "At this moment I experience what is said in the gospel: Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. There is here a feeling of peace and happiness which penetrates the soul" I said, "If Fénelon had lived, you would have been a Catholic." He exclaimed, with tears in his eyes, "Oh, if Fénelon were alive, I would struggle to get into his service, even as a lackey!"'

In my sketch of Saint Pierre, it will be seen that I have somewhat antedated the period of his old age. At that time he was not probably more than fifty. In describing him, I have by no means exaggerated his own history of his mental condition at the period of the story. In the fragmentary Sequel to his Studies of Nature, he thus speaks of himself: 'The ingratitude of those of whom I had deserved kindness, unexpected family misfortunes, the total loss of my small patrimony through enterprises solely undertaken for the benefit of my country, the debts under which I lay oppressed, the blasting of all my hopes,—these combined calamities made dreadful inroads upon my health and reason. . . . I found it impossible to continue in a room where there was company, especially if the doors were shut. I could not even cross an alley in a public garden, if several persons had got together in it. When alone, my malady subsided. I felt myself likewise at ease in places where I saw children only. At the sight of any one walking up to the place where I was, I felt my whole frame agitated, and retired. I often said to myself, "My sole study has been to merit well of mankind; why do I fear them?"'

He attributes his improved health of mind and body to the counsels of his friend, J. J. Rousseau. 'I renounced,' says he, 'my books. I threw my eyes upon the works of nature, which spake to all my senses a language which neither time nor nations have it in their power to alter. Thenceforth my histories and my journals were the herbage of the fields and meadows. My thoughts did not go forth painfully after them, as in the case of human systems; but their thoughts, under a thousand engaging forms, quietly sought me. In these I studied, without effort, the laws of that Universal Wisdom which had surrounded me from the cradle, but on which heretofore I had bestowed little attention.'

Speaking of Rousseau, he says: 'I derived inexpressible satisfaction from his society. What I prized still more than his genius was his probity. He was one of the few literary characters, tried in the furnace of affliction, to whom you could, with perfect security, confide your most secret thoughts. . . . Even when he deviated, and became the victim of himself or of others, he could forget his own misery in devotion to the welfare of mankind. He was uniformly the advocate of the miserable. There might be inscribed on his tomb these affecting words from that Book of which he carried always about him some select passages, during the last years of his life: His sins, which are many, are forgiven, for he loved much.'

'I do believe, and yet, in grief,
I pray for help to unbelief;
For needful strength aside to lay
The daily cumberings of my way.

'I'm sick at heart of craft and cant, 5
Sick of the crazed enthusiast's rant,
Profession's smooth hypocrisies,
And creeds of iron, and lives of ease.

'I ponder o'er the sacred word,
I read the record of our Lord; 10
And, weak and troubled, envy them
Who touched His seamless garment's hem;

'Who saw the tears of love He wept
Above the grave where Lazarus slept;
And heard, amidst the shadows dim 15
Of Olivet, His evening hymn.

'How blessed the swineherd's low estate,
The beggar crouching at the gate,
The leper loathly and abhorred,
Whose eyes of flesh beheld the Lord! 20

'O sacred soil His sandals pressed !
Sweet fountains of His noonday rest !
O light and air of Palestine,
Impregnate with His life divine !

'Oh, bear me thither ! Let me look 35
On Siloa's pool, and Kedron's brook ;
Kneel at Gethsemane, and by Gennesaret walk, before I die !

'Methinks this cold and northern night
Would melt before that Orient light ; 30
And, wet by Hermon's dew and rain,
My childhood's faith revive again !'

So spake my friend, one autumn day,
Where the still river slid away
Beneath us, and above the brown 35
Red curtains of the woods shut down.

Then said I,—for I could not brook
The mute appealing of his look,—
'I too am weak, and faith is small,
And blindness happeneth unto all. 40

'Yet sometimes glimpses on my sight,
Through present wrong, the eternal
right ;
And, step by step, since time began,
I see the steady gain of man ;

'That all of good the past hath had 45
Remains to make our own time glad,
Our common daily life divine,
And every land a Palestine.

'Thou weariest of thy present state ;
What gain to thee time's holiest date ? 50
The doubter now perchance had been
As High Priest or as Pilate then !

'What thought Chorazin's scribes ? What faith
In Him had Nain and Nazareth ?
Of the few followers whom He led 55
One sold Him,—all forsook and fled.

'O friend ! we need nor rock nor sand,
Nor storied stream of Morning-Land ;
The heavens are glassed in Merrimac,—
What more could Jordan render back ?

'We lack but open eye and ear 61
To find the Orient's marvels here ;
The still small voice in autumn's hush,
Yon maple wood the burning bush.

'For still the new transcends the old, 65
In signs and tokens manifold ;
Slaves rise up men ; the olive waves,
With roots deep set in battle graves !

'Through the harsh noises of our day
A low, sweet prelude finds its way ; 70
Through clouds of doubt, and creeds of
fear,
A light is breaking, calm and clear.

'That song of Love, now low and far,
Erelong shall swell from star to star !
That light, the breaking day, which tips
The golden-spired Apocalypse !' 76

Then, when my good friend shook his
head,
And, sighing, sadly smiled, I said :
'Thou mind'st me of a story told
In rare Bernardin's leaves of gold.' 80

And while the slanted sunbeams wove
The shadows of the frost-stained grove,
And, picturing all, the river ran
O'er cloud and wood, I thus began :—

In Mount Valerien's chestnut wood 85
The Chapel of the Hermits stood ;
And thither, at the close of day,
Came two old pilgrims, worn and gray.

One, whose impetuous youth defied
The storms of Baikal's wintry side, 90
And mused and dreamed where tropic
day
Flamed o'er his lost Virginia's bay.

His simple tale of love and woe
All hearts had melted, high or low ;—
A blissful pain, a sweet distress, 95
Immortal in its tenderness.

Yet, while above his charmed page
Beat quick the young heart of his age,
He walked amidst the crowd unknown,
A sorrowing old man, strange and lone.

- A homeless, troubled age,—the gray 101
Pale setting of a weary day;
Too dull his ear for voice of praise,
Too sadly worn his brow for bytes.
- Pride, lust of power and glory, slept;
Yet still his heart its young dream 106
kept,
And, wandering like the deluge-dove,
Still sought the resting-place of love.
- And, mateless, childless, envied more
The peasant's welcome from his door 110
By smiling eyes at eventide,
Than kingly gifts or lettered pride.
- Until, in place of wife and child,
All-pitying Nature on him smiled,
And gave to him the golden keys 115
To all her inmost sanctities.
- Mild Druid of her wood-paths dim!
She laid her great heart bare to him,
Its loves and sweet accords;—he saw
The beauty of her perfect law. 120
- The language of her signs he knew,
What notes her cloudy clarion blew;
The rhythm of autumn's forest dyes,
The hymn of sunset's painted skies.
- And thus he seemed to hear the song 125
Which swept, of old, the stars along;
And to his eyes the earth once more
Its fresh and primal beauty wore.
- Who sought with him, from summer air,
And field and wood, a balm for care; 130
And bathed in light of sunset skies
His tortured nerves and weary eyes?
- His fame on all the winds had flown;
His words had shaken crypt and throne;
Like fire on camp and court and cell 135
They dropped, and kindled as they fell.
- Beneath the pomps of state, below
The mitred juggler's masque and show,
A prophecy, a vague hope, ran
His burning thought from man to man.
- For peace or rest too well he saw 141
The fraud of priests, the wrong of law,
And felt how hard, between the two,
Their breath of pain the millions drew.
- A prophet-utterance, strong and wild, 145
The weakness of an unweaned child,
A sun-bright hope for human-kind,
And self-despair, in him combined.
- He loathed the false, yet lived not true
To half the glorious truths he knew; 150
The doubt, the discord, and the sin,
He mourned without, he felt within.
- Untrod by him the path he showed,
Sweet pictures on his easel glowed
Of simple faith, and loves of home, 155
And virtue's golden days to come.
- But weakness, shame, and folly made
The foil to all his pen portrayed;
Still, where his dreamy splendors shone,
The shadow of himself was thrown. 160
- Lord, what is man, whose thought, at times,
Up to Thy sevenfold brightness climbs,
While still his grosser instinct clings
To earth, like other creeping things!
- So rich in words, in acts so mean; 165
So high, so low; chance-swung between
The foulness of the penal pit
And Truth's clear sky, millennium-lit!
- Vain, pride of star-lent genius!—vain,
Quick fancy and creative brain, 170
Unblest by prayerful sacrifice,
Absurdly great, or weakly wise!
- Midst yearnings for a truer life,
Without were fears, within was strife;
And still his wayward act denied 175
The perfect good for which he sighed.
- The love he sent forth void returned;
The fame that crowned him scorched and burned,
Burning, yet cold and drear and lone,—
A fire-mount in a frozen zone!¹¹ 180

Like that the gray-haired sea-king passed,
Seen southward from his sleety mast,
About whose brows of changeless frost
A wreath of flame the wild winds tossed.

Far round the mournful beauty played 185
Of lambent light and purple shade,
Lost on the fixed and dumb despair
Of frozen earth and sea and air!

A man apart, unknown, unloved
By those whose wrongs his soul had moved, 190
He bore the ban of Church and State,
The good man's fear, the bigot's hate!

Forth from the city's noise and throng,
Its pomp and shame, its sin and wrong,
The twain that summer day had strayed
To Mount Valerien's chestnut shade. 196

To them the green fields and the wood
Lent something of their quietude,
And golden-tinted sunset seemed Prophetical of all they dreamed. 200

The hermits from their simple cares
The bell was calling home to prayers,
And, listening to its sound, the twain
Seemed lapped in childhood's trust again.

Wide open stood the chapel door; 205
A sweet old music, swelling o'er Low prayerful murmurs, issued thence,—
The Litanies of Providence!

Then Rousseau spake: 'Where two or three
In His name meet, He there will be!' 210
And then, in silence, on their knees
They sank beneath the chestnut trees.

As to the blind returning light,
As daybreak to the Arctic night,
Old faith revived; the doubts of years 215
Dissolved in reverential tears.

That gush of feeling overpast,
'Ah me!' Bernardin sighed at last,
'I would thy bitterest foes could see
Thy heart as it is seen of me! 220

'No church of God hast thou denied;
Thou hast but spurned in scorn aside
A bare and hollow counterfeit,
Profaning the pure name of it!

'With dry dead moss and marish weeds
His fire the western herdsman feeds, 226
And greener from the ashen plain
The sweet spring grasses rise again.

'Nor thunder-peal nor mighty wind
Disturb the solid sky behind; 230
And through the cloud the red bolt rends
The calm, still smile of Heaven descends!

'Thus through the world, like bolt and
blast,
And scourging fire, thy words have passed.
Clouds break,—the steadfast heavens remain; 235
Weeds burn,—the ashes feed the grain!

'But whoso strives with wrong may find
Its touch pollute, its darkness blind;
And learn, as latent fraud is shown
In others' faith, to doubt his own. 240

'With dream and falsehood, simple trust
And pious hope we tread in dust;
Lost the calm faith in goodness,—lost
The baptism of the Pentecost!

'Alas!—the blows for error meant 245
Too oft on truth itself are spent,
As through the false and vile and base
Looks forth her sad, rebuking face.

'Not ours the Theban's charmed life;
We come not scathless from the strife! 250
The Python's coil about us clings,
The trampled Hydra bites and stings!

'Meanwhile, the sport of seeming chance,
The plastic shapes of circumstance,
What might have been we fondly guess,
If earlier born, or tempted less. 256

'And thou, in these wild, troubled days,
Misjudged alike in blame and praise,
Unsought and undeserved the same
The skeptic's praise, the bigot's blame;—

- 'I cannot doubt, if thou hadst been 261
Among the highly favored men
Who walked on earth with Fénelon,
He would have owned thee as his son ;
- 'And, bright with wings of cherubim 265
Visibly waving over him,
Seen through his life, the Church had seemed
All that its old confessors dreamed.'
- 'I would have been,' Jean Jacques replied,
'The humblest servant at his side, 270
Obscure, unknown, content to see How beautiful man's life may be!
- 'Oh, more than thrice-blest relic, more
Than solemn rite or sacred lore,
The holy life of one who trod 275
The foot-marks of the Christ of God !
- 'Amidst a blinded world he saw
The oneness of the Dual law ;
That Heaven's sweet peace on Earth
began,
And God was loved through love of man.
- 'He lived the Truth which reconciled 281
The strong man Reason, Faith the child ;
In him belief and act were one,
The homilies of duty done !'
- So speaking, through the twilight gray 285
The two old pilgrims went their way.
What seeds of life that day were sown,
The heavenly watchers knew alone.
- Time passed, and Autumn came to fold
Green Summer in her brown and gold ; 290
Time passed, and Winter's tears of snow
Dropped on the grave-mound of Rousseau.
- 'The tree remaineth where it fell,
The pained on earth is pained in hell !'
So priestcraft from its altars cursed 295
The mournful doubts its falsehood nursed.
- Ah ! well of old the Psalmist prayed,
'Thy hand, not man's, on me be laid !'
Earth frowns below, Heaven weeps above,
And man is hate, but God is love ! 300
- No Hermits now the wanderer sees,
Nor chapel with its chestnut-trees ;
A morning dream, a tale that's told,
The wave of change o'er all has rolled.
- Yet lives the lesson of that day ; 305
And from its twilight cool and gray
Comes up a low, sad whisper, 'Make
The truth thine own, for truth's own sake.
- 'Why wait to see in thy brief span
Its perfect flower and fruit in man ? 310
No saintly touch can save ; no balm
Of healing hath the martyr's palm.
- 'Midst soulless forms, and false pretence
Of spiritual pride and pampered sense,
A voice saith, "What is that to thee ? 315
Be true thyself, and follow Me !"
- 'In days when throne and altar heard
The wanton's wish, the bigot's word,
And pomp of state and ritual show
Scarce hid the loathsome death below, —
- 'Midst fawning priests and courtiers foul, 321
The losel swarm of crown and cowl,
White-robed walked François Fénelon,
Stainless as Uriel in the sun !
- 'Yet in his time the stake blazed red, 325
The poor were eaten up like bread :
Men knew him not ; his garment's hem
No healing virtue had for them.
- 'Alas ! no present saint we find ;
The white cymar gleams far behind, 330
Revealed in outline vague, sublime,
Through telescopic mists of time !
- 'Trust not in man with passing breath,
But in the Lord, old Scripture saith ;
The truth which saves thou mayst not blend 335
With false professor, faithless friend.
- 'Search thine own heart. What paineth
thee
In others in thyself may be ;
All dust is frail, all flesh is weak ;
Be thou the true man thou dost seek ! 340

'Where now with pain thou treadest,
trod

The whitest of the saints of God !
To show thee where their feet were set,
The light which led them shineth yet.

'The footprints of the life divine, 345
Which marked their path, remain in
thine ;

And that great Life, transfused in theirs,
Awaits thy faith, thy love, thy prayers !'

A lesson which I well may heed,
A word of fitness to my need ; 350
So from that twilight cool and gray
Still saith a voice, or seems to say.

We rose, and slowly homeward turned,
While down the west the sunset burned ;
And, in its light, hill, wood, and tide, 355
And human forms seemed glorified.

The village homes transfigured stood,
And purple bluffs, whose belting wood
Across the waters leaned to hold
The yellow leaves like lamps of gold. 360

Then spake my friend : 'Thy words are true ;
Forever old, forever new,
These home-seen splendors are the same
Which over Eden's sunsets came.

'To these bowed heavens let wood and hill 365
Lift voiceless praise and anthem still ;
Fall, warm with blessing, over them,
Light of the New Jerusalem !

'Flow on, sweet river, like the stream
Of John's Apocalyptic dream ! 370
This mapled ridge shall Horeb be,
Yon green-banked lake our Galilee !

'Henceforth my heart shall sigh no more
For olden time and holier shore ;
God's love and blessing, then and there,
Are now and here and everywhere.' 376

1851.

TAULER.

TAULER, the preacher, walked, one autumn day,
Without the walls of Strasburg, by the Rhine,
Pondering the solemn Miracle of Life ;
As one who, wandering in a starless
night,
Feels momentarily the jar of unseen waves,
And hears the thunder of an unknown
sea, 6
Breaking along an unimagined shore.

And as he walked he prayed. Even the same Old prayer with which, for half a score of
years,
Morning, and noon, and evening, lip and
heart 10
Had groaned : 'Have pity upon me,
Lord !
Thou seest, while teaching others, I am blind.
Send me a man who can direct my steps !'

Then, as he mused, he heard along his path
A sound as of an old man's staff among 15
The dry, dead linden-leaves ; and, looking up,
He saw a stranger, weak, and poor, and
old.

'Peace be unto thee, father !' Tauler
said,
'God give thee a good day !' The old man raised
Slowly his calm blue eyes. 'I thank thee,
son ; 20
But all my days are good, and none are
ill.'

'Wondering thereat, the preacher spake
again,
'God give thee happy life.' The old man smiled,
'I never am unhappy.'

Tauler laid
 His hand upon the stranger's coarse gray sleeve : 25
 'Tell me, O father, what thy strange words mean.
 Surely man's days are evil, and his life
 Sad as the grave it leads to.' 'Nay, my
 son,
 Our times are in God's hands, and all our days
 Are as our needs ; for shadow as for sun,
 For cold as heat, for want as wealth,
 alike 31
 Our thanks are due, since that is best which is ;
 And that which is not, sharing not His
 life,
 Is evil only as devoid of good.
 And for the happiness of which I spake,
 I find it in submission to His will, 36
 And calm trust in the holy Trinity
 Of Knowledge, Goodness, and Almighty
 Power.'

Silently wondering, for a little space,
 Stood the great preacher ; then he spake
 as one 40
 Who, suddenly grappling with a haunting
 thought
 Which long has followed, whispering
 through the dark
 Strange terrors, drags it, shrieking, into
 light :
 'What if God's will consign thee hence to Hell ?'

'Then,' said the stranger, cheerily, 'be it so. 45
 What Hell may be I know not ; this
 I know, —
 I cannot lose the presence of the Lord.
 One arm, Humility, takes hold upon
 His dear Humanity ; the other, Love,
 Clasps his Divinity. So where I go 50
 He goes ; and better fire-walled Hell with
 Him
 Than golden-gated Paradise without.'

Tears sprang in Tauler's eyes. A sudden
 light,
 Like the first ray which fell on chaos,
 clove

Apart the shadow wherein he had walked Darkly at noon. And, as the strange old man 56
 Went his slow way, until his silver hair
 Set like the white moon where the hills of vine
 Slope to the Rhine, he bowed his head and said :
 'My prayer is answered. God hath sent the man 60
 Long sought, to teach me, by his simple trust,
 Wisdom the weary schoolmen never knew.'

So, entering with a changed and cheerful step
 The city gates, he saw, far down the
 street,
 A mighty shadow break the light of
 noon, 65
 Which tracing backward till its airy lines
 Hardened to stony plinths, he raised his eyes
 O'er broad façade and lofty pediment,
 O'er architrave and frieze and sainted
 niche,
 Up the stone lace-work chiselled by the wise 70
 Erwin of Steinbach, dizzily up to where
 In the noon-brightness the great Minster's
 tower,
 Jewelled with sunbeams on its mural
 crown,
 Rose like a visible prayer. 'Behold !' he
 said,
 'The stranger's faith made plain before mine eyes. 75
 As yonder tower outstretches to the earth
 The dark triangle of its shade alone
 When the clear day is shining on its top,
 So, darkness in the pathway of Man's life
 Is but the shadow of God's providence, 80
 By the great Sun of Wisdom cast thereon ;
 And what is dark below is light in Heaven.'

THE HERMIT OF THE THEBAID.

O STRONG, upwelling prayers of faith,
From inmost founts of life ye start,—
The spirit's pulse, the vital breath
Of soul and heart !

From pastoral toil, from traffic's din, 5
Alone, in crowds, at home, abroad,
Unheard of man, ye enter in
The ear of God.

Ye brook no forced and measured tasks,
Nor weary rote, nor formal chains ; 10
The simple heart, that freely asks
In love, obtains.

For man the living temple is :
The mercy-seat and cherubim,
And all the holy mysteries, 15
He bears with him.

And most avails the prayer of love,
Which, wordless, shapes itself in deeds,
And wearies Heaven for naught above
Our common needs. 20

Which brings to God's all-perfect will
That trust of His undoubting child Whereby all seeming good and ill
Are reconciled.

And, seeking not for special signs 25
Of favor, is content to fall
Within the providence which shines
And rains on all.

Alone, the Thebaid hermit leaned
At noontime o'er the sacred word. 30
Was it an angel or a fiend
Whose voice he heard ?

It broke the desert's hush of awe,
A human utterance, sweet and mild ;
And, looking up, the hermit saw 35
A little child.

A child, with wonder-widened eyes,
O'erawed and troubled by the sight
Of hot, red sands, and brazen skies,
And anchorite. 40

'What dost thou here, poor man? No
shade
Of cool, green palms, nor grass, nor
well,
Nor corn, nor vines.' The hermit said :
'With God I dwell.

'Alone with Him in this great calm, 45
I live not by the outward sense ;
My Nile His love, my sheltering palm
His providence.'

The child gazed round him. 'Does God
live
Here only?—where the desert's rim 50
Is green with corn, at morn and eve,
We pray to Him.

'My brother tills beside the Nile
His little field ; beneath the leaves
My sisters sit and spin, the while 55
My mother weaves.

'And when the millet's ripe heads fall,
And all the bean-field hangs in pod,
My mother smiles, and says that all
Are gifts from God. 60

'And when to share our evening meal,
She calls the stranger at the door,
She says God fills the hands that deal
Food to the poor.'

Adown the hermit's wasted cheeks 65
Glistened the flow of human tears ;
'Dear Lord !' he said, 'Thy angel speaks,
Thy servant hears.'

Within his arms the child he took,
And thought of home and life with
men ; 70
And all his pilgrim feet forsook
Returned again.

The palmy shadows cool and long,
The eyes that smiled through lavish
locks,
Home's cradle-hymn and harvest-song, 75
And bleat of flocks.

'O child !' he said, 'thou teachest me
There is no place where God is not ;
That love will make, where'er it be,
A holy spot.' 80

He rose from off the desert sand,
And, leaning on his staff of thorn,
Went with the young child hand in hand,
Like night with morn.

They crossed the desert's burning line, 85
And heard the palm-tree's rustling fan,
The Nile-bird's cry, the low of kine,
And voice of man.

Unquestioning, his childish guide
He followed, as the small hand led 90
To where a woman, gentle-eyed,
Her distaff fed.

She rose, she clasped her truant boy,
She thanked the stranger with her eyes;
The hermit gazed in doubt and joy 95
And dumb surprise.

And lo!—with sudden warmth and light
A tender memory thrilled his frame;
New-born, the world-lost anchorite
A man became. 100

'O sister of El Zara's race,
Behold me!—had we not one mother?'
She gazed into the stranger's face:
'Thou art my brother!'

'O kin of blood! Thy life of use 105
And patient trust is more than mine;
And wiser than the gray recluse
This child of thine.

'For, taught of him whom God hath sent,
That toil is praise, and love is prayer,
I come, life's cares and pains content 111
With thee to share.'

Even as his foot the threshold crossed,
The hermit's better life began;
Its holiest saint the Thebaid lost, 115
And found a man!

1854.

MAUD MULLER.

The recollection of some descendants of a Hessian deserter in the Revolutionary war bearing the name of Muller doubtless suggested the somewhat infelicitous title of a New England

idyl. The poem had no real foundation in fact, though a hint of it may have been found in recalling an incident, trivial in itself, of a journey on the picturesque Maine seaboard with my sister some years before it was written. We had stopped to rest our tired horse under the shade of an apple-tree, and refresh him with water from a little brook which rippled through the stone wall across the road. A very beautiful young girl in scantest summer attire was at work in the hay-field, and as we talked with her we noticed that she strove to hide her bare feet by raking hay over them, blushing as she did so, through the tan of her cheek and neck.

MAUD MULLER on a summer's day,
Raked the meadow sweet with hay.

Beneath her torn hat glowed the wealth
Of simple beauty and rustic health.

Singing, she wrought, and her merry glee 5
The mock-bird echoed from his tree.

But when she glanced to the far-off town,
White from its hill-slope looking down,

The sweet song died, and a vague unrest
And a nameless longing filled her breast,—

A wish that she hardly dared to own, 11
For something better than she had known.

The Judge rode slowly down the lane,
Smoothing his horse's chestnut mane.

He drew his bridle in the shade 15
Of the apple-trees, to greet the maid,

And asked a draught from the spring
that flowed
Through the meadow across the road.

She stooped where the cool spring bubbled
up,
And filled for him her small tin cup, 20
And blushed as she gave it, looking down
On her feet so bare, and her tattered gown.

'Thanks!' said the Judge; 'a sweeter draught
From a fairer hand was never quaffed.'

He spoke of the grass and flowers and
trees, 25

Of the singing birds and the humming
bees;

Then talked of the haying, and wondered whether

The cloud in the west would bring foul weather.

And Maud forgot her brier-torn gown,
And her graceful ankles bare and brown;

And listened, while a pleased surprise 31
Looked from her long-lashed hazel eyes.

At last, like one who for delay
Seeks a vain excuse, he rode away.

Maud Muller looked and sighed: 'Ah
me! 35

That I the Judge's bride might be!

'He would dress me up in silks so fine,
And praise and toast me at his wine.

'My father should wear a broadcloth coat;

My brother should sail a painted boat. 40

'I'd dress my mother so grand and gay,
And the baby should have a new toy each
day.

'And I'd feed the hungry and clothe the
poor,
And all should bless me who left our
door.'

The Judge looked back as he climbed the
hill, 45
And saw Maud Muller standing still.

'A form more fair, a face more sweet,
Ne'er hath it been my lot to meet.

'And her modest answer and graceful air
Show her wise and good as she is fair. 50

'Would she were mine, and I to-day,
Like her, a harvester of hay;

'No doubtful balance of rights and wrongs,

Nor weary lawyers with endless tongues,

'But low of cattle and song of birds, 55
And health and quiet and loving words.'

But he thought of his sisters, proud and
cold,

And his mother, vain of her rank and
gold.

So, closing his heart, the Judge rode on,
And Maud was left in the field alone. 60

But the lawyers smiled that afternoon,
When he hummed in court an old love-
tune;

And the young girl mused beside the well
Till the rain on the unraked clover fell.

He wedded a wife of richest dower, 65
Who lived for fashion, as he for power.

Yet oft, in his marble hearth's bright
glow,

He watched a picture come and go;

And sweet Maud Muller's hazel eyes
Looked out in their innocent surprise. 70

Oft, when the wine in his glass was red,
He longed for the wayside well instead;

And closed his eyes on his garnished rooms

To dream of meadows and clover-blooms.

And the proud man sighed, with a secret
pain, 75

'Ah, that I were free again!

'Free as when I rode that day,
Where the barefoot maiden raked her
hay.'

She wedded a man unlearned and poor,
And many children played round her
door. 80

But care and sorrow, and childbirth pain,
Left their traces on heart and brain.

And oft, when the summer sun shone hot
On the new-mown hay in the meadow lot,

And she heard the little spring brook
fall 85

Over the roadside, through the wall,

In the shade of the apple-tree again
She saw a rider draw his rein ;

And, gazing down with timid grace,
She felt his pleased eyes read her face. 90

Sometimes her narrow kitchen walls
Stretched away into stately halls ;

The weary wheel to a spinnet turned,
The tallow candle an astral burned,

And for him who sat by the chimney lug, 95
Dozing and grumbling o'er pipe and mug,

A manly form at her side she saw,
And joy was duty and love was law.

Then she took up her burden of life again,
Saying only, 'It might have been.' 100

Alas for maiden, alas for Judge,
For rich repiner and household drudge !

God pity them both ! and pity us all,
Who vainly the dreams of youth recall.

For of all sad words of tongue or pen, 105
The saddest are these: 'It might have been !'

Ah, well ! for us all some sweet hope lies
Deeply buried from human eyes ;

And, in the hereafter, angels may Roll the stone from its grave away ! 110

MARY GARVIN.

FROM the heart of Waumbek Methna, from the lake that never fails,
Falls the Saco in the green lap of Con-
way's intervalles ;

There, in wild and virgin freshness, its waters foam and flow,
As when Darby Field first saw them, two hundred years ago.

But, vexed in all its seaward course with bridges, dams, and mills, 5
How changed is Saco's stream, how lost its freedom of the hills,

Since travelled Jocelyn, factor Vines, and stately Champernoon
Heard on its banks the gray wolf's howl,
the trumpet of the loon !

With smoking axle hot with speed, with steeds of fire and steam,
Wide-waked To-day leaves Yesterday behind him like a dream. 10
Still, from the hurrying train of Life, fly backward far and fast
The milestones of the fathers, the landmarks of the past.

But human hearts remain unchanged : the sorrow and the sin,
The loves and hopes and fears of old, are to our own akin ;
And if, in tales our fathers told, the songs
our mothers sung, 15
Tradition wears a snowy beard, Romance is always young.

O sharp-lined man of traffic, on Saco's banks to-day !
O mill-girl watching late and long the shuttle's restless play !
Let, for the once, a listening ear the working hand beguile,
And lend my old Provincial tale, as suits,
a tear or smile ! 20

The evening gun had sounded from gray
Fort Mary's walls ;
Through the forest, like a wild beast,
roared and plunged the Saco's falls.

And westward on the sea-wind, that damp
and gusty grew,
Over cedars darkening inland the smokes
of Spurwink blew.

On the hearth of Farmer Garvin, blazed
the crackling walnut log ; 25
Right and left sat dame and goodman,
and between them lay the dog,

Head on paws, and tail slow wagging, and beside him on her mat,
Sitting drowsy in the firelight, winked
and purred the mottled cat.

'Twenty years!' said Goodman Garvin,
speaking sadly, under breath,
And his gray head slowly shaking, as one who speaks of death. 30

The goodwife dropped her needles: 'It is twenty years to-day,
Since the Indians fell on Saco, and stole our child away.'

Then they sank into the silence, for each knew the other's thought,
Of a great and common sorrow, and words were needed not.

'Who knocks?' cried Goodman Garvin.
The door was open thrown; 35
On two strangers, man and maiden, cloaked and furred, the fire-light shone.

One with courteous gesture lifted the bear-skin from his head;
'Lives here Elkanah Garvin?' 'I am he,'
the Goodman said.

'Sit ye down, and dry and warm ye, for the night is chill with rain.'
And the goodwife drew the settle, and stirred the fire amain. 40

The maid unclasped her cloak-hood, the firelight glistened fair
In her large, moist eyes, and over soft folds of dark brown hair.

Dame Garvin looked upon her: 'It is Mary's self I see!
Dear heart!' she cried, 'now tell me, has my child come back to me?'

'My name indeed is Mary,' said the stranger sobbing wild; 45
'Will you be to me a mother? I am Mary Garvin's child!

'She sleeps by wooded Simcoe, but on her dying day
She bade my father take me to her kins-folk far away.

'And when the priest besought her to do me no such wrong,
She said, "May God forgive me! I have closed my heart too long. 50

"When I hid me from my father, and shut out my mother's call,
I sinned against those dear ones, and the Father of us all.

"Christ's love rebukes no home-love,
breaks no tie of kin apart;
Better heresy in doctrine, than heresy of
heart.

"Tell me not the Church must censure:
she who wept the Cross beside 55
Never made her own flesh strangers, nor the claims of blood denied;

"And if she who wronged her parents,
with her child atones to them,
Earthly daughter, Heavenly Mother!
thou at least wilt not condemn!"

'So, upon her death-bed lying, my blessed mother spake;
As we come to do her bidding, so receive us for her sake.' 60

'God be praised!' said Goodwife Garvin,
'He taketh, and He gives;
He woundeth, but He healeth; in her child our daughter lives!'

'Amen!' the old man answered, as he brushed a tear away,
And, kneeling by his hearthstone, said,
with reverence, 'Let us pray.'

All its Oriental symbols, and its Hebrew paraphrase, 65
Warm with earnest life and feeling, rose his prayer of love and praise.

But he started at beholding, as he rose from off his knee,
The stranger cross his forehead with the sign of Papistrie.

'What is this?' cried Farmer Garvin. 'Is an English Christian's home
A chapel or a mass-house, that you make the sign of Rome?' 70

Then the young girl knelt beside him,
kissed his trembling hand, and cried:
'Oh, forbear to chide my father; in that faith my mother died!

'On her wooden cross at Simcoe the dews
and sunshine fall,
As they fall on Spurwink's graveyard; and the dear God watches all !'

The old man stroked the fair head that rested on his knee; 75

'Your words, dear child,' he answered,
'are God's rebuke to me.

'Creed and rite perchance may differ, yet
our faith and hope be one.

Let me be your father's father, let him be to me a son.'

When the horn, on Sabbath morning,
through the still and frosty air,
From Spurwink, Pool, and Black Point, called to sermon and to prayer, 80

To the goodly house of worship, where,
in order due and fit,
As by public vote directed, classed and ranked the people sit ;

Mistress first and goodwife after, clerkly
squire before the clown,

From the brave coat, lace-embroidered, to the gray frock, shading down ;

From the pulpit read the preacher, 'Goodman Garvin and his wife 85

Fain would thank the Lord, whose kindness has followed them through life,

'For the great and crowning mercy, that their daughter, from the wild,

Where she rests (they hope in God's peace),
has sent to them her child ;

'And the prayers of all God's people they ask, that they may prove

Not unworthy, through their weakness, of such special proof of love.' 90

As the preacher prayed, uprising, the aged couple stood,

And the fair Canadian also, in her modest maidenhood.

Thought the elders, grave and doubting,
'She is Papist born and bred ;'

Thought the young men, 'Tis an angel in Mary Garvin's stead !'

THE RANGER.

Originally published as Martha Mason ; a Song of the Old French War.

ROBERT RAWLIN !—Frosts were falling
When the ranger's horn was calling
Through the woods to Canada.
Gone the winter's sleet and snowing,
Gone the spring-time's bud and blowing, 5
Gone the summer's harvest mowing,
And again the fields are gray.
Yet away, he's away !
Faint and fainter hope is growing
In the hearts that mourn his stay. 10

Where the lion, crouching high on
Abraham's rock with teeth of iron,
Glares o'er wood and wave away,
Faintly thence, as pines far sighing,
Or as thunder spent and dying, 15
Come the challenge and replying,
Come the sounds of flight and fray.
Well-a-day ! Hope and pray !
Some are living, some are lying
In their red graves far away. 20

Straggling rangers, worn with dangers,
Homeward faring, weary strangers
Pass the farm-gate on their way ;
Tidings of the dead and living,
Forest march and ambush, giving, 25
Till the maidens leave their weaving,
And the lads forget their play.
'Still away, still away !'
Sighs a sad one, sick with grieving,
'Why does Robert still delay !' 30

Nowhere fairer, sweeter, rarer,
Does the golden-looking fruit bearer
Through his painted woodlands stray,
Than where hillside oaks and beeches
Overlook the long, blue reaches, 35
Silver coves and pebbled beaches,
And green isles of Casco Bay ;
Nowhere day, for delay,
With a tenderer look beseeches,
'Let me with my charmed earth stay.' 40

On the grain-lands of the mainlands
 Stands the serried corn like train-bands,
 Plume and pennon rustling gay ;
 Out at sea, the islands wooded,
 Silver birches, golden-hooded, 45
 Set with maples, crimson-blooded,
 White sea-foam and sand-hills gray,
 Stretch away, far away,
 Dim and dreamy, over-brooded
 By the hazy autumn day. 50

Gayly chattering to the clattering
 Of the brown nuts downward pattering,
 Leap the squirrels, red and gray.
 On the grass-land, on the fallow,
 Drop the apples, red and yellow ;
 Drop the russet pears and mellow,
 Drop the red leaves all the day.
 And away, swift away,
 Sun and cloud, o'er hill and hollow
 Chasing, weave their web of play. 60

'Martha Mason, Martha Mason,
 Prithee tell us of the reason
 Why you mope at home to-day :
 Surely smiling is not sinning ;
 Leave your quilling, leave your spinning ;
 What is all your store of linen, 66
 If your heart is never gay ?
 Come away, come away !
 Never yet did sad beginning
 Make the task of life a play.' 70

Overbending, till she's blending
 With the flaxen skin she's tending
 Pale brown tresses smoothed away
 From her face of patient sorrow,
 Sits she, seeking but to borrow, 75
 From the trembling hope of morrow,
 Solace for the weary day.
 'Go your way, laugh and play ;
 Unto Him who heeds the sparrow
 And the lily, let me pray.' 80

'With our rally rings the valley,—
 Join us !' cried the blue-eyed Nelly ;
 'Join us !' cried the laughing May,
 'To the beach we all are going,
 And, to save the task of rowing, 85
 West by north the wind is blowing,

Blowing briskly down the bay !
 Come away, come away !
 Time and tide are swiftly flowing,
 Let us take them while we may ! 90

'Never tell us that you'll fail us,
 Where the purple beach-plum mellows
 On the bluffs so wild and gray.
 Hasten, for the oars are falling ;
 Hark, our merry mates are calling ; 95
 Time it is that we were all in,
 Singing tideward down the bay !'
 'Nay, nay, let me stay ;
 Sore and sad for Robert Rawlin
 Is my heart,' she said, 'to-day.' 100

'Vain your calling for Rob Rawlin !
 Some red squaw his moose-meat's broiling,
 Or some French lass, singing gay ;
 Just forget as he's forgetting ;
 What avails a life of fretting ? 105
 If some stars must needs be setting,
 Others rise as good as they.'
 'Cease, I pray ; go your way !'
 Martha cries, her eyelids wetting ;
 'Foul and false the words you say !' 110

'Martha Mason, hear to reason !
 Prithee, put a kinder face on !'
 'Cease to vex me,' did she say ;
 'Better at his side be lying,
 With the mournful pine-trees sighing, 115
 And the wild birds o'er us crying,
 Than to doubt like mine a prey ;
 While away, far away,
 Turns my heart, forever trying
 Some new hope for each new day. 120

'When the shadows veil the meadows,
 And the sunset's golden ladders
 Sink from twilight's walls of gray,—
 From the window of my dreaming,
 I can see his sickle gleaming, 125
 Cheery-voiced, can hear him teaming
 Down the locust-shaded way ;
 But away, swift away,
 Fades the fond, delusive seeming,
 And I kneel again to pray. 130

'When the growing dawn is showing,
 And the barn-yard cock is crowing,
 And the horned moon pales away :

From a dream of him awaking,
Every sound my heart is making 135
Seems a footstep of his taking;
Then I hush the thought, and say,
"Nay, nay, he's away!"
Ah! my heart, my heart is breaking
For the dear one far away.' 140

Look up, Martha! worn and swarthy,
Glow a face of manhood worthy:
'Robert!' 'Martha!' all they say.
O'er went wheel and reel together,
Little cared the owner whither; 145
Heart of lead is heart of feather,
Noon of night is noon of day!
Come away, come away!
When such lovers meet each other,
Why should prying idlers stay? 150

Quench the timber's fallen embers,
Quench the red leaves in December's
Hoary rime and chilly spray.
But the hearth shall kindle clearer,
Household welcomes sound sincerer, 155
Heart to loving heart draw nearer,
When the bridal bells shall say:
'Hope and pray, trust away;
Life is sweeter, love is dearer,
For the trial and delay!' 160

THE GARRISON OF CAPE ANN.

FROM the hills of home forth looking, far beneath the tent-like span
Of the sky, I see the white gleam of the headland of Cape Ann.
Well I know its coves and beaches to the ebb-tide glimmering down,
And the white-walled hamlet children of its ancient fishing-town.
Long has passed the summer morning,
and its memory waxes old, 5
When along yon breezy headlands with a pleasant friend I strolled.
Ah! the autumn sun is shining, and the ocean wind blows cool,
And the golden-rod and aster bloom around thy grave, Rantoul!

With the memory of that morning by the summer sea I blend
A wild and wondrous story, by the younger Mather penned, 10
In that quaint Magnalia Christi, with all strange and marvellous things,
Heaped up huge and undigested, like the chaos Ovid sings.

Dear to me these far, faint glimpses of the dual life of old,
Inward, grand with awe and reverence;
outward, mean and coarse and cold;
Gleams of mystic beauty playing over dull and vulgar clay, 15
Golden-threaded fancies weaving in a web of hoddin gray.

The great eventful Present hides the Past;
but through the din
Of its loud life hints and echoes from the life behind steal in;
And the lore of home and fireside, and
the legendary rhyme,
Make the task of duty lighter which the true man owes his time. 20

So, with something of the feeling which the Covenanter knew,
When with pious chisel wandering Scotland's moorland graveyards through,
From the graves of old traditions I part
the blackberry-vines,
Wipe the moss from off the headstones,
and retouch the faded lines.

Where the sea-waves back and forward,
hoarse with rolling pebbles, ran, 25
The garrison-house stood watching on the gray rocks of Cape Ann;
On its windy site uplifting gabled roof
and palisade,
And rough walls of unhewn timber with the moonlight overlaid.

On his slow round walked the sentry,
south and eastward looking forth
O'er a rude and broken coast-line, white with breakers stretching north,— 30

Wood and rock and gleaming sand-drift,
jagged capes, with bush and tree,
Leaning inland from the smiting of the wild and gusty sea.

Before the deep-mouthed chimney, dimly
lit by dying brands,
Twenty soldiers sat and waited, with their muskets in their hands;
(On the rough-hewn oaken table the venison haunch was shared, 35
And the pewter tankard circled slowly round from beard to beard.

Long they sat and talked together,— talked of wizards Satan-sold;
Of all ghostly sights and noises,—signs
and wonders manifold;
Of the spectre ship of Salem, with the dead men in her shrouds,
Sailing sheer above the water, in the loom of morning clouds; 40

Of the marvellous valley hidden in the depths of Gloucester woods,
Full of plants that love the summer,— blooms of warmer latitudes;
Where the Arctic birch is braided by the tropic's flowery vines,
And the white magnolia-blossoms star
the twilight of the pines!

But their voices sank yet lower, sank to husky tones of fear, 45
As they spake of present tokens of the powers of evil near;
Of a spectral host, defying stroke of steel and aim of gun;
Never yet was ball to slay them in the mould of mortals run!

Thrice, with plumes and flowing scalp-locks, from the midnight wood they
came,—
Thrice around the block-house marching,
met, unharmed, its volleyed flame;
Then, with mocking laugh and gesture,
sunk in earth or lost in air, 51
All the ghostly wonder vanished, and the moonlit sands lay bare.

Midnight came; from out the forest moved a dusky mass that soon
Grew to warriors, plumed and painted, grimly marching in the moon.
'Ghosts or witches,' said the captain,
'thus I foil the Evil One!' 55
And he rammed a silver button, from his doublet, down his gun.

Once again the spectral horror moved the guarded wall about;
Once again the levelled muskets through the palisades flashed out,
With that deadly aim the squirrel on his
tree-top might not shun,
Nor the beach-bird seaward flying with his slant wing to the sun. 60

Like the idle rain of summer sped the harmless shower of lead.
With a laugh of fierce derision, once again the phantoms fled;
Once again, without a shadow on the sands the moonlight lay,
And the white smoke curling through it drifted slowly down the bay!

'God preserve us!' said the captain;
'never mortal foes were there; 65
They have vanished with their leader,
Prince and Power of the air!
Lay aside your useless weapons; skill and prowess naught avail;
They who do the Devil's service wear their master's coat of mail!'

So the night grew near to cock-crow,
when again a warning call Roused the score of weary soldiers watching round the dusky hall: 70
And they looked to flint and priming, and they longed for break of day;
But the captain closed his Bible: 'Let us cease from man, and pray!'

To the men who went before us, all the unseen powers seemed near,
And their steadfast strength of courage struck its roots in holy fear.
Every hand forsook the musket, every head was bowed and bare, 75
Every stout knee pressed the flag-stones,
as the captain led in prayer.

Ceased thereat the mystic marching of the spectres round the wall,
But a sound abhorred, unearthly, smote
the ears and hearts of all,— Howls of rage and shrieks of anguish !
Never after mortal man
Saw the ghostly leaguers marching round
the block-house of Cape Ann. 80

So to us who walk in summer through the cool and sea-blown town,
From the childhood of its people comes the solemn legend down.
Not in vain the ancient fiction, in whose moral lives the youth
And the fitness and the freshness of an undecaying truth.

Soon or late to all our dwellings come the spectres of the mind, 85
Doubts and fears and dread forebodings,
in the darkness undefined ;
Round us throng the grim projections of the heart and of the brain,
And our pride of strength is weakness,
and the cunning hand is vain.

In the dark we cry like children ; and no answer from on high Breaks the crystal spheres of silence, and no white wings downward fly ; 90
But the heavenly help we pray for comes to faith, and not to sight,
And our prayers themselves drive backward all the spirits of the night !

THE GIFT OF TRITEMIUS.

TRITEMIUS of Herbigopolis, one day,
While kneeling at the altar's foot to pray
Alone with God, as was his pious choice,
Heard from without a miserable voice,
A sound which seemed of all sad things
to tell, 5
As of a lost soul crying out of hell.

Thereat the Abbot paused ; the chain whereby
His thoughts went upward broken by
that cry ;

And, looking from the casement, saw
below
A wretched woman, with gray hair
a-flow, 10
And withered hands held up to him, who
cried
For alms as one who might not be denied.

She cried, 'For the dear love of Him who
gave
His life for ours, my child from bondage
save,—
My beautiful, brave first-born, chained with slaves 15
In the Moor's galley, where the sun-smit
waves
Lap the white walls of Tunis !'—'What I can

I give,' Tritemius said, 'my prayers.'—
'O man
Of God !' she cried, for grief had made her bold,
'Mock me not thus ; I ask not prayers,
but gold. 20
Words will not serve me, alms alone
suffice ;
Even while I speak perchance my first-born dies.'

'Woman !' Tritemius answered, 'from our door
None go unfed, hence are we always
poor ;
A single soldo is our only store. 25
Thou hast our prayers ;—what can we give thee more ?'

'Give me,' she said, 'the silver candlesticks
On either side of the great crucifix.
God well may spare them on His errands
sped,
Or He can give you golden ones instead.'
Then spake Tritemius, 'Even as thy
word, 31
Woman, so be it ! (Our most gracious
Lord,
Who loveth mercy more than sacrifice,
Pardon me if a human soul I prize
Above the gifts upon His altar piled !) 35 Take what thou askest, and redeem thy child.'

Skipper Ireson's Ride

But his hand trembled as the holy alms
He placed within the beggar's eager palms;
And as she vanished down the linden
shade,
He bowed his head and for forgiveness
prayed. 40

So the day passed, and when the twilight
came

He woke to find the chapel all aflame,
And, dumb with grateful wonder, to behold

Upon the altar candlesticks of gold!

SKIPPER IRESON'S RIDE.

In the valuable and carefully prepared History of Marblehead, published in 1879 by Samuel Roads, Jr., it is stated that the crew of Captain Ireson, rather than himself, were responsible for the abandonment of the disabled vessel. To screen themselves they charged their captain with the crime. In view of this the writer of the ballad addressed the following letter to the historian:—

OAK KNOLL, DANVERS, 5 mo. 18, 1880.

MY DEAR FRIEND; I heartily thank thee for a copy of thy History of Marblehead. I have read it with great interest and think good use has been made of the abundant material. No town in Essex County has a record more honorable than Marblehead; no one has done more to develop the industrial interests of our New England seaboard, and certainly none have given such evidence of self-sacrificing patriotism. I am glad the story of it has been at last told, and told so well. I have now no doubt that thy version of Skipper Ireson's ride is the correct one. My verse was founded solely on a fragment of rhyme which I heard from one of my early schoolmates, a native of Marblehead.

I supposed the story to which it referred dated back at least a century. I knew nothing of the participators, and the narrative of the ballad was pure fancy. I am glad for the sake of truth and justice that the real facts are given in thy book. I certainly would not knowingly do injustice to any one, dead or living.

I am very truly thy friend,

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Of all the rides since the birth of time,
Told in story or sung in rhyme,—
On Apuleius's Golden Ass,
Or one-eyed Calendar's horse of brass,
Witch astride of a human back, 5
Islam's prophet on Al-Borák,—
The strangest ride that ever was sped
Was Ireson's, out from Marblehead!

Old Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in a cart 10

By the women of Marblehead!

Body of turkey, head of owl,
Wings a-droop like a rained-on fowl,
Feathered and ruffled in every part,
Skipper Ireson stood in the cart. 15
Scores of women, old and young,
Strong of muscle, and glib of tongue,
Pushed and pulled up the rocky lane,
Shouting and singing the shrill refrain:

'Here's Flud Oirson, fur his horrd
horrt, 20

Torr'd an' futherr'd an' corr'd in a corrt
By the women o' Morble'ead!'

Wrinkled scolds with hands on hips,
Girls in bloom of cheek and lips,
Wild-eyed, free-limbed, such as chase 25
Bacchus round some antique vase,
Brief of skirt, with ankles bare,
Loose of kerchief and loose of hair,
With conch-shells blowing and fish-horns'
twang,

Over and over the Mænads sang: 30
'Here's Flud Oirson, fur his horrd
horrt,

Torr'd an' futherr'd an' corr'd in a corrt
By the women o' Morble'ead!'

Small pity for him!—He sailed away
From a leaking ship, in Chaleur Bay,—
Sailed away from a sinking wreck, 36
With his own town's-people on her deck!
'Lay by! lay by!' they called to him.
Back he answered, 'Sink or swim!
Brag of your catch of fish again!' 40
And off he sailed through the fog and rain!

Old Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in a
cart

By the women of Marblehead!

Fathoms deep in dark Chaleur 45
That wreck shall lie forevermore.
Mother and sister, wife and maid,
Looked from the rocks of Marblehead
Over the moaning and rainy sea,— Looked for the coming that might not be ! 50

What did the winds and the sea-birds say
Of the cruel captain who sailed away ?—
Old Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in a
cart
By the women of Marblehead ! 55

Through the street, on either side,
Up flew windows, doors swung wide ;
Sharp-tongued spinsters, old wives gray,
Treble lent the fish-horn's bray.
Sea-worn grandsires, cripple-bound, 60
Hulks of old sailors run aground,
Shook head, and fist, and hat, and cane,
And cracked with curses the hoarse
refrain :

'Here's Flud Oirson, fur his horrd
horrt,
Torr'd an' futherr'd an' corr'd in a
corr't 65
By the women o' Morble'ead !'

Sweetly along the Salem road
Bloom of orchard and lilac showed.
Little the wicked skipper knew
Of the fields so green and the sky 70
blue.

Riding there in his sorry trim,
Like an Indian idol glum and grim,
Scarcely he seemed the sound to hear
Of voices shouting, far and near :

'Here's Flud Oirson, fur his horrd
horrt, 75
Torr'd an' futherr'd an' corr'd in a
corr't
By the women o' Morble'ead !'

'Hear me, neighbors !' at last he
cried,—

'What to me is this noisy ride ? 79
What is the shame that clothes the skin
To the nameless horror that lives within ?
Waking or sleeping, I see a wreck,
And hear a cry from a reeling deck !

Hate me and curse me,—I only dread
The hand of God and the face of the
dead !' 85

Said old Floyd Ireson, for his hard
heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in
a cart
By the women of Marblehead !

Then the wife of the skipper lost at sea
Said, 'God has touched him ! why should we ?' 90

Said an old wife mourning her only son,
'Cut the rogue's tether and let him run !'
So with soft relents and rude excuse,
Half scorn, half pity, they cut him loose,
And gave him a cloak to hide him in, 95
And left him alone with his shame and sin.

Poor Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in
a cart
By the women of Marblehead !

THE SYCAMORES.

Hugh Tallant was the first Irish resident of Haverhill, Mass. He planted the buttonwood trees on the bank of the river below the village in the early part of the seventeenth century.
Unfortunately this noble avenue is now nearly destroyed

In the outskirts of the village,
On the river's winding shores,
Stand the Occidental plane-trees,
Stand the ancient sycamores.

One long century hath been numbered, 5
And another half-way told,
Since the rustic Irish gleeman
Broke for them the virgin mould.

Deftly set to Celtic music,
At his violin's sound they grew, 10
Through the moonlit eves of summer,
Making Amphion's fable true.

Rise again, thou poor Hugh Tallant !
Pass in jerkin green along,
With thy eyes brimful of laughter, 15
And thy mouth as full of song.

Pioneer of Erin's outcasts, With his fiddle and his pack; Little dreamed the village Saxons Of the myriads at his back. 20	Merry-faced, with spade and fiddle, Singing through the ancient town, Only this, of poor Hugh Tallant, Hath Tradition handed down.
How he wrought with spade and fiddle, Delved by day and sang by night, With a hand that never wearied, And a heart forever light,—	Not a stone his grave discloses; 65 But if yet his spirit walks, 'Tis beneath the trees he planted, And when Bob-o-Lincoln talks;
Still the gay tradition mingles 25 With a record grave and drear, Like the rollic air of Cluny With the solemn march of Mear.	Green memorials of the gleeman ! Linking still the river-shores, 70 With their shadows cast by sunset, Stand Hugh Tallant's sycamores !
When the box-tree, white with blossoms, Made the sweet May woodlands glad, 30 And the Aronia by the river Lighted up the swarming shad,	When the Father of his Country Through the north-land riding came, And the roofs were starred with banners, And the steeples rang acclaim,— 76
And the bulging nets swept shoreward, With their silver-sided haul, Midst the shouts of dripping fishers, 35 He was merriest of them all.	When each war-scarred Continental, Leaving smithy, mill, and farm, Waved his rusted sword in welcome, And shot off his old king's-arm,— 80
When, among the jovial huskers, Love stole in at Labor's side, With the lusty airs of England Soft his Celtic measures vied. 40	Slowly passed that august Presence Down the thronged and shouting street; Village girls as white as angels Scattering flowers around his feet.
Songs of love and wailing lyke-wake, And the merry fair's carouse; Of the wild Red Fox of Erin And the Woman of Three Cows,	Midway, where the plane-tree's shadow 85 Deepest fell, his rein he drew : On his stately head, uncovered, Cool and soft the west-wind blew.
By the blazing hearths of winter, 45 Pleasant seemed his simple tales, Midst the grimmer Yorkshire legends And the mountain myths of Wales.	And he stood up in his stirrups, Looking up and looking down 90 On the hills of Gold and Silver Rimming round the little town,—
How the souls in Purgatory Scrambled up from fate forlorn, 50 On St. Keven's sackcloth ladder, Slyly hitched to Satan's horn.	On the river, full of sunshine, To the lap of greenest vales Winding down from wooded headlands, Willow-skirted, white with sails. 96
Of the fiddler who at Tara Played all night to ghosts of kings; Of the brown dwarfs, and the fairies 55 Dancing in their moorland rings !	And he said, the landscape sweeping Slowly with his ungloved hand, 'I have seen no prospect fairer In this goodly Eastern land.' 100
Jolliest of our birds of singing, Best he loved the Bob-o-link. 'Hush !' he'd say, 'the tipsy fairies ! Hear the little folks in drink !' 60	Then the bugles of his escort Stirred to life the cavalcade : And that head, so bare and stately, Vanished down the depths of shade.

Ever since, in town and farm-house, 105
 Life has had its ebb and flow ;
 Thrice hath passed the human harvest
 To its garner green and low.

But the trees the gleeman planted,
 Through the changes, changeless stand ;
 As the marble calm of Tadmor 111
 Mocks the desert's shifting sand.

Still the level moon at rising
 Silvers o'er each stately shaft ;
 Still beneath them, half in shadow, 115
 Singing, glides the pleasure craft ;

Still beneath them, arm-enfolded,
 Love and Youth together stray ;
 While, as heart to heart beats faster,
 More and more their feet delay. 120

Where the ancient cobbler, Keezar,
 On the open hillside wrought,
 Singing, as he drew his stitches,
 Songs his German masters taught,

Singing, with his gray hair floating 125
 Round his rosy ample face,—
 Now a thousand Saxon craftsmen
 Stitch and hammer in his place.

All the pastoral lanes so grassy
 Now are Traffic's dusty streets ; 130
 From the village, grown a city,
 Fast the rural grace retreats.

But, still green, and tall, and stately,
 On the river's winding shores,
 Stand the Occidental plane-trees, 135
 Stand Hugh Tallant's sycamores.

THE PIPES AT LUCKNOW.

An incident of the Sepoy mutiny.

PIPES of the misty moorlands,
 Voice of the glens and hills ;
 The droning of the torrents,
 The treble of the rills !
 Not the braes of broom and heather, 5
 Nor the mountains dark with rain,
 Nor maiden bower, nor border tower,
 Have heard your sweetest strain !

Dear to the Lowland reaper,
 And plaided mountaineer,— 10
 To the cottage and the castle
 The Scottish pipes are dear ;—
 Sweet sounds the ancient pibroch
 O'er mountain, loch, and glade ;
 But the sweetest of all music 15
 The pipes at Lucknow played.

Day by day the Indian tiger
 Louder yelled, and nearer crept ;
 Round and round the jungle-serpent
 Near and nearer circles swept. 20
 'Pray for rescue, wives and mothers,—
 Pray to-day !' the soldier said ;
 'To-morrow, death's between us
 And the wrong and shame we dread.'

Oh, they listened, looked, and waited, 25
 Till their hope became despair ;
 And the sobs of low bewailing
 Filled the pauses of their prayer.
 Then up spake a Scottish maiden,
 With her ear unto the ground : 30
 'Dinna ye hear it?—dinna ye hear it ?
 The pipes o' Havelock sound !'

Hushed the wounded man his groaning ;
 Hushed the wife her little ones ;
 Alone they heard the drum-roll 35
 And the roar of Sepoy guns.
 But to sounds of home and childhood
 The Highland ear was true ;—
 As her mother's cradle-crooning
 The mountain pipes she knew. 40

Like the march of soundless music
 Through the vision of the seer,
 More of feeling than of hearing,
 Of the heart than of the ear,
 She knew the droning pibroch, 45
 She knew the Campbell's call :
 'Hark ! hear ye no' MacGregor's,
 The grandest o' them all !'

Oh, they listened, dumb and breath-
 less,
 And they caught the sound at last ; 50
 Faint and far beyond the Goomtee
 Rose and fell the piper's blast !

Then a burst of wild thanksgiving
Mingled woman's voice and man's ;
'God be praised !—the march of Havelock !' 55
The piping of the clans !'

Louder, nearer, fierce as vengeance,
Sharp and shrill as swords at strife,
Came the wild MacGregor's clan-call,
Stinging all the air to life. 60
But when the far-off dust-cloud
To plaided legions grew,
Full tenderly and blithesomely
The pipes of rescue blew !

Round the silver domes of Lucknow, 65
Moslem mosque and Pagan shrine,
Breathed the air to Britons dearest,
The air of Auld Lang Syne.
O'er the cruel roll of war-drums
Rose that sweet and homelike strain ; 70
And the tartan clove the turban,
As the Goomtee cleaves the plain.

Dear to the corn-land reaper
And plaided mountaineer,—
To the cottage and the castle 75
The piper's song is dear.
Sweet sounds the Gaelic pibroch
O'er mountain, glen, and glade ;
But the sweetest of all music
The Pipes at Lucknow played ! 80

TELLING THE BEES.

A remarkable custom, brought from the Old Country, formerly prevailed in the rural districts of New England. On the death of a member of the family, the bees were at once informed of the event, and their hives dressed in mourning. This ceremonial was supposed to be necessary to prevent the swarms from leaving their hives and seeking a new home. [The scene is minutely that of the Whittier homestead.]

¹² HERE is the place ; right over the hill Runs the path I took ;
You can see the gap in the old wall still,
And the stepping-stones in the shallow brook.

There is the house, with the gate red-barred, 5
And the poplars tall ;
And the barn's brown length, and the cattle-yard,
And the white horns tossing above the
wall.

There are the beehives ranged in the
sun ;
And down by the brink 10
Of the brook are her poor flowers, weedo'errun,
Pansy and daffodil, rose and pink.

A year has gone, as the tortoise goes,
Heavy and slow ;
And the same rose blows, and the same sun glows, 15
And the same brook sings of a year ago.

There's the same sweet clover-smell in the breeze ;
And the June sun warm
Tangles his wings of fire in the trees,
Setting, as then, over Fernside farm. 20

I mind me how with a lover's care
From my Sunday coat
I brushed off the burrs, and smoothed my
hair,
And cooled at the brookside my brow
and throat.

Since we parted, a month had passed,— 25
To love, a year ;
Down through the beeches I looked at
last
On the little red gate and the well-sweep near.

I can see it all now,—the slantwise rain
Of light through the leaves, 30
The sundown's blaze on her window-
pane,
The bloom of her roses under the eaves.

Just the same as a month before,—
The house and the trees,
The barn's brown gable, the vine by the
door,— 35
Nothing changed but the hives of
bees.

Before them, under the garden wall,
Forward and back,
Went drearily singing the chore-girl
small,
Draping each hive with a shred of
black. 40

Trembling, I listened: the summer sun
Had the chill of snow;
For I knew she was telling the bees of
one
Gone on the journey we all must go!

Then I said to myself, 'My Mary weeps
For the dead to-day: 46
Haply her blind old grandsire sleeps
The fret and the pain of his age away.'

But her dog whined low; on the doorway
sill,
With his cane to his chin, 50
The old man sat; and the chore-girl still Sung to the bees stealing out and in.

And the song she was singing ever since
In my ear sounds on:—
'Stay at home, pretty bees, fly not hence!
Mistress Mary is dead and gone!' 56

THE SWAN SONG OF PARSON AVERY.

In Young's Chronicles of Massachusetts Bay from 1623 to 1636 may be found Anthony Thacher's Narrative of his Shipwreck. Thacher was Avery's companion and survived to tell the tale. Mather's Magnalia, III. 2, gives further Particulars of Parson Avery's End, and suggests the title of the poem.

WHEN the reaper's task was ended, and the summer wearing late,
Parson Avery sailed from Newbury, with his wife and children eight, Dropping down the river-harbor in the shallow 'Watch and Wait.'

Pleasantly lay the clearings in the mellow
summer-morn,
With the newly planted orchards dropping their fruits first-born, 5
And the home-roofs like brown islands amid a sea of corn.

Broad meadows reached out seaward the tided creeks between,
And hills rolled wave-like inland, with oaks and walnuts green;—
A fairer home, a goodlier land, his eyes had never seen.

Yet away sailed Parson Avery, away
where duty led, 10
And the voice of God seemed calling, to break the living bread
To the souls of fishers starving on the rocks of Marblehead.

All day they sailed: at nightfall the pleasant land-breeze died,
The blackening sky, at midnight, its starry lights denied,
And far and low the thunder of tempest
prophesied! 15

Blotted out were all the coast-lines, gone
were rock, and wood, and sand;
Grimly anxious stood the skipper with the rudder in his hand,
And questioned of the darkness what was sea and what was land.

And the preacher heard his dear ones,
nestled round him, weeping sore:
'Never heed, my little children! Christ is walking on before 20
To the pleasant land of heaven, where the sea shall be no more.'

All at once the great cloud parted, like a curtain drawn aside,
To let down the torch of lightning on the terror far and wide;
And the thunder and the whirlwind together smote the tide.

There was wailing in the shallop, woman's wail and man's despair, 25
A crash of breaking timbers on the rocks
so sharp and bare,
And, through it all, the murmur of Father
Avery's prayer.

From his struggle in the darkness with the wild waves and the blast,
On a rock, where every billow broke above him as it passed,
Alone, of all his household, the man of God was cast. 30

There a comrade heard him praying, in the pause of wave and wind :
'All my own have gone before me, and
I linger just behind ;
Not for life I ask, but only for the rest
Thy ransomed find !

'In this night of death I challenge the promise of Thy word !—
Let me see the great salvation of which mine ears have heard !— 35
Let me pass from hence forgiven, through the grace of Christ, our Lord !

'In the baptism of these waters wash
white my every sin,
And let me follow up to Thee my household and my kin !
Open the sea-gate of Thy heaven, and let me enter in !'

When the Christian sings his death-song,
all the listening heavens draw near,
And the angels, leaning over the walls of crystal, hear 41
How the notes so faint and broken swell
to music in God's ear.

The ear of God was open to His servant's
last request ;
As the strong wave swept him downward
the sweet hymn upward pressed,
And the soul of Father Avery went, singing, to its rest. 45

There was wailing on the mainland, from the rocks of Marblehead ;
In the stricken church of Newbury the notes of prayer were read ;
And long, by board and hearthstone, the living mourned the dead.

And still the fishers outbound, or scudding
from the squall,
With grave and reverent faces, the ancient tale recall, 50
When they see the white waves breaking on the Rock of Avery's Fall !

THE DOUBLE-HEADED SNAKE OF NEWBURY.

'Concerning y^e Amphibæna, as soon as I received your commands, I made diligent inquiry : . . he assures me y^t it had really two heads, one at each end ; two mouths, two stings or tongues.'—REV. CHRISTOPHER TOPPAN to COT-TON MATHER.

FAR away in the twilight time
Of every people, in every clime,
Dragons and griffins and monsters dire,
Born of water, and air, and fire,
Or nursed, like the Python, in the mud 5
And ooze of the old Deucalion flood,
Crawl and wriggle and foam with rage,
Through dusk tradition and ballad age.
So from the childhood of Newbury town
And its time of fable the tale comes down
Of a terror which haunted bush and brake, 11
The Amphibæna, the Double Snake !

Thou who makest the tale thy mirth,
Consider that strip of Christian earth
On the desolate shore of a sailless sea, 15
Full of terror and mystery,
Half redeemed from the evil hold
Of the wood so dreary, and dark, and old,
Which drank with its lips of leaves the
dew
When Time was young, and the world was new, 20
And wove its shadows with sun and moon,
Ere the stones of Cheops were squared and hewn.

Think of the sea's dread monotone,
Of the mournful wail from the pine-wood
blown,
Of the strange, vast splendors that lit the
North, 25
Of the troubled throes of the quaking
earth,
And the dismal tales the Indian told,
Till the settler's heart at his hearth grew
cold,
And he shrank from the tawny wizard boasts,
And the hovering shadows seemed full of ghosts, 30

And above, below, and on every side,
The fear of his creed seemed verified ;—
And think, if his lot were now thine own,
To grope with terrors nor named nor
known,

How laxer muscle and weaker nerve 35
And a feebler faith thy need might serve ;
And own to thyself the wonder more
That the snake had two heads, and not a score !

Whether he lurked in the Oldtown fen
Or the gray earth-flax of the Devil's Den,
Or swam in the wooded Artichoke, 41
Or coiled by the Northman's Written
Rock,

Nothing on record is left to show ;
Only the fact that he lived, we know,
And left the cast of a double head 45
In the scaly mask which he yearly shed.
For he carried a head where his tail
should be,

And the two, of course, could never agree,
But wriggled about with main and might,
Now to the left and now to the right ; 50
Pulling—and twisting this way and that,
Neither knew what the other was at.

A snake with two heads, lurking so near !
Judge of the wonder, guess at the fear !
Think what ancient gossips might say, 55
Shaking their heads in their dreary way,
Between the meetings on Sabbath-day !
How urchins, searching at day's decline
The Common Pasture for sheep or kine,
The terrible double-ganger heard 60
In leafy rustle or whir of bird !

Think what a zest it gave to the sport,
In berry-time, of the younger sort,
As over pastures, blackberry-twined, 65
Reuben and Dorothy lagged behind,
And closer and closer, for fear of harm,
The maiden clung to her lover's arm ;
And how the spark, who was forced to stay,

By his sweetheart's fears, till the break
of day,
Thanked the snake for the fond delay ! 70

Far and wide the tale was told,
Like a snowball growing while it rolled

The nurse hushed with it the baby's cry ;
And it served, in the worthy minister's
eye,

To paint the primitive serpent by. 75
Cotton Mather came galloping down
All the way to Newbury town,
With his eyes agog and his ears set wide,
And his marvellous inkhorn at his side ;
Stirring the while in the shallow pool 80
Of his brains for the lore he learned at school,

To garnish the story, with here a streak
Of Latin, and there another of Greek :
And the tales he heard and the notes he took,

Behold ! are they not in his Wonder-
Book? 85

Stories, like dragons, are hard to kill.
If the snake does not, the tale runs still
In Byfield Meadows, on Pipestave Hill.
And still, whenever husband and wife
Publish the shame of their daily strife, 90
And, with mad cross-purpose, tug and strain

At either end of the marriage-chain,
The gossips say, with a knowing shake
Of their gray heads, 'Look at the Double-
Snake !

One in body and two in will, 95
The Amphisbæna is living still !'

MABEL MARTIN.

A HARVEST IDYL.

Susanna Martin, an aged woman of Amesbury, Mass., was tried and executed for the alleged crime of witchcraft. Her home was in what is now known as Pleasant Valley on the Merrimac, a little above the old Ferry way, where, tradition says, an attempt was made to assassinate Sir Edmund Andros on his way to Falmouth (afterwards Portland) and Pemaquid, which was frustrated by a warning timely given. Goody Martin was the only woman hanged on the north side of the Merrimac during the dreadful delusion. The aged wife of Judge Bradbury, who lived on the other side of the Powow River, was imprisoned, and would have been put to death but for the collapse of the hideous persecution.

The substance of the poem which follows was published under the name of The Witch's Daughter in The National Era in 1857. In 1875 my publishers desired to issue it with illustrations, and I then enlarged it and otherwise altered it to its present form. The principal addition was in the verses which constitute Part I.

PROEM.

I CALL the old time back : I bring my lay
In tender memory of the summer day
When, where our native river lapsed away,

We dreamed it over, while the thrushes
made

Songs of their own, and the great pine-trees laid 5

On warm nightlights the masses of their
shade.

And she was with us, living o'er again
Her life in ours, despite of years and
pain,—

The Autumn's brightness after latter rain.

Beautiful in her holy peace as one 10
Who stands, at evening, when the work
is done,

Glorified in the setting of the sun !

Her memory makes our common landscape seem

Fairer than any of which painters dream ;
Lights the brown hills and sings in every stream ; 15

For she whose speech was always truth's pure gold

Heard, not unpleased, its simple legends
told,

And loved with us the beautiful and old.

I. THE RIVER VALLEY.

Across the level tableland,
A grassy, rarely trodden way, 20
With thinnest skirt of birchen spray

And stunted growth of cedar, leads
To where you see the dull plain fall
Sheer off, steep-slanted, ploughed by all

The seasons' rainfalls. On its brink 25
The over-leaning harebells swing,
With roots half bare the pine-trees
cling ;

And, through the shadow looking west,
You see the wavering river flow
Along a vale, that far below 30

Holds to the sun, the sheltering hills
And glimmering water-line between,
Broad fields of corn and meadows green,

And fruit-bent orchards grouped around
The low brown roofs and painted eaves,
And chimney-tops half hid in leaves. 36

No warmer valley hides behind
Yon wind-scourged sand-dunes, cold and bleak ;
No fairer river comes to seek

The wave-sung welcome of the sea, 40
Or mark the northmost border line
Of sun-loved growths of nut and vine.

Here, ground-fast in their native fields,
Untempted by the city's gain,
The quiet farmer folk remain 45

Who bear the pleasant name of Friends,
And keep their fathers' gentle ways
And simple speech of Bible days ;

In whose neat homesteads woman holds
With modest ease her equal place, 50
And wears upon her tranquil face

The look of one who, merging not
Her self-hood in another's will,
Is love's and duty's handmaid still.

Pass with me down the path that winds
Through birches to the open land, 56
Where, close upon the river strand

You mark a cellar, vine o'errun,
Above whose wall of loosened stones
The sumach lifts its reddening cones, 60

And the black nightshade's berries shine,
And broad, unsightly burdocks fold
The household ruin, century-old.

Here, in the dim colonial time
Of sterner lives and gloomier faith, 65
A woman lived, tradition saith,

Who wrought her neighbors foul annoy,
And wretched and plagued the countryside,
Till at the hangman's hand she died.

Sit with me while the westering day 70
Falls slantwise down the quiet vale,
And, haply ere yon loitering sail,

That rounds the upper headland, falls
Below Deer Island's pines, or sees
Behind it Hawkswood's belt of trees 75

Rise black against the sinking sun,
My idyl of its days of old,
The valley's legend, shall be told.

II. THE HUSKING.

It was the pleasant harvest-time,
When cellar-bins are closely stowed, 80
And garrets bend beneath their load,

And the old swallow-haunted barns,—
Brown-gabled, long, and full of seams
Through which the moted sunlight
streams,

And winds blow freshly in, to shake 85
The red plumes of the roasted cocks,
And the loose hay-mow's scented
locks,—

Are filled with summer's ripened stores,
Its odorous grass and barley sheaves,
From their low scaffolds to their eaves.

On Esek Harden's oaken floor, 91
With many an autumn threshing worn,
Lay the heaped ears of unhusked corn.

And thither came young men and maids,
Beneath a moon that, large and low, 95
Lit that sweet eve of long ago.

They took their places; some by chance,
And others by a merry voice
Or sweet smile guided to their choice.

How pleasantly the rising moon, 100
Between the shadow of the mows,
Looked on them through the great elm-
boughs!

On sturdy boyhood, sun-embrowned,
On girlhood with its solid curves
Of healthful strength and painless nerves! 105

And jests went round, and laughs that
made
The house-dog answer with his howl,
And kept astir the barn-yard fowl;

And quaint old songs their fathers sung
In Derby dales and Yorkshire moors,
Ere Norman William trod their shores;

And tales, whose merry license shook
The fat sides of the Saxon thane,
Forgetful of the hovering Dane,—

Rude plays to Celt and Cimbri known, 115
The charms and riddles that beguiled
On Oxus' banks the young world's child,—

That primal picture-speech wherein
Have youth and maid the story told,
So new in each, so dateless old, 120

Recalling pastoral Ruth in her
Who waited, blushing and demure,
The red-ear's kiss of forfeiture.

III. THE WITCH'S DAUGHTER.

But still the sweetest voice was mute
That river-valley ever heard 125
From lips of maid or throat of bird;

For Mabel Martin sat apart,
And let the hay-mow's shadow fall
Upon the loveliest face of all.

She sat apart, as one forbid, 130
Who knew that none would condescend
To own the Witch-wife's child a friend.

The seasons scarce had gone their round,
Since curious thousands thronged to see
Her mother at the gallows-tree; 135

And mocked the prison-palsied limbs
That faltered on the fatal stairs,
And wan lip trembling with its prayers !

Few questioned of the sorrowing child,
Or, when they saw the mother die, 140
Dreamed of the daughter's agony.

They went up to their homes that day,
As men and Christians justified :
God willed it, and the wretch had died !

Dear God and Father of us all, 145
Forgive our faith in cruel lies,— Forgive the blindness that denies !

Forgive Thy creature when he takes,
For the all-perfect love Thou art,
Some grim creation of his heart. 150

Cast down our idols, overturn
Our bloody altars ; let us see Thyself in Thy humanity !

Young Mabel from her mother's grave
Crept to her desolate hearth-stone, 155
And wrestled with her fate alone ;

With love, and anger, and despair,
The phantoms of disordered sense,
The awful doubts of Providence !

Oh, dreary broke the winter days, 160
And dreary fell the winter nights
When, one by one, the neighboring lights

Went out, and human sounds grew still,
And all the phantom-peopled dark Closed round her hearth-fire's dying spark. 165

And summer days were sad and long,
And sad the uncompanioned eves,
And sadder sunset-tinted leaves,

And Indian Summer's airs of balm ;
She scarcely felt the soft caress, 170
The beauty died of loneliness !

The school-boys jeered her as they passed,
And, when she sought the house of
prayer,
Her mother's curse pursued her there.

And still o'er many a neighboring door 175
She saw the horseshoe's curvèd charm,
To guard against her mother's harm :

That mother, poor and sick and lame,
Who daily, by the old arm-chair,
Folded her withered hands in prayer ;—

Who turned, in Salem's dreary jail, 181
Her worn old Bible o'er and o'er,
When her dim eyes could read no more !

Sore tried and pained, the poor girl kept
Her faith, and trusted that her way, 185
So dark, would somewhere meet the
day.

And still her weary wheel went round
Day after day, with no relief :
Small leisure have the poor for grief.

IV. THE CHAMPION.

So in the shadow Mabel sits ; 190
Untouched by mirth she sees and hears,
Her smile is sadder than her tears.

But cruel eyes have found her out,
And cruel lips repeat her name,
And taunt her with her mother's shame.

She answered not with railing words, 196
But drew her apron o'er her face,
And, sobbing, glided from the place.

And only pausing at the door,
Her sad eyes met the troubled gaze 200
Of one who, in her better days,

Had been her warm and steady friend,
Ere yet her mother's doom had made
Even Esek Harden half afraid.

He felt that mute appeal of tears, 205
And, starting, with an angry frown,
Hushed all the wicked murmurs down.

'Good neighbors mine,' he sternly said,
'This passes harmless mirth or jest ;
I brook no insult to my guest. 210

'She is indeed her mother's child ;
But God's sweet pity ministers
Unto no whiter soul than hers.

'Let Goody Martin rest in peace ;
I never knew her harm a fly, 215
And witch or not, God knows—not I.

'I know who swore her life away ;
And as God lives, I'd not condemn
An Indian dog on word of them.'

The broadest lands in all the town, 220
The skill to guide, the power to awe,
Were Harden's ; and his word was law.

None dared withstand him to his face,
But one sly maiden spake aside :
'The little witch is evil-eyed !' 225

'Her mother only killed a cow,
Or witched a churn or dairy-pan ;
But she, forsooth, must charm a man !'

V. IN THE SHADOW.

Poor Mabel, homeward turning, passed
The nameless terrors of the wood, 230
And saw, as if a ghost pursued,

Her shadow gliding in the moon ;
The soft breath of the west-wind gave
A chill as from her mother's grave.

How dreary seemed the silent house ! 235
Wide in the moonbeams' ghastly glare
Its windows had a dead man's stare !

And, like a gaunt and spectral hand,
The tremulous shadow of a birch
Reached out and touched the door's low porch, 240

As if to lift its latch ; hard by,
A sudden warning call she heard,
The night-cry of a boding bird.

She leaned against the door ; her face,
So fair, so young, so full of pain, 245
White in the moonlight's silver rain.

The river, on its pebbled rim,
Made music such as childhood knew ;
The door-yard tree was whispered through

By voices such as childhood's ear 250
Had heard in moonlights long ago ;
And through the willow-boughs below

She saw the rippled waters shine ;
Beyond, in waves of shade and light,
The hills rolled off into the night. 255

She saw and heard, but over all
A sense of some transforming spell,
The shadow of her sick heart fell.

And still across the wooded space
The harvest lights of Harden shone, 260
And song and jest and laugh went on.

And he, so gentle, true, and strong,
Of men the bravest and the best,
Had he, too, scorned her with the rest ?

She strove to drown her sense of wrong,
And, in her old and simple way, 266
To teach her bitter heart to pray.

Poor child ! the prayer, begun in faith,
Grew to a low, despairing cry
Of utter misery : 'Let me die !' 270

'Oh ! take me from the scornful eyes,
And hide me where the cruel speech
And mocking finger may not reach !

'I dare not breathe my mother's name :
A daughter's right I dare not crave 275
To weep above her unblest grave !

'Let me not live until my heart,
With few to pity, and with none
To love me, hardens into stone.

'O God ! have mercy on Thy child, 280
Whose faith in Thee grows weak and small,
And take me ere I lose it all !'

A shadow on the moonlight fell,
And murmuring wind and wave became
A voice whose burden was her name. 285

VI. THE BETROTHAL.

Had then God heard her ? Had He sent
His angel down ? In flesh and blood,
Before her Essek Harden stood !

He laid his hand upon her arm :
 ' Dear Mabel, this no more shall be ; 290
 Who scoffs at you must scoff at me.

' You know rough Esek Harden well ;
 And if he seems no suitor gay,
 And if his hair is touched with gray,

' The maiden grown shall never find 295
 His heart less warm than when she
 smiled,
 Upon his knees a little child !'

Her tears of grief were tears of joy,
 As, folded in his strong embrace,
 She looked in Esek Harden's face. 300

' O truest friend of all !' she said,
 ' God bless you for your kindly thought,
 And make me worthy of my lot !'

He led her forth, and, blent in one,
 Beside their happy pathway ran 305
 The shadows of the maid and man.

He led her through his dewy fields,
 To where the swinging lanterns glowed,
 And through the doors the huskers showed.

' Good friends and neighbors !' Esek
 said, 310
 ' I'm weary of this lonely life ;
 In Mabel see my chosen wife !'

' She greets you kindly, one and all ;
 The past is past, and all offence
 Falls harmless from her innocence. 315

' Henceforth she stands no more alone ;
 You know what Esek Harden is ; —
 He brooks no wrong to him or his.

' Now let the merriest tales be told,
 And let the sweetest songs be sung 320
 That ever made the old heart young !'

' For now the lost has found a home ;
 And a lone hearth shall brighter burn,
 As all the household joys return !'

Oh, pleasantly the harvest-moon, 325
 Between the shadow of the mows,
 Looked on them through the great elm-
 boughs !

On Mabel's curls of golden hair,
 On Esek's shaggy strength it fell ; 329
 And the wind whispered, ' It is well !'

THE PROPHECY OF SAMUEL SEWALL.

The prose version of this prophecy is to be found in Sewall's The New Heaven upon the New Earth, 1697, quoted in Joshua Coffin's History of Newbury. Judge Sewall's father, Henry Sewall, was one of the pioneers of Newbury

Up and down the village streets
 Strange are the forms my fancy meets,
 For the thoughts and things of to-day
 are hid,
 And through the veil of a closed lid
 The ancient worthies I see again : . 5
 I hear the tap of the elder's cane,
 And his awful periwig I see,
 And the silver buckles of shoe and knee.
 Stately and slow, with thoughtful air,
 His black cap hiding his whitened hair,
 Walks the Judge of the great Assize, 11
 Samuel Sewall the good and wise.
 His face with lines of firmness wrought,
 He wears the look of a man unbought,
 Who swears to his hurt and changes not ;
 Yet, touched and softened nevertheless 16
 With the grace of Christian gentleness,
 The face that a child would climb to kiss !
 True and tender and brave and just,
 That man might honor and woman trust.

Touching and sad, a tale is told, 21
 Like a penitent hymn of the Psalmist old,
 Of the fast which the good man lifelong kept 13
 With a haunting sorrow that never slept,
 As the circling year brought round the
 time 25
 Of an error that left the sting of crime,
 When he sat on the bench of the witchcraft courts,
 With the laws of Moses and Hale's
 Reports,
 And spake, in the name of both, the word
 That gave the witch's neck to the cord, 30

And piled the oaken planks that pressed
 The feeble life from the warlock's breast !
 All the day long, from dawn to dawn,
 His door was bolted, his curtain drawn ;
 No foot on his silent threshold trod, 35
 No eye looked on him save that of God,
 As he baffled the ghosts of the dead with charms
 Of penitent tears, and prayers, and psalms,
 And, with precious proofs from the sacred
 word
 Of the boundless pity and love of the
 Lord, 40
 His faith confirmed and his trust renewed
 That the sin of his ignorance, sorely rued,
 Might be washed away in the mingled flood
 Of his human sorrow and Christ's dear
 blood !

Green forever the memory be 45
 Of the Judge of the old Theocracy,
 Whom even his errors glorified,
 Like a far-seen, sunlit mountain-side
 By the cloudy shadows which o'er it glide !
 Honor and praise to the Puritan 50
 Who the halting step of his age outran,
 And, seeing the infinite worth of man
 In the priceless gift the Father gave,
 In the infinite love that stooped to save,
 Dared not brand his brother a slave ! 55
 'Who doth such wrong,' he was wont to say,
 In his own quaint, picture-loving way,
 'Flings up to Heaven a hand-grenade
 Which God shall cast down upon his
 head !'

Widely as heaven and hell, contrast 60
 That brave old jurist of the past
 And the cunning trickster and knave of courts
 Who the holy features of Truth distorts,—
 Ruling as right the will of the strong,
 Poverty, crime, and weakness wrong ; 65
 Wide-eared to power, to the wronged and weak
 Deaf as Egypt's gods of leek ;
 Scoffing aside at party's nod
 Order of nature and law of God ;

For whose dabbled ermine respect were waste, 70
 Reverence folly, and awe misplaced ;
 Justice of 'whom 't were vain to seek
 As from Koordish robber or Syrian Sheik !
 Oh, leave the wretch to his bribes and sins ;
 Let him rot in the web of lies he spins ! 75
 To the saintly soul of the early day,
 To the Christian judge, let us turn and
 say :
 'Praise and thanks for an honest man !—
 Glory to God for the Puritan !'

I see, far southward, this quiet day, 80
 The hills of Newbury rolling away,
 With the many tints of the season gay,
 Dreamily blending in autumn mist
 Crimson, and gold, and amethyst.
 Long and low, with dwarf trees crowned,
 Plum Island lies, like a whale aground, 86
 A stone's toss over the narrow sound.
 Inland, as far as the eye can go,
 The hills curve round like a bended bow ;
 A silver arrow from out them sprung, 90
 I see the shine of the Quasycung ;
 And, round and round, over valley and
 hill,
 Old roads winding, as old roads will,
 Here to a ferry, and there to a mill ;
 And glimpses of chimneys and gabled eaves, 95
 Through green elm arches and maple
 leaves,—
 Old homesteads sacred to all that can
 Gladden or sadden the heart of man,
 Over whose thresholds of oak and stone
 Life and Death have come and gone ! 100
 There pictured tiles in the fireplace
 show,
 Great beams sag from the ceiling low,
 The dresser glitters with polished wares,
 The long clock ticks on the foot-worn stairs,
 And the low, broad chimney shows the crack 105
 By the earthquake made a century back.
 Up from their midst springs the village spire
 With the crest of its cock in the sun afire ;

Beyond are orchards and planting lands,
And great salt marshes and glimmering
sands, 110

And, where north and south the coastlines run,

The blink of the sea in breeze and sun !

I see it all like a chart unrolled,
But my thoughts are full of the past and
old,

I hear the tales of my boyhood told ; 115
And the shadows and shapes of early days
Flit dimly by in the veiling haze,
With measured movement and rhythmic chime

Weaving like shuttles my web of rhyme.
I think of the old man wise and good, 120
Who once on yon misty hillside stood,

(A poet who never measured rhyme,
A seer unknown to his dull-eared time,)
And, propped on his staff of age, looked
down,

With his boyhood's love, on his native
town, 125

Where, written as if on its hills and
plains,

His burden of prophecy yet remains, 14
For the voices of wood, and wave, and
wind

To read in the ear of the musing mind :—

'As long as Plum Island, to guard the coast 130

As God appointed, shall keep its post ;
As long as a salmon shall haunt the deep
Of Merrimac River, or sturgeon leap ;

As long as pickerel swift and slim,
Or red-backed perch, in Crane Pond swim ; 135

As long as the annual sea-fowl know
Their time to come and their time to go ;

As long as cattle shall roam at will
The green, grass meadows by Turkey
Hill ;

As long as sheep shall look from the
side 140

Of Oldtown Hill on marishes wide,
And Parker River, and salt-sea tide ;

As long as a wandering pigeon shall search

The fields below from his white-oak perch,

When the barley-harvest is ripe and shorn, 145

And the dry husks fall from the standing
corn ;

As long as Nature shall not grow old,
Nor drop her work from her doting hold,
And her care for the Indian corn forget,
And the yellow rows in pairs to set ;— 150
So long shall Christians here be born,
Grow up and ripen as God's sweet
corn !—

By the beak of bird, by the breath of frost,

Shall never a holy ear be lost,
But, husked by Death in the Planter's
sight, 155

Be sown again in the fields of light !'

The Island still is purple with plums,
Up the river the salmon comes,
The sturgeon leaps, and the wild-fowl feeds

On hillside berries and marish seeds,— 160
All the beautiful signs remain,

From spring-time sowing to autumn rain
The good man's vision returns again !

And let us hope, as well we can, 164
That the Silent Angel who garners man
May find some grain as of old he found

In the human cornfield ripe and sound,
And the Lord of the Harvest deign to
own

The precious seed by the fathers sown !

THE RED RIVER VOYAGEUR.

[Suggested by reading the following passage in Minnesota and its Resources, by J. Wesley Bond :
'As I pass slowly along the lonely road that leads me from thee, Selkirk, mine eyes do turn continually to gaze upon thy smiling, golden fields, and thy lofty towers, now burnished with the rays
of the departing sun, while the sweet vespers bell reverberates afar and strikes so mournfully pleasant upon mine ear I feel satisfied that, though absent thousands of weary miles, my thoughts will always dwell on thee with rapturous emotions.' At midnight, with the last stroke of the clock ushering in the 17th of December, 1891, the 84th anniversary of Whittier's birth, the bells of St. Boniface rang a joyous peal.] 16

OUT and in the river is winding
The links of its long, red chain,
Through belts of dusky pine-land
And gusty leagues of plain.

Only, at times, a smoke-wreath 5
With the drifting cloud-rack joins,—
The smoke of the hunting-lodges
Of the wild Assiniboins !

Drearily blows the north-wind
From the land of ice and snow ; 10
The eyes that look are weary,
And heavy the hands that row.

And with one foot on the water,
And one upon the shore,
The Angel of Shadow gives warning 15
That day shall be no more.

Is it the clang of wild-geese ?
Is it the Indian's yell,
That lends to the voice of the north-wind
The tones of a far-off bell ? 20

The voyageur smiles as he listens
To the sound that grows apace ;
Well he knows the vesper ringing
Of the bells of St. Boniface.

The bells of the Roman Mission, 25
That call from their turrets twain,
To the boatman on the river,
To the hunter on the plain !

Even so in our mortal journey,
The bitter north-winds blow, 30
And thus upon life's Red River
Our hearts, as oarsmen, row.

And when the Angel of Shadow
Rests his feet on wave and shore,
And our eyes grow dim with watching 35
And our hearts faint at the oar,

Happy is he who heareth
The signal of his release
In the bells of the Holy City,
The chimes of eternal peace ! 40

THE PREACHER.

George Whitefield, the celebrated preacher, died at Newburyport in 1770, and was buried under the church which has since borne his name.

Its windows flashing to the sky,
Beneath a thousand roofs of brown,
Far down the vale, my friend and I
Beheld the old and quiet town ;
The ghostly sails that out at sea 5
Flapped their white wings of mystery ;
The beaches glimmering in the sun,
And the low wooded capes that run
Into the sea-mist north and south ;
The sand-bluffs at the river's mouth ; 10
The swinging chain-bridge, and, afar,
The foam-line of the harbor-bar.

Over the woods and meadow-lands
A crimson-tinted shadow lay,
Of clouds through which the setting day
Flung a slant glory far away. 16
It glittered on the wet sea-sands,
It flamed upon the city's panes,
Smote the white sails of ships that wore
Outward or in, and glided o'er 20
The steeples with their veering vanes !

Awhile my friend with rapid search
O'erran the landscape. 'Yonder spire
Over gray roofs, a shaft of fire ;
What is it, pray ?'—'The Whitefield
Church ! 25
Walled about by its basement stones,
There rest the marvellous prophet's
bones.'

Then as our homeward way we walked,
Of the great preacher's life we talked ;
And through the mystery of our theme 30
The outward glory seemed to stream,
And Nature's self interpreted
The doubtful record of the dead ;
And every level beam that smote
The sails upon the dark afloat 35
A symbol of the light became,
Which touched the shadows of our blame
With tongues of Pentecostal flame.

Over the roofs of the pioneers
Gathers the moss of a hundred years ; 40

On man and his works has passed the
change
Which needs must be in a century's range.
The land lies open and warm in the sun,
Anvils clamor and mill-wheels run,— Flocks on the hillsides, herds on the
plain, 45
The wilderness gladdened with fruit and grain !
But the living faith of the settlers old
A dead profession their children hold ;
To the lust of office and greed of trade
A stepping-stone is the altar made. 50
The Church, to place and power the
door,
Rebukes the sin of the world no more,
Nor sees its Lord in the homeless poor.
Everywhere is the grasping hand,
And eager adding of land to land ; 55
And earth, which seemed to the fathers meant
But as a pilgrim's wayside tent,—
A nightly shelter to fold away
When the Lord should call at the break
of day,—
Solid and steadfast seems to be, 60
And Time has forgotten Eternity !
But fresh and green from the rotting roots
Of primal forests the young growth
shoots ;
From the death of the old the new proceeds,
And the life of truth from the rot of
creeds : 65
On the ladder of God, which upward leads,
The steps of progress are human needs.
For His judgments still are a mighty deep,
And the eyes of His providence never
sleep :
When the night is darkest He gives the morn ; 70
When the famine is sorest, the wine and
corn !
In the church of the wilderness Edwards
wrought,
Shaping his creed at the forge of thought ;

And with Thor's own hammer welded and
bent
The iron links of his argument, 75
Which strove to grasp in its mighty span
The purpose of God and the fate of man !
Yet faithful still, in his daily round
To the weak, and the poor, and sin-sick
found,
The schoolman's lore and the casuist's art
Drew warmth and life from his fervent
heart. 81
Had he not seen in the solitudes
Of his deep and dark Northampton woods
A vision of love about him fall ?
Not the blinding splendor which fell on Saul, 85
But the tenderer glory that rests on them
Who walk in the New Jerusalem,
Where never the sun nor moon are known,
But the Lord and His love are the light
alone !
And watching the sweet, still countenance 90
Of the wife of his bosom rapt in trance,
Had he not treasured each broken word
Of the mystical wonder seen and heard ;
And loved the beautiful dreamer more ?
That thus to the desert of earth she bore
Clusters of Eshcol from Canaan's shore ?
As the barley-winnower, holding with
pain
Aloft in waiting his chaff and grain,
Joyfully welcomes the far-off breeze
Sounding the pine-tree's slender keys, 100
So he who had waited long to hear
The sound of the Spirit drawing near,
Like that which the son of Iddo heard
When the feet of angels the myrtles
stirred,
Felt the answer of prayer, at last, 105
As over his church the afflatus passed,
Breaking its sleep as breezes break
To sun-bright ripples a stagnant lake.
At first a tremor of silent fear,
The creep of the flesh at danger near, 110
A vague foreboding and discontent,
Over the hearts of the people went.
All nature warned in sounds and signs :
The wind in the tops of the forest pines

In the name of the Highest called to
prayer, 115

As the muezzin calls from the minaret stair.

Through ceiled chambers of secret sin
Sudden and strong the light shone in ;
A guilty sense of his neighbor's needs
Startled the man of title-deeds ; 120

The trembling hand of the worldling
shook

The dust of years from the Holy Book ;
And the psalms of David, forgotten long,
Took the place of the scoffer's song.

The impulse spread like the outward course 125

Of waters moved by a central force ;
The tide of spiritual life rolled down
From inland mountains to seaboard town.

Prepared and ready the altar stands
Waiting the prophet's outstretched hands
And prayer availing, to downward call 131
The fiery answer in view of all.

Hearts are like wax in the furnace ; who Shall 'mould, and shape, and cast them anew ?

Lo ! by the Merrimac Whitefield stands
In the temple that never was made by hands,— 136

Curtains of azure, and crystal wall,
And dome of the sunshine over all—
A homeless pilgrim, with dubious name
Blown about on the winds of fame ; 140

Now as an angel of blessing classed,
And now as a mad enthusiast.
Called in his youth to sound and gauge
The moral lapse of his race and age,
And, sharp as truth, the contrast draw 145
Of human frailty and perfect law ;
Possessed by the one dread thought that lent

Its goad to his fiery temperament,
Up and down the world he went,
A John the Baptist crying, Repent ! 150

No perfect whole can our nature make ;
Here or there the circle will break ;
The orb of life as it takes the light
On one side leaves the other in night.

Never was saint so good and great 155
As to give no chance at St. Peter's gate

For the plea of the Devil's advocate.
So, incomplete by his being's law,
The marvellous preacher had his flaw ;
With step unequal, and lame with faults,
His shade on the path of History halts. 161

Wisely and well said the Eastern bard :
Fear is easy, but love is hard,—
Easy to glow with the Santon's rage,
And walk on the Meccan pilgrimage ; 165
But he is greatest and best who can
Worship Allah by loving man.

Thus he,—to whom, in the painful stress
Of zeal on fire from its own excess,
Heaven seemed so vast and earth so
small 170
That man was nothing, since God was
all,—

Forgot, as the best at times have done,
That the love of the Lord and of man are
one.

Little to him whose feet unshod
The thorny path of the desert trod, 175
Careless of pain, so it led to God,
Seemed the hunger-pang and the poor
man's wrong,

The weak ones trodden beneath the
strong.

Should the worm be chooser?—the clay withstand

The shaping will of the potter's hand ? 180

In the Indian fable Arjoon hears
The scorn of a god rebuke his fears :
'Spare thy pity !' Krishna saith ;
'Not in thy sword is the power of death !
All is illusion,—loss but seems ; 185
Pleasure and pain are only dreams ;
Who deems he slayeth doth not kill ;
Who counts as slain is living still.
Strike, nor fear thy blow is crime ;
Nothing dies but the cheats of time ; 190
Slain or slayer, small the odds
To each, immortal as Indra's gods !'

So by Savannah's banks of shade,
The stones of his mission the preacher
laid

On the heart of the negro crushed and rent, 195

And made of his blood the wall's cement;
Bade the slave-ship speed from coast to coast,

Fanned by the wings of the Holy Ghost;
And begged, for the love of Christ, the
gold

Coined from the hearts in its groaning
hold. 200

What could it matter, more or less
Of stripes, and hunger, and weariness?
Living or dying, bond or free,
What was time to eternity?

Alas for the preacher's cherished schemes! 205

Mission and church are now but dreams;
Nor prayer nor fasting availed the plan
To honor God through the wrong of man.
Of all his labors no trace remains Save the bondman lifting his hands in chains. 210

The woof he wove in the righteous warp
Of freedom-loving Oglethorpe,
Clothes with curses the goodly land,
Changes its greenness and bloom to sand;
And a century's lapse reveals once more
The slave-ship stealing to Georgia's shore.
Father of Light! how blind is he 217
Who sprinkles the altar he rears to Thee
With the blood and tears of humanity!

He erred: shall we count His gifts as naught? 220

Was the work of God in him unwrought?
The servant may through his deafness err,
And blind may be God's messenger;
But the errand is sure they go upon,—
The word is spoken, the deed is done. 225
Was the Hebrew temple less fair and good
That Solomon bowed to gods of wood?
For his tempted heart and wandering feet,
Were the songs of David less pure and sweet?

So in light and shadow the preacher
went, 230

God's erring and human instrument;
And the hearts of the people where he
passed

Swayed as the reeds sway in the blast,

Under the spell of a voice which took
In its compass the flow of Siloa's brook, 235
And the mystical chime of the bells of
gold

On the ephod's hem of the priest of old,—
Now the roll of thunder, and now the awe
Of the trumpet heard in the Mount of Law.

A solemn fear on the listening crowd 240
Fell like the shadow of a cloud.

The sailor reeling from out the ships
Whose masts stood thick in the river-slips
Felt the jest and the curse die on his lips.

Listened the fisherman rude and hard, 245
The calker rough from the builder's yard;
The man of the market left his load,

The teamster leaned on his bending goad,
The maiden, and youth beside her, felt
Their hearts in a closer union melt, 250

And saw the flowers of their love in bloom
Down the endless vistas of life to come.
Old age sat feebly brushing away

From his ears the scanty locks of gray;
And careless boyhood, living the free 255
Unconscious life of bird and tree,

Suddenly awakened to a sense
Of sin and its guilty consequence.
It was as if an angel's voice

Called the listeners up for their final choice; 260

As if a strong hand rent apart
The veils of sense from soul and heart,
Showing in light ineffable

The joys of heaven and woes of hell!
All about in the misty air 265

The hills seemed kneeling in silent prayer;
The rustle of leaves, the moaning sedge,
The water's lap on its gravelled edge,

The wailing pines, and, far and faint,
The wood-dove's note of sad complaint,—
To the solemn voice of the preacher lent 270

An undertone as of low lament;
And the rote of the sea from its sandy
coast,

On the easterly wind, now heard, now lost,
Seemed the murmurous sound of the judgment host. 275

Yet wise men doubted, and good men
wept,

As that storm of passion above them swept,

And, comet-like, adding flame to flame,
 The priests of the new Evangel came,— Davenport, flashing upon the crowd, 280
 Charged like summer's electric cloud,
 Now holding the listener still as death
 With terrible warnings under breath,
 Now shouting for joy, as if he viewed
 The vision of Heaven's beatitude! 285
 And Celtic Tennant, his long coat bound
 Like a monk's with leathern girdle round,
 Wild with the toss of unshorn hair,
 And wringing of hands, and eyes aglare,
 Groaning under the world's despair! 290
 Grave pastors, grieving their flocks to lose,
 Prophesied to the empty pews

That gourds would wither, and mushroom rooms die,

And noisiest fountains run soonest dry,
 Like the spring that gushed in Newbury
 Street, 295

Under the tramp of the earthquake's feet,
 A silver shaft in the air and light,
 For a single day, then lost in night,
 Leaving only, its place to tell,
 Sandy fissure and sulphurous smell. 300
 With zeal wing-clipped and white-heat
 cool,

Moved by the spirit in grooves of rule,
 No longer harried, and cropped, and fleeced,

Flogged by sheriff and cursed by priest,
 But by wiser counsels left at ease 305
 To settle quietly on his lees,

And, self-concentred, to count as done
 The work which his fathers well begun,
 In silent protest of letting alone,

The Quaker kept the way of his own,—
 A non-conductor among the wires, 311
 With coat of asbestos proof to fires.

And quite unable to mend his pace
 To catch the falling manna of grace,
 He hugged the closer his little store 315

Of faith, and silently prayed for more.
 And vague of creed and barren of rite,
 But holding, as in his Master's sight,
 Act and thought to the inner light,

The round of his simple duties walked, 320
 And strove to live what the others talked.

And who shall marvel if evil went
 Step by step with the good intent,

And with love and meekness, side by side,
 Lust of the flesh and spiritual pride?— 325

That passionate longings and fancies vain
 Set the heart on fire and crazed the brain?

That over the holy oracles
 Folly sported with cap and bells?

That goodly women and learned men 330
 Marvelling told with tongue and pen

How unweaned children chirped like birds
 Texts of Scripture and solemn words,

Like the infant seers of the rocky glens
 In the Puy de Dome of wild Cevennes: 335

Or baby Lamas who pray and preach
 From Tartar cradles in Buddha's speech?

In the war which Truth or Freedom wages
 With impious fraud and the wrong of age,

Hate and malice and self-love mar 340
 The notes of triumph with painful jar,

And the helping angels turn aside
 Their sorrowing faces the shame to hide.

Never on custom's oiled grooves
 The world to a higher level moves, 345

But grates and grinds with friction hard
 On granite boulder and flinty shard.

The heart must bleed before it feels,
 The pool be troubled before it heals;

Ever by losses the right must gain, 350
 Every good have its birth of pain;

The active Virtues blush to find
 The Vices wearing their badge behind,

And Graces and Charities feel the fire
 Wherein the sins of the age expire; 355

The fiend still rends as of old he rent
 The tortured body from which he went.

But Time tests all. In the over-drift
 And flow of the Nile, with its annual gift,

Who cares for the Hadji's relics sunk? 360
 Who thinks of the drowned-out Coptic monk?

The tide that loosens the temple's stones,
 And scatters the sacred ibis-bones,

Drives away from the valley-land
 That Arab robber, the wandering sand, 365

Moistens the fields that know no rain,
 Fringes the desert with belts of grain,

And bread to the sower brings again.
 So the flood of emotion deep and strong

Troubled the land as it swept along, 370
 But left a result of holier lives,

Tenderer mothers and worthier wives.

The husband and father whose children fled

And sad wife wept when his drunken tread Frightened peace from his roof-tree's
shade, 375

And a rock of offence his hearthstone
made,

In a strength that was not his own began
To rise from the brute's to the plane of man.

Old friends embraced, long held apart
By evil counsel and pride of heart; 380
And penitence saw through misty tears,
In the bow of hope on its cloud of fears,
The promise of Heaven's eternal years,—
The peace of God for the world's annoy,—
Beauty for ashes, and oil of joy ! 385

Under the church of Federal Street,
Under the tread of its Sabbath feet,
Walled about by its basement stones,
Lie the marvellous preacher's bones.
No saintly honors to them are shown, 390
No sign nor miracle have they known ;
But he who passes the ancient church
Stops in the shade of its belfry-porch,
And ponders the wonderful life of him
Who lies at rest in that charnel dim. 395
Long shall the traveller strain his eye
From the railroad car, as it plunges by,
And the vanishing town behind him search
For the slender spire of the Whitefield
Church ;

And feel for one moment the ghosts of trade, 400

And fashion, and folly, and pleasure
laid,

By the thought of that life of pure intent,
That voice of warning yet eloquent,
Of one on the errands of angels sent.
And if where he labored the flood of
sin 405

Like a tide from the harbor-bar sets in,
And over a life of time and sense
The church-spires lift their vain defence,
As if to scatter the bolts of God
With the points of Calvin's thunder-rod,—
Still, as the gem of its civic crown, 411
Precious beyond the world's remown,
His memory hallows the ancient town !

THE TRUCE OF PISCATAQUA.

In the winter of 1675-76, the Eastern Indians, who had been making war upon the New Hampshire settlements, were so reduced in numbers by fighting and famine that they agreed to a peace with Major Waldron at Dover ; but the peace was broken in the fall of 1676. The famous chief, Squando, was the principal negotiator on the part of the savages. He had taken up the hatchet to revenge the brutal treatment of his child by drunken white sailors, which caused its death.

It not unfrequently happened during the Border wars that young white children were adopted by their Indian captors, and so kindly treated that they were unwilling to leave the free, wild life of the woods ; and in some instances they utterly refused to go back with their parents to their old homes and civilization.

RAZE these long blocks of brick and stone,
These huge mill-monsters overgrown ;
Blot out the humbler piles as well,
Where, moved like living shuttles, dwell
The weaving genii of the bell ; 5
Tear from the wild Cochecho's track
The dams that hold its torrents back ;
And let the loud-rejoicing fall
Plunge, roaring, down its rocky wall ;
And let the Indian's paddle play 10
On the unbridged Piscataqua !
Wide over hill and valley spread
Once more the forest, dusk and dread,
With here and there a clearing cut
From the walled shadows round it shut ; 15
Each with its farm-house builded rude,
By English yeoman squared and hewed,
And the grim, flankered block-house
bound

With bristling palisades around.
So, haply shall before thine eyes 20
The dusty veil of centuries rise,
The old, strange scenery overlay
The tamer pictures of to-day,
While, like the actors in a play,
Pass in their ancient guise along 25
The figures of my border song :
What time beside Cochecho's flood
The white man and the red man stood,
With words of peace and brotherhood ;
When passed the sacred calumet 30
From lip to lip with fire-draught wet,

And, puffed in scorn, the peace-pipe's smoke		'All the while the totem sang, Lightning blazed and thunder rang ;	75
Through the gray beard of Waldron broke, And Squando's voice, in suppliant plea For mercy, struck the haughty key	35	Pulled the white moon from the sky.
Of one who held, in any fate, His native pride inviolate !		'I, the medicine-man, whose ear All that spirits hear can hear,— I, whose eyes are wide to see	80
'Let your ears be opened wide ! He who speaks has never lied. Waldron of Piscataqua, Hear what Squando has to say !	40	All the things that are to be,—
		'Well I knew the dreadful signs In the whispers of the pines, In the river roaring loud, In the mutter of the cloud.	95
'Squando shuts his eyes and sees, Far off, Saco's hemlock-trees. In his wigwam, still as stone, Sits a woman all alone,	45	'At the breaking of the day, From the grave I passed away ; Flowers bloomed round me, birds sang glad, But my heart was hot and mad.
'Wampum beads and birchen strands Dropping from her careless hands, Listening ever for the fleet Patter of a dead child's feet !		'There is rust on Squando's knife, From the warm, red springs of life ; On the funeral hemlock-trees Many a scalp the totem sees.	90
'When the moon a year ago Told the flowers the time to blow, In that lonely wigwam smiled Menewee, our little child.	50	'Blood for blood ! But evermore Squando's heart is sad and sore ; And his poor squaw waits at home For the feet that never come !	95
'Ere that moon grew thin and old, He was lying still and cold ; Sent before us, weak and small, When the Master did not call !	55	'Waldron of Cochecho, hear ! Squando speaks, who laughs at fear ; Take the captives he has ta'en ; Let the land have peace again !'	100
'On his little grave I lay ; Three times went and came the day, Thrice above me blazed the noon, Thrice upon me wept the moon.	60	As the words died on his tongue, Wide apart his warriors swung ; Parted, at the sign he gave, Right and left, like Egypt's wave.	105
'In the third night-watch I heard, Far and low, a spirit-bird ; Very mournful, very wild, Sang the totem of my child.	65	And, like Israel passing free Through the prophet-charméd sea, Captive mother, wife, and child Through the dusky terror filed.
' " Menewee, poor Menewee, Walks a path he cannot see : Let the white man's wigwam light With its blaze his steps aright.		One alone, a little maid, Middleway her steps delayed, Glancing, with quick, troubled sight, Round about from red to white.	110
' " All-uncalled, he dares not show Empty hands to Manito : Better gifts he cannot bear Than the scalps his slayers wear."	70	Then his hand the Indian laid On the little maiden's head, Lightly from her forehead fair Smoothing back her yellow hair.	115

'Gift or favor ask I none; What I have is all my own: Never yet the birds have sung, "Squando hath a beggar's tongue."	120	Unabashed, the maid began: 'Up and down the brook I ran, Where, beneath the bank so steep, Lie the spotted trout asleep.	165
'Yet for her who waits at home, For the dead who cannot come, Let the little Gold-hair be In the place of Menewee!	125	"Chip!" went squirrel on the wall, After me I heard him call, And the cat-bird on the tree Tried his best to mimic me.
'Mishanock, my little star! Come to Saco's pines afar; Where the sad one waits at home Wequashim, my moonlight, come!		'Where the hemlocks grew so dark That I stopped to look and hark, On a log, with feather-hat, By the path, an Indian sat.	170
'What!' quoth Waldron, 'leave a child Christian-born to heathens wild? As God lives, from Satan's hand I will pluck her as a brand!'	131	'Then I cried, and ran away; But he called, and bade me stay; And his voice was good and mild As my mother's to her child.	175
'Hear me, white man!' Squando cried; 'Let the little one decide, Wequashim, my moonlight, say, Wilt thou go with me, or stay?'	135	'And he took my wampum chain, Looked and looked it o'er again; Gave me berries, and, beside, On my neck a plaything tied.'	180
Slowly, sadly, half afraid, Half regretfully, the maid Owned the ties of blood and race,— Turned from Squando's pleading face.	140	Straight the mother stooped to see What the Indian's gift might be. On the braid of wampum hung, Lo! a cross of silver swung.	185
Not a word the Indian spoke, But his wampum chain he broke, And the beaded wonder hung On that neck so fair and young.	145	Well she knew its graven sign, Squando's bird and totem pine; And, a mirage of the brain, Flowed her childhood back again.
Silence-shod, as phantoms seem In the marches of a dream, Single-filed, the grim array Through the pine-trees wound away.		Flashed the roof the sunshine through, Into space the walls outgrew; On the Indian's wigwam-mat, Blossom-crowned, again she sat.	191
Doubting, trembling, sore amazed, Through her tears the young child gazed. 'God preserve her!' Waldron said; 'Satan hath bewitched the maid!'	150	Cool she felt the west-wind blow, In her ear the pines sang low, And, like links from out a chain, Dropped the years of care and pain.	195
Years went and came. At close of day Singing came a child from play, Tossing from her loose-looking head Gold in sunshine, brown in shade.	155	From the outward toil and din, From the griefs that gnaw within, To the freedom of the woods Called the birds, and winds, and floods.	200
Pride was in the mother's look, But her head she gravely shook, And with lips that fondly smiled Feigned to chide her truant child.	160	Well, O painful minister! Watch thy flock, but blame not her, If her ear grew sharp to hear All their voices whispering near.	205

Blame her not, as to her soul
All the desert's glamour stole,
That a tear for childhood's loss
Dropped upon the Indian's cross.

When, that night, the Book was read, 210
And she bowed her widowed head,
And a prayer for each loved name
Rose like incense from a flame,

With a hope the creeds forbid
In her pitying bosom hid, 215
To the listening ear of Heaven
Lo ! the Indian's name was given.

MY PLAYMATE.

[When written, this poem bore the title Eleanor,
and when first printed The Playmate.]

THE pines were dark on Ramoth hill,
Their song was soft and low ;
The blossoms in the sweet May wind
Were falling like the snow.

The blossoms drifted at our feet, 5
The orchard birds sang clear ;
The sweetest and the saddest day
It seemed of all the year.

For, more to me than birds or flowers, 10
My playmate left her home,
And took with her the laughing spring,
The music and the bloom.

She kissed the lips of kith and kin,
She laid her hand in mine :
What more could ask the bashful boy 15
Who fed her father's kine ?

She left us in the bloom of May :
The constant years told o'er
Their seasons with as sweet May morns,
But she came back no more. 20

I walk, with noiseless feet, the round
Of uneventful years ;
Still o'er and o'er I sow the spring
And reap the autumn ears.

She lives where all the golden year 25
Her summer roses blow ;
The dusky children of the sun
Before her come and go.

There haply with her jewelled hands
She smooths her silken gown,— 30
No more the homespun lap wherein
I shook the walnuts down.

The wild grapes wait us by the brook,
The brown nuts on the hill, 215
And still the May-day flowers make sweet 35
The woods of Follymill.

The lilies blossom in the pond,
The bird builds in the tree,
The dark pines sing on Ramoth hill
The slow song of the sea. 40

I wonder if she thinks of them,
And how the old time seems,—
If ever the pines of Ramoth wood
Are sounding in her dreams.

I see her face, I hear her voice ; 45
Does she remember mine ?
And what to her is now the boy
Who fed her father's kine ?

What cares she that the orioles build
For other eyes than ours,— 50
That other hands with nuts are filled,
And other laps with flowers ?

O playmate in the golden time !
Our mossy seat is green,
Its fringing violets blossom yet, 55
The old trees o'er it lean.

The winds so sweet with birch and fern
A sweeter memory blow ;
And there in spring the veeries sing
The song of long ago. 60

And still the pines of Ramoth wood
Are moaning like the sea,—
The moaning of the sea of change
Between myself and thee !

COBBLER KEEZAR'S VISION.

This ballad was written on the occasion of a Horticultural Festival. Cobbler Keezar was a noted character among the first settlers in the valley of the Merrimac.¹⁶

THE beaver cut his timber

With patient teeth that day,
The minks were fish-wards, and the crows
Surveyors of highway,—

When Keezar sat on the hillside

Upon his cobbler's form,
With a pan of coals on either hand
To keep his waxed-ends warm.

And there, in the golden weather,

He stitched and hammered and sung;
In the brook he moistened his leather, 11
In the pewter mug his tongue.

Well knew the tough old Teuton

Who brewed the stoutest ale,
And he paid the goodwife's reckoning 15
In the coin of song and tale.

The songs they still are singing

Who dress the hills of vine,
The tales that haunt the Brocken
And whisper down the Rhine. 20

Woodsy and wild and lonesome,

The swift stream wound away,
Through birches and scarlet maples
Flashing in foam and spray,—

Down on the sharp-horned ledges

Plunging in steep cascade, 25
Tossing its white-maned waters
Against the hemlock's shade.

Woodsy and wild and lonesome,

East and west and north and south; 30
Only the village of fishers
Down at the river's mouth;

Only here and there a clearing,

With its farm-house rude and new,
And tree-stumps, swart as Indians, 35
Where the scanty harvest grew.

No shout of home-bound reapers,
No vintage-song he heard,
And on the green no dancing feet
The merry violin stirred. 40

'Why should folk be glum,' said Keezar,
'When Nature herself is glad,
And the painted woods are laughing
At the faces so sour and sad?'

Small heed had the careless cobbler 45
What sorrow of heart was theirs
Who travailed in pain with the births of
God,

And planted a state with prayers,—

Hunting of witches and warlocks,
Smiting the heathen horde,— 50
One hand on the mason's trowel,
And one on the soldier's sword!

But give him his ale and cider,
Give him his pipe and song,
Little he cared for Church or State, 55
Or the balance of right and wrong.

'Tis work, work, work,' he muttered,—

'And for rest a snuffle of psalms!' 60
He smote on his leathern apron
With his brown and waxen palms.

'Oh for the purple harvests
Of the days when I was young!

For the merry grape-stained maidens,
And the pleasant songs they sung!

'Oh for the breath of vineyards, 65
Of apples and nuts and wine!

For an oar to row and a breeze to blow
Down the grand old river Rhine!'

A tear in his blue eye glistened,
And dropped on his beard so gray. 70
'Old, old am I,' said Keezar,
'And the Rhine flows far away!'

But a cunning man was the cobbler;
He could call the birds from the trees,
Charm the black snake out of the ledges,
And bring back the swarming bees. 75

All the virtues of herbs and metals,
All the lore of the woods, he knew,
And the arts of the Old World mingled
With the marvels of the New. 80

Well he knew the tricks of magic, And the lapstone on his knee Had the gift of the Mormon's goggles Or the stone of Doctor Dee. ¹⁷		Golden the goodwife's butter, 125 Ruby her currant-wine; Grand were the strutting turkeys, Fat were the beeves and swine.
For the mighty master Agrippa 85 Wrought it with spell and rhyme From a fragment of mystic moonstone In the tower of Nettesheim.		Yellow and red were the apples, And the ripe pears russet-brown, 130 And the peaches had stolen blushes From the girls who shook them down.
To a cobbler Minnesinger The marvellous stone gave he,— 90 And he gave it, in turn, to Keezar, Who brought it over the sea.		And with blooms of hill and wildwood, That shame the toil of art, Mingled the gorgeous blossoms 135 Of the garden's tropic heart.
He held up that mystic lapstone, He held it up like a lens, And he counted the long years coming 95 By twenties and by tens.		'What is it I see?' said Keezar: 'Am I here, or am I there? Is it a fête at Bingen? Do I look on Frankfort fair? 140
'One hundred years,' quoth Keezar, 'And fifty have I told: Now open the new before me, And shut me out the old!' 100		'But where are the clowns and puppets, And imps with horns and tail? And where are the Rhenish flagons? And where is the foaming ale?
Like a cloud of mist, the blackness Rolled from the magic stone, And a marvellous picture mingled The unknown and the known.		'Strange things, I know, will happen,— Strange things the Lord permits; 146 But that droughty folk should be jolly Puzzles my poor old wits.
Still ran the stream to the river, 105 And river and ocean joined; And there were the bluffs and the blue sea-line And cold north hills behind.		'Here are smiling manly faces, And the maiden's step is gay; 150 Nor sad by thinking, nor mad by drinking, Nor mopes, nor fools, are they.
But the mighty forest was broken By many a steepled town, 110 By many a white-walled farm-house, And many a garner brown.		'Here's pleasure without regretting, And good without abuse, The holiday and the bridal 155 Of beauty and of use.
Turning a score of mill-wheels, The stream no more ran free; White sails on the winding river, 115 White sails on the far-off sea.		'Here's a priest and there is a Quaker, Do the cat and dog agree? Have they burned the stocks for oven- wood? 159 Have they cut down the gallows-tree?
Below in the noisy village The flags were floating gay, And shone on a thousand faces The light of a holiday. 120		'Would the old folk know their children? Would they own the graceless town, With never a ranter to worry And never a witch to drown?'
Swiftly the rival ploughmen Turned the brown earth from their shares; Here were the farmer's treasures, There were the craftsman's wares.		Loud laughed the cobbler Keezar, 165 Laughed like a school-boy gay; Tossing his arms above him, The lapstone rolled away.

It rolled down the rugged hillside,
It spun like a wheel bewitched, 170
It plunged through the leaning willows,
And into the river pitched.

There, in the deep, dark water,
The magic stone lies still,
Under the leaning willows 175
In the shadow of the hill.

But oft the idle fisher
Sits on the shadowy bank,
And his dreams make marvellous pictures
Where the wizard's lapstone sank. 180

And still, in the summer twilights,
When the river seems to run
Out from the inner glory,
Warm with the melted sun,

The weary mill-girl lingers 185
Beside the charmed stream,
And the sky and the golden water
Shape and color her dream.

Fair wave the sunset gardens,
The rosy signals fly; 90
Her homestead beckons from the cloud,
And love goes sailing by.

AMY WENTWORTH.

TO WILLIAM BRADFORD.

As they who watch by sick-beds find relief
Unwittingly from the great stress of grief
And anxious care, in fantasies out-
wrought
From the hearth's embers flickering low, or caught
From whispering wind, or tread of passing feet, 5
Or vagrant memory calling up some sweet Snatch of old song or romance, whence or why
They scarcely know or ask,—so, thou and I,
Nursed in the faith that Truth alone is
strong
In the endurance which outwears
Wrong, 10

With meek persistence baffling brutal force,
And trusting God against the universe,—
We, doomed to watch a strife we may not share
With other weapons than the patriot's
prayer,
Yet owning, with full hearts and mois-tened eyes, 15
The awful beauty of self-sacrifice,
And wrung by keenest sympathy for all
Who give their loved ones for the living
wall
"Twixt law and treason,—in this evil
day
May haply find, through automatic play
Of pen and pencil, solace to our pain, 21
And hearten others with the strength we gain.
I know it has been said our times require No play of art, nor dalliance with the lyre, 24
No weak essay with Fancy's chloroform
To calm the hot, mad pulses of the storm,
But the stern war-blast rather, such as sets
The battle's teeth of serried bayonets,
And pictures grim as Vernet's. Yet with
these
Some softer tints may blend, and milder
keys 30
Relieve the storm-stunned ear. Let us keep sweet,
If so we may, our hearts, even while we eat
The bitter harvest of our own device
And half a century's moral cowardice.
As Nürnberg sang while Wittenberg defied, 35
And Kranach painted by his Luther's
side,
And through the war-march of the Puritan
The silver stream of Marvell's music ran,
So let the household melodies be sung,
The pleasant pictures on the wall be
hung,— 40
So let us hold against the hosts of night
And slavery all our vantage-ground of
light.
Let Treason boast its savagery, and shake
From its flag-folds its symbol rattlesnake,

Nurse its fine arts, lay human skins in tan,
 And carve its pipe-bowls from the bones of man, 46
 And make the tale of Fijian banquets dull
 By drinking whiskey from a loyal skull,—
 But let us guard, till this sad war shall cease,
 (God grant it soon!) the graceful arts of
 peace: 50
 No foes are conquered who the victors teach
 Their vandal manners and barbaric speech.

And while, with hearts of thankfulness,
 we bear
 Of the great common burden our full share,
 Let none upbraid us that the waves entice Thy sea-dipped pencil, or some quaint device, 56
 Rhythmic and sweet, beguiles my pen
 away
 From the sharp strifes and sorrows of
 to-day.
 Thus, while the east-wind keen from Labrador
 Sings in the leafless elms, and from the
 shore 60
 Of the great sea comes the monotonous
 roar
 Of the long-breaking surf, and all the sky
 Is gray with cloud, home-bound and dull,
 I try
 To time a simple legend to the sounds
 Of winds in the woods, and waves on pebbled bounds,— 65
 A song for oars to chime with, such as might
 Be sung by tired sea-painters, who at night
 Look from their hemlock camps, by quiet cove
 Or beach, moon-lighted, on the waves
 they love.
 (So hast thou looked, when level sunset lay
 On the calm bosom of some Eastern bay, 71
 And all the spray-moist rocks and waves that rolled
 Up the white sand-slopes flashed with ruddy gold.)
 Something it has—a flavor of the sea,
 And the sea's freedom—which reminds of
 thee. 75

Its faded picture, dimly smiling down
 From the blurred fresco of the ancient
 town,
 I have not touched with warmer tints in
 vain,
 If, in this dark, sad year, it steals one thought from pain.

Her fingers shame the ivory keys 80
 They dance so light along;
 The bloom upon her parted lips
 Is sweeter than the song.

O perfumed suitor, spare thy smiles!
 Her thoughts are not of thee; 85
 She better loves the salted wind,
 The voices of the sea.

Her heart is like an outbound ship
 That at its anchor swings;
 The murmur of the stranded shell 90
 Is in the song she sings.

She sings, and, smiling, hears her praise,
 But dreams the while of one
 Who watches from his sea-blown deck
 The icebergs in the sun. 95

She questions all the winds that blow,
 And every fog-wreath dim,
 And bids the sea-birds flying north
 Bear messages to him.

She speeds them with the thanks of
 men 100
 He perilled life to save,
 And grateful prayers like holy oil
 To smooth for him the wave.

Brown Viking of the fishing-smack!
 Fair toast of all the town!— 105
 The skipper's jerkin ill bessems
 The lady's silken gown!

But ne'er shall Amy Wentworth wear
 For him the blush of shame
 Who dares to set his manly gifts 110
 Against her ancient name.

The stream is brightest at its spring,
And blood is not like wine;
Nor honored less than he who heirs
Is he who founds a line.

115

Full lightly shall the prize be won,
If love be Fortune's spur;
And never maiden stoops to him
Who lifts himself to her.

Her home is brave in Jaffrey Street,
With stately stairways worn
By feet of old Colonial knights
And ladies gentle-born.

120

Still green about its ample porch
The English ivy twines,
Trained back to show in English oak
The herald's carven signs.

125

And on her, from the wainscot old,
Ancestral faces frown,—
And this has worn the soldier's sword,
And that the judge's gown.

130

But, strong of will and proud as they,
She walks the gallery floor
As if she trod her sailor's deck
By stormy Labrador!

135

The sweetbrier blooms on Kittery-side,
And green are Elliot's bowers;
Her garden is the pebbled beach,
The mosses are her flowers.

She looks across the harbor-bar
To see the white gulls fly;
His greeting from the Northern sea
Is in their clanging cry.

140

She hums a song, and dreams that he,
As in its romance old,
Shall homeward ride with silken sails
And masts of beaten gold!

145

Oh, rank is good, and gold is fair,
And high and low mate ill;
But love has never known a law
Beyond its own sweet will!

1862.

THE COUNTESS.

TO E. W.

I inscribed this poem to Dr. Elias Weld of Haverhill, Massachusetts, to whose kindness I was much indebted in my boyhood. He was the one cultivated man in the neighborhood. His small but well-chosen library was placed at my disposal. He is the 'wise old doctor' of Snow-Bound.

Count François de Vipart with his cousin Joseph Rochemont de Poyen came to the United States in the early part of the present century. They took up their residence at Rocks Village on the Merrimac, where they both married. The wife of Count Vipart was Mary Ingalls, who, as my father remembered her, was a very lovely young girl. Her wedding dress, as described by a lady still living, was 'pink satin with an overdress of white lace, and white satin slippers.' She died in less than a year after her marriage. Her husband returned to his native country. He lies buried in the family tomb of the Viparts at Bordeaux.¹⁸

I know not, Time and Space so intervene,
Whether, still waiting with a trust serene,
Thou bearest up thy fourscore years and ten,

Or, called at last, art now Heaven's citizen;
But, here or there, a pleasant thought of
thee,

5

Like an old friend, all day has been
with me.

The shy, still boy, for whom thy kindly
hand

Smoothed his hard pathway to the wonder-
land

Of thought and fancy, in gray manhood yet
Keeps green the memory of his early debt.

To-day, when truth and falsehood speak their words

11

Through hot-lipped cannon and the teeth
of swords,

Listening with quickened heart and ear
intent

To each sharp clause of that stern argument,

I still can hear at times a softer note
Of the old pastoral music round me float,

15

While through the hot gleam of our civil strife	Over the wooded northern ridge,
Looms the green mirage of a simpler life.	Between its houses brown,	50
As, at his alien post, the sentinel	To the dark tunnel of the bridge
Drops the old bucket in the homestead well,	The street comes straggling down.
And hears old voices in the winds that toss	You catch a glimpse, through birch and pine,
Above his head the live-oak's beard of moss,	Of gable, roof, and porch,
So, in our trial-time, and under skies	The tavern with its swinging sign,	55
Shadowed by swords like Islam's paradise,	The sharp horn of the church.
I wait and watch, and let my fancy stray	The river's steel-blue crescent curves
To milder scenes and youth's Arcadian day;	To meet, in ebb and flow,
And howe'er the pencil dipped in dreams	The single broken wharf that serves
Shades the brown woods or tints the sunset streams,	For sloop and gundelow.	60
The country doctor in the foreground seems,	With salt sea-scents along its shores
Whose ancient sulky down the village lanes	The heavy hay-boats crawl,
Dragged, like a war-car, captive ills and pains.	The long antennæ of their oars
I could not paint the scenery of my song,	In lazy rise and fall.
Mindless of one who looked thereon so long;	Along the gray abutment's wall	65
Who, night and day, on duty's lonely round,	The idle shad-net dries;
Made friends o' the woods and rocks, and knew the sound	The toll-man in his cobbler's stall
Of each small brook, and what the hill-side trees	Sits smoking with closed eyes.
Said to the winds that touched their leafy keys;	You hear the pier's low undertone
Who saw so keenly and so well could paint	Of waves that chafe and gnaw;	70
The village-folk, with all their humors quaint,—	You start,—a skipper's horn is blown
The parson ambling on his wall-eyed roan,	To raise the creaking draw.
Grave and erect, with white hair backward blown;	At times a blacksmith's anvil sounds
The tough old boatman, half amphibious grown;	With slow and sluggard beat,
The muttering witch-wife of the gossip's tale,	Or stage-coach on its dusty rounds	75
And the loud straggler levying his black-mail,—	Wakes up the staring street.
Old customs, habits, superstitions, fears, 45	A place for idle eyes and ears,
All that lies buried under fifty years.	A cobwebbed nook of dreams;
To thee, as is most fit, I bring my lay,	Left by the stream whose waves are years
And, grateful, own the debt I cannot pay.	The stranded village seems.	80
	And there, like other moss and rust,
	The native dweller clings,
	And keeps, in uninquiring trust,
	The old, dull round of things.
	The fisher drops his patient lines,	85
	The farmer sows his grain,
	Content to hear the murmuring pines
	Instead of railroad train.
	Go where, along the tangled steep
	That slopes against the west,	90
	The hamlet's buried idlers sleep
	In still profounder rest.

Throw back the locust's flowery plume, The birch's pale-green scarf, And break the web of brier and bloom 95 From name and epitaph.	How sweet, when summer's day was o'er, His violin's mirth and wail, The walk on pleasant Newbury's shore, The river's moonlit sail ! 14c
A simple muster-roll of death, Of pomp and romance shorn, The dry, old names that common breath Has cheapened and outworn. 100	Ah ! life is brief, though love be long ; The altar and the bier, The burial hymn and bridal song, Were both in one short year !
Yet pause by one low mound, and part The wild vines o'er it laced, And read the words by rustic art Upon its headstone traced.	Her rest is quiet on the hill, 145 Beneath the locust's bloom ; Far off her lover sleeps as still Within his scutcheon'd tomb.
Haply yon white-haired villager 105 Of fourscore years can say What means the noble name of her Who sleeps with common clay.	The Gascon lord, the village maid, In death still clasp their hands ; 150 The love that levels rank and grade Unites their severed lands.
An exile from the Gascon land Found refuge here and rest, 110 And loved, of all the village band, Its fairest and its best.	What matter whose the hillside grave, Or whose the blazoned stone ? Forever to her western wave 155 Shall whisper blue Garonne !
He knelt with her on Sabbath morns, He worshipped through her eyes, And on the pride that doubts and scorns Stole in her faith's surprise. 116	O Love !—so hallowing every soil That gives thy sweet flower room, Wherever, nursed by ease or toil, The human heart takes bloom !— 160
Her simple daily life he saw By homeliest duties tried, In all things by an untaught law Of fitness justified. 120	Plant of lost Eden, from the sod Of sinful earth unripen, White blossom of the trees of God Dropped down to us from heaven !—
For her his rank aside he laid ; He took the hue and tone Of lowly life and toil, and made Her simple ways his own.	This tangled waste of mound and stone 165 Is holy for thy sake ; A sweetness which is all thy own Breathes out from fern and brake.
Yet still, in gay and careless ease, 125 To harvest-field or dance He brought the gentle courtesies, The nameless grace of France.	And while ancestral pride shall twine The Gascon's tomb with flowers, 170 Fall sweetly here, O song of mine, With summer's bloom and showers !
And she who taught him love not less From him she loved in turn 130 Caught in her sweet unconsciousness What love is quick to learn.	And let the lines that severed seem Unite again in thee, As western wave and Gallic stream 175 Are mingled in one sea !
Each grew to each in pleased accord, Nor knew the gazing town If she looked upward to her lord 135 Or he to her looked down.	1863.

AMONG THE HILLS.

This poem, when originally published, was dedicated to Annie Fields, wife of the distinguished publisher, James T. Fields, of Boston, in grateful acknowledgment of the strength and inspiration I have found in her friendship and sympathy.

The poem in its first form was entitled The Wife: an Idyl of Bearcamp Water, and appeared in The Atlantic Monthly for January, 1868. When I published the volume Among the Hills, in December of the same year, I expanded the Prelude and filled out also the outlines of the story.

PRELUDE.

ALONG the roadside, like the flowers of
gold
That tawny Incas for their gardens
wrought,
Heavy with sunshine droops the goldenrod,
And the red pennons of the cardinal-
flowers
Hang motionless upon their upright
staves. 5
The sky is hot and hazy, and the wind, Wing-weary with its long flight from the south,
Unfelt; yet, closely scanned, yon maple
leaf
With faintest motion, as one stirs in
dreams,
Confesses it. The locust by the wall 10
Stabs the noon-silence with his sharp alarm.
A single hay-cart down the dusty road
Creaks slowly, with its driver fast asleep
On the load's top. Against the neighboring hill,
Huddled along the stone wall's shady
side, 15
The sheep show white, as if a snowdrift
still Defied the dog-star. Through the open
door
A drowsy smell of flowers—gray helio-trope,
And white sweet clover, and shy mignonette—

Comes faintly in, and silent chorus lends
To the pervading symphony of peace. 21

No time is this for hands long over-worn
To task their strength: and (unto Him be praise

Who giveth quietness!) the stress and
strain

Of years that did the work of centuries 25
Have ceased, and we can draw our breath
once more

Freely and full. So, as yon harvesters Make glad their nooning underneath the elms

With tale and riddle and old snatch of
song,

I lay aside grave themes, and idly turn 30
The leaves of memory's sketch-book, dreaming o'er

Old summer pictures of the quiet hills,
And human life, as quiet, at their feet.

And yet not idly all. A farmer's son Proud of field-lore and harvest craft, and feeling 35

All their fine possibilities, how rich
And restful even poverty and toil

Become when beauty, harmony, and love
Sit at their humble hearth as angels sat

At evening in the patriarch's tent, when
man 40

Makes labor noble, and his farmer's frock
The symbol of a Christian chivalry

Tender and just and generous to her
Who clothes with grace all duty; still,
I know

Too well the picture has another side,— 45
How wearily the grind of toil goes on

Where love is wanting, how the eye and ear
And heart are starved amidst the plenitude

Of nature, and how hard and colorless
Is life without an atmosphere. I look 50

Across the lapse of half a century,
And call to mind old homesteads, where no flower

Told that the spring had come, but evil
weeds,

Nightshade and rough-leaved burdock in the place

Of the sweet doorway greeting of the rose

And honeysuckle, where the house walls
seemed 56
Blistering in sun, without a tree or vine
To cast the tremulous shadow of its leaves Across the curtainless windows, from whose panes
Fluttered the signal rags of shiftlessness.
Within, the cluttered kitchen floor, unwashed 61
(Broom-clean I think they called it); the best room
Stifling with cellar-damp, shut from the air
In hot midsummer, bookless, pictureless
Save the inevitable sampler hung 65
Over the fireplace, or a mourning piece,
A green-haired woman, peony-cheeked,
beneath
Impossible willows; the wide-throated hearth
Bristling with faded pine-boughs half concealing
The piled-up rubbish at the chimney's
back; 70
And, in sad keeping with all things about
them,
Shrill, querulous women, sour and sullen
men,
Untidy, loveless, old before their time,
With scarce a human interest save their
own
Monotonous round of small economies, 75
Or the poor scandal of the neighborhood;
Blind to the beauty everywhere revealed,
Treading the May-flowers with regardless
feet;
For them the song-sparrow and the bobo-link
Sang not, nor winds made music in the
leaves; 80
For them in vain October's holocaust Burned, gold and crimson, over all the
hills,
The sacramental mystery of the woods.
Church-goers, fearful of the unseen
Powers,
But grumbling over pulpit-tax and pew-
rent, 85
Saving, as shrewd economists, their souls
And winter pork with the least possible outlay
Of salt and sanctity; in daily life

Showing as little actual comprehension
Of Christian charity and love and duty,
As if the Sermon on the Mount had
been 91
Outdated like a last year's almanac:
Rich in broad woodlands and in half-tilled fields,
And yet so pinched and bare and comfort-
less,
The veriest straggler limping on his rounds, 95
The sun and air his sole inheritance,
Laughed at a poverty that paid its taxes,
And hugged his rags in self-complacency!
Not such should be the homesteads of a land
Where whoso wisely wills and acts may dwell 100
As king and lawgiver, in broad-acred
state,
With beauty, art, taste, culture, books, to make
His hour of leisure richer than a life
Of fourscore to the barons of old time,
Our yeoman should be equal to his home
Set in the fair, green valleys, purple walled, 106
A man to match his mountains, not to creep
Dwarfed and abased below them. I would fain
In this light way (of which I needs must
own
With the knife-grinder of whom Canning
sings, 110
'Story, God bless you! I have none to tell you!')

Invite the eye to see and heart to feel
The beauty and the joy within their reach,—
Home, and home loves, and the beatitudes
Of nature free to all. Haply in years 115
That wait to take the places of our own, Heard where some breezy balcony looks
down
On happy homes, or where the lake in the moon
Sleeps dreaming of the mountains, fair as Ruth,

In the old Hebrew pastoral, at the feet 120
Of Boaz, even this simple lay of mine
May seem the burden of a prophecy,
Finding its late fulfilment in a change
Slow as the oak's growth, lifting manhood
up

Through broader culture, finer manners,
love, 125

And reverence, to the level of the hills.

O Golden Age, whose light is of the dawn,
And not of sunset, forward, not behind,
Flood the new heavens and earth, and with thee bring

All the old virtues, whatsoever things 130
Are pure and honest and of good repute,
But add thereto whatever bard has sung
Or seer has told of when in trance and dream

They saw the Happy Isles of prophecy!
Let Justice hold her scale, and Truth divide 135

Between the right and wrong; but give
the heart

The freedom of its fair inheritance;
Let the poor prisoner, cramped and starved so long,

At Nature's table feast his ear and eye
With joy and wonder; let all harmonies
Of sound, form, color, motion, wait upon
The princely guest, whether in soft attire
Of leisure clad, or the coarse frock of toil,
And, lending life to the dead form of faith,
Give human nature reverence for the sake 145

Of One who bore it, making it divine
With the ineffable tenderness of God;
Let common need, the brotherhood of
prayer,

The heirship of an unknown destiny,
The unsolved mystery round about us,
make 150

A man more precious than the gold of Ophir.

Sacred, inviolate, unto whom all things Should minister, as outward types and signs

Of the eternal beauty which fulfils 154
The one great purpose of creation, Love,
The sole necessity of Earth and Heaven!

For weeks the clouds had raked the hills
And vexed the vales with raining,
And all the woods were sad with mist,
And all the brooks complaining. 160

At last, a sudden night-storm tore
The mountain veils asunder,
And swept the valleys clean before
The besom of the thunder.

Through Sandwich notch the west-wind sang 165

Good morrow to the cotter;
And once again Chocorua's horn
Of shadow pierced the water.

Above his broad lake Ossipee,
Once more the sunshine wearing, 170
Stooped, tracing on that silver shield
His grim armorial bearing.

Clear drawn against the hard blue sky,
The peaks had winter's keenness;
And, close on autumn's frost, the vales
Had more than June's fresh green-
ness. 175

Again the sodden forest floors
With golden lights were checkered,
Once more rejoicing leaves in wind
And sunshine danced and flickered. 180

It was as if the summer's late
Atoning for its sadness
Had borrowed every season's charm
To end its days in gladness.

I call to mind those banded vales 185
Of shadow and of shining,
Through which, my hostess at my side,
I drove in day's declining.

We held our sideling way above
The river's whitening shallows, 190
By homesteads old, with wide-flung barns
Swept through and through by swallows;

By maple orchards, belts of pine
And larches climbing darkly
The mountain slopes, and, over all, 195
The great peaks rising starkly.

You should have seen that long hill-range With gaps of brightness riven,— How through each pass and hollow streamed The purpling lights of heaven,— 200	Her air, her smile, her motions, told Of womanly completeness; A music as of household songs Was in her voice of sweetness. 240
Rivers of gold-mist flowing down From far celestial fountains,— The great sun flaming through the rifts Beyond the wall of mountains!	Not fair alone in curve and line, But something more and better, The secret charm eluding art, Its spirit, not its letter;—
We paused at last where home-bound cows 205 Brought down the pasture's treasure, And in the barn the rhythmic flails Beat out a harvest measure.	An inborn grace that nothing lacked 245 Of culture or appliance,— The warmth of genial courtesy, The calm of self-reliance.
We heard the night-hawk's sullen plunge, The crow his tree-mates calling: 210 The shadows lengthening down the slopes About our feet were falling.	Before her queenly womanhood How dared our hostess utter 250 The paltry errand of her need To buy her fresh-churned butter?
And through them smote the level sun In broken lines of splendor, Touched the gray rocks and made the green 215 Of the shorn grass more tender.	She led the way with housewife pride, Her goodly store disclosing, Full tenderly the golden balls 255 With practised hands disposing.
The maples bending o'er the gate, Their arch of leaves just tinted With yellow warmth, the golden glow Of coming autumn hinted. 220	Then, while along the western hills We watched the changeful glory Of sunset, on our homeward way, I heard her simple story. 260
Keen white between the farm-house showed, And smiled on porch and trellis, The fair democracy of flowers That equals cot and palace.	The early crickets sang; the stream Plashed through my friend's narration: Her rustic patois of the hills Lost in my free translation.
And weaving garlands for her dog, 225 'Twixt chidings and caresses, A human flower of childhood shook The sunshine from her tresses.	'More wise,' she said, 'than those who swarm 265 Our hills in middle summer, She came, when June's first roses blow, To greet the early comer.
On either hand we saw the signs Of fancy and of shrewdness, 230 Where taste had wound its arms of vines Round thrift's uncomely rudeness.	'From school and ball and rout she came, The city's fair, pale daughter, 270 To drink the wine of mountain air Beside the Bearcamp Water.
The sun-brown farmer in his frock Shook hands, and called to Mary: Bare-armed, as Juno might, she came, 235 White-aproned from her dairy.	'Her step grew firmer on the hills That watch our homesteads over; On cheek and lip, from summer fields, 275 She caught the bloom of clover.
	'For health comes sparkling in the streams From cool Chocorua stealing: There's iron in our Northern winds; Our pines are trees of healing. 280

'She sat beneath the broad-armed elms
That skirt the mowing meadow,
And watched the gentle west-wind weave
The grass with shine and shadow.

'Beside her, from the summer heat 285
To share her grateful screening,
With forehead bared, the farmer stood,
Upon his pitchfork leaning.

'Framed in its damp, dark locks, his face
Had nothing mean or common,— 290
Strong, manly, true, the tenderness
And pride beloved of woman.

'She looked up, glowing with the health
The country air had brought her,
And, laughing, said: "You lack a wife, 295
Your mother lacks a daughter.

"To mend your frock and bake your bread
You do not need a lady:
Be sure among these brown old homes
Is some one waiting ready,— 300

"Some fair, sweet girl with skilful hand
And cheerful heart for treasure,
Who never played with ivory keys,
Or danced the polka's measure."

'He bent his black brows to a frown, 305
He set his white teeth tightly.

"'Tis well," he said, "for one like you
To choose for me so lightly.

"You think, because my life is rude
I take no note of sweetness: 310
I tell you love has naught to do
With meetness or unmeetness.

"Itself its best excuse, it asks
No leave of pride or fashion
When silken zone or homespun frock 315
It stirs with throbs of passion.

"You think me deaf and blind: you bring
Your winning graces hither
As free as if from cradle-time
We two had played together. 320

"You tempt me with your laughing eyes,
Your cheek of sundown's blushes,
A motion as of waving grain,
A music as of thrushes.

"The plaything of your summer sport,
The spells you weave around me 325
You cannot at your will undo,
Nor leave me as you found me.

"You go as lightly as you came,
Your life is well without me; 330
What care you that these hills will close
Like prison-walls about me?

"No mood is mine to seek a wife,
Or daughter for my mother:
Who loves you loses in that love 335
All power to love another!

"I dare your pity or your scorn,
With pride your own exceeding;
I fling my heart into your lap
Without a word of pleading." 340

'She looked up in his face of pain
So archly, yet so tender:
"And if I lend you mine," she said,
"Will you forgive the lender?"

"Nor frock nor tan can hide the man; 345
And see you not, my farmer,
How weak and fond a woman waits
Behind the silken armor?"

"I love you: on that love alone,
And not my worth, presuming, 350
Will you not trust for summer fruit
The tree in May-day blooming?"

'Alone the hangbird overhead,
His hair-swung cradle straining,
Looked down to see love's miracle,— 355
The giving that is gaining.

'And so the farmer found a wife,
His mother found a daughter:
There looks no happier home than hers
On pleasant Bearcamp Water. 360

'Flowers spring to blossom where she walks
The careful ways of duty;
Our hard, stiff lines of life with her
Are flowing curves of beauty.

- 'Our homes are cheerier for her sake, 365
Our door-yards brighter blooming,
And all about the social air
Is sweeter for her coming.
- 'Unspoken homilies of peace
Her daily life is preaching; 370
The still refreshment of the dew
Is her unconscious teaching.
- 'And never tenderer hand than hers
Unknits the brow of ailing; 375
Her garments to the sick man's ear
Have music in their trailing.
- 'And when, in pleasant harvest moons,
The youthful huskers gather,
Or sleigh-drives on the mountain ways
Defy the winter weather,— 380
- 'In sugar-camps, when south and warr
The winds of March are blowing,
And sweetly from its thawing veins
The maple's blood is flowing,—
- 'In summer, where some lilled pond 385
Its virgin zone is baring,
Or where the ruddy autumn fire
Lights up the apple-paring, —
- 'The coarseness of a ruder time
Her finer mirth displaces, 390
A subtler sense of pleasure fills
Each rustic sport she graces.
- 'Her presence lends its warmth and health
To all who come before it.
If woman lost us Eden, such 395
As she alone restore it.
- 'For larger life and wiser aims
The farmer is her debtor;
Who holds to his another's heart
Must needs be worse or better. 400
- 'Through her his civic service shows
A purer-toned ambition;
No double consciousness divides
The man and politician.
- 'In party's doubtful ways he trusts 405
Her instincts to determine;
At the loud polls, the thought of her
Recalls Christ's Mountain Sermon.
- 'He owns her logic of the heart,
And wisdom of unreason, 410
Supplying, while he doubts and weighs,
The needed word in season.
- 'He sees with pride her richer thought,
Her fancy's freer ranges; 415
And love thus deepened to respect
Is proof against all changes.
- 'And if she walks at ease in ways
His feet are slow to travel,
And if she reads with cultured eyes
What his may scarce unravel, 420
- 'Still clearer, for her keener sight
Of beauty and of wonder,
He learns the meaning of the hills
He dwelt from childhood under.
- 'And higher, warmed with summer lights,
Or winter-crowned and hoary, 425
The ridged horizon lifts for him
Its inner veils of glory.
- 'He has his own free, bookless lore,
The lessons nature taught him, 430
The wisdom which the woods and hills
And toiling men have brought him:
- 'The steady force of will whereby
Her flexile grace seems sweeter;
The sturdy counterpoise which makes 435
Her woman's life completer;
- 'A latent fire of soul which lacks
No breath of love to fan it;
And wit, that, like his native brooks,
Plays over solid granite. 440
- 'How dwarfed against his manliness
She sees the poor pretension,
The wants, the aims, the follies, born
Of fashion and convention!
- 'How life behind its accidents 445
Stands strong and self-sustaining,
The human fact transcending all
The losing and the gaining.
- 'And so in grateful interchange
Of teacher and of hearer, 450
Their lives their true distinctness keep While daily drawing nearer.

'And if the husband or the wife
In home's strong light discovers
Such slight defaults as failed to meet 455
The blinded eyes of lovers,

'Why need we care to ask?—who dreams
Without their thorns of roses,
Or wonders that the truest steel
The readiest spark discloses? 460

'For still in mutual sufferance lies
The secret of true living;
Love scarce is love that never knows
The sweetness of forgiving.

'We send the Squire to General Court,
He takes his young wife thither; 466
No prouder man election day
Rides through the sweet June weather.

'He sees with eyes of manly trust
All hearts to her inclining; 470
Not less for him his household light
That others share its shining.'

Thus, while my hostess spake, there grew
Before me, warmer tinted
And outlined with a tenderer grace, 475
The picture that she hinted.

The sunset smouldered as we drove
Beneath the deep hill-shadows.
Below us wreaths of white fog walked
Like ghosts the haunted meadows. 480

Sounding the summer night, the stars
Dropped down their golden plummets;
The pale arc of the Northern lights
Rose o'er the mountain summits,

Until, at last, beneath its bridge, 485
We heard the Bearcamp flowing,
And saw across the mapled lawn
The welcome home-lights glowing.

And, musing on the tale I heard,
'T were well, thought I, if often 490
To rugged farm-life came the gift
To harmonize and soften;

If more and more we found the troth
Of fact and fancy plighted,
And culture's charm and labor's strength
In rural homes united,— 496

The simple life, the homely hearth,
With beauty's sphere surrounding,
And blessing toil where toil abounds
With graces more abounding. 500

THE DOLE OF JARL THORKELL.

THE land was pale with famine
And racked with fever-pain;
The frozen fiords were fishless,
The earth withheld her grain.

Men saw the boding Fylgja 5
Before them come and go,
And, through their dreams, the Urdar-
moon
From west to east sailed slow!

Jarl Thorkell of Thevera
At Yule-time made his vow; 10
On Rykdal's holy Doom-stone
He slew to Frey his cow.

To bounteous Frey he slew her;
To Skuld, the younger Norn,
Who watches over birth and death, 15
He gave her calf unborn.

And his little gold-haired daughter
Took up the sprinkling-rod,
And smeared with blood the temple
And the wide lips of the god. 20

Hoarse below, the winter water
Ground its ice-blocks o'er and o'er;
Jets of foam, like ghosts of dead waves,
Rose and fell along the shore.

The red torch of the Jokul, 25
Aloft in icy space,
Shone down on the bloody Horg-stones
And the statue's carven face.

And closer round and grimmer
Beneath its baleful light 30
The Jotun shapes of mountains
Came crowding through the night.

The gray-haired Hersir trembled
As a flame by wind is blown;
A weird power moved his white lips, 35
And their voice was not his own!

'The Æsir thirst!' he muttered;
'The gods must have more blood
Before the tun shall blossom
Or fish shall fill the flood. 40

'The Æsir thirst and hunger,
And hence our blight and ban;
The mouths of the strong gods water
For the flesh and blood of man!

'Whom shall we give the strong ones? 45
Not warriors, sword on thigh;
But let the nursling infant
And bedrid old man die.'

'So be it!' cried the young men,
'There needs nor doubt nor parle.' 50
But, knitting hard his red brows,
In silence stood the Jarl.

A sound of woman's weeping
At the temple door was heard,
But the old men bowed their white heads,
And answered not a word. 56

Then the Dream-wife of Thingvalla,
A Vala young and fair,
Sang softly, stirring with her breath
The veil of her loose hair. 60

She sang: 'The winds from Alfheim
Bring never sound of strife;
The gifts for Frey the meetest
Are not of death, but life.

'He loves the grass-green meadows, 65
The grazing kine's sweet breath;
He loathes your bloody Horg-stones,
Your gifts that smell of death.

'No wrong by wrong is righted,
No pain is cured by pain;
The blood that smokes from Doom-rings
Falls back in redder rain. 70

'The gods are what you make them,
As earth shall Asgard prove;
And hate will come of hating, 75
And love will come of love.

'Make dole of skyr and black bread
That old and young may live;
And look to Frey for favor
When first like Frey you give. 80

'Even now o'er Njord's sea-meadows
The summer dawn begins:
The tun shall have its harvest,
The fiord its glancing firs.'

Then up and swore Jarl Thorkell: 85
'By Gimli and by Hel,
O Vala of Thingvalla,
Thou singest wise and well!

'Too dear the Æsir's favors
Bought with our children's lives; 90
Better die than shame in living
Our mothers and our wives.

'The full shall give his portion
To him who hath most need;
Of curdled skyr and black bread, 95
Be daily dole decreed.'

He broke from off his neck-chain
Three links of beaten gold;
And each man, at his bidding,
Brought gifts for young and old. 100

Then mothers nursed their children,
And daughters fed their sires,
And Health sat down with Plenty
Before the next Yule fires.

The Horg-stones stand in Rykdal; 105
The Doom-ring still remains;
But the snows of a thousand winters
Have washed away the stains.

Christ ruleth now; the Æsir
Have found their twilight dim; 110
And, wiser than she dreamed, of old
The Vala sang of Him!

THE TWO RABBINS.

THE Rabbi Nathan twoscore years and
ten

Walked blameless through the evil world,
and then,

Just as the almond blossomed in his hair,
Met a temptation all too strong to bear,
And miserably sinned. So, adding not 5 Falsehood to guilt, he left his seat, and
taught

No more among the elders, but went out
 From the great congregation girt about
 With sackcloth, and with ashes on his
 head,
 Making his gray locks grayer. Long he prayed, 10
 Smiting his breast; then, as the Book he
 laid
 Open before him for the Bath-Col's choice,
 Pausing to hear that Daughter of a Voice,
 Behold the royal preacher's words: 'A friend
 Loveth at all times, yea, unto the end; 15
 And for the evil day thy brother lives.'
 Marvelling, he said: 'It is the Lord who gives
 Counsel in need. At Ecbatana dwells
 Rabbi Ben Isaac, who all men excels
 In righteousness and wisdom, as the trees
 Of Lebanon the small weeds that the
 bees 21
 Bow with their weight. I will arise, and
 lay
 My sins before him.'

* And he went his way Barefooted, fasting long, with many
 prayers;
 But even as one who, followed unawares,
 Suddenly in the darkness feels a hand 26
 Thrill with its touch his own, and his cheek fanned
 By odors subtly sweet, and whispers near
 Of words he loathes, yet cannot choose but hear,
 So, while the Rabbi journeyed, chanting
 low 30
 The wail of David's penitential woe,
 Before him still the old temptation came,
 And mocked him with the motion and the
 shame
 Of such desires that, shuddering, he abhorred
 Himself; and, crying mightily to the
 Lord 35
 To free his soul and cast the demon out,
 Smote with his staff the blankness round about.

At length, in the low light of a spent day,
 The towers of Ecbatana far away

Rose on the desert's rim; and Nathan,
 faint 40
 And footsore, pausing where for some dead saint
 The faith of Islam reared a domed tomb,
 Saw some one kneeling in the shadow,
 whom
 He greeted kindly: 'May the Holy One Answer thy prayers, O stranger!' Whereupon 45
 The shape stood up with a loud cry, and
 then,
 Clasped in each other's arms, the two gray
 men
 Wept, praising Him whose gracious providence
 Made their paths one. But straightway, as the sense
 Of his transgression smote him, Nathan tore 50
 Himself away: 'O friend beloved, no
 more
 Worthy am I to touch thee, for I came,
 Foul from my sins, to tell thee all my
 shame.
 Haply thy prayers, since naught availeth
 mine,
 May purge my soul, and make it white like thine. 55
 Pity me, O Ben Isaac, I have sinned!'
 Awestruck Ben Isaac stood. The desert
 wind
 Blew his long mantle backward, laying bare
 The mournful secret of his shirt of hair.
 'I too, O friend, if not in act,' he said, 60
 'In thought have verily sinned. Hast thou not read,
 'Better the eye should see than that desire Should wander?' Burning with a hidden fire
 That tears and prayers quench not, I come to thee
 For pity and for help, as thou to me. 65
 Pray for me, O my friend!' But Nathan
 cried,
 'Pray thou for me, Ben Isaac!'

Side by side
 In the low sunshine by the turban stone
 They knelt; each made his brother's woe
 his own,

Forgetting, in the agony and stress 70
Of pitying love, his claim of selfishness;
Peace, for his friend besought, his own became;
His prayers were answered in another's
name;
And, when at last they rose up to embrace,
Each saw God's pardon in his brother's face! 75

Long after, when his headstone gathered
moss,
Traced on the targum-marge of Onkelos
In Rabbi Nathan's hand these words were read:
*'Hope not the cure of sin till Self is dead;
Forget it in love's service, and the debt 80
Thou canst not pay the angels shall forget;
Heaven's gate is shut to him who comes
alone;
Save thou a soul, and it shall save thy
own!'*

NOREMBEGA.

Norembega, or Norimbegue, is the name given by early French fishermen and explorers to a fabulous country south of Cape Breton, first discovered by Verrazzani in 1524. It was supposed to have a magnificent city of the same name on a great river, probably the Penobscot.
The site of this barbaric city is laid down on a map published at Antwerp in 1570. In 1604
Champlain sailed in search of the Northern Eldorado, twenty-two leagues up the Penobscot from the Isle Haute. He supposed the river to be that of Norembega, but wisely came to the conclusion that those travellers who told of the great city had never seen it. He saw no evidences of anything like civilization, but mentions the finding of a cross, very old and mossy, in the woods.

THE winding way the serpent takes
The mystic water took,
From where, to count its beaded lakes,
The forest sped its brook.

A narrow space 'twixt shore and shore, 5
For sun or stars to fall,
While evermore, behind, before,
Closed in the forest wall.

The dim wood hiding underneath
Wan flowers without a name; 10
Life tangled with decay and death,
League after league the same.

Unbroken over swamp and hill
The rounding shadow lay,
Save where the river cut at will 15
A pathway to the day.

Beside that track of air and light,
Weak as a child unweaned,
At shut of day a Christian knight 20
Upon his henchman leaned.

The embers of the sunset's fires
Along the clouds burned down;
'I see,' he said, 'the domes and spires
Of Norembega town.'

'Alack! the domes, O master mine, 25
Are golden clouds on high;
Yon spire is but the branchless pine
That cuts the evening sky.'

'Oh, hush and hark! What sounds are
these
But chants and holy hymns?' 30
'Thou hear'st the breeze that stirs the
trees
Through all their leafy limbs.'

'Is it a chapel bell that fills
The air with its low tone?'
'Thou hear'st the tinkle of the rills, 35
The insect's vesper drone.'

'The Christ be praised!—He sets for me
A blessed cross in sight!'
'Now, nay, 't is but yon blasted tree 40
With two gaunt arms outright!'

'Be it wind so sad or tree so stark,
It mattereth not, my knave;
Methinks to funeral hymns I hark,
The cross is for my grave!

'My life is sped; I shall not see 45
My home-set sails again;
The sweetest eyes of Normandie
Shall watch for me in vain.

'Yet onward still to ear and eye
The baffling marvel calls;
I fain would look before I die
On Norembega's walls.

50

'So, haply, it shall be thy part
At Christian feet to lay
The mystery of the desert's heart
My dead hand plucked away.

55

'Leave me an hour of rest; go thou
And look from yonder heights;
Perchance the valley even now
Is starred with city lights.'

60

The henchman climbed the nearest hill,
He saw nor tower nor town,
But, through the drear woods, lone and
still,
The river rolling down.

He heard the stealthy feet of things
Whose shapes he could not see,
A flutter as of evil wings,
The fall of a dead tree.

65

The pines stood black against the moon,
A sword of fire beyond;
He heard the wolf howl, and the loon
Laugh from his reedy pond.

70

He turned him back: 'O master dear,
We are but men misled;
And thou hast sought a city here
To find a grave instead.'

75

'As God shall will! what matters where
A true man's cross may stand,
So Heaven be o'er it here as there
In pleasant Norman land?'

80

'These woods, perchance, no secret hide
Of lordly tower and hall;
Yon river in its wanderings wide
Has washed no city wall;

'Yet mirrored in the sullen stream
The holy stars are given:
Is Norembega, then, a dream
Whose waking is in Heaven?'

85

'No builded wonder of these lands
My weary eyes shall see;
A city never made with hands
Alone awaiteth me—

90

'Urbs Syon mystica;' I see
Its mansions passing fair,
'Conditæ celo;' let me be,
Dear Lord, a dweller there!'

95

Above the dying exile hung
The vision of the bard,
As faltered on his failing tongue
The song of good Bernard.

100

The henchman dug at dawn a grave
Beneath the hemlocks brown,
And to the desert's keeping gave
The lord of fief and town.

Years after, when the Sieur Champlain
Sailed up the unknown stream,
And Norembega proved again
A shadow and a dream,

106

He found the Norman's nameless grave
Within the hemlock's shade,
And, stretching wide its arms to save,
The sign that God had made,

110

The cross-boughed tree that marked the spot
And made it holy ground:
He needs the earthly city not
Who hath the heavenly found.

MIRIAM.

TO FREDERICK A. P. BARNARD.

[When Whittier was an editor in Hartford, Mr. Barnard, afterward President of Columbia College, was a teacher in the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb in that place. Both men were at the time especially interested in Eastern history and romance.]

The years are many since, in youth and hope,
Under the Charter Oak, our horoscope
We drew thick-studded with all favoring stars.

Now, with gray beards, and faces seamed
with scars
From life's hard battle, meeting once
again,

5

Wesmile, half sadly, over dreams so vain;
Knowing, at last, that it is not in man
Who walketh to direct his steps, or plan
His permanent house of life. Alike we loved

The muses' haunts, and all our fancies
 moved 10
 To measures of old song. How since that
 day
 Our feet have parted from the path that
 lay
 So fair before us! Rich, from lifelong search
 Of truth, within thy Academic porch
 Thou sittest now, lord of a realm of fact,
 Thy servitors the sciences exact; 16
 Still listening with thy hand on Nature's
 keys,
 To hear the Samian's 'spherical harmonies
 And rhythm of law. I, called from dream and song,
 Thank God! so early to a strife so long, 20
 That, ere it closed, the black, abundant
 hair
 Of boyhood rested silver-sown and spare
 On manhood's temples, now at sunset-
 chime
 Tread with fond feet the path of morning
 time,
 And if perchance too late I linger where
 The flowers have ceased to blow, and trees are bare, 26
 Thou, wiser in thy choice, wilt scarcely
 blame
 The friend who shields his folly with thy
 name.

AMESBURY, 10th mo., 1870.

One Sabbath day my friend and I
 After the meeting, quietly 30
 Passed from the crowded village lanes,
 White with dry dust for lack of rains,
 And climbed the neighboring slope, with
 feet
 Slackened and heavy from the heat,
 Although the day was wellnigh done, 35
 And the low angle of the sun
 Along the naked hillside cast
 Our shadows as of giants vast.
 We reached, at length, the topmost swell,
 Whence, either way, the green turf fell 40
 In terraces of nature down
 To fruit-hung orchards, and the town
 With white, pretenceless houses, tall
 Church-steeple, and, o'ershadowing all.

Huge mills whose windows had the look 45
 Of eager eyes that ill could brook
 The Sabbath rest. We traced the track
 Of the sea-seeking river back,
 Glistening for miles above its mouth,
 Through the long valley to the south, 50
 And, looking eastward, cool to view,
 Stretched the illimitable blue
 Of ocean, from its curved coast-line;
 Sombred and still, the warm sunshine
 Filled with pale gold-dust all the reach 55
 Of slumberous woods from hill to beach,—
 Slanted on walls of thronged retreats
 From city toil and dusty streets,
 On grassy bluff, and dune of sand,
 And rocky islands miles from land; 60 Touched the far-glancing sails, and showed
 White lines of foam where long waves flowed
 Dumb in the distance. In the north,
 Dim through their misty hair, looked forth
 The space-dwarfed mountains to the sea,
 From mystery to mystery! 66

So, sitting on that green hill-slope,
 We talked of human life, its hope
 And fear, and unsolved doubts, and what
 It might have been, and yet was not. 70
 And, when at last the evening air
 Grew sweeter for the bells of prayer
 Ringing in steeples far below,
 We watched the people churchward go,
 Each to his place, as if thereon 75
 The true shekinah only shone;
 And my friend queried how it came
 To pass that they who owned the same
 Great Master still could not agree
 To worship Him in company. 80
 Then, broadening in his thought, he ran
 Over the whole vast field of man,—
 The varying forms of faith and creed
 That somehow served the holders' need;
 In which, unquestioned, undenied, 85
 Uncounted millions lived and died;
 The bibles of the ancient folk,
 Through which the heart of nations spoke;
 The old moralities which lent
 To home its sweetness and content, 90
 And rendered possible to bear
 The life of peoples everywhere:

And asked if we, who boast of light,
 Claim not a too exclusive right
 To truths which must for all be meant, 95
 Like rain and sunshine freely sent.
 In bondage to the letter still,
 We give it power to cramp and kill,—
 To tax God's fulness with a scheme
 Narrower than Peter's house-top dream,
 His wisdom and his love with plans 101
 Poor and inadequate as man's.
 It must be that He witnesses
 Somehow to all men that He is:
 That something of His saving grace 105
 Reaches the lowest of the race,
 Who, through strange creed and rite, may draw
 The hints of a diviner law.
 We walk in clearer light;—but then,
 Is He not God?—are they not men? 110
 Are His responsibilities
 For us alone and not for these?

And I made answer: 'Truth is one;
 And, in all lands beneath the sun,
 Whoso hath eyes to see may see 115
 The tokens of its unity.
 No scroll of creed its fulness wraps,
 We trace it not by school-boy maps,
 Free as the sun and air it is
 Of latitudes and boundaries. 120
 In Vedic verse, in dull Korán,
 Are messages of good to man;
 The angels to our Aryan sires
 Talked by the earliest household fires;
 The prophets of the elder day, 125
 The slant-eyed sages of Cathay,
 Read not the riddle all amiss
 Of higher life evolved from this.

'Nor doth it lessen what He taught,
 Or make the gospel Jesus brought 130
 Less precious, that His lips retold
 Some portion of that truth of old;
 Denying not the proven seers,
 The tested wisdom of the years;
 Confirming with His own impress 135
 The common law of righteousness.
 We search the world for truth; we cull
 The good, the pure, the beautiful,
 From graven stone and written scroll,
 From all old flower-fields of the soul; 140

And, weary seekers of the best,
 We come back laden from our quest,
 To find that all the sages said
 Is in the Book our mothers read,
 And all our treasure of old thought 145
 In His harmonious fulness wrought
 Who gathers in one sheaf complete
 The scattered blades of God's sown wheat,
 The common growth that maketh good
 His all-embracing Fatherhood. 150

'Wherever through the ages rise
 The altars of self-sacrifice,
 Where love its arms has opened wide,
 Or man for man has calmly died,
 I see the same white wings outspread 155
 That hovered o'er the Master's head!
 Up from undated time they come,
 The martyr souls of heathendom,
 And to His cross and passion bring
 Their fellowship of suffering. 160
 I trace His presence in the blind
 Pathetic gropings of my kind,—
 In prayers from sin and sorrow wrung,
 In cradle-hymns of life they sung,
 Each, in its measure, but a part 165
 Of the unmeasured Over-heart;
 And with a stronger faith confess
 The greater that it owns the less.
 Good cause it is for thankfulness
 That the world-blessing of His life 170
 With the long past is not at strife;
 That the great marvel of His death
 To the one order witnesseth,
 No doubt of changeless goodness wakes,
 No link of cause and sequence breaks, 175
 But, one with nature, rooted is
 In the eternal verities;
 Whereby, while differing in degree
 As finite from infinity,
 The pain and loss for others borne, 180
 Love's crown of suffering meekly worn,
 The life man giveth for his friend
 Becomes vicarious in the end;
 Their healing place in nature take,
 And make life sweeter for their sake. 185

'So welcome I from every source
 The tokens of that primal Force,
 Older than heaven itself, yet new
 As the young heart it reaches to,

Beneath whose steady impulse rolls 190
 The tidal wave of human souls;
 Guide, comforter, and inward word,
 The eternal spirit of the Lord!
 Nor fear I aught that science brings
 From searching through material things;
 Content to let its glasses prove, 195
 Not by the letter's oldness move,
 The myriad worlds on worlds that course
 The spaces of the universe;
 Since everywhere the Spirit walks 200
 The garden of the heart, and talks
 With man, as under Eden's trees,
 In all his varied languages.
 Why mourn above some hopeless flaw
 In the stone tables of the law, 205
 When scripture every day afresh
 Is traced on tablets of the flesh?
 By inward sense, by outward signs,
 God's presence still the heart divines;
 Through deepest joy of Him we learn, 210
 In sorest grief to Him we turn,
 And reason stoops its pride to share
 The child-like instinct of a prayer.'

And then, as is my wont, I told
 A story of the days of old, 215
 Not found in printed books,—in sooth,
 A fancy, with slight hint of truth,
 Showing how differing faiths agree
 In one sweet law of charity.
 Meanwhile the sky had golden grown, 220
 Our faces in its glory shone;
 But shadows down the valley swept,
 And gray below the ocean slept,
 As time and space I wandered o'er
 To tread the Mogul's marble floor, 225
 And see a fairer sunset fall
 On Jumna's wave and Agra's wall.

The good Shah Akbar (peace be his al-
 way !)
 Came forth from the Divan at close of
 day
 Bowed with the burden of his many cares,
 Worn with the hearing of unnumbered
 prayers, — 231
 Wild cries for justice, the importunate
 Appeals of greed and jealousy and hate,
 And all the strife of sect and creed and rite,
 Santon and Gourou waging holy fight: 235

For the wise monarch, claiming not to be Allah's avenger, left his people free,
 With a faint hope, his Book scarce justified,
 That all the paths of faith, though severed
 wide,
 O'er which the feet of prayerful reverence
 passed, 240
 Met at the gate of Paradise at last.

He sought an alcove of his cool hareem,
 Where, far beneath, he heard the Jumna's
 stream
 Lapse soft and low along his palace wall,
 And all about the cool sound of the fall 245
 Of fountains, and of water circling free
 Through marble ducts along the balcony;
 The voice of women in the distance sweet,
 And, sweeter still, of one who, at his
 feet,
 Soothed his tired ear with songs of a far
 land 250
 Where Tagus shatters on the salt sea-sand
 The mirror of its cork-grown hills of drouth
 And vales of vine, at Lisbon's harbor-mouth.

The date-palms rustled not; the peepul
 laid 254
 Its topmost boughs against the balustrade,
 Motionless as the mimic leaves and vines
 That, light and graceful as the shawldesigns
 Of Delhi or Umrirtsir, twined in stone;
 And the tired monarch, who aside had thrown
 The day's hard burden, sat from care
 apart, 260
 And let the quiet steal into his heart
 From the still hour. Below him Agra slept,
 By the long light of sunset overswept:
 The river flowing through a level land,
 By mango-groves and banks of yellow
 sand, 265
 Skirted with lime and orange, gay kiosks, Fountains at play, tall minarets of mosques,
 Fair pleasure-gardens, with their flowering trees
 Relieved against the mournful cypresses;

And, air-poised lightly as the blown sea-
foam, 270

The marble wonder of some holy dome
Hung a white moonrise over the still wood,
Glassing its beauty in a stiller flood.

Silent the monarch gazed, until the
night

Swift-falling hid the city from his sight;
Then to the woman at his feet he said: 276
'Tell me, O Miriam, something thou hast
read

In childhood of the Master of thy faith,
Whom Islam also owns. Our Prophet
saith:

"He was a true apostle, yea, a Word 280
And Spirit sent before me from the Lord."
Thus the Book witnesseth; and well I know

By what thou art, O dearest, it is so.
As the lute's tone the maker's hand
betrays,

The sweet disciple speaks her Master's
praise.' 285

Then Miriam, glad of heart, (for in some sort

She cherished in the Moslem's liberal court
The sweet traditions of a Christian child;
And, through her life of sense, the unde-filed

And chaste ideal of the sinless One 290
Gazed on her with an eye she might not shun,—

The sad, reproachful look of pity, born
Of love that hath no part in wrath or scorn,)

Began, with low voice and moist eyes, to tell

Of the all-loving Christ, and what befell
When the fierce zealots, thirsting for her
blood, 296

Dragged to His feet a shame of womanhood.

How, when His searching answer pierced within

Each heart, and touched the secret of its
sin,

And her accusers fled His face before, 300
He bade the poor one go and sin no
more.

And Akbar said, after a moment's
thought,

'Wise is the lesson by thy prophet
taught;

Woe unto him who judges and forgets
What hidden evil his own heart besets! 305

Something of this large charity I find
In all the sects that sever humankind;

I would to Allah that their lives agreed
More nearly with the lesson of their creed!

Those yellow Lamas who at Meerut pray
By wind and water power, and love to
say: 311

"He who forgiveth not shall, unforgiven,
Fail of the rest of Buddha," and who even Spare the black gnat that stings them, vex
my ears

With the poor hates and jealousies and fears 315

Nursed in their human hives. That lean, fierce priest

Of thy own people, (be his heart increased
By Allah's love!) his black robes smelling
yet

Of Goa's roasted Jews, have I not met Meek-faced, barefooted, crying in the
street 320

The saying of his prophet true and
sweet,—

"He who is merciful shall mercy meet!"

But, next day, so it chanced, as night
began

To fall, a murmur through the hareem ran
That one, recalling in her dusky face 325
The full-lipped, mild-eyed beauty of a race

Known as the blameless Ethiops of Greek
song,

Plotting to do her royal master wrong,
Watching, reproachful of the lingering
light,

The evening shadows deepen for her flight, 330

Love-guided, to her home in a far land,
Now waited death at the great Shah's command.

Shapely as that dark princess for whose
smile

A world was bartered, daughter of the Nile

Herself, and veiling in her large, soft
eyes 335

The passion and the languor of her skies,
The Abyssinian knelt low at the feet
Of her stern lord : ' O king, if it be meet,
And for thy honor's sake,' she said,
' that I,

Who am the humblest of thy slaves, should die, 340

I will not tax thy mercy to forgive.
Easier it is to die than to outlive
All that life gave me,—him whose wrong
of thee

Was but the outcome of his love for me,
Cherished from childhood, when, beneath
the shade 345

Of templed Axum, side by side we played.

Stolen from his arms, my lover followed
me

Through weary seasons over land and sea ;
And two days since, sitting disconsolate
Within the shadow of the harem gate, 350
Suddenly, as if dropping from the sky,
Down from the lattice of the balcony
Fell the sweet song by Tigre's cowherds sung

In the old music of his native tongue.
He knew my voice, for love is quick of
ear, 355

Answering in song.

This night he waited
near

To fly with me. The fault was mine
alone :

He knew thee not, he did but seek his own ;
Who, in the very shadow of thy throne, 359
Sharing thy bounty, knowing all thou art,
Greatest and best of men, and in her heart
Grateful to tears for favor undeserved,
Turned ever homeward, nor one moment swerved

From her young love. He looked into my eyes,

He heard my voice, and could not otherwise 365

Than he hath done ; yet, save one wild embrace

When first we stood together face to face,
And all that fate had done since last we met

Seemed but a dream and left us children
yet,

He hath not wronged thee nor thy royal
bed : 370

Spare him, O king ! and slay me in his stead !'

But over Akbar's brows the frown hung
black,

And, turning to the eunuch at his back,
' Take them,' he said, ' and let the Jumna's waves

Hide both my shame and these accursed
slaves !' 375

His loathly length the unsexed bondman bowed :

' On my head be it !'

Straightway from a cloud

Of dainty shawls and veils of woven mist

The Christian Miriam rose, and, stooping, kissed

The monarch's hand. Loose down her shoulders bare 380

Swept all the rippled darkness of her
hair,

Veiling the bosom that, with high, quick swell

Of fear and pity, through it rose and fell.

' Alas !' she cried, ' hast thou forgotten quite 384

The words of Him we spake of yesternight ?
Or thy own prophet's, ' Whoso doth endure
And pardon, of eternal life is sure' ?

O great and good ! be thy revenge alone
Felt in thy mercy to the erring shown :

Let thwarted love and youth their pardon plead, 390

Who sinned but in intent, and not in deed !'

One moment the strong frame of Akbar
shook

With the great storm of passion. Then his look

Softened to her uplifted face, that still Pleaded more strongly than all words,

until 395

Its pride and anger seemed like over-
blown,

Spent clouds of thunder left to tell alone

Of strife and overcoming. With bowed
head,

And smiting on his bosom: 'God,' he
said, 399

'Alone is great, and let His holy name
Be honored, even to His servant's shame!
Well spake thy prophet, Miriam,—he
alone

Who hath not sinned is meet to cast a stone

At such as these, who here their doom await,

Held like myself in the strong grasp of fate. 405

They sinned through love, as I through love forgive;

Take them beyond my realm, but let them
live!'

And, like a chorus to the words of grace,
The ancient Fakir, sitting in his place,
Motionless as an idol and as grim, 410

In the pavilion Akbar built for him Under the court-yard trees, (for he was
wise,

Knew Menu's laws, and through his close-shut eyes

Saw things far off, and as an open book
Into the thoughts of other men could look,)

Began, half chant, half howling, to rehearse 416

The fragment of a holy Vedic verse;
And thus it ran: 'He who all things
forgives

Conquers himself and all things else, and lives

Above the reach of wrong or hate or
fear, 420

Calm as the gods, to whom he is most
dear.'

Twoleagues from Agra still the traveller
sees

The tomb of Akbar through its cypress-
trees;

And, near at hand, the marble walls that hide

The Christian Begum sleeping at his side.
And o'er her vault of burial (who shall
tell 426

If it be chance alone or miracle?)

The Mission press with tireless hand unrolls

The words of Jesus on its lettered scrolls,—

Tells, in all tongues, the tale of mercy
o'er, 430

And bids the guilty, 'Go and sin no
more!'

It now was dew-fall; very still
The night lay on the lonely hill,
Down which our homeward steps we bent,
And, silent, through great silence went,
Save that the tireless crickets played 436
Their long, monotonous serenade.

A young moon, at its narrowest,
Curved sharp against the darkening west;
And, momentarily, the beacon's star, 440
Slow wheeling o'er its rock afar,

From out the level darkness shot
One instant and again was not.

And then my friend spake quietly
The thought of both: 'Yon crescent see!
Like Islam's symbol-moon it gives 446
Hints of the light whereby it lives:

Somewhat of goodness, something true
From sun and spirit shining through
All faiths, all worlds, as through the dark
Of ocean shines the lighthouse spark, 451
Attests the presence everywhere

Of love and providential care.

The faith the old Norse heart confessed
In one dear name,—the hopefulest 455
And tenderest heard from mortal lips

In pangs of birth or death, from ships
Ice-bitten in the winter sea,

Or lisped beside a mother's knee,—
The wiser world hath not outgrown, 460
And the All-Father is our own!'

NAUHAUGHT, THE DEACON.

NAUHAUGHT, the Indian deacon, who of
old

Dwelt, poor but blameless, where his narrowing Cape

Stretches its shrunk arm out to all the winds

And the relentless smiting of the waves,

Awoke one morning from a pleasant dream	5	Still, while he mused, he seemed to hear the cry	35
Of a good angel dropping in his hand		Of a starved child ; the sick face of his wife
A fair, broad gold-piece, in the name of God.		Tempted him. Heart and flesh in fierce revolt
He rose and went forth with the early day		Urged the wild license of his savage youth
Far inland, where the voices of the waves		Against his later scruples. Bitter toil,
Mellowed and mingled with the whispering leaves,	10	Prayer, fasting, dread of blame, and pitiless eyes	40
As, through the tangle of the low, thick woods,		To watch his halting,—had he lost for these
He searched his traps. Therein nor beast nor bird		The freedom of the woods ;—the hunting-grounds
He found ; though meanwhile in the reedy pools		Of happy spirits for a walled-in heaven
The otter plashed, and underneath the pines		Of everlasting psalms ? One healed the sick
The partridge drummed : and as his thoughts went back	15	Very far off thousands of moons ago : 45
To the sick wife and little child at home,		Had he not prayed him night and day to come
What marvel that the poor man felt his faith		And cure his bed-bound wife ? Was there a hell ?
Too weak to bear its burden,—like a rope		Were all his fathers' people writhing there—
That, strand by strand uncoiling, breaks above		Like the poor shell-fish set to boil alive—
The hand that grasps it. 'Even now,		Forever, dying never ? If he kept	50
O Lord !	20	This gold, so needed, would the dreadful God
Send me,' he prayed, 'the angel of my dream !		Torment him like a Mohawk's captive stuck
Nauhaught is very poor ; he cannot wait.'		With slow-consuming splinters ? Would the saints
Even as he spake he heard at his bare feet		And the white angels dance and laugh to see him
A low, metallic clink, and, looking down,		Burn like a pitch-pine torch ? His Christian garb	55
He saw a dainty purse with disks of gold		Seemed falling from him ; with the fear and shame
Crowding its silken net. Awhile he held		Of Adam naked at the cool of day,
The treasure up before his eyes, alone		He gazed around. A black snake lay in coil
With his great need, feeling the wondrous coins		On the hot sand, a crow with sidelong eye
Slide through his eager fingers, one by one.		Watched from a dead bough. All his Indian lore	60
So then the dream was true. The angel brought	30	Of evil blending with a convert's faith
One broad piece only ; should he take all these ?		In the supernal terrors of the Book,
Who would be wiser, in the blind, dumb woods ?		He saw the Tempter in the coiling snake
The loser, doubtless rich, would scarcely miss		And ominous, black-winged bird ; and all the while
This dropped crumb from a table always full.		The low rebuking of the distant waves	65

Stole in upon him like the voice of God
 Among the trees of Eden. Girding up His soul's loins with a resolute hand, he thrust
 The base thought from him: 'Nauhaught, be a man!
 Starve, if need be; but, while you live,
 look out 70
 From honest eyes on all men, unashamed.
 God help me! I am deacon of the church,
 A baptized, praying Indian! Should I do
 This secret meanness, even the barken knots
 Of the old trees would turn to eyes to see it, 75
 The birds would tell of it, and all the
 leaves
 Whisper above me: 'Nauhaught is a thief!
 The sun would know it, and the stars that
 hide
 Behind his light would watch me, and at night
 Follow me with their sharp, accusing
 eyes. 80
 Yea, 'thou, God, seest me!' Then Nau-haught drew
 Closer his belt of leather, dulling thus
 The pain of hunger, and walked bravely
 back
 To the brown fishing-hamlet by the sea;
 And, pausing at the inn-door, cheerily asked: 85
 'Who hath lost aught to-day?'
 'I,' said a voice;
 'Ten golden pieces, in a silken purse,
 My daughter's handiwork.' He looked,
 and lo!
 One stood before him in a coat of frieze,
 And the glazed hat of a seafaring man, 90
 Shrewd-faced, broad-shouldered, with no trace of wings.
 Marvelling, he dropped within the stranger's hand
 The silken web, and turned to go his way.
 But the man said: 'A tithe at least is yours; 94
 Take it in God's name as an honest man.'
 And as the deacon's dusky fingers closed
 Over the golden gift, 'Yea, in God's
 name

I take it, with a poor man's thanks,' he
 said.
 So down the street that, like a river of
 sand,
 Ran, white in sunshine, to the summer sea,
 He sought his home, singing and praising
 God; 101
 And when his neighbors in their careless
 way
 Spoke of the owner of the silken purse—
 A Wellfleet skipper, known in every port
 That the Cape opens in its sandy wall
 He answered, with a wise smile, to himself: 106
 'I saw the angel where they see a man,' 1870.

THE SISTERS.

ANNIE and Rhoda, sisters twain,
 Woke in the night to the sound of rain,
 The rush of wind, the ramp and roar
 Of great waves climbing a rocky shore.
 Annie rose up in her bed-gown white, 5
 And looked out into the storm and night.
 'Hush, and hearken!' she cried in fear,
 'Hearest thou nothing, sister dear?'
 'I hear the sea, and the splash of rain,
 And roar of the northeast hurricane. 10
 'Get thee back to the bed so warm,
 No good comes of watching a storm.
 'What is it to thee, I fain would know,
 That waves are roaring and wild winds
 blow?
 'No lover of thine's afloat to miss 15
 The harbor-lights on a night like this.'
 'But I heard a voice cry out my name,
 Up from the sea on the wind it came!
 'Twice and thrice have I heard it call,
 And the voice is the voice of Estwick
 Hall! 20
 On her pillow the sister tossed her head.
 'Hall of the Heron is safe,' she said.

'In the tautest schooner that ever swam
He rides at anchor in Annisquam.

'And, if in peril from swamping sea 25
Or lee shore rocks, would he call on
thee?'

But the girl heard only the wind and
tide,
And wringing her small white hands she
cried:

'O sister Rhoda, there's something wrong;
I hear it again, so loud and long. 30

' "Annie! Annie!" I hear it call,
And the voice is the voice of Estwick
Hall!'

Up sprang the elder, with eyes aflame,
'Thou hest! He never would call thy
name!

'If he did, I would pray the wind and
sea 35
To keep him forever from thee and me!'

Then out of the sea blew a dreadful blast;
Like the cry of a dying man it passed.

The young girl hushed on her lips a groan,
But through her tears a strange light
shone,-- 40

The solemn joy of her heart's release
'To own and cherish its love in peace.

'Dearest!' she whispered, under breath,
'Life was a lie, but true is death.

'The love I hid from myself away 45
Shall crown me now in the light of day.

'My ears shall never to wooer list,
Never by lover my lips be kissed.

'Sacred to thee am I henceforth,
Thou in heaven and I on earth!' 50

She came and stood by her sister's bed:
'Hall of the Heron is dead!' she said.

'The wind and the waves their work have
done,
We shall see him no more beneath the sun.

'Little will reck that heart of thine; 55
It loved him not with a love like mine.

'I, for his sake, were he but here,
Could hem and 'broider thy bridal gear,

'Though hands should tremble and eyes
be wet,
And stitch for stitch in my heart be set. 60

'But now my soul with his soul I wed;
Thine the living, and mine the dead!'
1871.

MARGUERITE.

MASSACHUSETTS BAY, 1760.

Upward of one thousand of the Acadian peasants forcibly taken from their homes on the Gaspereau and Basin of Minas were assigned to the several towns of the Massachusetts colony, the children being bound by the authorities to service or labor.

THE robins sang in the orchard, the buds
into blossoms grew;
Little of human sorrow the buds and the robins knew!

Sick, in an alien household, the poor
French neutral lay;
Into her lonesome garret fell the light of the April day,

Through the dusty window, curtained by the spider's warp and woof, 5
On the loose-laid floor of hemlock, on oaken ribs of roof,

The bedquilt's faded patchwork, the tea-
cups on the stand,
The wheel with flaxen tangle, as it dropped from her sick hand!

What to her was the song of the robin, or warm morning light,
As she lay in the trance of the dying,
heedless of sound or sight? 10

Done was the work of her hands, she had eaten her bitter bread;
The world of the alien people lay behind her dim and dead.

But her soul went back to its child-time ;
 she saw the sun o'erflow
 With gold the Basin of Minas, and set over Gaspereau ;

The low, bare flats at ebb-tide, the rush of the sea at flood, 15
 Through inlet and creek and river, from dike to upland wood ;

The gulls in the red of morning, the fish-
 hawk's rise and fall,
 The drift of the fog in moonshine, over the dark coast-wall.

She saw the face of her mother, she heard
 the song she sang ;
 And far off, faintly, slowly, the bell for vespers rang ! 20

By her bed the hard-faced mistress sat,
 smoothing the wrinkled sheet,
 Peering into the face, so helpless, and feeling the ice-cold feet.

With a vague remorse atoning for her greed and long abuse,
 By care no longer heeded and pity too late for use.

Up the stairs of the garret softly the son of the mistress stepped, 25
 Leaned over the head-board, covering his face with his hands, and wept.

Outspake the mother, who watched him
 sharply, with brow a-frown :
 'What ! love you the Papist, the beggar,
 the charge of the town ?'

'Be she Papist or beggar who lies here,
 I know and God knows
 I love her, and fain would go with her wherever she goes ! 30

'O mother ! that sweet face came pleading,
 for love so athirst.

You saw but the town-charge ; I knew her
 God's angel at first.'

Shaking her gray head, the mistress hushed down a bitter cry ;

And awed by the silence and shadow of death drawing nigh,

She murmured a psalm of the Bible ; but closer the young girl pressed, 35
 With the last of her life in her fingers, the cross to her breast.

'My son, come away,' cried the mother,
 her voice cruel grown.
 'She is joined to her idols, like Ephraim ;
 let her alone !'

But he knelt with his hand on her forehead, his lips to her ear, 39
 And he called back the soul that was passing : 'Marguerite, do you hear ?'

She paused on the threshold of Heaven ;
 love, pity, surprise,
 Wistful, tender, lit up for an instant the cloud of her eyes.

With his heart on his lips he kissed her,
 but never her cheek grew red,
 And the words the living long for he spake in the ear of the dead.

And the robins sang in the orchard, where buds to blossoms grew ; 45
 Of the folded hands and the still face never the robins knew !

1871.

THE ROBIN.

My old Welsh neighbor over the way
 Crept slowly out in the sun of spring,
 Pushed from her ears the locks of gray,
 And listened to hear the robin sing.

Her grandson, playing at marbles, stopped, 5
 And, cruel in sport as boys will be,
 Tossed a stone at the bird, who hopped
 From bough to bough in the apple-tree.

'Nay !' said the grandmother ; 'have you not heard,
 My poor, bad boy ! of the fiery pit, 10
 And how, drop by drop, this merciful
 bird
 Carries the water that quenches it ?'

'He brings cool dew in his little bill,
And lets it fall on the souls of sin:
You can see the mark on his red breast
still 15

Of fires that scorch as he drops it in.

'My poor Bron rhuddyn! my breast-burned bird,
Singing so sweetly from limb to limb,
Very dear to the heart of Our Lord
Is he who pities the lost like Him!' 20

'Amen!' I said to the beautiful myth;
'Sing, bird of God, in my heart as well:
Each good thought is a drop wherewith
To cool and lessen the fires of hell.

'Prayers of love like rain-drops fall, 25
Tears of pity are cooling dew,
And dear to the heart of Our Lord are all Who suffer like Him in the good they do!'

THE PENNSYLVANIA PILGRIM.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

THE beginning of German emigration to America may be traced to the personal influence of William Penn, who in 1677 visited the Continent, and made the acquaintance of an intelligent and highly cultivated circle of Pietists, or Mystics, who, reviving in the seventeenth century the spiritual faith and worship of Tauler and the 'Friends of God' in the fourteenth, gathered about the pastor Spener and the young and beautiful Eleonora Johanna Von Merlau. In this circle originated the Frankfort Land Company, which bought of William Penn, the Governor of Pennsylvania, a tract of land near the new city of Philadelphia.

The company's agent in the New World was a rising young lawyer, Francis Daniel Pastorius, son of Judge Pastorius, of Windsheim, who, at the age of seventeen, entered the University of Altorf. He studied law at Strasburg, Basle, and Jena, and at Ratibon, the seat of the Imperial Government, obtained a practical knowledge of international polity. Successful in all his examinations and disputations, he received the degree of Doctor of Law at Nuremberg in 1676. In 1679 he was a law-lecturer at Frankfort, where he became deeply interested in the teachings of

Dr. Spener. In 1680-81 he travelled in France, England, Ireland, and Italy with his friend Herr Von Rodeck. 'I was,' he says, 'glad to enjoy again the company of my Christian friends, rather than be with Von Rodeck, feasting and dancing.' In 1683, in company with a small number of German Friends, he emigrated to America, settling upon the Frankfort Company's tract between the Schuylkill and the Delaware rivers. The township was divided into four hamlets, namely, Germantown, Krisheim, Crefeld, and Sommerhausen. Soon after his arrival he united himself with the Society of Friends, and became one of its most able and devoted members, as well as the recognized head and lawgiver of the settlement. He married, two years after his arrival, Anncke (Anna), daughter of Dr. Klosterman, of Muhlheim.

In the year 1688 he drew up a memorial against slaveholding, which was adopted by the Germantown Friends and sent up to the Monthly Meeting, and thence to the Yearly Meeting at Philadelphia. It is noteworthy as the first protest made by a religious body against Negro Slavery. The original document was discovered in 1844 by the Philadelphia antiquarian, Nathan Kite, and published in The Friend (Vol. XVIII. No. 16). It is a bold and direct appeal to the best instincts of the heart. 'Have not,' he asks, 'these negroes as much right to fight for their freedom as you have to keep them slaves?'

Under the wise direction of Pastorius, the Germantown settlement grew and prospered. The inhabitants planted orchards and vineyards, and surrounded themselves with souvenirs of their old home. A large number of them were linen-weavers, as well as small farmers. The Quakers were the principal sect, but men of all religions were tolerated, and lived together in harmony. In 1692 Richard Frame published, in what he called verse, a Description of Pennsylvania, in which he alludes to the settlement:—

'The German town of which I spoke before,
Which is at least in length one mile or more,
Where lives High German people and Low
Dutch,
Whose trade in weaving linen cloth is much,—
There grows the flax, as also you may know
That from the same they do divide the tow.
Their trade suits well their habitation,
We find convenience for their occupation.'

Pastorius seems to have been on intimate terms with William Penn, Thomas Lloyd, Chief Justice Logan, Thomas Story, and other leading men in the Province belonging to his own religious society, as also with Kelpius, the learned

Mystic of the Wissahickon, with the pastor of the Swedes' church, and the leaders of the Mennonites. He wrote a description of Pennsylvania, which was published at Frankfort and Leipzig in 1700 and 1701. His Lives of the Saints, etc., written in German and dedicated to Professor Schurmberg, his old teacher, was published in 1690. He left behind him many unpublished manuscripts covering a very wide range of subjects, most of which are now lost. One huge manuscript folio, entitled Hive Beestock, Melliotropheum Alucar, or Rusca Apium, still remains, containing one thousand pages with about one hundred lines to a page. It is a medley of knowledge and fancy, history, philosophy, and poetry, written in seven languages. A large portion of his poetry is devoted to the pleasures of gardening, the description of flowers, and the care of bees. The following specimen of his punning Latin is addressed to an orchard-pilferer:—

'Quisquis in hæc furtim reptas viridaria nostra
Tangere fallaci poma caveto manu,
Si non obsequeris faxit Deus omne quod opto,
Cum malis nostris ut mala cuncta feras.'

Professor Oswald Seidensticker, to whose papers in Der Deutsche Pioneer and that able periodical The Penn Monthly, of Philadelphia, I am indebted for many of the foregoing facts in regard to the German pilgrims of the New World, thus closes his notice of Pastorius:—

'No tombstone, not even a record of burial, indicates where his remains have found their last resting-place, and the pardonable desire to associate the homage due to this distinguished man with some visible memento cannot be gratified. There is no reason to suppose that he was interred in any other place than the Friends' old burying-ground in Germantown, though the fact is not attested by any definite source of information. After all, this obliteration of the last trace of his earthly existence is but typical of what has overtaken the times which he represents; that Germantown which he founded, which saw him live and move, is at present but a quaint idyl of the past, almost a myth, barely remembered and little cared for by the keener race that has succeeded.'

The Pilgrims of Plymouth have not lacked historian and poet. Justice has been done to their faith, courage, and self-sacrifice, and to the mighty influence of their endeavors to establish righteousness on the earth. The Quaker pilgrims of Pennsylvania, seeking the same object by different means, have not been equally fortunate. The power of their testimony for truth and holiness, peace and freedom, enforced only by what Milton calls 'the irresistible might of meekness,' has been felt through two centuries in the amelioration of penal severities, the abolition of slavery, the reform of the erring, the relief of the poor and suffering,—felt, in brief, in every step of human progress. But of the men themselves, with the single exception of William Penn, scarcely anything is known. Contrasted, from the outset, with the stern, aggressive Puritans of New England, they have come to be regarded as 'a feeble folk,' with a personality as doubtful as their unrecorded graves. They were not soldiers, like Miles Standish; they had no figure so picturesque as Vane, no leader so rashly brave and haughty as Endicott. No Cotton Mather wrote their Magnalia; they had no awful drama of supernaturalism in which Satan and his angels were actors; and the only witch mentioned in their simple annals was a poor old Swedish woman, who, on complaint of her countrywomen, was tried and acquitted of everything but imbecility and folly. Nothing but commonplace offices of civility came to pass between them and the Indians; indeed, their enemies taunted them with the fact that the savages did not regard them as Christians, but just such men as themselves. Yet it must be apparent to every careful observer of the progress of American civilization that its two principal currents had their sources in the entirely opposite directions of the Puritan and Quaker colonies. To use the words of a late writer:¹ 'The historical forces,' with which no others may be compared in their influence on the people, have been those of the Puritan and the Quaker. The strength of the one was in the confession of an invisible Presence, a righteous, eternal Will, which would establish righteousness on earth; and thence arose the conviction of a direct personal responsibility, which could be tempted by no external splendor and could be shaken by no internal agitation, and could not be evaded or transferred. The strength of the other was the witness in the human spirit to an eternal Word, an Inner Voice which spoke to each alone, while yet it spoke to every man; a Light which each was to follow, and which yet was the light of the world; and all other voices were silent before this, and the solitary path whither it led was more sacred than the worn ways of cathedral-aisles.'

It will be sufficiently apparent to the reader that, in the poem which follows, I have attempted nothing beyond a study of the life and times of the Pennsylvania colonist,—a simple picture of a noteworthy man and his locality. The colors of my sketch are all very sober, toned down to the quiet and dreamy atmosphere through which its subject is visible. Whether, in the glare and tumult of the present time, such a picture will find favor may well be questioned. I only know that it has beguiled for me some hours of weariness, and that, whatever may be its measure of public appreciation, it has been to me its own reward.

AMESBURY, 5th mo, 1872.

HAIL to posterity!
Hail, future men of Germanopolis!
Let the young generations yet to be
Look kindly upon this.
Think how your fathers left their native
land, — 5
Dear German-land! O sacred hearths and homes! —
And, where the wild beast roams,
In patience planned
New forest-homes beyond the mighty sea,
There undisturbed and free 10
To live as brothers of one family.
What pains and cares befell,
What trials and what fears,
Remember, and wherein we have done
well
Follow our footsteps, men of coming
years! 15
Where we have failed to do
Aright, or wisely live,
Be warned by us, the better way pursue,
And, knowing we were human, even as
you,
Pityous and forgive! 20
Farewell, Posterity!
Farewell, dear Germany!
Forevermore farewell!

From the Latin of FRANCIS DANIEL PASTORIUS in the Germantown Records, 1683.

PRELUDE.

I SING the Pilgrim of a softer clime
And milder speech than those brave
men's who brought 25

To the ice and iron of our winter time
A will as firm, a creed as stern, and
wrought
With one mailed hand, and with the other fought.
Simply, as fits my theme, in homely rhyme
I sing the blue-eyed German Spener
taught, 30
Through whose veiled, mystic faith the Inward Light,
Steady and still, an easy brightness,
shone,
Transfiguring all things in its radiance
white.
The garland which his meekness never
sought
I bring him; over fields of harvest sown 35
With seeds of blessing, now to ripeness grown,
I bid the sower pass before the reapers'
sight.

Never in tenderer quiet lapsed the day
From Pennsylvania's vales of spring away,
Where, forest-walled, the scattered hum-lets lay 40
Along the wedded rivers. One long bar
Of purple cloud, on which the evening
star
Shone like a jewel on a scimitar, Held the sky's golden gateway. Through the deep
Hush of the woods a murmur seemed to
creep, 45
The Schuylkill whispering in a voice of
sleep.
All else was still. The oxen from their ploughs
Rested at last, and from their long day's browse
Came the dun files of Krisheim's homebound cows.
And the young city, round whose virgin
zone 50
The rivers like two mighty arms were
thrown,
Marked by the smoke of evening fires
alone,

Lay in the distance, lovely even then
With its fair women and its stately men
Gracing the forest court of William
Penn, 55

Urban yet sylvan; in its rough-hewn frames
Of oak and pine the dryads held their claims,
And lent its streets their pleasant woodland names.

Anna Pastorius down the leafy lane
Looked city-ward, then stooped to prune
again 60
Her vines and simples, with a sigh of
pain.

For fast the streaks of ruddy sunset paled
In the oak clearing, and, as daylight
failed,
Slow, overhead, the dusky night-birds sailed.

Again she looked: between green walls of
shade, 65
With low-bent head as if with sorrow weighed,
Daniel Pastorius slowly came and said,

'God's peace be with thee, Anna!' Then he stood
Silent before her, wrestling with the mood
Of one who sees the evil and not good. 70

'What is it, my Pastorius?' As she spoke,
A slow, faint smile across his features
broke,
Sadder than tears. 'Dear heart,' he said,
'our folk

'Are even as others. Yea, our goodliest
Friends
Are frail; our elders have their selfish ends, 75
And few dare trust the Lord to make amends

'For duty's loss. So even our feeble
word
For the dumb slaves the startled meeting
heard
As if a stone its quiet waters stirred;

'And, as the clerk ceased reading, there
began 80
A ripple of dissent which downward ran
In widening circles, as from man to man.

'Somewhat was said of running before
sent,
Of tender fear that some their guide out-
went, 84
Troublers of Israel. I was scarce intent

'On hearing, for behind the reverend row
Of gallery Friends, in dumb and piteous
show,
I saw, methought, dark faces full of woe.

'And, in the spirit, I was taken where They toiled and suffered; I was made aware 90
Of shame and wrath and anguish and despair!

'And while the meeting smothered our poor plea
With cautious phrase, a Voice there seemed to be,
'As ye have done to these ye do to Me!'

'So it all passed; and the old tithe went on 95
Of anise, mint, and cumin, till the sun
Set, leaving still the weightier work undone.

'Help, for the good man faileth! Who is strong,
If these be weak? Who shall rebuke the
wrong,
If these consent? How long, O Lord!
how long!' 100

He ceased; and, bound in spirit with the
bound,
With folded arms, and eyes that sought
the ground,
Walked musingly his little garden round.
About him, beaded with the falling dew,
Rare plants of power and herbs of healing
grew, 105
Such as Van Helmont and Agrippa knew.

For, by the lore of Gorlitz' gentle sage,
With the mild mystics of his dreamy age
He read the herbal signs of nature's page,

As once he heard in sweet Von Merlau's
bowers¹⁹ 110

Fair as herself, in boyhood's happy hours,
The pious Spener read his creed in flowers.

'The dear Lord give us patience!' said
his wife,

Touching with finger-tip an aloe, rife
With leaves sharp-pointed like an Aztec
knife 115

Or Carib spear, a gift to William Penn
From the rare gardens of John Evelyn,
Brought from the Spanish Main by merchantmen.

'See this strange plant its steady purpose
hold,

And, year by year, its patient leaves
unfold, 120

Till the young eyes that watched it first are old.

'But some time, thou hast told me, there shall come

A sudden beauty, brightness, and perfume;
The century-moulded bud shall burst in bloom.

'So may the seed which hath been sown
to-day 125

Grow with the years, and, after long delay,
Break into bloom, and God's eternal Yea

'Answer at last the patient prayers of
them

Who now, by faith alone, behold its stem Crowned with the flowers of Freedom's diadem. 130

'Meanwhile, to feel and suffer, work and wait,

Remains for us. The wrong indeed is great,

But love and patience conquer soon or late.'

'Well hast thou said, my Anna!' Tenderer 134

Than youth's caress upon the head of her
Pastorius laid his hand. 'Shall we demur

'Because the vision tarrieth? In an
hour

We dream not of, the slow-grown bud
may flower,

And what was sown in weakness rise in
power!'

Then through the vine-draped door whose legend read, 140

'Procul este profani!' Anna led
To where their child upon his little bed

Looked up and smiled. 'Dear heart,' she said, 'if we

Must bearers of a heavy burden be,
Our boy, God willing, yet the day shall
see 145

'When from the gallery to the farthest
seat,

Slave and slave-owner shall no longer
meet,

But all sit equal at the Master's feet.'

On the stone hearth the blazing walnut
block

Set the low walls a-glimmer, showed the cock 150

Rebuking Peter on the Van Wyck clock,

Shone on old tomes of law and physic,
side

By side with Fox and Belmen, played at
hide

And seek with Anna, midst her household
pride

Of flaxen webs, and on the table, bare 155
Of costly cloth or silver cup, but where,
Tasting the fat shads of the Delaware,

The courtly Penn had praised the good-wife's cheer,

And quoted Horace o'er her home-brewed
beer,

Till even grave Pastorius smiled to hear.

In such a home, beside the Schuylkill's
wave, 161

He dwelt in peace with God and man,
and gave

Food to the poor and shelter to the slave.

For all too soon the New World's scandal shamed	How felt the Master when his chosen strove 191
The righteous code by Penn and Sidney framed, 165	In childish folly for their seats above; And that fond mother, blinded by her love,
And men withheld the human rights they claimed.	Besought him that her sons, beside his throne, Might sit on either hand? Amidst his own 195
And slowly wealth and station sanction lent, And hardened avarice, on its gains intent, Stified the inward whisper of dissent.	A stranger oft, companionless and lone, God's priest and prophet stands. The martyr's pain
Yet all the while the burden rested sore On tender hearts. At last Pastorius bore 171	Is not alone from scourge and cell and chain; Sharper the pang when, shouting in his train,
In God's name; and the leaven of the word Wrought ever after in the souls who heard, And a dead conscience in its grave-clothes stirred 175	His weak disciples by their lives deny 200 The loud hosannas of their daily cry, And make their echo of his truth a lie.
To troubled life, and urged the vain excuse Of Hebrew custom, patriarchal use, Good in itself if evil in abuse.	His forest home no hermit's cell he found, Guests, motley-minded, drew his hearth around, And held armed truce upon its neutral ground. 205
Gravely Pastorius listened, not the less Discerning through the decent fig-leaf dress 180	There Indian chiefs with battle-bows un- strung, Strong, hero-limbed, like those whom Homer sung,
Of the poor plea its shame of selfishness.	Pastorius fancied, when the world was young,
One Scripture rule, at least, was unforget; He hid the outcast, and bewrayed him not; And, when his prey the human hunter sought,	Came with their tawny women, lithe and tall, Like bronzes in his friend Von Rodeck's hall, 210
He scrupled not, while Anna's wise delay And proffered cheer prolonged the master's stay, 186	Comely, if black, and not displeasing all.
To speed the black guest safely on his way.	There hungry folk in homespun drab and gray Drew round his board on Monthly Meeting day, Genial, half merry in their friendly way,
Yet, who shall guess his bitter grief who lends His life to some great cause, and finds his friends Shame or betray it for their private ends?	Or, haply, pilgrims from the Fatherland, Weak, timid, homesick, slow to under- stand 216 The New World's promise, sought his helping hand.

Or painful Kelpius²⁰ from his hermit den
By Wissahickon, maddest of good men,
Dreamed o'er the Chiliast dreams of Petersen. 220

Deep in the woods, where the small river slid Snake-like in shade, the Helmstadt Mystic hid,
Weird as a wizard, over arts forbid,

Reading the books of Daniel and of John,
And Behmen's Morning-Redness, through the Stone 225
Of Wisdom, vouchsafed to his eyes alone,

Whereby he read what man ne'er read
before,
And saw the visions man shall see no
more,
Till the great angel, striding sea and
shore,

Shall bid all flesh await, on land or ships, 230
The warning trump of the Apocalypse, Shattering the heavens before the dread
eclipse.

Or meek-eyed Mennonist his bearded chin
Leaned o'er the gate; or Ranter, pure
within,
Aired his perfection in a world of sin. 235

Or, talking of old home scenes, Op der Graaf
Teased the low back-log with his shodden
staff,
Till the red embers broke into a laugh

And dance of flame, as if they fain would cheer
The rugged face, half tender, half austere, Touched with the pathos of a homesick
tear! 241

Or Sluyter,²¹ saintly familist, whose word
As law the Brethren of the Manor heard,
Announced the speedy terrors of the Lord.

And turned, like Lot at Sodom, from his race, 245
Above a wrecked world with complacent
face

Riding secure upon his plank of grace!

Haply, from Finland's birchen groves
exiled,
Manly in thought, in simple ways a child,
His white hair floating round his visage
mild, 250

The Swedish pastor sought the Quaker's
door,
Pleased from his neighbor's lips to hear
once more
His long-disused and half-forgotten lore.

For both could baffle Babel's lingual curse,
And speak in Bion's Doric, and rehearse Cleanthes' hymn or Virgil's sounding verse. 250

And oft Pastorius and the meek old man
Argued as Quaker and as Lutheran,
Ending in Christian love, as they began.

With lettered Lloyd on pleasant morns
he strayed 260
Where Sommerhausen over vales of shade
Looked miles away, by every flower delayed,

Or song of bird, happy and free with one
Who loved, like him, to let his memory
run
Over old fields of learning, and to sun 265

Himself in Plato's wise philosophies,
And dream with Philo over mysteries Whereof the dreamer never finds the
keys;

To touch all themes of thought, nor weakly stop
For doubt of truth, but let the buckets
drop 270
Deep down and bring the hidden waters up.²²

For there was freedom in that wakening
time
Of tender souls; to differ was not crime;
The varying bells made up the perfect
chime.

On lips unlike was laid the altar's coal,
The white, clear light, tradition-colored,
stole 276

Through the stained oriel of each human soul.

Gathered from many sects, the Quaker brought

His old beliefs, adjusting to the thought
That moved his soul the creed his fathers
taught. 280

One faith alone, so broad that all mankind
Within themselves its secret witness find,
The soul's communion with the Eternal
Mind,

The Spirit's law, the Inward Rule and Guide,

Scholar and peasant, lord and serf, allied,
The polished Penn and Cromwell's Iron-
side. 286

As still in Hemskerck's Quaker Meeting,²³
face

By face in Flemish detail, we may trace
How loose-mouthed boor and fine ancestral grace

Sat in close contrast,—the clipt-headed churl, 290

Broad market-dame, and simple servinggirl

By skirt of silk and periwig in curl!

For soul touched soul; the spiritual treasure-trove

Made all men equal, none could rise above
Nor sink below that level of God's love.

So, with his rustic neighbors sitting
down, 296

The homespun frock beside the scholar's
gown,

Pastorius to the manners of the town

Added the freedom of the woods, and
sought

The bookless wisdom by experience
taught, 300

And learned to love his new-found home, while not

Forgetful of the old; the seasons went
Their rounds, and somewhat to his spirit
lent

Of their own calm and measureless content.

Glad even to tears, he heard the robin
sing 305

His song of welcome to the Western spring,

And bluebird borrowing from the sky his wing.

And when the miracle of autumn came,
And all the woods with many-colored flame
Of splendor, making summer's greenness tame, 310

Burned, unconsumed, a voice without a
sound

Spake to him from each kindled bush
around,

And made the strange, new landscape
holy ground!

And when the bitter north-wind, keen and swift,

Swept the white street and piled the door-
yard drift, 315

He exercised, as Friends might say, his gift

Of verse, Dutch, English, Latin, like the hash

Of corn and beans in Indian succotash;
Dull, doubtless, but with here and there a flash

Of wit and fine conceit,—the good man's play 320

Of quiet fancies, meet to while away
The slow hours measuring off an idle day.

At evening, while his wife put on her
look

Of love's endurance, from its niche he
took 324

The written pages of his ponderous book.

And read, in half the languages of man,
His 'Rusca Apium,' which with bees
began,

And through the gamut of creation ran.

Or, now and then, the missive of some friend

In gray Altorf or storied Nürnberg
penned 330

Dropped in upon him like a guest to spend

The night beneath his roof-tree. Mystical
The fair Von Merlau spake as waters fall
And voices sound in dreams, and yet withal

Human and sweet, as if each far, low tone,
Over the roses of her gardens blown, 336
Brought the warm sense of beauty all her
own.

Wise Spener questioned what his friend could trace

Of spiritual influx or of saving grace
In the wild natures of the Indian race. 340

And learned Schurmberg, fain, at times,
to look

From Talmud, Koran, Veds, and Penta-teuch,

Sought out his pupil in his far-off nook,

To query with him of climatic change,
Of bird, beast, reptile, in his forest range,
Of flowers and fruits and simples new and
strange. 346

And thus the Old and New World reached their hands

Across the water, and the friendly lands
Talked with each other from their severed strands.

Pastorius answered all: while seed and
root 350

Sent from his new home grew to flower and fruit

Along the Rhine and at the Spessart's foot;

And, in return, the flowers his boyhood
knew

Smiled at his door, the same in form and hue,

And on his vines the Rhenish clusters
grew. 355

No idler he; whoever else might shirk,
He set his hand to every honest work,— Farmer and teacher, court and meeting clerk.

Still on the town seal his device is found,
Grapes, flax, and thread-spool on a trefoil
ground, 360

With 'Vinum, Linum et Textrinum'
wound.

One house sufficed for gospel and for law,
Where Paul and Grotius, Scripture text and saw,

Assured the good, and held the rest in awe.

Whatever legal maze he wandered
through, 365

He kept the Sermon on the Mount in view,
And justice always into mercy grew.

No whipping-post he needed, stocks, nor jail,

Nor ducking-stool; the orchard-thief grew pale

At his rebuke, the vixen ceased to rail, 370

The usurer's grasp released the forfeit
land;

The slanderer faltered at the witness-
stand,

And all men took his counsel for command.

Was it caressing air, the brooding love
Of tenderer skies than German land knew of, 375

Green calm below, blue quietness above,

Still flow of water, deep repose of wood
That, with a sense of loving Fatherhood
And childlike trust in the Eternal God,

Softened all hearts, and dulled the edge of hate, 380

Hushed strife, and taught impatient zeal
to wait

The slow assurance of the better state?

Who knows what goadings in their sterner
way

O'er jagged ice, relieved by granite gray,
Blew round the men of Massachusetts
Bay? 385

What hate of heresy the east-wind woke?
What hints of pitiless power and terror
spoke

In waves that on their iron coast-line
broke?

Be it as it may: within the Land of Penn
The sectary yielded to the citizen, 390
And peaceful dwelt the many-creeded
men.

Peace brooded over all. No trumpet stung
The air to madness, and no steeple flung Alarums down from bells at midnight
rung.

The land slept well. The Indian from his face 395
Washed all his war-paint off, and in the place

Of battle-marches sped the peaceful chase,
Or wrought for wages at the white man's
side,—

Giving to kindness what his native pride
And lazy freedom to all else denied. 400

And well the curious scholar loved the old Traditions that his swarthy neighbors told
By wigwam-fires when nights were growing cold,

Discerned the fact round which their fancy drew
Its dreams, and held their childish faith more true 405
To God and man than half the creeds he knew.²⁴

The desert blossomed round him; wheat-fields rolled
Beneath the warm wind waves of green
and gold;
The planted ear returned its hundred-fold.

Great clusters ripened in a warmer sun 410
Than that which by the Rhine stream shines upon
The purpling hillsides with low vines o'er-
run.

About each rustic porch the humming-
bird
Tried with light bill, that scarce a petal
stirred,
The Old World flowers to virgin soil transferred; 415

And the first-fruits of pear and apple, bending

The young boughs down, their gold and
russet blending,

Made glad his heart, familiar odors lending

To the fresh fragrance of the birch and
pine,
Life-everlasting, bay, and eglantine, 420
And all the subtle scents the woods combine.

Fair First-Day mornings, steeped in summer calm,

Warm, tender, restful, sweet with woodland balm,

Came to him, like some mother-hallowed
psalm

To the tired grinder at the noisy wheel 425
Of labor, winding off from memory's reel

A golden thread of music. With no peal

Of bells to call them to the house of praise,
The scattered settlers through green forestways

Walked meeting-ward. In reverent amaze

The Indian trapper saw them, from the dim 431

Shade of the alders on the rivulet's rim,
Seek the Great Spirit's house to talk with Him.

There, through the gathered stillness
multiplied

And made intense by sympathy, outside
The sparrows sang, and the gold-robin
cried, 436

A-swing upon his elm. A faint perfume Breathed through the open windows of the room

From locust-trees, heavy with clustered
bloom.

Thither, perchance, sore-tried confessors
came, 440

Whose fervor jail nor pillory could tame, Proud of the cropped ears meant to be their shame.

Men who had eaten slavery's bitter bread
In Indian isles; pale women who had bled
Under the hangman's lash, and bravely
said 445

God's message through their prison's iron bars;

And gray old soldier-converts, seamed
with scars

From every stricken field of England's wars.

Lowly before the Unseen Presence knelt
Each waiting heart, till haply some one felt 450

On his moved lips the seal of silence melt.

Or, without spoken words, low breathings
stole

Of a diviner life from soul to soul,
Baptizing in one tender thought the whole.

When shaken hands announced the meeting o'er, 455

The friendly group still lingered at the
door,

Greeting, inquiring, sharing all the store

Of weekly tidings. Meanwhile youth and maid

Down the green vistas of the woodland
strayed,

Whispered and smiled and oft their feet delayed. 460

Did the boy's whistle answer back the thrushes?

Did light girl laughter ripple through the bushes,

As brooks make merry over roots and rushes?

Unvexed the sweet air seemed. Without a wound

The ear of silence heard, and every sound
Its place in nature's fine accordance
found. 466

And solemn meeting, summer sky and
wood,

Old kindly faces, youth and maidenhood Seemed, like God's new creation, very good!

And, greeting all with quiet smile and
word, 470

Pastorius went his way. The unscared
bird

Sang at his side; scarcely the squirrel stirred

At his hushed footstep on the mossy sod;
And, wheresoe'er the good man looked or

trod,

He felt the peace of nature and of God. 475

His social life wore no ascetic form,

He loved all beauty, without fear of harm,

And in his veins his Teuton blood ran warm.

Strict to himself, of other men no spy,

Hemade his own no circuit-judge to try 480

The freer conscience of his neighbors by.

With love rebuking, by his life alone,

Gracious and sweet, the better way was shown,

The joy of one, who, seeking not his own,

And faithful to all scruples, finds at last 485

The thorns and shards of duty overpast,

And daily life, beyond his hope's forecast,

Pleasant and beautiful with sight and
sound,

And flowers upspringing in its narrow
round,

And all his days with quiet gladness
crowned. 490

He sang not; but, if sometimes tempted
strong,

He hummed what seemed like Altorf's
Burschen-song,

His good wife smiled and did not count
it wrong.

For well he loved his boyhood's brother
band;

His Memory, while he trod the New World's strand, 495

A double-ganger walked the Fatherland!

If, when on frosty Christmas eves the light Shone on his quiet hearth, he missed the

sight

Of Yule-log, Tree, and Christ-child all in
white;

And closed his eyes, and listened to the
sweet 500

Old wait-songs sounding down his native
street,

And watched again the dancers' mingling
feet ;

Yet not the less, when once the vision
passed,

He held the plain and sober maxims fast
Of the dear Friends with whom his lot was cast. 505

Still all attuned to nature's melodies,
He loved the bird's song in his dooryard
trees,

And the low hum of home-returning bees ;

The blossomed flax, the tulip-trees in
bloom

Down the long street, the beauty and perfume 510

Of apple-boughs, the mingling light and gloom

Of Sommerhausen's woodlands, woven
through

With sun-threads ; and the music the wind
drew,

Mournful and sweet, from leaves it over-
blew.

And evermore, beneath this outward sense,
And through the common sequence of events, 516

He felt the guiding hand of Providence

Reach out of space. A Voice spake in his ear,

And lo ! all other voices far and near Died at that whisper, full of meanings
clear. 520

The Light of Life shone round him ; one by one

The wandering lights, that all-misleading
run,

Went out like candles paling in the sun.

That Light he followed, step by step,
where'er

It led, as in the vision of the seer 525
The wheels moved as the spirit in the clear

And terrible crystal moved, with all their
eyes

Watching the living splendor sink or rise,

Its will their will, knowing no otherwise.

Within himself he found the law of right,
He walked by faith and not the letter's
sight, 531

And read his Bible by the Inward Light.

And if sometimes the slaves of form and rule,

Frozen in their creeds like fish in winter's pool,

Tried the large tolerance of his liberal
school, 535

His door was free to men of every name,
He welcomed all the seeking souls who
came,

And no man's faith he made a cause of
blame.

But best he loved in leisure hours to see
His own dear Friends sit by him knee to knee, 540

In social converse, genial, frank, and free.

There sometimes silence (it were hard to tell

Who owned it first) upon the circle fell,
Hushed Anna's busy wheel, and laid its spell

On the black boy who grimaced by the
hearth, 545

To solemnize his shining face of mirth ;
Only the old clock ticked amidst the deart.

Of sound ; nor eye was raised nor hand was stirred

In that soul-sabbath, till at last some
word

Of tender counsel or low prayer was heard.

Then guests, who lingered but farewell to say 551

And take love's message, went their homeward way ;

So passed in peace the guileless Quaker's
day.

His was the Christian's unsung Age of
Gold,
A truer idyl than the bards have told 555
Of Arno's banks or Arcady of old.

Where still the Friends their place of burial keep,
And century-rooted mosses o'er it creep,
The Nürnberg scholar and his helpmeet
sleep.

And Anna's aloe? If it flowered at last
In Bartram's garden, did John Woolman
cast 561
A glance upon it as he meekly passed?

And did a secret sympathy possess
That tender soul, and for the slave's redress
Lend hope, strength, patience? It were vain to guess. 565

Nay, were the plant itself but mythical,
Set in the fresco of tradition's wall
Like Jotham's bramble, mattereth not at all.

Enough to know that, through the winter's frost
And summer's heat, no seed of truth is lost, 570
And every duty pays at last its cost.

For, ere Pastorius left the sun and air,
God sent the answer to his life-long prayer;
The child was born beside the Delaware,

Who, in the power a holy purpose lends,
Guided his people unto nobler ends, 576
And left them worthier of the name of Friends.

And lo! the fulness of the time has come,
And over all the exile's Western home,
From sea to sea the flowers of freedom
bloom! 580

And joy-bells ring, and silver trumpets
blow;
But not for thee, Pastorius! Even so
The world forgets, but the wise angels
know.

KING VOLMER AND ELSIE.

AFTER THE DANISH OF CHRISTIAN WINTER.

[A Danish gentleman, Mr. P. Taft, sent the poet an unrhymed outline in English of Winter's ballad.]

WHERE, over heathen doom-rings and gray
stones of the Horg,
In its little Christian city stands the church of Vordingborg,
In merry mood King Volmer sat, forgetful of his power,
As idle as the Goose of Gold that brooded
on his tower.

Out spake the King to Henrik, his young and faithful squire: 5
'Dar'st trust thy little Elsie, the maid of thy desire?'

'Of all the men in Denmark she loveth
only me:
As true to me is Elsie as thy Lily is to
thee.'

Loud laughed the king: 'To-morrow shall bring another day,' 25

When I myself will test her; she will not say me nay.' 10

Thereat the lords and gallants, that round about him stood,

Wagged all their heads in concert and smiled as courtiers should.

The gray lark sings o'er Vordingborg, and on the ancient town

From the tall tower of Valdemar the Golden Goose looks down;

The yellow grain is waving in the pleasant wind of morn, 15

The wood resounds with cry of hounds and blare of hunter's horn.

In the garden of her father little Elsie sits and spins,

And, singing with the early birds, her daily task begins.

Gay tulips bloom and sweet mint curls
around her garden-bower,

But she is sweeter than the mint and fairer than the flower. 20

About her form her kirtle blue clings lovingly, and, white
 As snow, her loose sleeves only leave her small, round wrists in sight;
 Below, the modest petticoat can only half conceal
 The motion of the lightest foot that ever turned a wheel.

The cat sits purring at her side, bees hum in sunshine warm;
 But, look! she starts, she lifts her face, she shades it with her arm.
 And, hark! a train of horsemen, with sound of dog and horn,
 Come leaping o'er the ditches, come trampling down the corn!

Merrily rang the bridle-reins, and scarf and plume streamed gay,
 As fast beside her father's gate the riders held their way;
 And one was brave in scarlet cloak, with golden spur on heel,
 And, as he checked his foaming steed, the maiden checked her wheel.

'All hail among thy roses, the fairest rose to me!
 For weary months in secret my heart has longed for thee!
 What noble knight was this? What words for modest maiden's ear?
 She dropped a lowly courtesy of bashfulness and fear.

She lifted up her spinning-wheel; she fain would seek the door,
 Trembling in every limb, her cheek with blushes crimsoned o'er.

'Nay, fear me not,' the riders said, 'I offer heart and hand,
 Bear witness these good Danish knights who round about me stand.

'I grant you time to think of this, to answer as you may,
 For to-morrow, little Elsie, shall bring another day.'
 He spake the old phrase slyly, as glancing round his train,
 He saw his merry followers seek to hide their smiles in vain.

'The snow of pearls I'll scatter in your curls of golden hair,
 I'll line with furs the velvet of the kirtle that you wear;
 All precious gems shall twine your neck; and in a chariot gay
 You shall ride, my little Elsie, behind four steeds of gray.

'And harps shall sound, and flutes shall play, and brazen lamps shall glow;
 On marble floors your feet shall weave the dances to and fro.
 At frosty eventide for us the blazing hearth shall shine,
 While at our ease we play at draughts, and drink the blood-red wine.'

Then Elsie raised her head and met her wooer face to face;
 A roguish smile shone in her eye and on her lip found place.
 Back from her low white forehead the curls of gold she threw,
 And lifted up her eyes to his, steady and clear and blue.

'I am a lowly peasant, and you a gallant knight;
 I will not trust a love that soon may cool and turn to slight.
 If you would wed me henceforth be a peasant, not a lord;
 I bid you hang upon the wall your tried and trusty sword.'

'To please you, Elsie, I will lay keen Dynadel away,
 And in its place will swing the scythe and mow your father's hay.'
 'Nay, but your gallant scarlet cloak my eyes can never bear;
 A Vadmal coat, so plain and gray, is all that you must wear.'

'Well, Vadmal will I wear for you,' the rider gayly spoke,
 'And on the Lord's high altar I'll lay my scarlet cloak.'
 'But mark,' she said, 'no stately horse my peasant love must ride,
 A yoke of steers before the plough is all that he must guide.'

The knight looked down upon his steed :
 'Well, let him wander free :

No other man must ride the horse that has been backed by me. 70

Henceforth I'll tread the furrow and to my oxen talk,

If only little Elsie beside my plough will walk.'

'You must take from out your cellar cask of wine and flask and can ;

The homely mead I brew you may serve a peasant-man.'

'Most willingly, fair Elsie, I'll drink that mead of thine, 75

And leave my minstrel's thirsty throat to drain my generous wine.'

'Now break your shield asunder, and shatter sign and boss,

Unmeet for peasant-wedded arms, your knightly knee across.

And pull me down your castle from top
 to basement wall,

And let your plough trace furrows in the ruins of your hall !' 80

Then smiled he with a lofty pride ; right well at last he knew

The maiden of the spinning-wheel was to her troth-pledge true.

'Ah, roguish little Elsie ! you act your part full well :

You know that I must bear my shield and in my castle dwell !

'The lions ramping on that shield between the hearts aflame 85

Keep watch o'er Denmark's honor, and guard her ancient name.

For know that I am Volmer ; I dwell in yonder towers,

Who ploughs them ploughs up Denmark,
 this goodly home of ours !

'I tempt no more, fair Elsie ! your heart
 I know is true ;

Would God that all our maidens were good and pure as you ! 90

Well have you pleased your monarch,
 and he shall well repay ;

God's peace ! Farewell ! To-morrow will bring another day !'

He lifted up his bridle hand, he spurred his good steed then,

And like a whirl-blast swept away with all his gallant men.

The steel hoofs beat the rocky path ; again
 on winds of morn 95

The wood resounds with cry of hounds and blare of hunter's horn.

'Thou true and ever faithful !' the listening
 Henrik cried ;

And, leaping o'er the green hedge, he stood by Elsie's side.

None saw the fond embracing, save, shining from afar,

The Golden Goose that watched them
 from the tower of Valdemar. 100

O darling girls of Denmark ! of all the flowers that throng

Her vales of spring the fairest, I sing for you my song.

No praise as yours so bravely rewards
 the singer's skill ;

Thank God ! of maids like Elsie the land has plenty still !

THE THREE BELLS.

BENEATH the low-hung night cloud

That raked her splintering mast

The good ship settled slowly,

The cruel leak gained fast.

Over the awful ocean 5

Her signal guns pealed out.

Dear God ! was that Thy answer

From the horror round about ?

A voice came down the wild wind,

'Ho ! ship ahoy !' its cry : 10

'Our stout Three Bells of Glasgow

Shall lay till daylight by !'

Hour after hour crept slowly,

Yet on the heaving swells

Tossed up and down the ship-lights, 15

The lights of the Three Bells !

And ship to ship made signals,

Man answered back to man,

While oft, to cheer and hearten,

The Three Bells nearer ran ; 20

And the captain from her taffrail
Sent down his hopeful cry :
'Take heart ! Hold on !' he shouted ;
'The Three Bells shall lay by !'

All night across the waters 25
The tossing lights shone clear ;
All night from reeling taffrail
The Three Bells sent her cheer.

And when the dreary watches
Of storm and darkness passed, 30
Just as the wreck lurched under,
All souls were saved at last.

Sail on, Three Bells, forever,
In grateful memory sail !
Ring on, Three Bells of rescue, 35
Above the wave and gale !

Type of the Love eternal,
Repeat the Master's cry,
As tossing through our darkness
The lights of God draw nigh ! 40

JOHN UNDERHILL.

A SCORE of years had come and gone
Since the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth
stone,
When Captain Underhill, bearing scars
From Indian ambush and Flemish wars, Left three-hilled Boston and wandered
down, 5
East by north, to Cocheco town.

With Vane the younger, in counsel sweet,
He had sat at Anna Hutchinson's feet,
And, when the bolt of banishment fell
On the head of his saintly oracle, 10
He had shared her ill as her good report,
And braved the wrath of the General
Court.

He shook from his feet as he rode away
The dust of the Massachusetts Bay.
The world might bless and the world might ban, 15
What did it matter the perfect man,
To whom the freedom of earth was given,
Proof against sin, and sure of heaven ?

He cheered his heart as he rode along
With screed of Scripture and holy song,
Or thought how he rode with his lances
free 21

By the Lower Rhine and the Zuyder-Zee,
Till his wood-path grew to a trodden road,
And Hilton Point in the distance showed.

He saw the church with the block-house
nigh, 25

The two fair rivers, the flakes thereby,
And, tacking to windward, low and crank,
The little shallop from Strawberry Bank ;
And he rose in his stirrups and looked abroad

Over land and water, and praised the
Lord. 30

Goodly and stately and grave to see,
Into the clearing's space rode he,
With the sun on the hilt of his sword in sheath,

And his silver buckles and spurs beneath,
And the settlers welcomed him, one and
all, 35

From swift Quampeagan to Gonic Fall.

And he said to the elders : 'Lo, I come
As the way seemed open to seek a home.
Somewhat the Lord hath wrought by my
hands

In the Narragansett and Netherlands, 40
And if here ye have work for a Christian
man,

I will tarry, and serve ye as best I can.

'I boast not of gifts, but fain would own
The wonderful favor God hath shown,
The special mercy vouchsafed one day 45
On the shore of Narragansett Bay,
As I sat, with my pipe, from the camp
aside,

And mused like Isaac at eventide.

'A sudden sweetness of peace I found,
A garment of gladness wrapped me
round ; 50

I felt from the law of works released,
The strife of the flesh and spirit ceased,
My faith to a full assurance grew,
And all I had hoped for myself I knew.

'Now, as God appointeth, I keep my way, 55

I shall not stumble, I shall not stray;
He hath taken away my fig-leaf dress,
I wear the robe of His righteousness;
And the shafts of Satan no more avail 59
Than Pequot arrows on Christian mail.'

'Tarry with us,' the settlers cried,
'Thou man of God, as our ruler and guide.'

And Captain Underhill bowed his head.
'The will of the Lord be done!' he said.
And the morrow beheld him sitting down
In the ruler's seat in Cocheco town. 66

And he judged therein as a just man should;

His words were wise and his rule was
good;

He coveted not his neighbor's land,
From the holding of bribes he shook his
hand; 70

And through the camps of the heathen ran
A wholesome fear of the valiant man.

But the heart is deceitful, the good Book
saith,

And life hath ever a savor of death.
Through hymns of triumph the tempter calls, 75

And whoso thinketh he standeth falls.
Alas! ere their round the seasons ran,
There was grief in the soul of the saintly
man.

The tempter's arrows that rarely fail
Had found the joints of his spiritual mail; 80

And men took note of his gloomy air,
The shame in his eye, the halt in his
prayer,

The signs of a battle lost within,
The pain of a soul in the coils of sin.

Then a whisper of scandal linked his
name 85

With broken vows and a life of blame;
And the people looked askance on him
As he walked among them sullen and grim,
Ill at ease, and bitter of word,
And prompt of quarrel with hand or sword. 90

None knew how, with prayer and fasting
still,

He strove in the bonds of his evil will;
But he shook himself like Samson at length,

And girded anew his loins of strength,
And bade the crier go up and down 95
And call together the wondering town.

Jeer and murmur and shaking of head
Ceased as he rose in his place and said:
'Men, brethren, and fathers, well ye
know

How I came among you a year ago, 100
Strong in the faith that my soul was freed
From sin of feeling, or thought, or deed.

'I have sinned, I own it with grief and
shame,

But not with a lie on my lips I came.
In my blindness I verily thought my
heart 105

Swept and garnished in every part.
He chargeth His angels with folly; He sees

The heavens unclean. Was I more than
these?

'I urge no plea. At your feet I lay
The trust you gave me, and go my way. 110
Hate me or pity me, as you will,
The Lord will have mercy on sinners still;
And I, who am chiefest, say to all,
Watch and pray, lest ye also fall.'

No voice made answer: a sob so low 115
That only his quickened ear could know
Smote his heart with a bitter pain,

As into the forest he rode again,
And the veil of its oaken leaves shut
down

On his latest glimpse of Cocheco town. 120

Crystal-clear on the man of sin
The streams flashed up, and the sky shone in;

On his cheek of fever the cool wind blew,
The leaves dropped on him their tears of
dew,

And angels of God, in the pure, sweet guise 125
Of flowers, looked on him with sad surprise.

Was his ear at fault that brook and breeze
Sang in their saddest of minor keys?

What was it the mournful wood-thrush
said? 129

What whispered the pine-trees overhead?
Did he hear the Voice on his lonely way
That Adam heard in the cool of day?

Into the desert alone rode he,
Alone with the Infinite Purity;
And, bowing his soul to its tender rebuke,
As Peter did to the Master's look, 136
He measured his path with prayers of
pain

For peace with God and nature again.

And in after years to Coheco came
The bruit of a once familiar name; 140
How among the Dutch of New Netherlands,
From wild Danskamer to Haarlem sands,
A penitent soldier preached the Word,
And smote the heathen with Gideon's
sword!

And the heart of Boston was glad to hear How he harried the foe on the long frontier, 146
And heaped on the land against him
barred

The coals of his generous watch and ward.
Frailest and bravest! the Bay State still Counts with her worthies John Underhill.

1873.

CONDUCTOR BRADLEY.

A railway conductor who lost his life in an accident on a Connecticut railway, May 9, 1873.

CONDUCTOR BRADLEY, (always may his
name
Be said with reverence!) as the swift doom
came,
Smitten to death, a crushed and mangled
frame,

Sank, with the brake he grasped just where he stood 4
To do the utmost that a brave man could,
And die, if needful, as a true man should.

Men stooped above him; women dropped their tears

On that poor wreck beyond all hopes or
fears,

Lost in the strength and glory of his
years.

What heard they? Lo! the ghastly lips
of pain, 10

Dead to all thought save duty's, moved
again:

'Put out the signals for the other train!'

No nobler utterance since the world began
From lips of saint or martyr ever ran,
Electric, through the sympathies of man.

Ah me! how poor and noteless seem to
this 16

The sick-bed dramas of self-conscious-
ness,

Our sensual fears of pain and hopes of
bliss!

Oh, grand, supreme endeavor! Not in
vain

That last brave act of failing tongue and brain! 20

Freighted with life the downward rushing train,

Following the wrecked one, as wave
follows wave,

Obed the warning which the dead lips
gave.

Others he saved, himself he could not save.

Nay, the lost life was saved. He is not dead 25

Who in his record still the earth shall tread

With God's clear aureole shining round his head.

We bow as in the dust, with all our
pride

Of virtue dwarfed the noble deed beside.
God give us grace to live as Bradley

died! 30

1873.

THE WITCH OF WENHAM.

The house is still standing in Danvers, Mass., where, it is said, a suspected witch was confined overnight in the attic, which was bolted fast. In the morning, when the constable came to take her to Salem for trial, she was missing, although the door was still bolted. Her escape was doubtless aided by her friends, but at the time it was attributed to Satanic interference.²⁶

I.

ALONG Crane River's sunny slopes
Blew warm the winds of May,
And over Naumkeag's ancient oaks
The green outgrew the gray.

The grass was green on Rial-side,
The early birds at will
Waked up the violet in its dell,
The wind-flower on its hill.

'Where go you, in your Sunday coat,
Son Andrew, tell me, pray.'
'For striped perch in Wenham Lake
I go to fish to-day.'

'Unharm'd of thee in Wenham Lake
The mottled perch shall be:
A blue-eyed witch sits on the bank
And weaves her net for thee.

'She weaves her golden hair; she sings
Her spell-song low and faint;
The wickedest witch in Salem jail
Is to that girl a saint.'

'Nay, mother, hold thy cruel tongue;
God knows,' the young man cried,
'He never made a whiter soul
Than hers by Wenham side.

'She tends her mother sick and blind,
And every want supplies;
To her above the blessed Book
She lends her soft blue eyes.

'Her voice is glad with holy songs,
Her lips are sweet with prayer;
Go where you will, in ten miles round
Is none more good and fair.'

'Son Andrew, for the love of God
And of thy mother, stay!'
She clasped her hands, she wept aloud,
But Andrew rode away.

'O reverend sir, my Andrew's soul
The Wenham witch has caught;
She holds him with the curled gold
Whereof her snare is wrought.

'She charms him with her great blue eyes,
She binds him with her hair;
Oh, break the spell with holy words,
Unbind him with a prayer!'

'Take heart,' the painful preacher said,
'This mischief shall not be;
The witch shall perish in her sins
And Andrew shall go free.

'Our poor Ann Putnam testifies
She saw her weave a spell,
Bare-armed, loose-haired, at full of moon,
Around a dried-up well.

'"Spring up, O well!" she softly sang
The Hebrew's old refrain
(For Satan uses Bible words),
Till water flowed again.

'And many a goodwife heard her speak
By Wenham water words
That made the buttercups take wings
And turn to yellow birds.

'They say that swarming wild bees seek
The hive at her command;
And fishes swim to take their food
From out her dainty hand.

'Meek as she sits in meeting-time,
The godly minister
Notes well the spell that doth compel
The young men's eyes to her.

'The mole upon her dimpled chin
Is Satan's seal and sign;
Her lips are red with evil bread
And stain of unblest wine.

'For Tituba, my Indian, saith
At Quasycung she took
The Black Man's godless sacrament
And signed his dreadful book.

'Last night my sore-afflicted child Against the young witch cried. To take her Marshal Herrick rides Even now to Wenham side.'	80	Sat shaping for her bridal dress Her mother's wedding gown, When lo! the marshal, writ in hand, From Alford hill rode down.	120
The marshal in his saddle sat, His daughter at his knee; 'I go to fetch that arrant witch, Thy fair playmate,' quoth he.		His face was hard with cruel fear, He grasped the maiden's hands: 'Come with me unto Salem town, For so the law commands!'
'Her spectre walks the parsonage, And haunts both hall and stair; They know her by the great blue eyes And floating gold of hair.'	85	'Oh, let me to my mother say Farewell before I go!' He closer tied her little hands Unto his saddle bow.	125
'They lie, they lie, my father dear! No foul old witch is she, But sweet and good and crystal-pure As Wenham waters be.'	90	'Unhand me,' cried she piteously, 'For thy sweet daughter's sake.' 'I'll keep my daughter safe,' he said, 'From the witch of Wenham Lake.'	130
'I tell, thee, child, the Lord hath set Before us good and ill, And woe to all whose carnal loves Oppose His righteous will.	95	'Oh, leave me for my mother's sake, She needs my eyes to see.' 'Those eyes, young witch, the crows shall peck	135
'Between Him and the powers of hell Choose thou, my child, to-day: No sparing hand, no pitying eye, When God commands to slay!'	100	From off the gallows-tree.' He bore her to a farm-house old, And up its stairway long, And closed on her the garret-door With iron bolted strong.	140
He went his way; the old wives shook With fear as he drew nigh; The children in the dooryards held Their breath as he passed by.		The day died out, the night came down: Her evening prayer she said, While, through the dark, strange faces seemed
Too well they knew the gaunt gray horse The grim witch-hunter rode, The pale Apocalyptic beast By grisly Death bestrode.	106	To mock her as she prayed. The present horror deepened all The fears her childhood knew; The awe wherewith the air was filled With every breath she drew.	145
II.
Oh, fair the face of Wenham Lake Upon the young girl's shone, Her tender mouth, her dreaming eyes, Her yellow hair outblown.	110	And could it be, she trembling asked, Some secret thought or sin Had shut good angels from her heart And let the bad ones in?	150
By happy youth and love attuned To natural harmonies, Thesinging birds, the whispering wind, She sat beneath the trees.	115	Had she in some forgotten dream Let go her hold on Heaven, And sold herself unwittingly To spirits unforgiven?	155

Oh, weird and still the dark hours passed ;
No human sound she heard,
But up and down the chimney stack
The swallows moaned and stirred. 160

And o'er her, with a dread surmise
Of evil sight and sound,
The blind bats on their leathern wings
Went wheeling round and round.

Low hanging in the midnight sky 165
Looked in a half-faced moon.
Was it a dream, or did she hear
Her lover's whistled tune?

She forced the oaken scuttle back ;
A whisper reached her ear : 170
'Slide down the roof to me,' it said,
'So softly none may hear.'

She slid along the sloping roof
Till from its eaves she hung,
And felt the loosened shingles yield 175
To which her fingers clung.

Below, her lover stretched his hands
And touched her feet so small ;
'Drop down to me, dear heart,' he said,
'My arms shall break the fall.' 180

He set her on his pillion soft,
Her arms about him twined ;
And, noiseless as if velvet-shod,
They left the house behind.

But when they reached the open way, 185
Full free the rein he cast ;
Oh, never through the mirk midnight
Rode man and maid more fast.

Along the wild wood-paths they sped,
The bridgeless streams they swam ; 190
At set of moon they passed the Bass,
At sunrise Agawam.

At high noon on the Merrimac
The ancient ferryman
Forgot, at times, his idle oars, 195
So fair a freight to scan.

And when from off his grounded boat
He saw them mount and ride,
'God keep her from the evil eye,
And harm of witch !' he cried. 200

The maiden laughed, as youth will laugh
At all its fears gone by ;
'He does not know,' she whispered low,
'A little witch am I.'

All day he urged his weary horse, 205
And, in the red sundown,
Drew rein before a friendly door
In distant Berwick town.

A fellow-feeling for the wronged
The Quaker people felt ; 210
And safe beside their kindly hearths
The hunted maiden dwelt,

Until from off its breast the land
The haunting horror threw,
And hatred, born of ghastly dreams, 215
To shame and pity grew.

Sad were the year's spring morns, and sad
Its golden summer day,
But blithe and glad its withered fields,
And skies of ashen gray ; 220

For spell and charm had power no more,
The spectres ceased to roam,
And scattered households knelt again
Around the hearths of home.

And when once more by Beaver Dam 225
The meadow-lark outsang,
And once again on all the hills
The early violets sprang,

And all the windy pasture slopes
Lay green within the arms 230
Of creeks that bore the salted sea
To pleasant inland farms,

The smith filed off the chains he forged,
The jail-bolts backward fell ;
And youth and hoary age came forth 235
Like souls escaped from hell.

KING SOLOMON AND THE ANTS.

Out from Jerusalem
The king rode with his great
War chiefs and lords of state,
And Sheba's queen with them ;

Comely, but black withal, 5
To whom, perchance, belongs
That wondrous Song of songs,
Sensuous and mystical,

Whereto devout souls turn
In fond, ecstatic dream,
And through its earth-born theme
The Love of loves discern.

10

Proud in the Syrian sun,
In gold and purple sheen,
The dusky Ethiop queen
Smiled on King Solomon.

15

Wisest of men, he knew
The languages of all
The creatures great or small
That trod the earth or flew.

20

Across an ant-hill led
The king's path, and he heard
Its small folk, and their word
He thus interpreted :

'Here comes the king men greet
As wise and good and just,
To crush us in the dust
Under his heedless feet.'

25

The great king bowed his head,
And saw the wide surprise
Of the Queen of Sheba's eyes
As he told her what they said.

30

'O king !' she whispered sweet,
'Too happy fate have they
Who perish in thy way
Beneath thy gracious feet !

35

'Thou of the God-lent crown,
Shall these vile creatures dare
Murmur against thee where
The knees of kings kneel down ?'

40

'Nay,' Solomon replied,
'The wise and strong should seek
The welfare of the weak,'
And turned his horse aside.

His train, with quick alarm,
Curved with their leader round
The ant-hill's peopled mound,
And left it free from harm.

45

The jewelled head bent low ;
'O king !' she said, 'henceforth
The secret of thy worth
And wisdom well I know.

50

'Happy must be the State
Whose ruler heedeth more
The murmurs of the poor
Than flatteries of the great.'

55

1877.

IN THE 'OLD SOUTH.'

On the 8th of July, 1677, Margaret Brewster with four other Friends went into the South Church in time of meeting, 'in sackcloth, with ashes upon her head, barefoot, and her face blackened,' and delivered 'a warning from the great God of Heaven and Earth to the Rulers and Magistrates of Boston' For the offence she was sentenced to be 'whipped at a cart's tail up and down the Town, with twenty lashes.'

SHE came and stood in the Old South Church,

A wonder and a sign,
With a look the old-time sibyls wore,
Half-crazed and half-divine.

Save the mournful sackcloth about her wound,

5

Unclothed as the primal mother,
With limbs that trembled and eyes that blazed

With a fire she dare not smother.

Loose on her shoulders fell her hair,

With sprinkled ashes gray ;
She stood in the broad aisle strange and weird

10

As a soul at the judgment day.

And the minister paused in his sermon's midst,

And the people held their breath,
For these were the words the maiden spoke

15

Through lips as the lips of death :

'Thus saith the Lord, with equal feet

All men My courts shall tread,

And priest and ruler no more shall eat

My people up like bread !

20

'Repent ! repent ! ere the Lord shall speak

In thunder and breaking seals !

Let all souls worship Him in the way

His light within reveals.'

She shook the dust from her naked feet,
And her sackcloth closer drew, 26
And into the porch of the awe-hushed
church

She passed like a ghost from view.

They whipped her away at the tail o' the
cart

Through half the streets of the town, 30
But the words she uttered that day nor fire
Could burn nor water drown.

And now the aisles of the ancient church
By equal feet are trod,
And the bell that swings in its belfry rings 35
Freedom to worship God !

And now whenever a wrong is done
It thrills the conscious walls ;
The stone from the basement cries aloud
And the beam from the timber calls. 40

There are steeple-houses on every hand,
And pulpits that bless and ban,
And the Lord will not grudge the single
church
That is set apart for man.

For in two commandments are all the law
And the prophets under the sun, 46
And the first is last and the last is first,
And the twain are verily one.

So long as Boston shall Boston be,
And her bay-tides rise and fall, 50
Shall freedom stand in the Old South
Church
And plead for the rights of all !

THE HENCHMAN.

[Written at the request of a young lady, who said to the poet: 'Mr. Whittier, you never wrote a love song. I do not believe you can write one. I wish you would try to write one for me to sing.' In sending the poem afterward to the editor of The Independent, Whittier wrote: 'I send, in compliance with the wish of Mr. Bowen and thyself, a ballad upon which, though not long,

I have bestowed a good deal of labor. It is not exactly a Quakerly piece, nor is it didactic, and it has no moral that I know of. But it is, I think, natural, simple, and not unpoetical.')

My lady walks her morning round,
My lady's page her fleet greyhound,
My lady's hair the fond winds stir,
And all the birds make songs for her.

Her thrushes sing in Rathburn bowers, 5
And Rathburn side is gay with flowers ;
But ne'er like hers, in flower or bird,
Was beauty seen or music heard.

The distance of the stars is hers ;
The least of all her worshippers, 10
The dust beneath her dainty heel,
She knows not that I see or feel.

Oh, proud and calm !—she cannot know
Where'er she goes with her I go ;
Oh, cold and fair !—she cannot guess 15
I kneel to share her hound's caress !

Gay knights beside her hunt and hawk,
I rob their ears of her sweet talk ;
Her suitors come from east and west,
I steal her smiles from every guest. 20

Unheard of her, in loving words,
I greet her with the song of birds ;
I reach her with her green-armed bowers,
I kiss her with the lips of flowers.

The hound and I are on her trail, 25
The wind and I uplift her veil ;
As if the calm, cold moon she were,
And I the tide, I follow her.

As unrebuked as they, I share
The license of the sun and air, 30
And in a common homage hide
My worship from her scorn and pride.

World-wide apart, and yet so near,
I breathe her charmed atmosphere,
Wherein to her my service brings 35
The reverence due to holy things.

Her maiden pride, her haughty name,
My dumb devotion shall not shame ;
The love that no return doth crave
To knightly levels lifts the slave. 40

No lance have I, in joust or fight,
To splinter in my lady's sight;
But, at her feet, how blest were I
For any need of hers to die!

THE DEAD FEAST OF THE KOL-FOLK.

E. B. Tylor in his Primitive Culture, chapter xii., gives an account of the reverence paid the dead by the Kol tribes of Chota Nagpur, Assam. 'When a Ho or Munda,' he says, 'has been burned on the funeral pile, collected morsels of his bones are carried in procession with a solemn, ghostly, sliding step, keeping time to the deep-sounding drum, and when the old woman who carries the bones on her bamboo tray lowers it from time to time, then girls who carry pitchers and brass vessels mournfully reverse them to show that they are empty; thus the remains are taken to visit every house in the village, and every dwelling of a friend or relative for miles, and the inmates come out to mourn and praise the goodness of the departed, the bones are carried to all the dead man's favorite haunts, to the fields he cultivated, to the grove he planted, to the threshing-floor where he worked, to the village dance-room where he made merry. At last they are taken to the grave, and buried in an earthen vase upon a store of food, covered with one of those huge stone slabs which European visitors wonder at in the districts of the aborigines of India.' In the Journal of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, vol. ix., p. 795, is a Ho dirge.

We have opened the door,
Once, twice, thrice!
We have swept the floor,
We have boiled the rice.
Come hither, come hither!
Come from the far lands,
Come from the star lands,
Come as before!
We lived long together,
We loved one another;
Come back to our life.
Come father, come mother,
Come sister and brother,
Child, husband, and wife,
For you we are sighing.
Come take your old places,
Come look in our faces,
The dead on the dying,
Come home!

We have opened the door,
Once, twice, thrice!

We have kindled the coals,
And we boil the rice
For the feast of souls.

Come hither, come hither!

Think not we fear you,
Whose hearts are so near you.

Come tenderly thought on,
Come all unforgotten,

Come from the shadow-lands,

From the dim meadow-lands

Where the pale grasses bend

Low to our sighing.

Come father, come mother,

Come sister and brother,

Come husband and friend,

The dead to the dying,
Come home!

We have opened the door

You entered so oft;

For the feast of souls

We have kindled the coals,

And we boil the rice soft.

Come you who are dearest

To us who are nearest,

Come hither, come hither,

From out the wild weather;

The storm clouds are flying,

The peepul is sighing;

Come in from the rain.

Come father, come mother,

Come sister and brother,

Come husband and lover,

Beneath our roof-cover.

Look on us again,

The dead on the dying,

Come home!

We have opened the door!

For the feast of souls

We have kindled the coals

We may kindle no more!

Snake, fever, and famine,

The curse of the Brahmin,

The sun and the dew,

They burn us, they bite us,
They waste us and smite us;

Our days are but few!

In strange lands far yonder
To wonder and wander
We hasten to you. 70
List then to our sighing,
While yet we are here:
Nor seeing nor hearing,
We wait without fearing
To feel you draw near. 75
O dead, to the dying
Come home!

THE KHAN'S DEVIL.

THE Khan came from Bokhara town
To Hamza, santon of renown.

'My head is sick, my hands are weak;
Thy help, O holy man, I seek.'

In silence marking for a space 5
The Khan's red eyes and purple face,

Thick voice, and loose, uncertain tread,
'Thou hast a devil!' Hamza said.

'Allah forbid!' exclaimed the Khan.
'Rid me of him at once, O man!' 10

'Nay,' Hamza said, 'no spell of mine
Can slay that cursed thing of thine.

'Leave feast and wine, go forth and drink
Water of healing on the brink

'Where clear and cold from mountain snows, 15
The Nahr el Zeben downward flows.

'Six moons remain, then come to me;
May Allah's pity go with thee!'

Awestruck, from feast and wine the Khan
Went forth where Nahr el Zeben ran. 20

Roots were his food, the desert dust
His bed, the water quenched his thirst;

And when the sixth moon's scimitar
Curved sharp above the evening star,

He sought again the santon's door, 25
Not weak and trembling as before,

But strong of limb and clear of brain;
'Behold,' he said, 'the fiend is slain.'

'Nay,' Hamza answered, 'starved and
drowned, 75
The curst one lies in death-like swoond. 30

'But evil breaks the strongest gyves,
And jins like him have charmed lives.

'One beaker of the juice of grape
May call him up in living shape.

'When the red wine of Badakshan 35
Sparkles for thee, beware, O Khan!

'With water quench the fire within,
And drown each day thy devilkin!'

Thenceforth the great Khan shunned the cup
As Shitan's own, though offered up, 40

With laughing eyes and jewelled hands,
By Yarkand's maids and Samarcand's.

And, in the lofty vestibule
Of the medress of Kaush Kodul,

The students of the holy law 45
A golden-lettered tablet saw,

With these words, by a cunning hand,
Graved on it at the Khan's command:

'In Allah's name, to him who hath
A devil, Khan el Hamed saith, 50

'Wisely our Prophet cursed the vine:
The fiend that loves the breath of wine

'No prayer can slay, no marabout
Nor Meccan dervis can drive out.

'I, Khan el Hamed, know the charm 55
That robs him of his power to harm.

'Drown him, O Islam's child! the spell
To save thee lies in tank and well!'

THE KING'S MISSIVE.

1661.

This ballad, originally written for The Memorial History of Boston, describes, with pardonable poetic license, a memorable incident in the annals of the city. The interview between Shattuck and the Governor took place, I have since learned, in the residence of the latter, and not in the Council Chamber. The publication of the ballad led to some discussion as to the historical truthfulness of the picture, but I have seen no reason to rub out any of the figures or alter the lines and colors.

UNDER the great hill sloping bare

To cove and meadow and Common lot,
In his council chamber and oaken chair,
Sat the worshipful Governor Endicott.
A grave, strong man, who knew no peer
In the pilgrim land, where he ruled in fear
Of God, not man, and for good or ill
Held his trust with an iron will.

He had shorn with his sword the cross from out

The flag, and cloven the May-pole down,
Harried the heathen round about,
And whipped the Quakers from town to town.

Earnest and honest, a man at need
To burn like a torch for his own harsh
creed,

He kept with the flaming brand of his zeal
The gate of the holy common weal.

His brow was clouded, his eye was stern,
With a look of mingled sorrow and wrath;

'Woe's me!' he murmured: 'at every turn

The pestilent Quakers are in my path!
Some we have scourged, and banished
some,

Some hanged, more doomed, and still they come,

Fast as the tide of yon bay sets in,
Sowing their herey's seed of sin.

'Did we count on this? Did we leave behind

The graves of our kin, the comfort and ease

Of our English hearths and homes, to find

Troublers of Israel such as these?

Shall I spare? Shall I pity them? God forbid!

I will do as the prophet to Agag did:
They come to poison the wells of the

Word,

I will hew them in pieces before the Lord!

The door swung open, and Rawson the clerk

Entered, and whispered under breath,
'There waits below for the hangman's work

A fellow banished on pain of death—
Shattuck, of Salem, unhealed of the whip,

Brought over in Master Goldsmith's ship
At anchor here in a Christian port,
With freight of the devil and all, his
sort!

Twice and thrice on the chamber floor

Striding fiercely from wall to wall,

'The Lord do so to me and more,'
The Governor cried, 'if I hang not all!

Bring hither the Quaker.' Calm, sedate,
With the look of a man at ease with
fate,

Into that presence grim and dread
Came Samuel Shattuck, with hat on head.

'Off with the knave's hat!' An angry
hand

Smote down the offence; but the wearer
said,

With a quiet smile, 'By the king's command

I bear his message and stand in his
stead.'

In the Governor's hand a missive he laid
With the royal arms on its seal displayed,
And the proud man spake as he gazed
thereat,

Uncovering, 'Give Mr. Shattuck his hat.'

He turned to the Quaker, bowing low,—
'The king commandeth your friends'
release ;

Doubt not he shall be obeyed, although
To his subjects' sorrow and sin's increase. 60

What he here enjoineeth, John Endicott,
His loyal servant, questioneth not.
You are free ! God grant the spirit you
own

May take you from us to parts unknown.'

So the door of the jail was open cast, 65
And, like Daniel, out of the lion's den
Tender youth and girlhood passed,
With age-bowed women and gray-locked
men.

And the voice of one appointed to die
Was lifted in praise and thanks on high, 70
And the little maid from New Netherlands Kissed, in her joy, the doomed man's hands.

And one, whose call was to minister
To the souls in prison, beside him went,
An ancient woman, bearing with her 75
The linen shroud for his burial meant.
For she, not counting her own life dear,
In the strength of a love that cast out fear,
Had watched and served where her brethren died,
Like those who waited the cross beside. 80

One moment they paused on their way
to look

On the martyr graves by the Common
side,

And much scourged Wharton of Salem
took

His burden of prophecy up and cried :
' Rest, souls of the valiant ! Not in vain 85
Have ye borne the Master's cross of pain ;
Ye have fought the fight, ye are victors
crowned,

With a fourfold chain ye have Satan
bound !'

The autumn haze lay soft and still
On wood and meadow and upland farms ; 90

On the brow of Snow Hill the great windmill

Slowly and lazily swung its arms ;

Broad in the sunshine stretched away,
With its capes and islands, the turquoise
bay ;

And over water and dusk of pines 95
Blue hills lifted their faint outlines.

The topaz leaves of the walnut glowed,
The sumach added its crimson fleck,
And double in air and water showed
The tinted maples along the Neck ; 100
Through frost flower clusters of pale star-
mist,

And gentian fringes of amethyst,
And royal plumes of golden-rod,
The grazing cattle on Centry trod.

But as they who see not, the Quakers saw
The world about them ; they only
thought 106

With deep thanksgiving and pious awe
On the great deliverance God had
wrought.

Through lane and alley the gazing town
Noisily followed them up and down ; 110
Some with scoffing and brutal jeer,
Some with pity and words of cheer.

One brave voice rose above the din.
Upsall, gray with his length of days,
Cried from the door of his Red Lion
Inn : 115

' Men of Boston, give God the praise !
No more shall innocent blood call down
The bolts of wrath on your guilty town.
The freedom of worship, dear to you,
Is dear to all, and to all is due. 120

' I see the vision of days to come,
When your beautiful City of the Bay
Shall be Christian liberty's chosen home,
And none shall his neighbor's rights
gainsay.

The varying notes of worship shall
blend 125

And as one great prayer to God ascend,
And hands of mutual charity raise
Walls of salvation and gates of praise.'

So passed the Quakers through Boston
town,

Whose painful ministers sighed to
see 130

The walls of their sheep-fold falling down,
And wolves of heresy prowling free.

But the years went on, and brought no
wrong;

With milder counsels the State grew
strong,

As outward Letter and inward Light 135
Kept the balance of truth aright.

The Puritan spirit perishing not,
To Concord's yeomen the signal sent,
And spake in the voice of the cannon-
shot

That severed the chains of a continent.
With its gentler mission of peace and good-will 141

The thought of the Quaker is living
still,

And the freedom of soul he prophesied
Is gospel and law where the martyrs died.

VALUATION.

THE old Squire said, as he stood by his
gate,

And his neighbor, the Deacon, went by,
'In spite of my bank stock and real estate,
You are better off, Deacon, than I.

'We're both growing old, and the end's drawing near, 5

You have less of this world to resign,
But in Heaven's appraisal your assets,
I fear,

Will reckon up greater than mine.

'They say I am rich, but I'm feeling so
poor,

I wish I could swap with you even: 10
The pounds I have lived for and laid up in store

For the shillings and pence you have given.'

'Well, Squire,' said the Deacon, with shrewd common sense,

While his eye had a twinkle of fun,
'Let your pounds take the way of my shillings and pence, 15

And the thing can be easily done!'

RABBI ISHMAEL.

'Rabbi Ishmael Ben Elisha said, Once I entered into the Holy of Holies [as High Priest] to burn incense, when I saw Akriel [the Divine Crown] Jah, Lord of Hosts, sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, who said unto me,
"Ishmael, my son, bless me." I answered, "*May it please Thee to make Thy compassion prevail over Thine anger; may it be revealed above
Thy other attributes; mayest Thou deal with Thy children according to it, and not according to the strict measure of judgment*" It seemed to me that He bowed His head, as though to answer Amen to my blessing'—Talmud (Berachôth, i f 6 b).

THE Rabbi Ishmael, with the woe and sin
Of the world heavy upon him, entering in
The Holy of Holies, saw an awful Face
With terrible splendor filling all the place.
'O Ishmael Ben Elisha!' said a voice, 5
'What seekest thou? What blessing is thy choice?'

And, knowing that he stood before the Lord,

Within the shadow of the cherubim,
Wide-winged between the blinding light
and him,

He bowed himself, and uttered not a
word, 10

But in the silence of his soul was prayer:
'O Thou Eternal! I am one of all,
And nothing ask that others may not
share.

Thou art almighty; we are weak and
small,

And yet Thy children: let Thy mercy
spare! 15

Trembling, he raised his eyes, and in the
place

Of the insufferable glory, lo! a face
Of more than mortal tenderness, that bent
Graciously down in token of assent,

And, smiling, vanished! With strange joy elate, 20

The wondering Rabbi sought the temple's
gate.

Radiant as Moses from the Mount, he stood

And cried aloud unto the multitude:

'O Israel, hear! The Lord our God is good!
 Mine eyes have seen His glory and His grace;
 Beyond His judgments shall His love endure;
 The mercy of the All Merciful is sure!

THE ROCK-TOMB OF BRADORE.

H. Y. Hind, in Explorations in the Interior of the Labrador Peninsula (II. 166), mentions the finding of a rock-tomb near the little fishing-port of Bradore, with the inscription upon it which is given in the poem

A DREAR and desolate shore!
 Where no tree unfolds its leaves,
 And never the spring wind weaves
 Green grass for the hunter's tread;
 A land forsaken and dead,
 Where the ghostly icebergs go
 And come with the ebb and flow
 Of the waters of Bradore!

A wanderer, from a land
 By summer breezes fanned,
 Looked round him, awed, subdued,
 By the dreadful solitude,
 Hearing alone the cry
 Of sea-birds clanging by,
 The crash and grind of the floe,
 Wail of wind and wash of tide.
 'O wretched land!' he cried,
 'Land of all lands the worst,
 God forsaken and curst!
 Thy gates of rock should show
 The words the Tuscan seer
 Read in the Realm of Woe:
Hope entereth not here!'

Lo! at his feet there stood
 A block of smooth larch wood,
 Waif of some wandering wave,
 Beside a rock-closed cave
 By Nature fashioned for a grave;
 Safe from the ravening bear
 And fierce fowl of the air,
 Wherein to rest was laid
 A twenty summers' maid,
 Whose blood had equal share

Of the lands of vine and snow,
 Half French, half Eskimo.
 In letters uneffaced,
 Upon the block were traced
 The grief and hope of man,
 And thus the legend ran:
 'We loved her!
 Words cannot tell how well!
 We loved her!
 God loved her!
 And called her home to peace and rest.
 We love her!'

The stranger paused and read.
 'O winter land!' he said,
 'Thy right to be I own;
 God leaves thee not alone.
 And if thy fierce winds blow
 Over drear wastes of rock and snow,
 And at thy iron gates
 The ghostly iceberg waits,
 Thy homes and hearts are dear.
 Thy sorrow o'er thy sacred dust
 Is sanctified by hope and trust;
 God's love and man's are here.
 And love where'er it goes
 Makes its own atmosphere;
 Its flowers of Paradise
 Take root in the eternal ice,
 And bloom through Polar snows!'

THE BAY OF SEVEN ISLANDS.

The volume in which The Bay of Seven Islands was published was dedicated to the late Edwin Percy Whipple, to whom more than to any other person I was indebted for public recognition as one worthy of a place in American literature, at a time when it required a great degree of courage to urge such a claim for a proscribed abolitionist. Although younger than I, he had gained the reputation of a brilliant essayist, and was regarded as the highest American authority in criticism. His wit and wisdom enlivened a small literary circle of young men, including Thomas Starr King, the eloquent preacher, and Daniel N. Haskell, of the Daily Transcript, who gathered about our common friend James T. Fields at the Old Corner Bookstore. The poem which gave title to the volume I inscribed to my friend and neighbor, Harriet Prescott Spofford, whose poems have lent a new interest to our beautiful river-valley.

FROM the green Amesbury hill which bears the name
Of that half mythic ancestor of mine
Who trod its slopes two hundred years ago,

Down the long valley of the Merrimac,
Midway between me and the river's
mouth, 5

I see thy home, set like an eagle's nest
Among Deer Island's immemorial pines, Crowning the crag on which the sunset breaks

Its last red arrow. Many a tale and song, Which thou hast told or sung, I call to mind, 10

Softening with silvery mist the woods and
hills,
The out-thrust headlands and inreaching bays

Of our northeastern coast-line, trending
where

The Gulf, midsummer, feels the chill blockade

Of icebergs stranded at its northern gate.

To thee the echoes of the Island Sound 16
Answer not vainly, nor in vain the moan
Of the South Breaker prophesying storm.
And thou hast listened, like myself, to
men

Sea-periled oft where Anticosti lies 20
Like a fell spider in its web of fog,

Or where the Grand Bank shallows with the wrecks

Of sunken fishers, and to whom strange isles

And frost-rimmed bays and trading stations seem

Familiar as Great Neck and Kettle Cove, Nubble and Boon, the common names of
home. 26

So let me offer thee this lay of mine,
Simple and homely, lacking much thy
play

Of color and of fancy. If its theme
And treatment seem to thee befitting
youth 30

Rather than age, let this be my excuse:

It has beguiled some heavy hours and called

Some pleasant memories up; and, better
still,

Occasion lent me for a kindly word
To one who is my neighbor and my friend. 35

1883.

The skipper sailed out of the harbor
mouth,

Leaving the apple-bloom of the South
For the ice of the Eastern seas,
In his fishing schooner Breeze. 39

Handsome and brave and young was he,
And the maids of Newbury sighed to see
His lessening white sail fall
Under the sea's blue wall.

Through the Northern Gulf and the misty screen

Of the isles of Mingan and Madeleine, 45
St. Paul's and Blanc Sablon,
The little Breeze sailed on,

Backward and forward, along the shore
Of lorn and desolate Labrador,
And found at last her way 50
To the Seven Islands Bay.

The little hamlet, nestling below
Great hills white with lingering snow,
With its tin-roofed chapel stood
Half hid in the dwarf spruce wood; 55

Green-turfed, flower-sown, the last outpost

Of summer upon the dreary coast,
With its gardens small and spare,
Sad in the frosty air.

Hard by where the skipper's schooner
lay, 60

A fisherman's cottage looked away
Over isle and bay, and behind
On mountains dim-defined.

And there twin sisters, fair and young,
Laughed with their stranger guest, and
sung 65

In their native tongue the lays
Of the old Provençal days.

Alike were they, save the faint outline
Of a scar on Suzette's forehead fine;
And both, it so befell, 70
Loved the heretic stranger well.

Both were pleasant to look upon,
But the heart of the skipper clave to one;
Though less by his eye than heart
He knew the twain apart. 75

Despite of alien race and creed,
Well did his wooing of Margueritespeed;
And the mother's wrath was vain
As the sister's jealous pain.

The shrill-tongued mistress her house forbade, 80

And solemn warning was sternly said
By the black-robed priest, whose word
As law the hamlet heard.

But half by voice and half by signs
The skipper said, 'A warm sun shines 85
On the green-banked Merrimac;
Wait, watch, till I come back.

'And when you see, from my mast head,
The signal fly of a kerchief red,
My boat on the shore shall wait; 90
Come, when the night is late.'

Ah! weighed with childhood's haunts and friends,
And all that the home sky overbends,
Did ever young love fail
To turn the trembling scale? 95

Under the night, on the wet sea sands,
Slowly unclasped their plighted hands:
One to the cottage hearth,
And one to his sailor's berth.

What was it the parting lovers heard? 100
Nor leaf, nor ripple, nor wing of bird,
But a listener's stealthy tread
On the rock-moss, crisp and dead.

He weighed his anchor, and fished once
more

By the black coast-line of Labrador; 105
And by love and the north wind
driven,
Sailed back to the Islands Seven.

In the sunset's glow the sisters twain
Saw the Breeze come sailing in again;
Said Suzette, 'Mother dear, 110
The heretic's sail is here.'

'Go, Marguerite, to your room, and hide;
Your door shall be bolted!' the mother
cried:

While Suzette, ill at ease, 114
Watched the red sign of the Breeze.

At midnight, down to the waiting skiff
She stole in the shadow of the cliff;
And out of the Bay's mouth ran
The schooner with maid and man.

And all night long, on a restless bed, 120
Her prayers to the Virgin Marguerite
said:

And thought of her lover's pain
Waiting for her in vain.

Did he pace the sands? Did he pause to hear

The sound of her light step drawing near?
And, as the slow hours passed, 126
Would he doubt her faith at last?

But when she saw through the misty pane,
The morning break on a sea of rain,
Could even her love avail 130
To follow his vanished sail?

Meantime the Breeze, with favoring wind,
Left the rugged Moisis hills behind,
And heard from an unseen shore
The falls of Manitou roar. 135

On the morrow's morn, in the thick, gray
weather

They sat on the reeling deck together,
Lover and counterfeit
Of hapless Marguerite.

With a lover's hand, from her forehead
fair 140

He smoothed away her jet-black hair.
What was it his fond eyes met?
The scar of the false Suzette!

Fiercely he shouted : ' Bear away
East by north for the Seven Isles Bay !'
The maiden wept and prayed, 146
But the ship her helm obeyed.

Once more the Bay of the Isles they found :
They heard the bell of the chapel sound,
And the chant of the dying sung 150
In the harsh, wild Indian tongue.

A feeling of mystery, change, and awe
Was in all they heard and all they saw :
Spell-bound the hamlet lay
In the hush of its lonely bay. 155

And when they came to the cottage door,
The mother rose up from her weeping
sore,
And with angry gestures met
The scared look of Suzette.

' Here is your daughter,' the skipper said ;
' Give me the one I love instead.' 161
But the woman sternly spake ;
' Go, see if the dead will wake !'

He looked. Her sweet face still and white
And strange in the noonday taper light,
She lay on her little bed, 166
With the cross at her feet and head.

In a passion of grief the strong man
bent
Down to her face, and, kissing it, went Back to the waiting Breeze, 170
Back to the mournful seas.

Never again to the Merrimac
And Newbury's homes that bark came
back.
Whether her fate she met
On the shores of Carraquette, 175

Miscou, or Tracadie, who can say ?
But even yet at Seven Isles Bay
Is told the ghostly tale
Of a weird, unspoken sail,

In the pale, sad light of the Northern day
Seen by the blanketed Montagnais, 181
Or squaw, in her small kyack,
Crossing the spectre's track.

On the deck a maiden wrings her hands ;
Her likeness kneels on the gray coast
sands ; 185
One in her wild despair,
And one in the trance of prayer.

She flits before no earthly blast,
The red sign fluttering from her mast,
Over the solemn seas, 190
The ghost of the schooner Breeze !

THE WISHING BRIDGE.

AMONG the legends sung or said
Along our rocky shore,
The Wishing Bridge of Marblehead
May well be sung once more.

An hundred years ago (so ran 5
The old-time story) all
Good wishes said above its span
Would, soon or late, befall.

If pure and earnest, never failed
The prayers of man or maid 10
For him who on the deep sea sailed,
For her at home who stayed.

Once thither came two girls from school,
And wished in childish glee :
And one would be a queen and rule, 15
And one the world would see.

Time passed ; with change of hopes and
fears,
And in the self-same place,
Two women, gray with middle years,
Stood, wondering, face to face. 20

With wakened memories, as they met,
They queried what had been :
' A poor man's wife am I, and yet,'
Said one, ' I am a queen.

' My realm a little homestead is, 25
Where, lacking crown and throne,
I rule by loving services
And patient toil alone.'

The other said: 'The great world lies
Beyond me as it lay;
O'er love's and duty's boundaries
My feet may never stray.

30

'I see but common sights of home,
Its common sounds I hear,
My widowed mother's sick-bed room
Sufficeth for my sphere.

35

'I read to her some pleasant page
Of travel far and wide,
And in a dreamy pilgrimage
We wander side by side.

40

'And when, at last, she falls asleep,
My book becomes to me
A magic glass: my watch I keep,
But all the world I see.

'A farm-wife queen your place you fill, 45
While fancy's privilege
Is mine to walk the earth at will,
Thanks to the Wishing Bridge.'

'Nay, leave the legend for the truth,'
The other cried, 'and say 50
God gives the wishes of our youth,
But in His own best way!'

HOW THE WOMEN WENT FROM DOVER.

The following is a copy of the warrant issued by Major Waldron, of Dover, in 1662. The Quakers, as was their wont, prophesied against him, and saw, as they supposed, the fulfilment of their prophecy when, many years after, he was killed by the Indians.

To the constables of Dover, Hampton, Salisbury, Newbury, Rowley, Ipswich, Wenham, Lynn, Boston, Roxbury, Dedham, and until these vagabond Quakers are carried out of this jurisdiction.

You, and every one of you, are required, in the King's Majesty's name, to take these vagabond Quakers, Anne Colman, Mary Tomkins, and Alice Ambrose, and make them fast to the cart's tail, and driving the cart through your several towns, to whip them upon their naked backs not exceeding ten stripes apiece on each of them, in each town; and so to convey them from constable to constable till they are out of this jurisdiction, as you will answer it at your peril; and this shall be your warrant.

RICHARD WALDRON.

Dated at Dover, December 22, 1662

This warrant was executed only in Dover and Hampton. At Salisbury the constable refused to obey it. He was sustained by the town's people, who were under the influence of Major Robert Pike, the leading man in the lower valley of the Merrimac, who stood far in advance of his time, as an advocate of religious freedom, and an opponent of ecclesiastical authority. He had the moral courage to address an able and manly letter to the court at Salem, remonstrating against the witchcraft trials.

THE tossing spray of Coheco's fall
Hardened to ice on its rocky wall,
As through Dover town in the chill, gray
dawn,
Three women passed, at the cart-tail
drawn!

Bared to the waist, for the north wind's grip
And keener sting of the constable's whip, 5
The blood that followed each hissing blow
Froze as it sprinkled the winter snow.

Priest and ruler, boy and maid
Followed the dismal cavalcade; 10
And from door and window, open thrown,
Looked and wondered gaffer and crone.

'God is our witness,' the victims cried,
'We suffer for Him who for all men
died;
The wrong ye do has been done before, 15
We bear the stripes that the Master bore!

'And thou, O Richard Waldron, for whom
We hear the feet of a coming doom,
On thy cruel heart and thy hand of wrong
Vengeance is sure, though it tarry long. 20

'In the light of the Lord, a flame we see Climb and kindle a proud roof-tree;
And beneath it an old man lying dead,
With stains of blood on his hoary head.'

'Smite, Goodman Hate-Evil!—harder
still!' 25

The magistrate cried, 'lay on with a will!
Drive out of their bodies the Father of

Lies,

Who through them preaches and prophesies!' 3

So into the forest they held their way, 29
By winding river and frost-rimmed bay,
Over wind-swept hills that felt the beat
Of the winter sea at their icy feet.

The Indian hunter, searching his traps,
Peered stealthily through the forest gaps;
And the outlying settler shook his head,—
'They're witches going to jail,' he said. 36

At last a meeting-house came in view;
A blast on his horn the constable blew;
And the boys of Hampton cried up and
down,

'The Quakers have come!' to the wondering town. 40

From barn and woodpile the goodman
came;

The goodwife quitted her quilting frame,
With her child at her breast; and, hobbling
slow,

The grandam followed to see the show.

Once more the torturing whip was swung,
Once more keen lashes the bare flesh
stung. 46

'Oh, spare! they are bleeding!' a little maid cried,

And covered her face the sight to hide.

A murmur ran round the crowd: 'Good folks,'

Quoth the constable, busy counting the strokes, 50

'No pity to wretches like these is due,
They have beaten the gospel black and
blue!'

Then a pallid woman, in wild-eyed fear,
With her wooden noggin of milk drew
near.

'Drink, poor hearts!' a rude hand smote 55
Her draught away from a parching throat.

'Take heed,' one whispered, 'they'll take your cow

For fines, as they took your horse and plough,

And the bed from under you.' 'Even so,'
She said; 'they are cruel as death, I know.'

Then on they passed, in the waning day, 61
Through Seabrook woods, a weariful way;
By great salt meadows and sand-hills bare,
And glimpses of blue sea here and there.

By the meeting-house in Salisbury town, 65
The sufferers stood, in the red sundown,
Bare for the lash! O pitying Night,
Drop swift thy curtain and hide the sight!

With shame in his eye and wrath on his lip

The Salisbury constable dropped his
whip. 70

'This warrant means murder foul and red;
Cursed is he who serves it,' he said.

'Show me the order, and meanwhile strike
A blow at your peril!' said Justice Pike.
Of all the rulers the land possessed, 75
Wisest and boldest was he and best.

He scoffed at witchcraft; the priest he met
As man meets man; his feet he set
Beyond his dark age, standing upright,
Soul-free, with his face to the morning
light. 80

He read the warrant: '*These convey
From our precincts; at every town on the
way*

Give each ten lashes.' 'God judge the brute!

I tread his order under my foot! 84

'Cut loose these poor ones and let them go;
Come what will of it, all men shall know
No warrant is good, though backed by the Crown,

For whipping women in Salisbury town!'

The hearts of the villagers, half released
From creed of terror and rule of priest, 90
By a primal instinct owned the right
Of human pity in law's despite.

For ruth and chivalry only slept,
His Saxon manhood the yeoman kept;
Quicker or slower, the same blood ran 95
In the Cavalier and the Puritan.

The Quakers sank on their knees in praise
And thanks. A last, low sunset blaze
Flashed out from under a cloud, and shed
A golden glory on each bowed head. 100

The tale is one of an evil time,
When souls were fettered and thought was crime,
And heresy's whisper above its breath
Meant shameful scourging and bonds and
death!

What marvel, that hunted and sorely tried, 105
Even woman rebuked and prophesied,
And soft words rarely answered back
The grim persuasion of whip and rack!

If her cry from the whipping-post and jail
Pierced sharp as the Kenite's driven nail, 110

O woman, at ease in these happier days,
Forbear to judge of thy sister's ways!

How much thy beautiful life may owe
To her faith and courage thou canst not
know,
Nor how from the paths of thy calm retreat 115
She smoothed the thorns with her bleeding
feet.

SAINT GREGORY'S GUEST.

A TALE for Roman guides to tell
To careless, sight-worn travellers still,
Who pause beside the narrow cell
Of Gregory on the Cælian Hill.

One day before the monk's door came 5
A beggar, stretching empty palms,
Fainting and fast-sick, in the name
Of the Most Holy asking alms.

And the monk answered, 'All I have
In this poor cell of mine I give, 10
The silver cup my mother gave;
In Christ's name take thou it, and live.'

Years passed; and, called at last to bear

The pastoral crook and keys of Rome,
The poor monk, in Saint Peter's chair, 15
Sat the crowned lord of Christendom.

'Prepare a feast,' Saint Gregory cried,
'And let twelve beggars sit thereat.'
The beggars came, and one beside,
An unknown stranger, with them sat.

'I asked thee not,' the Pontiff spake, 21
'O stranger; but if need be thine,
I bid thee welcome, for the sake
Of Him who is thy Lord and mine.'

A grave, calm face the stranger raised, 25
Like His who on Gennesaret trod,
Or His on whom the Chaldeans gazed,
Whose form was as the Son of God.

'Know'st thou,' he said, 'thy gift of
old?'
And in the hand he lifted up 30
The Pontiff marvelled to behold
Once more his mother's silver cup.

'Thy prayers and alms have risen, and
bloom
Sweetly among the flowers of heaven.
I am The Wonderful, through whom 35
Whate'er thou askest shall be given.'

He spake and vanished. Gregory fell
With his twelve guests in mute accord
Prone on their faces, knowing well
Their eyes of flesh had seen the Lord. 40

The old-time legend is not vain;
Nor vain thy art, Verona's Paul,
Telling it o'er and o'er again
On gray Vicenza's frescoed wall.

Still wheresoever pity shares 45
Its bread with sorrow, want, and sin,
And love the beggar's feast prepares,
The uninvited Guest comes in.

Unheard, because our ears are dull,
Unseen, because our eyes are dim, 50
He walks our earth, The Wonderful,
And all good deeds are done to Him.

BIRCHBROOK MILL.

A NOTELESS stream, the Birchbrook runs
Beneath its leaning trees ;
That low, soft ripple is its own,
That dull roar is the sea's.

Of human signs it sees alone 5
The distant church spire's tip,
And, ghost-like, on a blank of gray,
The white sail of a ship.

No more a toiler at the wheel,
It wanders at its will ; 10
Nor dam nor pond is left to tell
Where once was Birchbrook mill.

The timbers of that mill have fed
Long since a farmer's fires ;
His doorsteps are the stones that ground
The harvest of his sires. 16

Man trespassed here ; but Nature lost
No right of her domain ;
She waited, and she brought the old
Wild beauty back again. 20

By day the sunlight through the leaves
Falls on its moist, green sod,
And wakes the violet bloom of spring
And autumn's golden-rod.

Its birches whisper to the wind, 25
The swallow dips her wings
In the cool spray, and on its banks
The gray song-sparrow sings.

But from it, when the dark night falls,
The school-girl shrinks with dread ; 30
The farmer, home-bound from his fields,
Goes by with quickened tread.

They dare not pause to hear the grind
Of shadowy stone on stone ;
The plashing of a water-wheel 35
Where wheel there now is none.

Has not a cry of pain been heard
Above the clattering mill ?
The pawing of an unseen horse,
Who waits his mistress still ? 40

Yet never to the listener's eye
Has sight confirmed the sound ;
A wavering birch line marks alone
The vacant pasture ground.

No ghostly arms fling up to heaven 45
The agony of prayer ;
No spectral steed impatient shakes
His white mane on the air.

The meaning of that common dread 50
No tongue has fitly told ;
The secret of the dark surmise
The brook and birches hold.

What nameless horror of the past
Broods here forevermore ?
What ghost his unforgiven sin 55
Is grinding o'er and o'er ?

Does, then, immortal memory play
The actor's tragic part,
Rehearsals of a mortal life
And unveiled human heart ? 60

God's pity spare a guilty soul
That drama of its ill,
And let the scenic curtain fall
On Birchbrook's haunted mill !

THE TWO ELIZABETHS.

Read at the unveiling of the bust of Elizabeth Fry at the Friends' School, Providence, R. I.

A.D. 1209.

AMIDST Thuringia's wooded hills she dwelt,
A high-born princess, servant of the
poor,
Sweetening with gracious words the food
she dealt
To starving throngs at Wartburg's blazoned door.

A blinded zealot held her soul in chains, 5 Cramped the sweet nature that he could not kill,
Scarred her fair body with his penance-
pains,
And gauged her conscience by his narrow will.

God gave her gifts of beauty and of grace,
With fast and vigil she denied them all;
Unquestioning, with sad, pathetic face, 11
She followed meekly at her stern guide's
call.

So drooped and died her home-blown rose of bliss
In the chill rigor of a discipline
That turned her fond lips from her children's kiss, 15
And made her joy of motherhood a sin.

To their sad level by compassion led,
One with the low and vile herself she
made,
While thankless misery mocked the hand
that fed,
And laughed to scorn her piteous masquerade. 20

But still, with patience that outwearied
hate,
She gave her all while yet she had to give;
And then her empty hands, importunate,
In prayer she lifted that the poor might
live.

Sore pressed by grief, and wrongs more hard to bear, 25
And dwarfed and stifled by a harsh control,
She kept life fragrant with good deeds
and prayer,
And fresh and pure the white flower of her soul.

Death found her busy at her task: one
word 29
Alone she uttered as she paused to die,
'Silence!'—then listened even as one who
heard
With song and wing the angels drawing
nigh!

Now Fra Angelico's roses fill her hands,
And, on Murillo's canvas, Want and
Pain
Kneel at her feet. Her marble image stands 35
Worshipped and crowned in Marburg's holy fane.

Yea, wheresoe'er her Church its cross
uprears,
Wide as the world her story still is
told;
In manhood's reverence, woman's prayers
and tears,
She lives again whose grave is centuries
old. 40

And still, despite the weakness or the
blame
Of blind submission to the blind, she hath
A tender place in hearts of every name,
And more than Rome owns Saint Elizabeth!

A.D. 1780.

Slow ages passed: and lo! another
came, 45
An English matron, in whose simple
faith
Nor priestly rule nor ritual had claim,
A plain, uncanonized Elizabeth.

No sackcloth robe, nor ashen-sprinkled
hair,
Nor wasting fast, nor scourge, nor vigil
long, 50
Marred her calm presence. God had made her fair,
And she could do His goodly work no
wrong.

Their yoke is easy and their burden
light
Whose sole confessor is the Christ of
God;
Her quiet trust and faith transcending
sight 55
Smoothed to her feet the difficult paths
she trod.

And there she walked, as duty bade her
go,
Safe and unsullied as a cloistered nun,
Shamed with her plainness Fashion's
gaudy show,
And overcame the world she did not
shun. 60

In Earlham's bowers, in Plashet's liberal
hall,

In the great city's restless crowd and
din,

Her ear was open to the Master's call,
And knew the summons of His voice
within.

Tender as mother, beautiful as wife, 65
Amidst the throngs of prisoned crime
she stood

In modest raiment faultless as her life,
The type of England's worthiest woman-
hood!

To melt the hearts that harshness turned to stone

The sweet persuasion of her lips sufficed,
And guilt, which only hate and fear had
known, 71

Saw in her own the pitying love of Christ.

So wheresoe'er the guiding Spirit went
She followed, finding every prison cell
It opened for her sacred as a tent 75
Pitched by Gennesaret or by Jacob's
well.

And Pride and Fashion felt her strong appeal,

And priest and ruler marvelled as they saw •

How hand in hand went wisdom with her
zeal,

And woman's pity kept the bounds of
law. 80

She rests in God's peace; but her memory
stirs

The air of earth as with an angel's wings,
And warms and moves the hearts of men
like hers,

The sainted daughter of Hungarian
kings.

United now, the Briton and the Hun, 85
Each, in her own time, faithful unto
death,

Live sister souls! in name and spirit one,
Thuringia's saint and our Elizabeth!

1885.

REQUITAL.

As Islam's Prophet, when his last day
drew

Nigh to its close, besought all men to
say

Whom he had wronged, to whom he then should pay

A debt forgotten, or for pardon sue,
And, through the silence of his weeping
friends, 5

A strange voice cried: 'Thou owest me
a debt,'

'Allah be praised!' he answered. 'Even
yet

He gives me power to make to thee
amends.

O friend! I thank thee for thy timely
word.'

So runs the tale. Its lesson all may heed,
For all have sinned in thought, or word,
or deed, 11

Or, like the Prophet, through neglect have erred.

All need forgiveness, all have debts to pay
Ere the night cometh, while it still is day.

THE HOMESTEAD.²⁷

AGAINST the wooded hills it stands,
Ghost of a dead home, staring through
Its broken lights on wasted lands
Where old-time harvests grew.

Unploughed, unsown, by scythe unshorn,
The poor, forsaken farm-fields lie, 6
Once rich and rife with golden corn
And pale green breadths of rye.

Of healthful herb and flower bereft,
The garden plot no housewife keeps; 10
Through weeds and tangle only left,
The snake, its tenant, creeps.

A lilac spray, still blossom-clad,
Sways slow before the empty rooms;
Beside the roofless porch a sad 15
Pathetic red rose blooms.

His track, in mould and dust of drouth,
On floor and hearth the squirrel leaves,
And in the fireless chimney's mouth
His web the spider weaves. 20

The leaning barn, about to fall,
Resounds no more on husking eves;
No cattle low in yard or stall,
No thresher beats his sheaves.

So sad, so drear! It seems almost 25
Some haunting Presence makes its sign;
That down yon shadowy lane some ghost
Might drive his spectral kine!

O home so desolate and lorn!
Did all thy memories die with thee? 30
Were any wed, were any born,
Beneath this low roof-tree?

Whose axe the wall of forest broke,
And let the waiting sunshine through?
What goodwife sent the earliest smoke 35
Up the great chimney flue?

Did rustic lovers hither come?
Did maidens, swaying back and forth
In rhythmic grace, at wheel and loom,
Make light their toil with mirth? 40

Did child feet patter on the stair?
Did boyhood frolic in the snow?
Did gray age, in her elbow chair,
Knut, rocking to and fro? 44

The murmuring brook, the sighing breeze,
The pine's slow whisper, cannot tell;
Low mounds beneath the hemlock-trees
Keep the home secrets well.

Cease, mother-land, to fondly boast
Of sons far off who strive and thrive, 50
Forgetful that each swarming host
Must leave an emptier hive!

O wanderers from ancestral soil,
Leave noisome mill and chaffering store:
Gird up your loins for sturdier toil, 55
And build the home once more!

Come back to bayberry-scented slopes,
And fragrant fern, and ground-nut vine;
Breathe airs blown over holt and copse
Sweet with black birch and pine. 60

What matter if the gains are small
That life's essential wants supply?
Your homestead's title gives you all
That idle wealth can buy.

All that the many-dollared crave, 65
The brick-walled slaves of 'Change and mart,
Lawns, trees, fresh air, and flowers, you have,
More dear for lack of art.

Your own sole masters, freedom-willed,
With none to bid you go or stay, 70
Till the old fields your fathers tilled,
As manly men as they!

With skill that spares your toiling hands,
And chemic aid that science brings,
Reclaim the waste and outworn lands, 75
And reign thereon as kings!

HOW THE ROBIN CAME.

AN ALGONQUIN LEGEND.

HAPPY young friends, sit by me,
Under May's blown apple-tree,
While these home-birds in and out
Through the blossoms flit about.
Hear a story, strange and old, 5
By the wild red Indians told,
How the robin came to be:
Once a great chief left his son,—
Well-beloved, his only one,—
When the boy was well-nigh grown, 10
In the trial-lodge alone.
Left for tortures long and slow
Youths like him must undergo,
Who their pride of manhood test,
Lacking water, food, and rest. 15

Seven days the fast he kept,
Seven nights he never slept.
Then the young boy, wrung with pain,
Weak from nature's overstrain,

Faltering, moaned a low complaint :
 'Spare me, father, for I faint !'
 But the chieftain, haughty-eyed,
 Hid his pity in his pride.
 'You shall be a hunter good,
 Knowing never lack of food :
 You shall be a warrior great,
 Wise as fox and strong as bear ;
 Many scalps your belt shall wear,
 If with patient heart you wait
 Bravely till your task is done.
 Better you should starving die
 Than that boy and squaw should cry
 Shame upon your father's son !'

When next morn the sun's first rays
 Glistened on the hemlock sprays,
 Straight that lodge the old chief sought,
 And boiled samp and moose meat brought.
 'Rise and eat, my son !' he said.
 Lo, he found the poor boy dead !
 As with grief his grave they made,
 And his bow beside him laid,
 Pipe, and knife, and wampum-braid,
 On the lodge-top overhead,
 Preening smooth its breast of red
 And the brown coat that it wore,
 Sat a bird, unknown before.
 And as if with human tongue,
 'Mourn me not,' it said, or sung ;
 'I, a bird, am still your son,
 Happier than if hunter fleet,
 Or a brave, before your feet
 Laying scalps in battle won.
 Friend of man, my song shall cheer
 Lodge and corn-land ; hovering near,
 To each wigwam I shall bring
 Tidings of the coming spring ;
 Every child my voice shall know
 In the moon of melting snow,
 When the maple's red bud swells,
 And the wind-flower lifts its bells.
 As their fond companion
 Men shall henceforth own your son,
 And my song shall testify
 That of human kin am I.'

Thus the Indian legend saith
 How, at first, the robin came
 With a sweeter life from death,
 Bird for boy, and still the same.

If my young friends doubt that this
 Is the robin's genesis,
 Not in vain is still the myth
 If a truth be found therewith :
 Unto gentleness belong
 Gifts unknown to pride and wrong ;
 Happier far than hate is praise,—
 He who sings than he who slays.

BANISHED FROM MASSACHUSETTS.

1660.

On a painting by E. A. Abbey The General Court of Massachusetts enacted Oct. 19, 1658, that 'any person or persons of the cursed sect of Quakers' should, on conviction of the same, be banished, on pain of death, from the jurisdiction of the commonwealth.

OVER the threshold of his pleasant home
 Set in green clearings passed the exiled
 Friend,
 In simple trust, misdoubting not the end.
 'Dear heart of mine !' he said, 'the time has come
 To trust the Lord for shelter.' One long gaze
 The goodwife turned on each familiar thing,—
 The lowing kine, the orchard blossom-
 ing,
 The open door that showed the hearth-fire's blaze,—
 And calmly answered, 'Yes, He will provide.'
 Silent and slow they crossed the home-stead's bound,
 Lingering the longest by their child's grave-mound.
 'Move on, or stay and hang !' the sheriff
 cried.
 They left behind them more than home
 or land,
 And set sad faces to an alien strand.
 Safer with winds and waves than human
 wrath,
 With ravening wolves than those whose zeal for God
 Was cruelty to man, the exiles trod

Drear leagues of forest without guide or path,
Or launching frail boats on the uncharted
sea,
Round storm-vexed capes, whose teeth
of granite ground 20
The waves to foam, their perilous way
they wound,
Enduring all things so their souls were
free.
Oh, true confessors, shaming them who did Anew the wrong their Pilgrim Fathers
bore !
For you the Mayflower spread her sail
once more, 25
Freighted with souls, to all that duty bid
Faithful as they who sought an unknown
land,
O'er wintry seas, from Holland's Hook of
Sand !
So from his lost home to the darkening
main,
Bodeful of storm, stout Macy held his
way, 30
And, when the green shore blended with the gray,
His poor wife moaned : ' Let us turn back
again.'
' Nay, woman, weak of faith, kneel down,'
said he,
' And say thy prayers : the Lord Himself will steer ;
And led by Him, nor man nor devils
I fear !' 28 35
So the gray Southwicks, from a rainy sea, Saw, far and faint, the loom of land, and
gave
With feeble voices thanks for friendly
ground
Whereon to rest their weary feet, and found
A peaceful death-bed and a quiet grave
Where, ocean-walled, and wiser than his age, 41
The lord of Shelter scorned the bigot's rage.
Aquidneck's isle, Nantucket's lonely
shores,
And Indian-haunted Narragansett saw

The way-worn travellers round their camp-fire draw, 45
Or heard the plashing of their weary oars.
And every place whereon they rested
grew Happier for pure and gracious woman-
hood,
And men whose names for stainless honor stood,
Founders of States and rulers wise and
true. 50
The Muse of history yet shall make
amends
To those who freedom, peace, and justice taught,
Beyond their dark age led the van of
thought,
And left unforfeited the name of Friends.
O mother State, how foiled was thy design ! 55
The gain was theirs, the loss alone was
thine.

THE BROWN DWARF OF RÜGEN.

The hint of this ballad is found in Arndt's Marchen, Berlin, 1816. The ballad appeared first in St. Nicholas, whose young readers were advised, while smiling at the absurd superstition, to remember that bad companionship and evil habits, desires, and passions are more to be dreaded now than the Elves and Trolls who frightened the children of past ages.

THE pleasant isle of Rügen looks the Baltic water o'er,
To the silver-sanded beaches of the Pom-eranian shore ;
And in the town of Rambin a little boy
and maid
Plucked the meadow-flowers together and in the sea-surf played.
Alike were they in beauty if not in their degree : 5
He was the Amptman's first-born, the miller's child was she.
Now of old the isle of Rügen was full of Dwarfs and Trolls,
The brown-faced little Earth-men, the people without souls ;

And for every man and woman in Rügen's island found	She will not come; she's one of us; she's mine!' the Brown Dwarf said;
Walking in air and sunshine, a Troll was underground. 10	'The day is set, the cake is baked, to- morrow we shall wed.'
It chanced the little maiden, one morning, strolled away	'The fell fiend fetch thee!' Deitrich cried, 'and keep thy foul tongue still.
Among the haunted Nine Hills, where the elves and goblins play.	Quick! open, to thy evil world, the glass door of the hill!'
That day, in barley fields below, the harvesters had known	The Dwarf obeyed; and youth and Troll down the long stairway passed, 35
Of evil voices in the air, and heard the small horns blown.	And saw in dim and sunless light a coun- try strange and vast.
She came not back; the search for her in field and wood was vain: 15	Weird, rich, and wonderful, he saw the elfin under-land,—
They cried her east, they cried her west, but she came not again.	Its palaces of precious stones, its streets of golden sand.
'She's down among the Brown Dwarfs,' said the dream-wives wise and old,	He came unto a banquet-hall with tables richly spread,
And prayers were made, and masses said, and Rambin's church bell tolled.	Where a young maiden served to him the red wine and the bread. 40
Five years her father mourned her; and then John Deitrich said:	How fair she seemed among the Trolls so ugly and so wild!
'I will find my little playmate, be she alive or dead.' 20	Yet pale and very sorrowful, like one who never smiled!
He watched among the Nine Hills, he heard the Brown Dwarfs sing,	Her low, sweet voice, her gold-brown hair, her tender blue eyes seemed
And saw them dance by moonlight merrily in a ring.	Like something he had seen elsewhere or something he had dreamed.
And when their gay-robed leader tossed up his cap of red,	He looked; he clasped her in his arms; he knew the long-lost one; 45
Young Deitrich caught it as it fell, and thrust it on his head.	'O Lisbeth! See thy playmate—I am the Amptman's son!'
The Troll came crouching at his feet and wept for lack of it. 25	She leaned her fair head on his breast, and through her sobs she spoke:
'Oh, give me back my magic cap, for your great head unfit!'	'Oh, take me from this evil place, and from the elfin folk!
'Nay,' Deitrich said; 'the Dwarf who throws his charmed cap away,	'And let me tread the grass-green fields and smell the flowers again,
Must serve its finder at his will, and for his folly pay.	And feel the soft wind on my cheek and hear the dropping rain! 50
'You stole my pretty Lisbeth, and hid her in the earth;	'And oh, to hear the singing bird, the rustling of the tree,
And you shall ope the door of glass and let me lead her forth.' 30	The lowing cows, the bleat of sheep, the voices of the sea;

'And oh, upon my father's knee to sit beside the door,
And hear the bell of vespers ring in Ram-bin church once more !'

He kissed her cheek, he kissed her lips ;
the Brown Dwarf groaned to see, 55
And tore his tangled hair and ground his long teeth angrily.

But Deitrich said : 'For five long years
this tender Christian maid
Has served you in your evil world, and well must she be paid !

'Haste !—hither bring me precious gems,
the richest in your store ;
Then when we pass the gate of glass,
you'll take your cap once more.' 60

No choice was left the baffled Troll, and,
murmuring, he obeyed,
And filled the pockets of the youth and apron of the maid.

They left the dreadful under-land and passed the gate of glass ;

They felt the sunshine's warm caress,
they trod the soft, green grass.

And when, beneath, they saw the Dwarf stretch up to them his brown 65
And crooked claw-like fingers, they tossed his red cap down.

Oh, never shone so bright a sun, was never sky so blue,
As hand in hand they homeward walked the pleasant meadows through !

And never sang the birds so sweet in Rambin's woods before,
And never washed the waves so soft along the Baltic shore ; 70

And when beneath his door-yard trees
the father met his child,
The bells rung out their merriest peal,
the folks with joy ran wild.

And soon from Rambin's holy church the twain came forth as one,
The Amptman kissed a daughter, the miller blest a son.

John Deitrich's fame went far and wide,
and nurse and maid crooned o'er 75
Their cradle song : 'Sleep on, sleep well,
the Trolls shall come no more !'

For in the haunted Nine Hills he set a cross of stone ;
And Elf and Brown Dwarf sought in vain
a door where door was none.

The tower he built in Rambin, fair
Rügen's pride and boast,
Looked o'er the Baltic water to the Pomeranian coast ; 80

And, for his worth ennobled, and rich
beyond compare,
Count Deitrich and his lovely bride dwelt long and happy there.

Poems of Nature

THE FROST SPIRIT.

He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes ! You may trace his footsteps
now

On the naked woods and the blasted fields and the brown hill's withered
brow.

He has smitten the leaves of the gray old trees where their pleasant green came forth,

And the winds, which follow wherever he goes, have shaken them down to earth.

He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes ! from the frozen Labrador, 5
From the icy bridge of the Northern seas, which the white bear wanders o'er,
Where the fisherman's sail is stiff with ice,
and the luckless forms below
In the sunless cold of the lingering night into marble statues grow !

He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes ! on the rushing Northern
blast,

And the dark Norwegian pines have bowed as his fearful breath went past. 10

With an unscorched wing he has hurried on, where the fires of Hecla glow
On the darkly beautiful sky above and the ancient ice below.

He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes ! and the quiet lakes shall feel
The torpid touch of his glazing breath,
and ring to the skater's heel ;

And the streams which danced on the broken rocks, or sang to the leaning grass, 15
Shall bow again to their winter chain, and in mournful silence pass.

He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes ! Let us meet him as we may,
And turn with the light of the parlor-fire
his evil power away ;
And gather closer the circle round, when that firelight dances high,
And laugh at the shriek of the baffled Fiend as his sounding wing goes
by ! 20

THE MERRIMAC.

'The Indians speak of a beautiful river, far to the south, which they call Merrimac'—SIEUR DE MONTS, 1604.

STREAM of my fathers ! sweetly still
The sunset rays thy valley fill ;
Poured slantwise down the long defile,
Wave, wood, and spire beneath them
smile.

I see the winding Powow fold 5
The green hill in its belt of gold,
And following down its wavy line,
Its sparkling waters blend with thine.
There's not a tree upon thy side,
Nor rock, which thy returning tide 10
As yet hath left abrupt and stark
Above thy evening water-mark ;
No calm cove with its rocky hem,
No isle whose emerald swells begem

Thy broad, smooth current; not a sail 15
 Bowed to the freshening ocean gale;
 No small boat with its busy oars,
 Nor gray wall sloping to thy shores;
 Nor farm-house with its maple shade,
 Or rigid poplar colonnade, 20
 But lies distinct and full in sight,
 Beneath this gush of sunset light.
 Centuries ago, that harbor-bar,
 Stretching its length of foam afar,
 And Salisbury's beach of shining sand, 25
 And yonder island's wave-smoothed
 strand,

Saw the adventurer's tiny sail,
 Flit, stooping from the eastern gale;
 And o'er these woods and waters broke
 The cheer from Britain's hearts of oak, 30
 As brightly on the voyager's eye,
 Weary of forest, sea, and sky,
 Breaking the dull continuous wood,
 The Merrimac rolled down his flood;
 Mingling that clear pellucid brook, 35
 Which channels vast Agiochook
 When spring-time's sun and shower unlock
 The frozen fountains of the rock,
 And more abundant waters given
 From that pure lake, 'The Smile of Heaven,' 40
 'Tributes from vale and mountain-side,—
 With ocean's dark, eternal tide!

On yonder rocky cape, which braves
 The stormy challenge of the waves,
 Midst tangled vine and dwarfish wood, 45
 The hardy Anglo-Saxon stood,²⁹
 Planting upon the topmost crag
 The staff of England's battle-flag;
 And, while from out its heavy fold
 Saint George's crimson cross unrolled, 50
 Midst roll of drum and trumpet blare,
 And weapons brandishing in air,
 He gave to that lone promontory
 The sweetest name in all his story;³⁰
 Of her, the flower of Islam's daughters, 55
 Whose harems look on Stamboul's
 waters,—

Who, when the chance of war had bound
 The Moslem chain his limbs around,
 Wreathed o'er with silk that iron chain,
 Soothed with her smiles his hours of
 pain, 60

And fondly to her youthful slave
 A dearer gift than freedom gave.

But look! the yellow light no more
 Streams down on wave and verdant shore;
 And clearly on the calm air swells 65
 The twilight voice of distant bells.
 From Ocean's bosom, white and thin,
 The mists come slowly rolling in;
 Hills, woods, the river's rocky rim,
 Amidst the sea-like vapor swim, 70
 While yonder lonely coast-light, set
 Within its wave-washed minaret,
 Half quenched, a beamless star and pale,
 Shines dimly through its cloudy veil!

Home of my fathers!—I have stood 75
 Where Hudson rolled his lordly flood:
 Seen sunrise rest and sunset fade
 Along his frowning Palisade;
 Looked down the Appalachian peak
 On Juniata's silver streak; 80
 Have seen along his valley gleam
 The Mohawk's softly winding stream;
 The level light of sunset shine
 Through broad Potomac's hem of pine;
 And autumn's rainbow-tinted banner 85
 Hang lightly o'er the Susquehanna;
 Yet wheresoe'er his step might be,
 Thy wandering child looked back to
 thee!

Heard in his dreams thy river's sound
 Of murmuring on its pebbly bound, 90
 The unforgotten swell and roar
 Of waves on thy familiar shore;
 And saw, amidst the curtained gloom
 And quiet of his lonely room,
 Thy sunset scenes before him pass; 95
 As, in Agrippa's magic glass,
 The loved and lost arose to view,
 Remembered groves in greenness grew,
 Bathed still in childhood's morning dew,
 Along whose bowers of beauty swept 100
 Whatever Memory's mourners wept,
 Sweet faces, which the charnel kept,
 Young, gentle eyes, which long had slept;
 And while the gazer leaned to trace,
 More near, some dear familiar face, 105
 He wept to find the vision flown,—
 A phantom and a dream alone!

HAMPTON BEACH.

THE sunlight glitters keen and bright,
Where, miles away,
Lies stretching to my dazzled sight
A luminous belt, a misty light,
Beyond the dark pine bluffs and wastes of sandy gray. 5

The tremulous shadow of the Sea!
Against its ground
Of silvery light, rock, hill, and tree,
Still as a picture, clear and free,
With varying outline mark the coast for miles around. 10

On—on—we tread with loose-flung rein
Our seaward way,
Through dark-green fields and blossoming grain,
Where the wild brier-rose skirts the lane,
And bends above our heads the flowering locust spray. 15

Ha! like a kind hand on my brow
Comes this fresh breeze,
Cooling its dull and feverish glow,
While through my being seems to flow
The breath of a new life, the healing of the seas! 20

Now rest we, where this grassy mound
His feet hath set
In the great waters, which have
bound
His granite ankles greenly round
With long and tangled moss, and weeds with cool spray wet. 25

Good-by to Pain and Care! I take Mine ease to-day:
Here where these sunny waters break,
And ripples this keen breeze, I shake
All burdens from the heart, all weary thoughts away. 30

I draw a freer breath, I seem Like all I see—
Waves in the sun, the white-winged
gleam
Of sea-birds in the slanting beam,
And far-off sails which flit before the south-wind free. 35

So when Time's veil shall fall asunder,
The soul may know
No fearful change, nor sudden wonder,
Nor sink the weight of mystery under,
But with the upward rise, and with the vastness grow. 40

And all we shrink from now may seem
No new revealing;
Familiar as our childhood's stream,
Or pleasant memory of a dream
The loved and cherished Past upon the new life stealing. 45

Serene and mild the untried light
May have its dawning;
And, as in summer's northern night
The evening and the dawn unite,
The sunset hues of Time blend with the soul's new morning. 50

I sit alone; in foam and spray
Wave after wave
Breaks on the rocks which, stern and
gray,
Shoulder the broken tide away,
Or murmurs hoarse and strong through mossy cleft and cave. 55

What heed I of the dusty land
And noisy town?
I see the mighty deep expand
From its white line of glimmering
sand
To where the blue of heaven on bluer waves shuts down! 60

In listless quietude of mind,
I yield to all
The change of cloud and wave and wind;
And passive on the flood reclined,
I wander with the waves, and with them rise and fall. 65

But look, thou dreamer! wave and shore
In shadow lie;
The night-wind warns me back once
more
To where, my native hill-tops o'er,
Bends like an arch of fire the glowing sunset sky. 70

So then, beach, bluff, and wave, farewell !

I bear with me
No token stone nor glittering shell,
But long and oft shall Memory tell
Of this brief thoughtful hour of musing
by the Sea. 75

1843.

A DREAM OF SUMMER.

BLAND as the morning breath of June
The southwest breezes play ;
And, through its haze, the winter noon
Seems warm as summer's day.
The snow-plumed Angel of the North 5
Has dropped his icy spear ;
Again the mossy earth looks forth,
Again the streams gush clear.

The fox his hillside cell forsakes,
The muskrat leaves his nook, 10
The bluebird in the meadow brakes
Is singing with the brook.
'Bear up, O Mother Nature !' cry
Bird, breeze, and streamlet free ;
'Our winter voices prophesy
Of summer days to thee !' 15

So, in those winters of the soul,
By bitter blasts and drear
O'erswept from Memory's frozen pole,
Will sunny days appear. 20
Reviving Hope and Faith, they show
The soul its living powers,
And how beneath the winter's snow
Lie germs of summer flowers !

The Night is mother of the Day, 25
The Winter of the Spring,
And ever upon old Decay
The greenest mosses cling.
Behind the cloud the starlight lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall ; 30
For God, who loveth all His works,
Has left His hope with all !

THE LAKESIDE.

THE shadows round the inland sea
Are deepening into night ;
Slow up the slopes of Ossipee
They chase the lessening light.
Tired of the long day's blinding heat, 5
I rest my languid eye,
Lake of the Hills ! where, cool and sweet,
Thy sunset waters lie !

Along the sky, in wavy lines,
O'er isle and reach and bay, 10
Green-belted with eternal pines,
The mountains stretch away.
Below, the maple masses sleep
Where shore with water blends,
While midway on the tranquil deep 15
The evening light descends.

So seemed it when yon hill's red crown,
Of old, the Indian trod,
And, through the sunset air, looked down
Upon the Smile of God. 20
To him of light and shade the laws
No forest skeptic taught ;
Their living and eternal Cause
His truer instinct sought. 15

He saw these mountains in the light 25
Which now across them shines ;
This lake, in summer sunset bright,
Walled round with sombering pines.
God near him seemed ; from earth and skies
His loving voice he heard, 30
As, face to face, in Paradise,
Man stood before the Lord.

Thanks, O our Father ! that, like him,
Thy tender love I see,
In radiant hill and woodland dim, 35
And tinted sunset sea.
For not in mockery dost Thou fill
Our earth with light and grace ;
Thou hid'st no dark and cruel will Behind Thy smiling face ! 40

AUTUMN THOUGHTS.

GONE hath the Spring, with all its flowers,
And gone the Summer's pomp and show,
And Autumn, in his leafless bowers,
Is waiting for the Winter's snow.

I said to Earth, so cold and gray, 5
'An emblem of myself thou art.'
'Not so,' the Earth did seem to say,
'For Spring shall warm my frozen heart.'

I soothe my wintry sleep with dreams
Of warmer sun and softer rain, 10
And wait to hear the sound of streams
And songs of merry birds again.

But thou, from whom the Spring hath gone,
For whom the flowers no longer blow,
Who standest blighted and forlorn, 15
Like Autumn waiting for the snow ;

No hope is thine of sunnier hours,
Thy Winter shall no more depart ;
No Spring revive thy wasted flowers,
Nor Summer warm thy frozen heart. 20

ON RECEIVING AN EAGLE'S QUILL
FROM LAKE SUPERIOR.

ALL day the darkness and the cold
Upon my heart have lain,
Like shadows on the winter sky,
Like frost upon the pane ;

But now my torpid fancy wakes, 5
And, on thy Eagle's plume,
Rides forth, like Sindbad on his bird,
Or witch upon her broom !

Below me roar the rocking pines,
Before me spreads the lake 10
Whose long and solemn-sounding waves
Against the sunset break.

I hear the wild Rice-Eater thresh
The grain he has not sown ;
I see, with flashing scythe of fire, 15
The prairie harvest mown !

I hear the far-off voyager's horn ;
I see the Yankee's trail,—
His foot on every mountain-pass,
On every stream his sail. 20

By forest, lake, and waterfall,
I see his pedler show ;
The mighty mingling with the mean,
The lofty with the low.

He 's whittling by St. Mary's Falls, 25
Upon his loaded wain ;
He 's measuring o'er the Pictured Rocks,
With eager eyes of gain.

I hear the mattock in the mine,
The axe-stroke in the dell, 30
The clamor from the Indian lodge,
The Jesuit chapel bell !

I see the swarthy trappers come
From Mississippi's springs ;
And war-chiefs with their painted brows,
And crests of eagle wings. 36

Behind the scared squaw's birch canoe,
The steamer smokes and raves ;
And city lots are staked for sale
Above old Indian graves. 40

I hear the tread of pioneers
Of nations yet to be ;
The first low wash of waves, where soon
Shall roll a human sea.

The rudiments of empire here 45
Are plastic yet and warm ;
The chaos of a mighty world
Is rounding into form !

Each rude and jostling fragment soon 5
Its fitting place shall find,— 50
The raw material of a State,
Its muscle and its mind !

And, westering still, the star which leads
The New World in its train
Has tipped with fire the icy spears 55
Of many a mountain chain.

The snowy cones of Oregon
Are kindling on its way ;
And California's golden sands
Gleam brighter in its ray ! 60

Then blessings on thy eagle quill,
As, wandering far and wide,
I thank thee for this twilight dream
And Fancy's airy ride !

Yet, welcomer than regal plumes, 65
Which Western trappers find,
Thy free and pleasant thoughts, chance
sown,
Like feathers on the wind.

Thy symbol be the mountain-bird,
Whose glistening quill I hold ; 70
Thy home the ample air of hope,
And memory's sunset gold !

In thee, let joy with duty join,
And strength unite with love,
The eagle's pinions folding round 75
The warm heart of the dove !

So, when in darkness sleeps the vale
Where still the blind bird clings,
The sunshine of the upper sky
Shall glitter on thy wings ! 80

APRIL.

' The spring comes slowly up this way Christabel.

'Tis the noon of the spring-time, yet never
a bird
In the wind-shaken elm or the maple is
heard ;
For green meadow-grasses wide levels of
snow,
And blowing of drifts where the crocus should blow ;
Where wind-flower and violet, amber and
white, 5
On south-sloping brooksides should smile
in the light,

O'er the cold winter-beds of their late-waking roots
The frosty flake eddies, the ice-crystal
shoots ;
And, longing for light, under wind-driven heaps,
Round the boles of the pine-wood the ground-laurel creeps, 10
Unkissed of the sunshine, unbaptized of
showers,
With buds scarcely swelled, which should burst into flowers !
We wait for thy coming, sweet wind of the south !
For the touch of thy light wings, the kiss of thy mouth ;
For the yearly evangel thou bearest from
God, 15
Resurrection and life to the graves of the sod !
Up our long river-valley, for days, have not ceased
The wail and the shriek of the bitter northeast,
Raw and chill, as if winnowed through
ices and snow,
All the way from the land of the wild
Esquimau, 20
Until all our dreams of the land of the blest,
Like that red hunter's, turn to the sunny southwest.
O soul of the spring-time, its light and its breath,
Bring warmth to this coldness, bring life
to this death ;
Renew the great miracle ; let us behold 25
The stone from the mouth of the sepulchre
rolled,
And Nature, like Lazarus, rise, as of old !
Let our faith, which in darkness and coldness has lain,
Revive with the warmth and the brightness again,
And in blooming of flower and budding of tree 30
The symbols and types of our destiny see ;
The life of the spring-time, the life of the whole,
And, as sun to the sleeping earth, love to the soul !

PICTURES.

I.

LIGHT, warmth, and sprouting greenness, and o'er all

Blue, stainless, steel-bright ether, raining down

Tranquillity upon the deep-hushed
town,

The freshening meadows, and the hillsides brown ;

Voice of the west-wind from the hills of pine, 5

And the brimmed river from its distant
fall,

Low hum of bees, and joyous interlude
Of bird-songs in the streamlet-skirting
wood,—

Heralds and prophecies of sound and
sight,

Blessed forerunners of the warmth and
light, 10

Attendant angels to the house of prayer,
With reverent footsteps keeping pace
• with mine,—

Once more, through God's great love,
with you I share

A morn of resurrection sweet and fair
As that which saw, of old, in Palestine, 15

Immortal Love uprising in fresh bloom
From the dark night and winter of the tomb!

2d, 5th mo., 1852.

II.

White with its sun-bleached dust, the pathway winds

Before me; dust is on the shrunken
grass,

And on the trees beneath whose boughs
I pass; 20

Frail screen against the Hunter of the sky,

Who, glaring on me with his lidless eye,
While mounting with his dog-star
high and higher

Ambushed in light intolerable, unbinds
The burnished quiver of his shafts of fire. 25

Between me and the hot fields of his
South

A tremulous glow, as from a furnace-
mouth,

Glimmers and swims before my dazzled
sight,

As if the burning arrows of his ire Broke as they fell, and shattered into
light; 30

Yet on my cheek I feel the western wind,
And hear it telling to the orchard trees,
And to the faint and flower-forsaken
bees,

Tales of fair meadows, green with constant streams,

And mountains rising blue and cool behind, 35

Where in moist dells the purple orchis
gleams,

And starred with white the virgin's bower is twined.

So the o'erworn pilgrim, as he fares
Along life's summer waste, at times is
fanned,

Even at noontide, by the cool, sweet airs
Of a serener and a holier land, 41

Fresh as the morn, and as the dewfall bland.

Breath of the blessed Heaven for which we pray,

Blow from the eternal hills! make glad our earthly way!

SUMMER BY THE LAKESIDE.

LAKE WINNIPESAUKEE.

I. NOON.

WHITE clouds, whose shadows haunt the
deep,

Light mists, whose soft embraces keep
The sunshine on the hills asleep!

O isles of calm! O dark, still wood!
And stiller skies that overbrood 5

Your rest with deeper quietude!

O shapes and hues, dim beckoning,
through

Yon mountain gaps, my longing view
Beyond the purple and the blue,

To stiller sea and greener land, 10
And softer lights and airs more bland,
And skies,—the hollow of God's hand !

Transfused through you, O mountain
friends !

With mine your solemn spirit blends, 15
And life no more hath separate ends.

I read each misty mountain sign,
I know the voice of wave and pine,
And I am yours, and ye are mine.

Life's burdens fall, its discords cease, 20
I lapse into the glad release
Of Nature's own exceeding peace.

O welcome calm of heart and mind !
As falls yon fir-tree's loosened rind
'To leave a tenderer growth behind,

So fall the weary years away ; 25
A child again, my head I lay
Upon the lap of this sweet day.

'This western wind hath Lethæan powers,
Yon noonday cloud nepenthe showers,
'The lake is white with lotus-flowers ! 30

Even Duty's voice is faint and low,
And slumberous Conscience, waking slow,
Forgets her blotted scroll to show.

The Shadow which pursues us all,
Whose ever-nearing steps appall, 35
Whose voice we hear behind us call,—

That Shadow blends with mountain gray,
It speaks but what the light waves say,—
Death walks apart from Fear to-day !

Rocked on her breast, these pines and I 41
Alike on Nature's love rely ;
And equal seems to live or die.

Assured that He whose presence fills
With light the spaces of these hills
No evil to His creatures wills, 45

The simple faith remains, that He Will do, whatever that may be,
The best alike for man and tree.

What mosses over one shall grow,
What light and life the other know, 50
Unanxious, leaving Him to show.

II. EVENING.

Yon mountain's side is black with night,
While, broad-orbed, o'er its gleaming
crown
The moon, slow-rounding into sight,
On the hushed inland sea looks down.

How start to light the clustering isles, 56
Each silver-hemmed ! How sharply
show

The shadows of their rocky piles,
And tree-tops in the wave below !

How far and strange the mountains seem,
Dim-looming through the pale, still
light ! 61

The vague, vast grouping of a dream,
They stretch into the solemn night.

Beneath, lake, wood, and peopled vale,
Hushed by that presence grand and
grave, 65

Are silent, save the cricket's wail,
And low response of leaf and wave.

Fair scenes ! whereto the Day and Night
Make rival love, I leave ye soon,
What time before the eastern light 70
The pale ghost of the setting moon

Shall hide behind yon rocky spines,
And the young archer, Morn, shall break

His arrows on the mountain pines,
And, golden-sandalled, walk the lake !

Farewell ! around this smiling bay 76
Gay-hearted Health, and Life in bloom,
With lighter steps than mine, may stray
In radiant summers yet to come.

But none shall more regretful leave 80
 These waters and these hills than I :
 Or, distant, fonder dream how eve
 Or dawn is painting wave and sky ;

How rising moons shine sad and mild
 On wooded isle and silvering bay ; 85
 Or setting suns beyond the piled
 And purple mountains lead the day ;

Nor laughing girl, nor bearding boy,
 Nor full-pulsed manhood, lingering here,
 Shall add, to life's abounding joy, 90
 The charmed repose to suffering dear.

Still waits kind Nature to impart
 Her choicest gifts to such as gain
 An entrance to her loving heart
 Through the sharp discipline of pain.

Forever from the Hand that takes 96
 One blessing from us others fall ;
 And, soon or late, our Father makes
 His perfect recompense to all !

Oh, watched by Silence and the Night,
 And folded in the strong embrace 101
 Of the great mountains, with the light
 Of the sweet heavens upon thy face,

Lake of the Northland ! keep thy dower
 Of beauty still, and while above 105
 Thy solemn mountains speak of power,
 Be thou the mirror of God's love.

THE FRUIT-GIFT.

LAST night, just as the tints of autumn's
 sky
 Of sunset faded from our hills and
 streams,
 I sat, vague listening, lapped in twilight
 dreams,
 To the leaf's rustle, and the cricket's cry.
 Then, like that basket, flush with summer
 fruit, 5
 Dropped by the angels at the Prophet's foot,

Came, unannounced, a gift of clustered
 sweetness,
 Full-orbed, and glowing with the pri-soned beams

Of summery suns, and rounded to completeness

By kisses of the south-wind and the dew.
 Thrilled with a glad surprise, methought

I knew 11
 The pleasure of the homeward-turning
 Jew,

When Eshcol's clusters on his shoulders
 lay,

Dropping their sweetness on his desert
 way.

I said, 'This fruit beseems no world of
 sin. 15

Its parent vine, rooted in Paradise, O'ercrept the wall, and never paid the price

Of the great mischief,—an ambrosial
 tree,

Eden's exotic, somehow smuggled in,
 To keep the thorns and thistles company.' 20

Perchance our frail, sad mother plucked in haste

A single vine-slip as she passed the gate,
 Where the dread sword alternate paled and burned. 23

And the stern angel, pitying her fate,
 Forgave the lovely trespasser, and turned
 Aside his face of fire ; and thus the waste
 And fallen world hath yet its annual taste

Of primal good, to prove of sin the cost,
 And show by one gleaned ear the mighty harvest lost.

FLOWERS IN WINTER.

PAINTED UPON A PORTE LIVRE.

How strange to greet, this frosty morn.,
 In graceful counterfeit of flowers,
 These children of the meadows, born
 Of sunshine and of showers !

How well the conscious wood retains	5	But welcome, be it new or old,	45
The pictures of its flower-grown home,		The gift which makes the day more
The lights and shades, the purple stains,		bright,
And golden hues of bloom !		And paints, upon the ground of cold
		And darkness, warmth and light !
It was a happy thought to bring		Without is neither gold nor green ;
To the dark season's frost and rime	10	Within, for birds, the birch-logs sing ;
This painted memory of spring,		Yet, summer-like, we sit between	51
This dream of summer-time.		The autumn and the spring.
Our hearts are lighter for its sake,		The one, with bridal blush of rose,
Our fancy's age renews its youth,		And sweetest breath of woodland balm,
And dim-remembered fictions take	15	And one whose matron lips uncloze	55
The guise of present truth.		In smiles of saintly calm.
A wizard of the Merrimac,—		Fill soft and deep, O winter snow !
So old ancestral legends say,—		The sweet azalea's oaken dells,
Could call green leaf and blossom back		And hide the bank where roses blow,
To frosted stem and spray.	20	And swing the azure bells !	60
The dry logs of the cottage wall,		O'erlay the amber violet's leaves,
Beneath his touch, put out their leaves ;		The purple aster's brookside home,
The clay-bound swallow, at his call,		Guard all the flowers her pencil gives
Played round the icy eaves.		A life beyond their bloom.
The settler saw his oaken flail	25	And she, when spring comes round again,
Take bud, and bloom before his eyes ;		By greening slope and singing flood	66
From frozen pools he saw the pale,		Shall wander, seeking, not in vain,
Sweet summer lilies rise.		Her darlings of the wood.
		1855.
To their old homes, by man profaned,
Came the sad dryads, exiled long,	30
And through their leafy tongues complained
Of household use and wrong.
The beechen platter sprouted wild,
The pipkin wore its old-time green,
The cradle o'er the sleeping child	35
Became a leafy screen.
Haply our gentle friend hath met,
While wandering in her sylvan quest,
Haunting his native woodlands yet,
That Druid of the West ;	40
And, while the dew on leaf and flower		SAD Mayflower ! watched by winter stars,
Glistened in moonlight clear and still,		And nursed by winter gales,
Learned the dusk wizard's spell of power,		With petals of the sleeted spars,
And caught his trick of skill.		And leaves of frozen sails !

THE MAYFLOWERS.

The trailing arbutus, or mayflower, grows abundantly in the vicinity of Plymouth, and was the first flower that greeted the Pilgrims after their fearful winter. The name mayflower was familiar in England, as the application of it to the historic vessel shows, but it was applied by the English, and still is, to the hawthorn. Its use in New England in connection with Epigæa repens dates from a very early day, some claiming that the first Pilgrims so used it, in affectionate memory of the vessel and its English flower association.

What had she in those dreary hours, 5
 Within her ice-rimmed bay,
 In common with the wild-wood flowers,
 The first sweet smiles of May?

Yet, 'God be praised!' the Pilgrim said,
 Who saw the blossoms peer 10
 Above the brown leaves, dry and dead,
 'Behold our Mayflower here!'

'God wills it: here our rest shall be,
 Our years of wandering o'er;
 For us the Mayflower of the sea 15
 Shall spread her sails no more.'

O sacred flowers of faith and hope,
 As sweetly now as then
 Ye bloom on many a birchen slope,
 In many a pine-dark glen. 20

Behind the sea-wall's rugged length,
 Unchanged, your leaves unfold,
 Like love behind the manly strength
 Of the brave hearts of old.

So live the fathers in their sons, 25
 Their sturdy faith be ours,
 And ours the love that overruns
 Its rocky strength with flowers.

The Pilgrim's wild and wintry day
 Its shadow round us draws; 30
 The Mayflower of his stormy bay,
 Our Freedom's struggling cause.

But warmer suns ere long shall bring
 To life the frozen sod;
 And through dead leaves of hope shall 35
 spring
 Afrash the flowers of God!
 1856.

THE LAST WALK IN AUTUMN.

I.

O'ER the bare woods, whose outstretched
 hands
 Plead with the leaden heavens in
 vain,
 I see, beyond the valley lands,
 The sea's long level dim with rain.

Around me all things, stark and dumb,
 Seem praying for the snows to come, 6
 And, for the summer bloom and greenness
 gone,
 With winter's sunset lights and dazzling morn atone.

II.

Along the river's summer walk,
 The withered tufts of asters nod; 10
 And trembles on its arid stalk
 The hoar plume of the golden-rod.
 And on a ground of sombre fir,
 And azure-studded juniper,
 The silver birch its buds of purple shows,
 And scarlet berries tell where bloomed 15
 the sweet wild-rose!

III.

With mingled sound of horns and bells,
 A far-heard clang, the wild geese fly,
 Storm-sent, from Arctic moors and fells,
 Like a great arrow through the sky,
 Two dusky lines converged in one, 21
 Chasing the southward-flying sun;
 While the brave snow-bird and the hardy
 jay
 Call to them from the pines, as if to bid them stay.

IV.

I passed this way a year ago: 25
 The wind blew south; the noon of day
 Was warm as June's; and save that
 snow
 Flecked the low mountains far away,
 And that the vernal-seeming breeze 29
 Mocked faded grass and leafless trees,
 I might have dreamed of summer as I lay,
 Watching the fallen leaves with the soft wind at play.

V.

Since then, the winter blasts have piled
 The white pagodas of the snow
 On these rough slopes, and, strong and wild, 35
 Yon river, in its overflow

Of spring-time rain and sun, set free,
Crashed with its ices to the sea ;
And over these gray fields, then green
and gold,
The summer corn has waved, the thunder's organ rolled. 40

VI.

Rich gift of God ! A year of time !
What pomp of rise and shut of day,
What hues wherewith our Northern clime
Makes autumn's dropping woodlands
gay, 44
What airs outblown from ferny dells,
And clover-bloom and sweetbrier-smells,
What songs of brooks and birds, what fruits and flowers,
Green woods and moonlit snows, have in its round been ours !

VII.

I know not how, in other lands,
The changing seasons come and go ;
What splendors fall on Syrian sands, 51
What purple lights on Alpine snow !
Nor how the pomp of sunrise waits
On Venice at her watery gates ;
A dream alone to me is Arno's vale, 55
And the Alhambra's halls are but a traveller's tale.

VIII.

Yet, on life's current, he who drifts
Is one with him who rows or sails ;
And he who wanders widest lifts 60
No more of beauty's jealous veils
Than he who from his doorway sees
The miracle of flowers and trees,
Feels the warm Orient in the noonday air,
And from cloud minarets hears the sunset
call to prayer !

IX.

The eye may well be glad that looks 65
Where Pharpar's fountains rise and
fall ;
But he who sees his native brooks
Laugh in the sun, has seen them all.

The marble palaces of Ind
Rise round him in the snow and wind ;
From his lone sweetbrier Persian Hafiz smiles, 71
And Rome's cathedral awe is in his woodland aisles.

X.

And thus it is my fancy blends
The near at hand and far and rare ;
And while the same horizon bends 75
Above the silver-sprinkled hair
Which flashed the light of morning
skies
On childhood's wonder-lifted eyes,
Within its round of sea and sky and field,
Earth wheels with all her zones, the Kosmos stands revealed. 80

XI.

And thus the sick man on his bed,
The toiler to his task-work bound,
Behold their prison-walls outspread,
Their clipped horizon widen round !
While freedom-giving fancy waits, 85
Like Peter's angel at the gates,
The power is theirs to baffle care and pain,
To bring the lost world back, and make it theirs again !

XII.

What lack of goodly company,
When masters of the ancient lyre 90
Obey my call, and trace for me
Their words of mingled tears and fire !
I talk with Bacon, grave and wise,
I read the world with Pascal's eyes ;
And priest and sage, with solemn brows austere, 95
And poets, garland-bound, the Lords of Thought, draw near.

XIII.

Methinks, O friend, I hear thee say,
'In vain the human heart we mock ;
Bring living guests who love the day,
Not ghosts who fly at crow of cock !

The herbs we share with flesh and blood
 Are better than ambrosial food 102
 With laurelled shades.' I grant it, nothing loath,
 But doubly blest is he who can partake of both.

XIV.

He who might Plato's banquet grace,
 Have I not seen before me sit, 106
 And watched his puritanic face,
 With more than Eastern wisdom lit?
 Shrewd mystic! who, upon the back
 Of his Poor Richard's Almanac 110
 Writing the Sufi's song, the Gentoo's
 dream,
 Links Manu's age of thought to Fulton's age of steam!

XV.

Here too, of answering love secure,
 Have I not welcomed to my hearth
 The gentle pilgrim troubadour, 115 Whose songs have girdled half the
 earth;
 Whose pages, like the magic mat
 Whereon the Eastern lover sat,
 Have borne me over Rhine-land's purple
 vines,
 And Nubia's tawny sands, and Phrygia's mountain pines! 120

XVI.

And he, who to the lettered wealth
 Of ages adds the lore unpriced,
 The wisdom and the moral health,
 The ethics of the school of Christ;
 The statesman to his holy trust, 125
 As the Athenian archon, just,
 Struck down, exiled like him for truth
 alone,
 Has he not graced my home with beauty
 all his own?

XVII.

What greetings smile, what farewells
 wave,
 What loved ones enter and depart!
 The good, the beautiful, the brave, 131
 The Heaven-lent treasures of the
 heart!

How conscious seems the frozen sod
 And beechen slope whereon they trod!
 The oak-leaves rustle, and the dry grass bends 135
 Beneath the shadowy feet of lost or absent friends.

XVIII.

Then ask not why to these bleak hills
 I cling, as clings the tufted moss,
 To bear the winter's lingering chills, 139
 The mocking spring's perpetual loss,
 I dream of lands where summer smiles,
 And soft winds blow from spicy isles,
 But scarce would Ceylon's breath of flowers be sweet,
 Could I not feel thy soil, New England,
 at my feet!

XIX.

At times I long for gentler skies, 145
 And bathe in dreams of softer air,
 But homesick tears would fill the eyes
 That saw the Cross without the Bear.
 The pine must whisper to the palm, 149
 The north-wind break the tropic calm;
 And with the dreamy languor of the Line,
 The North's keen virtue blend, and strength to beauty join.

XX.

Better to stem with heart and hand
 The roaring tide of life, than lie,
 Unmindful, on its flowery strand, 155
 Of God's occasions drifting by!
 Better with naked nerve to bear
 The needles of this goading air,
 Than, in the lap of sensual ease, forego
 The godlike power to do, the godlike aim to know. 160

XXI.

Home of my heart! to me more fair
 Than gay Versailles or Windsor's
 halls,
 The painted, shingly town-house where
 The freeman's vote for Freedom falls!

The simple roof where prayer is made,
Than Gothic groin and colonnade; 166
The living temple of the heart of man,
Than Rome's sky-mocking vault, or manyspired Milan!

XXII.

More dear thy equal village schools,
Where rich and poor the Bible read,
Than classic halls where Priestcraft rules, 171
And Learning wears the chains of Creed;
Thy glad Thanksgiving, gathering in
The scattered sheaves of home and kin,
Than the mad license ushering Lenten
pains, 175
Or holidays of slaves who laugh and dance in chains.

XXIII.

And sweet homes nestle in these dales,
And perch along these wooded swells;
And, blest beyond Arcadian vales,
They hear the sound of Sabbath bells!
Here dwells no perfect man sublime, 181
Nor woman winged before her time,
But with the faults and follies of the race,
Old home-bred virtues hold their not unhonored place.

XXIV.

Here manhood struggles for the sake 185
Of mother, sister, daughter, wife,
The graces and the loves which make
The music of the march of life;
And woman, in her daily round
Of duty, walks on holy ground. 190
No unpaid menial tills the soil, nor here
Is the bad lesson learned at human rights to sneer.

XXV.

Then let the icy north-wind blow
The trumpets of the coming storm,
To arrowy sleet and blinding snow 195
Yon slanting lines of rain transform.

Young hearts shall hail the drifted
cold,
As gayly as I did of old;
And I, who watch them through the frosty pane,
Unenvious, live in them my boyhood o'er
again. 200

XXVI.

And I will trust that He who heeds
The life that hides in mead and wold,
Who hangs yon alder's crimson beads,
And stains these mosses green and
gold,
Will still, as He hath done, incline 205
His gracious care to me and mine;
Grant what we ask aright, from wrong
debar,
And, as the earth grows dark, make brighter every star!

XXVII.

I have not seen, I may not see,
My hopes for man take form in fact, 210
But God will give the victory
In due time; in that faith I act.
And he who sees the future sure,
The baffling present may endure,
And bless, meanwhile, the unseen Hand that leads 215
The heart's desires beyond the halting step of deeds.

XXVIII.

And thou, my song, I send thee forth,
Where harsher songs of mine have
flown;
Go, find a place at home and hearth
Where'er thy singer's name is known;
Revive for him the kindly thought 221
Of friends; and they who love him not,
Touched by some strain of thine, perchance may take
The hand he proffers all, and thank him for thy sake.
1857.

THE FIRST FLOWERS.

FOR ages, on our river borders,
 These tassels in their tawny bloom,
 And willowy studs of downy silver,
 Have prophesied of Spring to come.

For ages have the unbound waters 5
 Smiled on them from their pebbly hem,
 And the clear carol of the robin
 And song of bluebird welcomed them.

But never yet from smiling river,
 Or song of early bird, have they 10
 Been greeted with a gladder welcome
 Than whispers from my heart to-day.

They break the spell of cold and darkness,
 The weary watch of sleepless pain ;
 And from my heart, as from the river, 15
 The ice of winter melts again.

Thanks, Mary ! for this wild-wood token
 Of Freya's footsteps drawing near ;
 Almost, as in the rune of Asgard,
 The growing of the grass I hear. 20

It is as if the pine-trees called me
 From ceilèd room and silent books,
 To see the dance of woodland shadows,
 And hear the song of April brooks !

As in the old Teutonic ballad 25
 Of Odenwald live bird and tree,
 Together live in bloom and music,
 I blend in song thy flowers and thee.

Earth's rocky tablets bear forever
 The dint of rain and small bird's track :
 Who knows but that my idle verses 31
 May leave some trace by Merrimac !

The bird that trod the mellow layers
 Of the young earth is sought in vain ;
 The cloud is gone that wove the sandstone,
 From God's design, with threads of
 rain ! 36

So, when this fluid age we live in Shall stiffen round my careless rhyme,
 Who made the vagrant tracks may puzzle-
 The savants of the coming time ; 40

And, following out their dim suggestions,
 Some idly-curious hand may draw
 My doubtful portraiture, as Cuvier
 Drew fish and bird from fin and claw.

And maidens in the far-off twilights, 45
 Singing my words to breeze and stream,
 Shall wonder if the old-time Mary
 Were real, or the rhymers' dream !

THE OLD BURYING-GROUND.³¹

OUR vales are sweet with fern and rose.
 Our hills are maple-crowned ;
 But not from them our fathers chose
 The village burying-ground.

The dreariest spot in all the land 5
 To Death they set apart ;
 With scanty grace from Nature's hand,
 And none from that of Art.

A winding wall of mossy stone,
 Frost-flung and broken, lines 10
 A lonesome acre thinly grown
 With grass and wandering vines.

Without the wall a birch-tree shows
 Its drooped and tasselled head ;
 Within, a stag-horned sumach grows, 15
 Fern-leaved, with spikes of red.

There, sheep that graze the neighboring
 plain
 Like white ghosts come and go,
 The farm-horse drags his fetlock chain,
 The cow-bell tinkles slow. 20

Low moans the river from its bed,
 The distant pines reply ;
 Like mourners shrinking from the dead,
 They stand apart and sigh.

Unshaded smites the summer sun, Unchecked the winter blast ; The school-girl learns the place to shun, With glances backward cast.	25	The doubts we vainly seek to solve, The truths we know, are one ; The known and nameless stars revolve Around the Central Sun.	65
For thus our fathers testified, That he might read who ran, The emptiness of human pride, The nothingness of man.	30	And if we reap as we have sown, And take the dole we deal, The law of pain is love alone, The wounding is to heal.	70
They dared not plant the grave with flowers, Nor dress the funeral sod, Where, with a love as deep as ours, They left their dead with God.	35	Unharm'd from change to change we glide, We fall as in our dreams ; The far-off terror at our side A smiling angel seems.	75
The hard and thorny path they kept From beauty turned aside ; Nor missed they over those who slept The grace to life denied.	40	Secure on God's all-tender heart Alike rest great and small ; Why fear to lose our little part, When He is pledged for all?	80
Yet still the wilding flowers would blow, The golden leaves would fall, The seasons come, the seasons go, And God be good to all.		O fearful heart and troubled brain ! Take hope and strength from this,— That Nature never hints in vain, Nor prophesies amiss.
Above the graves the blackberry hung In bloom and green its wreath, And harebells swung as if they rung The chimes of peace beneath.	45	Her wild birds sing the same sweet stave, Her lights and airs are given Alike to playground and the grave ; And over both is Heaven.	86
The beauty Nature loves to share, The gifts she hath for all, The common light, the common air, O'ercrept the graveyard's wall.	50	1858.
It knew the glow of eventide, The sunrise and the noon, And glorified and sanctified It slept beneath the moon.	55	THE PALM-TREE.
With flowers or snow-flakes for its sod, Around the seasons ran, And evermore the love of God Rebuked the fear of man.	60
We dwell with fears on either hand Within a daily strife, And spectral problems waiting stand Before the gates of life.		Is it the palm, the cocoa-palm, On the Indian Sea, by the isles of balm ? Or is it a ship in the breezeless calm ?
		A ship whose keel is of palm beneath, Whose ribs of palm have a palm-bark sheath, And a rudder of palm it steereth with.	5
		Branches of palm are its spars and rails, Fibres of palm are its woven sails, And the rope is of palm that idly trails !
		What does the good ship bear so well ? The cocoa-nut with its stony shell, And the milky sap of its inner cell.	10

What are its jars, so smooth and fine,
But hollowed nuts, filled with oil and wine,
And the cabbage that ripens under the Line? 15

Who smokes his nargileh, cool and calm?
The master, whose cunning and skill could charm

Cargo and ship from the bounteous palm.

In the cabin he sits on a palm-mat soft,
From a beaker of palm his drink is quaffed, 20
And a palm-thatch shields from the sun aloft!

His dress is woven of palmy strands,
And he holds a palm-leaf scroll in his
hands,
Traced with the Prophet's wise commands!

The turban folded about his head 25
Was daintily wrought of the palm-leaf
braid,
And the fan that cools him of palm was
made.

Of threads of palm was the carpet spun
Whereon he kneels when the day is done,
And the foreheads of Islam are bowed as
one! 30

To him the palm is a gift divine,
Wherein all uses of man combine,—
House, and raiment, and food, and wine!

And, in the hour of his great release,
His need of the palm shall only cease 35
With the shroud wherein he leth in peace.

'Allah il Allah!' he sings his psalm,
On the Indian Sea, by the isles of balm;
'Thanks to Allah who gives the palm!'
1858.

THE RIVER PATH. 32

No bird-song floated down the hill,
The tangled bank below was still;

No rustle from the birchen stem,
No ripple from the water's hem.

The dusk of twilight round us grew, 5
We felt the falling of the dew;

For, from us, ere the day was done,
The wooded hills shut out the sun.

But on the river's farther side
We saw the hill-tops glorified,— 10

A tender glow, exceeding fair,
A dream of day without its glare.

With us the damp, the chill, the gloom:
With them the sunset's rosy bloom;

While dark, through willowy vistas seen,
The river rolled in shade between. 16

From out the darkness where we trod,
We gazed upon those hills of God,

Whose light seemed not of moon or sun.
We spake not, but our thought was one.

We paused, as if from that bright shore 21
Beckoned our dear ones gone before;

And stilled our beating hearts to hear
The voices lost to mortal ear!

Sudden our pathway turned from night:
The hills swung open to the light; 26

Through their green gates the sunshine
showed,
A long, slant splendor downward flowed.

Down glade and glen and bank it rolled;
It bridged the shaded stream with gold;

And, borne on piers of mist, allied 31
The shadowy with the sunlit side!

'So,' prayed we, 'when our feet draw near
The river dark, with mortal fear,

'And the night cometh chill with dew, 35
O Father! let Thy light break through!

'So let the hills of doubt divide,
So bridge with faith the sunless tide!

'So let the eyes that fail on earth
On Thy eternal hills look forth; 40

'And in Thy beckoning angels know
The dear ones whom we loved below!'

MOUNTAIN PICTURES.

I. FRANCONIA FROM THE PEMIGEWASSET.

ONCE more, O Mountains of the North, unveil

Your brows, and lay your cloudy mantles by !

And once more, ere the eyes that seek ye
fail,

Uplift against the blue walls of the sky
Your mighty shapes, and let the sunshine weave

Its golden net-work in your belting woods, 5
Smile down in rainbows from your falling
floods,

And on your kingly brows at morn and eve
Set crowns of fire ! So shall my soul receive

Haply the secret of your calm and
strength, 10

Your unforgotten beauty interfuse
My common life, your glorious shapes and hues

And sun-dropped splendors at my bidding come,

Loom vast through dreams, and stretch
in billowy length

From the sea-level of my lowland home !

They rise before me ! Last night's thunder-gust 16

Roared not in vain : for where its lightnings thrust

Their tongues of fire, the great peaks seem so near,

Burned clean of mist, so starkly bold and
clear,

I almost pause the wind in the pines to
hear, 20

The loose rock's fall, the steps of browsing
deer.

The clouds that shattered on yon slide-worn walls

And splintered on the rocks their spears
of rain

Have set in play a thousand waterfalls,

Making the dusk and silence of the woods
Glad with the laughter of the chasing
floods, 26

And luminous with blown spray and silver
gleams,

While, in the vales below, the dry-lipped
streams

Sing to the freshened meadow-lands
again.

So, let me hope, the battle-storm that beats 30

The land with hail and fire may pass
away

With its spent thunders at the break of
day,

Lake last night's clouds, and leave, as it retreats,

A greener earth and fairer sky behind,
Blown crystal clear by Freedom's
Northern wind ! 35

II. MONADNOCK FROM WACHUSET.

I would I were a painter, for the sake
Of a sweet picture, and of her who led,
A fitting guide, with reverential tread,
Into that mountain mystery. First a lake
Tinted with sunset ; next the wavy lines
Of far receding hills ; and yet more far, 41

Monadnock lifting from his night of pines

His rosy forehead to the evening
star.

Beside us, purple-zoned, Wachuset laid
His head against the West, whose warm light made 45

His aureole ; and o'er him, sharp and
clear,

Like a shaft of lightning in mid-launching stayed,

A single level cloud-line, shone upon
By the fierce glances, of the sunken sun,

Menaced the darkness with its golden
spear ! 50

So twilight deepened round us. Still and black

The great woods climbed the mountain at our back ;

And on their skirts, where yet the linger- ing day	Before the saintly soul, whose human will Meekly in the Eternal footsteps trod,
On the short greenness of the clearing lay, The brown old farm-house like a bird's- nest hung. 55	Making her homely toil and household ways
With home-life sounds the desert air was stirred :	An earthly echo of the song of praise Swelling from angel lips and harps of seraphim. 85
The bleat of sheep along the hill we heard, The bucket plashing in the cool, sweet well,	1862.
The pasture-bars that clattered as they fell ;	THE VANISHERS. ³³
Dogs barked, fowls fluttered, cattle lowed ; the gate 60	SWEETEST of all childlike dreams In the simple Indian lore
Of the barn-yard creaked beneath the merry weight	Still to me the legend seems Of the shapes who flit before.
Of sun-brown children, listening, while they swung,	Flitting, passing, seen and gone, 5 Never reached nor found at rest,
The welcome sound of supper-call to hear ;	Baffling search, but beckoning on To the Sunset of the Blest.
And down the shadowy lane, in tink- lings clear,
The pastoral curfew of the cow-bell rung. 65	From the clefts of mountain rocks, Through the dark of lowland fir,
Thus soothed and pleased, our backward path we took,	Flash the eyes and flow the locks 10 Of the mystic Vanishers !
Praising the farmer's home. He only spake,	And the fisher in his skiff, And the hunter on the moss,
Looking into the sunset o'er the lake, Like one to whom the far-off is most near :	Hear their call from cape and cliff, 15 See their hands the birch-leaves toss.
'Yes, most folks think it has a pleasant look ; 70	Wistful, longing, through the green Twilight of the clustered pines,
I love it for my good old mother's sake, Who lived and died here in the peace of God !'	In their faces rarely seen Beauty more than mortal shines. 20
The lesson of his words we pondered o'er,
As silently we turned the eastern flank Of the mountain, where its shadow deep- est sank, 75	Fringed with gold their mantles flow On the slopes of westerling knolls ;
Doubling the night along our rugged road :	In the wind they whisper low Of the Sunset Land of Souls.
We felt that man was more than 'his abode,—	Doubt who may, O friend of mine ! 25 Thou and I have seen them too ;
The inward life than Nature's raiment more ;	On before with beck and sign Still they glide, and we pursue.
And the warm sky, the sundown-tinted hill,	More than clouds of purple trail In the gold of setting day ; 30
The forest and the lake, seemed dwarfed and dim 80	More than gleams of wing or sail Beckon from the sea-mist gray.

Glimpses of immortal youth,
Gleams and glories seen and flown,
Far-heard voices sweet with truth, 35
Airs from viewless Eden blown;

Beauty that eludes our grasp,
Sweetness that transcends our taste,
Loving hands we may not clasp,
Shining feet that mock our haste: 40

Gentle eyes we closed below,
Tender voices heard once more,
Smile and call us, as they go
On and onward, still before.

Guided thus, O friend of mine! 45
Let us walk our little way,
Knowing by each beckoning sign
That we are not quite astray.

Chase we still, with baffled feet,
Smiling eye and waving hand, 50
Sought and seeker soon shall meet,
Lost and found, in Sunset Land!

THE PAGEANT.

A SOUND as if from bells of silver,
Or elfin cymbals smitten clear,
Through the frost-pictured panes
I hear.

A brightness which outshines the morning,
A splendor brooking no delay, 5
Beckons and tempts my feet away.

I leave the trodden village highway
For virgin snow-paths glimmering
through
A jewelled elm-tree avenue; 9

Where, keen against the walls of sapphire,
The gleaming tree-bolls, ice-embossed,
Hold up their chandeliers of frost.

I tread in Orient halls enchanted,
I dream the Saga's dream of caves
Gem-lit beneath the North Sea waves!

I walk the land of Eldorado, 16
I touch its mimic garden bowers,
Its silver leaves and diamond flowers!

The flora of the mystic mine-world
Around me lifts on crystal stems 20
The petals of its clustered gems!

What miracle of weird transforming
In this wild work of frost and light,
This glimpse of glory infinite!

This foregleam of the Holy City 25
Like that to him of Patmos given,
The white bride coming down from
heaven!

How flash the ranked and mail-clad alders,
Through what sharp-glancing spears
of reeds
The brook its muffled water leads! 30

Yon maple, like the bush of Horeb,
Burns unconsumed: a white, cold fire
Rays out from every grassy spire.

Each slender rush and spike of mullein, 34
Low laurel shrub and drooping fern,
Transfigured, blaze where'er I turn.

How yonder Ethiopian hemlock Crowned with his glistening circlet
stands!
What jewels light his swarthy hands!

Here, where the forest opens southward,
Between its hospitable pines, 41
As through a door, the warm sun shines.

The jewels loosen on the branches,
And lightly, as the soft winds blow,
Fall, tinkling, on the ice below. 45

And through the clashing of their cymbals
I hear the old familiar fall
Of water down the rocky wall,

Where, from its wintry prison breaking,
In dark and silence hidden long, 50
The brook repeats its summer song.

One instant flashing in the sunshine,
Keen as a sabre from its sheath,
Then lost again the ice beneath.

I hear the rabbit lightly leaping, 55
The foolish screaming of the jay,
The chopper's axe-stroke far away;

The clamor of some neighboring barnyard,
The lazy cock's belated crow,
Or cattle-tramp in crispy snow. 60

And, as in some enchanted forest
The lost knight hears his comrades
sing,
And, near at hand, their bridles
ring,—

So welcome I these sounds and voices,
These airs from far-off summer blown,
This life that leaves me not alone. 66

For the white glory overawes me;
The crystal terror of the seer
Of Chebar's vision blinds me here.

Rebuke me not, O sapphire heaven! 70
Thou stainless earth, lay not on me,
Thy keen reproach of purity,

If, in this august presence-chamber,
I sigh for summer's leaf-green gloom
And warm airs thick with odorous
bloom! 75

Let the strange frost-work sink and crumble,
And let the loosened tree-boughs
swing,
Till all their bells of silver ring.

Shine warmly down, thou sun of noontime,
On this chill pageant, melt and move
The winter's frozen heart with love. 81

And, soft and low, thou wind south-
blowing,
Breathe through a veil of tenderest
haze
Thy prophecy of summer days.

Come with thy green relief of promise, 85
And to this dead, cold splendor bring
The living jewels of the spring!

THE PRESSED GENTIAN.

THE time of gifts has come again,
And, on my northern window-pane,
Outlined against the day's brief light,
A Christmas token hangs in sight.
The wayside travellers, as they pass, 5
Mark the gray disk of clouded glass;
And the dull blankness seems, perchance,
Folly to their wise ignorance.

They cannot from their outlook see
The perfect grace it hath for me; 10
For there the flower, whose fringes through
The frosty breath of autumn blow,
Turns from without its face of bloom
To the warm tropic of my room,
As fair as when beside its brook 15
The hue of bending skies it took.

So from the trodden ways of earth,
Seem some sweet souls who veil their worth,
And offer to the careless glance
The clouding gray of circumstance. 20
They blossom best where hearth-fires burn,
To loving eyes alone they turn
The flowers of inward grace, that hide
Their beauty from the world outside.

But deeper meanings come to me, 25
My half-immortal flower, from thee!
Man judges from a partial view,
None ever yet his brother knew;
The Eternal Eye that sees the whole
May better read the darkened soul, 30
And find, to outward sense denied,
The flower upon its inmost side!

1872.

A MYSTERY.

THE river hemmed with leaning trees
Wound through its meadows green;
A low, blue line of mountains showed
The open pines between.

One sharp, tall peak above them all 5
Clear into sunlight sprang:
I saw the river of my dreams,
The mountains that I sang!

No clue of memory led me on, But well the ways I knew ; A feeling of familiar things With every footstep grew.	10	We saw in richer sunsets lost The sombre pomp of showery noons ; And signalled spectral sails that crossed The weird, low light of rising moons.	5
Not otherwise above its crag Could lean the blasted pine ; Not otherwise the maple hold Aloft its red ensign.	15	On stormy eves from cliff and head We saw the white spray tossed and spurned ; While over all, in gold and red, Its face of fire the lighthouse turned.	10
So up the long and shorn foot-hills The mountain road should creep ; So, green and low, the meadow fold Its red-haired kine asleep.	20	The rail-car brought its daily crowds, Half curious, half indifferent, Like passing sails or floating clouds, We saw them as they came and went.	15
The river wound as it should wind ; Their place the mountains took ; The white torn fringes of their clouds Wore no unwonted look.		But, one calm morning, as we lay And watched the mirage-lifted wall Of coast, across the dreamy bay, And heard afar the curlew call,	20
Yet ne'er before that river's rim Was pressed by feet of mine, Never before mine eyes had crossed That broken mountain line.	25	And nearer voices, wild or tame, Of airy flock and childish throng, Up from the water's edge there came Faint snatches of familiar song.
A presence, strange at once and known, Walked with me as my guide ; The skirts of some forgotten life Trailed noiseless at my side.	30	Careless we heard the singer's choice Of old and common airs ; at last The tender pathos of his voice In one low chanson held us fast.	25
Was it a dim-remembered dream ? Or glimpse through æons old ? The secret which the mountains kept The river never told.	35	A song that mingled joy and pain, And memories old and sadly sweet ; While, timing to its minor strain, The waves in lapsing cadence beat.	30
But from the vision ere it passed A tender hope I drew, And, pleasant as a dawn of spring, The thought within me grew,	40	The waves are glad in breeze and sun ; The rocks are fringed with foam ; I walk once more a haunted shore, A stranger, yet at home, A land of dreams I roam.	35
That love would temper every change, And soften all surprise, And, misty with the dreams of earth, The hills of Heaven arise.		Is this the wind, the soft sea-wind That stirred thy locks of brown ? Are these the rocks whose mosses knew The trail of thy light gown, Where boy and girl sat down ?	40 1873.
A SEA DREAM.		I see the gray fort's broken wall, ³⁴ The boats that rock below ; And, out at sea, the passing sails We saw so long ago Rose-red in morning's glow.	45
We saw the slow tides go and come, The curving surf-lines lightly drawn, The gray rocks touched with tender bloom Beneath the fresh-blown rose of dawn.

The freshness of the early time
On every breeze is blown ;
As glad the sea, as blue the sky,— 50
The change is ours alone ;
The saddest is my own.

A stranger now, a world-worn man,
Is he who bears my name ;
But thou, methinks, whose mortal life 55
Immortal youth became,
Art evermore the same.

Thou art not here, thou art not there,
Thy place I cannot see ;
I only know that where thou art 60
The blessed angels be,
And heaven is glad for thee.

Forgive me if the evil years
Have left on me their sign ;
Wash out, O soul so beautiful, 65
The many stains of mine
In tears of love divine !

I could not look on thee and live,
If thou wert by my side ;
The vision of a shining one, 70
The white and heavenly bride,
Is well to me denied.

But turn to me thy dear girl-face
Without the angel's crown,
The wedded roses of thy lips, 75
Thy loose hair rippling down
In waves of golden brown.

Look forth once more through space and
time,
And let thy sweet shade fall
In tenderest grace of soul and form 80
On memory's frescoed wall,
A shadow, and yet all !

Draw near, more near, forever dear !
Where'er I rest or roam,
Or in the city's crowded streets, 85
Or by the blown sea foam,
The thought of thee is home !

At breakfast hour the singer read
The city news, with comment wise,
Like one who felt the pulse of trade 90
Beneath his finger fall and rise.

His look, his air, his curt speech, told
The man of action, not of books,
To whom the corners made in gold
And stocks were more than seaside 95
nooks.

Of life beneath the life confessed
His song had hinted unawares ;
Of flowers in traffic's ledgers pressed,
Of human hearts in bulls and bears.

But eyes in vain were turned to watch 100
That face so hard and shrewd and
strong ;
And ears in vain grew sharp to catch
The meaning of that morning song.

In vain some sweet-voiced querist sought
To sound him, leaving as she came ; 105
Her baited album only caught
A common, unromantic name.

No word betrayed the mystery fine,
That trembled on the singer's tongue ;
He came and went, and left no sign 110
Behind him save the song he sung.
1874.

HAZEL BLOSSOMS.

THE summer warmth has left the sky,
The summer songs have died away ;
And, withered, in the footpaths lie
The fallen leaves, but yesterday
With ruby and with topaz gay. 5

The grass is browning on the hills ;
No pale, belated flowers recall
The astral fringes of the rills,
And drearily the dead vines fall, 9
Frost-blackened, from the roadside wall.

Yet through the gray and sombre wood,
Against the dusk of fir and pine,
Last of their floral sisterhood,
The hazel's yellow blossoms shine
The tawny gold of Afric's mine ! 15

Small beauty hath my unsung flower,
For spring to own or summer hail ;
But, in the season's saddest hour,
To skies that weep and winds that wail
Its glad surprisals never fail. 20

O days grown cold ! O life grown old !
 No rose of June may bloom again ;
 But, like the hazel's twisted gold,
 Through early frost and latter rain
 Shall hints of summer-time remain. 25

And as within the hazel's bough
 A gift of mystic virtue dwells,
 That points to golden ores below,
 And in dry desert places tells Where flow unseen the cool, sweet wells, - 30

So, in the wise Diviner's hand,
 Be mine the hazel's grateful part
 To feel, beneath a thirsty land,
 The living waters thrill and start,
 The beating of the rivulet's heart ! 35

Sufficeth me the gift to light
 With latest bloom the dark, cold days ;
 To call some hidden spring to sight
 That, in these dry and dusty ways,
 Shall sing its pleasant song of praise.

O Love ! the hazel-wand may fail, 41
 But thou canst lend the surer spell,
 That, passing over Baca's vale,
 Repeats the old-time miracle,
 And makes the desert-land a well. 45
 1874.

SUNSET ON THE BEARCAMP.

A GOLD fringe on the purpling hem
 Of hills the river runs,
 As down its long, green valley falls
 The last of summer's suns.
 Along its tawny gravel-bed 5
 Broad-flowing, swift, and still,
 As if its meadow levels felt
 The hurry of the hill,
 Noiseless between its banks of green
 From curve to curve it slips ; 10
 The drowsy maple-shadows rest
 Like fingers on its lips.

A waif from Carroll's wildest hills,
 Unstoried and unknown ;
 The ursine legend of its name 15
 Prowls on its banks alone.

Yet flowers as fair its slopes adorn
 As ever Yarrow knew,
 Or, under rainy Irish skies,
 By Spenser's Mulla grew ; 20
 And through the gaps of leaning trees
 Its mountain cradle shows :
 The gold against the amethyst,
 The green against the rose.

Touched by a light that hath no name, 25
 A glory never sung,
 Aloft on sky and mountain wall
 Are God's great pictures hung.
 How changed the summits vast and old !
 No longer granite-browed, 30
 They melt in rosy mist ; the rock
 Is softer than the cloud ;
 The valley holds its breath ; no leaf
 Of all its elms is twirled :
 The silence of eternity 35
 Seems falling on the world.

The pause before the breaking seals
 Of mystery is this ;
 Yon miracle-play of night and day
 Makes dumb its witnesses. 40
 What unseen altar crowns the hills
 That reach up stair on stair ?
 What eyes look through, what white wings fan
 These purple veils of air ?
 What Presence from the heavenly heights
 To those of earth stoops down ? 46
 Not vainly Hellas dreamed of gods
 On Ida's snowy crown !

Slow fades the vision of the sky,
 The golden water pales, 50
 And over all the valley-land
 A gray-winged vapor sails.
 I go the common way of all ;
 The sunset fires will burn,
 The flowers will blow, the river flow, 55
 When I no more return.
 No whisper from the mountain pine
 Nor lapsing stream shall tell
 The stranger, treading where I tread,
 Of him who loved them well. 60

But beauty seen is never lost,
 God's colors all are fast ;
 The glory of this sunset heaven
 Into my soul has passed,

A sense of gladness unconfined 65
 To mortal date or clime ;
 As the soul liveth, it shall live
 Beyond the years of time.
 Beside the mystic asphodels
 Shall bloom the home-born flowers, 70
 And new horizons flush and glow
 With sunset hues of ours.

Farewell ! these smiling hills must wear
 Too soon their wintry frown,
 And snow-cold winds from off them shake
 The maple's red leaves down. 76
 But I shall see a summer sun
 Still setting broad and low ;
 The mountain slopes shall blush and
 bloom,
 The golden water flow. 80
 A lover's claim is mine on all
 I see to have and hold,—
 The rose-light of perpetual hills,
 And sunsets never cold !
 1876.

THE SEEKING OF THE WATERFALL.

THEY left their home of summer ease
 Beneath the lowland's sheltering trees,
 To seek, by ways unknown to all,
 The promise of the waterfall.

Some vague, faint rumor to the vale 5
 Had crept—perchance a hunter's tale—
 Of its wild mirth of waters lost
 On the dark woods through which it tossed.

Somewhere it laughed and sang ; some-
 where
 Whirled in mad dance its misty hair ; 10
 But who had raised its veil, or seen
 The rainbow skirts of that Undine ?

They sought it where the mountain brook
 Its swift way to the valley took ;
 Along the rugged slope they clomb, 15
 Their guide a thread of sound and foam.

Height after height they slowly won ;
 The fiery javelins of the sun
 Smote the bare ledge ; the tangled shade
 With rock and vine their steps delayed. 20

But, through leaf-openings, now and then
 They saw the cheerful homes of men,
 And the great mountains with their wall
 Of misty purple girdling all.

The leaves through which the glad winds
 blew 25
 Shared the wild dance the waters knew ;
 And where the shadows deepest fell
 The wood-thrush rang his silver bell.

Fringing the stream, at every turn
 Swung low the waving fronds of fern ; 30
 From stony cleft and mossy sod
 Pale asters sprang, and golden-rod.

And still the water sang the sweet,
 Glad song that stirred its gliding feet,
 And found in rock and root the keys 35
 Of its beguiling melodies.

Beyond, above, its signals flew
 Of tossing foam the birch-trees through ;
 Now seen, now lost, but baffling still
 The weary seekers' slackening will. 40

Each called to each : 'Lo here ! Lo there !
 Its white scarf flutters in the air !'
 They climbed anew ; the vision fled,
 To beckon higher overhead.

So toiled they up the mountain-slope 45
 With faint and ever fainter hope ;
 With faint and fainter voice the brook
 Still bade them listen, pause, and look.

Meanwhile below the day was done ;
 Above the tall peaks saw the sun 50
 Sink, beam-shorn, to its misty set
 Behind the hills of violet.

'Here ends our quest !' the seekers cried,
 'The brook and rumor both have lied !
 The phantom of a waterfall 55
 Has led us at its beck and call.'

But one, with years grown wiser, said :
 'So, always baffled, not misled,
 We follow where before us runs
 The vision of the shining ones. 60

'Not where they seem their signals fly,
 Their voices while we listen die ;
 We cannot keep, however fleet,
 The quick time of their winged feet.

'From youth to age unresting stray 65
These kindly mockers in our way;
Yet lead they not, the baffling elves,
To something better than themselves?

'Here, though unreached the goal we
sought,
Its own reward our toil has brought: 70
The winding water's sounding rush,
The long note of the hermit thrush,

'The turquoise lakes, the glimpse of pond
And river track, and, vast, beyond
Broad meadows belted round with pines,
The grand uplift of mountain lines! 76

'What matter though we seek with pain
The garden of the gods in vain,
If lured thereby we climb to greet
Some wayside blossom Eden-sweet? 80

'To seek is better than to gain,
The fond hope dies as we attain;
Life's fairest things are those which seem,
The best is that of which we dream.

'Then let us trust our waterfall 85
Still flashes down its rocky wall,
With rainbow crescent curved across
Its sunlit spray from moss to moss.

'And we, forgetful of our pain,
In thought shall seek it oft again; 90
Shall see this aster-blossomed sod,
This sunshine of the golden-rod,

'And haply gain, through parting boughs,
Grand glimpses of great mountain brows
Cloud-turbaned, and the sharp steel sheen
Of lakes deep set in valleys green. 96

'So failure wins; the consequence
Of loss becomes its recompense;
And evermore the end shall tell
The unreached ideal guided well. 100

'Our sweet illusions only die
Fulfilling love's sure prophecy;
And every wish for better things
An undreamed beauty nearer brings.

'For fate is servitor of love; 105
Desire and hope and longing prove
The secret of immortal youth,
And Nature cheats us into truth.

'O kind allurers, wisely sent,
Beguiling with benign intent, 110
Still move us, through divine unrest,
To seek the lovehest and the best!

'Go with us when our souls go free,
And, in the clear, white light to be,
Add unto Heaven's beatitude 115
The old delight of seeking good!

THE TRAILING ARBUTUS.

I WANDERED lonely where the pine-trees
made
Against the bitter East their barricade,
And, guided by its sweet
Perfume, I found, within a narrow dell,
The trailing spring flower tinted like a
shell 5
Amid dry leaves and mosses at my feet.

From under dead boughs, for whose loss
the pines
Moaned ceaseless overhead, the blossoming
vines
Lifted their glad surprise,
While yet the bluebird smoothed in leafless trees 10
His feathers ruffled by the chill sea-breeze,
And snow-drifts lingered under April
skies.

As, pausing, o'er the lonely flower I bent,
I thought of lives thus lowly, clogged and pent,
Which yet find room, 15
Through care and cumber, coldness and
decay,
To lend a sweetness to the ungenial day,
And make the sad earth happier for their bloom.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER.

This name in some parts of Europe is given to the season we call Indian Summer, in honor of the good St. Martin. The title of the poem was suggested by the fact that the day it refers to was the exact date of that set apart to the Saint, the 11th of November.

THOUGH flowers have perished at the touch
Of Frost, the early comer,
I hail the season loved so much,
The good St. Martin's summer.

O gracious morn, with rose-red dawn, 5
And thin moon curving o'er it!
The old year's darling, latest born,
More loved than all before it!

How flamed the sunrise through the pines!
How stretched the birchen shadows, 10
Braiding in long, wind-wavered lines
The westward sloping meadows!

The sweet day, opening as a flower
Unfolds its petals tender,
Renews for us at noontide's hour 15
The summer's tempered splendor.

The birds are hushed; alone the wind,
That through the woodland searches,
The red-oak's lingering leaves can find,
And yellow plumes of larches. 20

But still the balsam-breathing pine
Invites no thought of sorrow,
No hint of loss from air like wine
The earth's content can borrow.

The summer and the winter here 25
Midway a truce are holding,
A soft, consenting atmosphere
Their tents of peace enfolding.

The silent woods, the lonely hills,
Rise solemn in their gladness; 30
The quiet that the valley fills
Is scarcely joy or sadness.

How strange! The autumn yesterday
In winter's grasp seemed dying;
On whirling winds from skies of gray 35
The early snow was flying.

And now, while over Nature's mood
There steals a soft relenting,
I will not mar the present good,
Forecasting or lamenting. 40

My autumn time and Nature's hold
A dreamy tryst together,
And, both grown old, about us fold
The golden-tissued weather.

I lean my heart against the day 45
To feel its bland caressing;
I will not let it pass away
Before it leaves its blessing.

God's angels come not as of old
The Syrian shepherds knew them; 50
In reddening dawns, in sunset gold,
And warm noon lights I view them.

Nor need there is, in times like this
When heaven to earth draws nearer,
Of wing or song as witnesses 55
To make their presence clearer.

O stream of life, whose swifter flow
Is of the end forewarning,
Methinks thy sundown afterglow
Seems less of night than morning! 60

Old cares grow light; aside I lay
The doubts and fears that troubled;
The quiet of the happy day
Within my soul is doubled.

That clouds must veil this fair sunshine
Not less a joy I find it; 66
Nor less yon warm horizon line
That winter lurks behind it.

The mystery of the untried days
I close my eyes from reading; 70
His will be done whose darkest ways
To light and life are leading!

Less drear the winter night shall be,
If memory cheer and hearten 30
Its heavy hours with thoughts of thee, 75
Sweet summer of St. Martin!

STORM ON LAKE ASQUAM.

A CLOUD, like that the old-time Hebrew
saw
On Carmel prophesying rain, began
To lift itself o'er wooded Cardigan,
Growing and blackening. Suddenly, a flaw

Of chill wind menaced; then a strong blast beat 5

Down the long valley's murmuring pines, and woke

The noon-dream of the sleeping lake, and broke

Its smooth steel mirror at the mountains'
feet.

Thunderous and vast, a fire-veined darkness swept

Over the rough pine-bearded Asquam
range; 10

A wrath of tempest, wonderful and
strange,

From peak to peak the cloudy giant stepped.

One moment, as if challenging the storm,
Chocorua's tall, defiant sentinel

Looked from his watch-tower; then the shadow fell, 15

And the wild rain-drift blotted out his form.

And over all the still unhidden sun,
Weaving its light through slant-blown veils of rain,

Smiled on the trouble, as hope smiles
on pain;

And, when the tumult and the strife were
done, 20

With one foot on the lake and one on
land,

Framing within his crescent's tinted streak

A far-off picture of the Melvin peak, Spent broken clouds the rainbow's angel spanned.

1882.

A SUMMER PILGRIMAGE.

To kneel before some saintly shrine,
To breathe the health of airs divine,
Or bathe where sacred rivers flow,
The cowed and turbaned pilgrims go.
I too, a palmer, take, as they 5
With staff and scallop-shell, my way
To feel, from burdening cares and ills,
The strong uplifting of the hills.

The years are many since, at first,
For dreamed-of wonders all athirst, 10
I saw on Winnepesaukee fall
The shadow of the mountain wall.
Ah! where are they who sailed with me
The beautiful island-studded sea?
And am I he whose keen surprise 15
Flashed out from such unclouded eyes?

Still, when the sun of summer burns,
My longing for the hills returns;
And northward, leaving at my back
The warm vale of the Merrimac, 20
I go to meet the winds of morn,
Blown down the hill-gaps, mountain-born,
Breathe scent of pines, and satisfy
The hunger of a lowland eye.

Again I see the day decline 25
Along a ridged horizon line;
Touching the hill-tops, as a nun
Her beaded rosary, sinks the sun.
One lake lies golden, which shall soon
Be silver in the rising moon; 30
And one, the crimson of the skies
And mountain purple multiplies.

With the untroubled quiet blends
The distance-softened voice of friends;
The girl's light laugh no discord brings 35
To the low song the pine-tree sings;
And, not unwelcome, comes the hail
Of boyhood from his nearing sail.
The human presence breaks no spell,
And sunset still is miracle! 40

Calm as the hour, methinks I feel
A sense of worship o'er me steal;
Not that of satyr-charming Pan,
No cult of Nature shaming man,

Not Beauty's self, but that which lives 45
And shines through all the veils it weaves,—

Soul of the mountain, lake, and wood,
Their witness to the Eternal Good!

And if, by fond illusion, here
The earth to heaven seems drawing near,
And yon outlying range invites 51
To other and serener heights,
Scarce hid behind its topmost swell,
The shining Mounts Delectable!
A dream may hint of truth no less 55
Than the sharp light of wakefulness.

As through her vale of incense smoke
Of old the spell-rapt priestess spoke,
More than her heathen oracle,
May not this trance of sunset tell 60
That Nature's forms of loveliness
Their heavenly archetypes confess,
Fashioned like Israel's ark alone
From patterns in the Mount made known?

A holier beauty overbroods 65
These fair and faint similitudes;
Yet not unblessed is he who sees
Shadows of God's realities,
And knows beyond this masquerade
Of shape and color, light and shade, 70
And dawn and set, and wax and wane,
Eternal verities remain.

O gems of sapphire, granite set!
O hills that charmed horizons fret!
I know how fair your morns can break, 75
In rosy light on isle and lake;
How over wooded slopes can run
The noonday play of cloud and sun,
And evening droop her oriflamme
Of gold and red in still Asquam. 80

The summer moons may round again,
And careless feet these hills profane;
These sunsets waste on vacant eyes
The lavish splendor of the skies;
Fashion and folly, misplaced here, 85
Sigh for their natural atmosphere,
And travelled pride the outlook scorn
Of lesser heights than Matterhorn:

But let me dream that hill and sky
Of unseen beauty prophesy; 90
And in these tinted lakes behold
The trailing of the raiment fold
Of that which, still eluding gaze,
Allures to upward-tending ways,
Whose footprints make, wherever found,
Our common earth a holy ground. 96

SWEET FERN.

THE subtle power in perfume found
Nor priest nor sibyl vainly learned;
On Grecian shrine or Aztec mound
No censer idly burned.

That power the old-time worships knew, 5
The Corybantes' frenzied dance,
The Pythian priestess swooning through
The wonderland of trance.

And Nature holds, in wood and field,
Her thousand sunlit censers still; 10
To spells of flower and shrub we yield
Against or with our will.

I climbed a hill path strange and new
With slow feet, pausing at each turn;
A sudden waft of west wind blew 15
The breath of the sweet fern.

That fragrance from my vision swept
The alien landscape; in its stead,
Up fairer hills of youth I stepped,
As light of heart as tread. 20

I saw my boyhood's lakelet shine
Once more through rifts of woodland
shade;
I knew my river's winding line
By morning mist betrayed.

With me June's freshness, lapsing brook,
Murmurs of leaf and bee, the call 26
Of birds, and one in voice and look
In keeping with them all.

A fern beside the way we went
She plucked, and, smiling, held it up,
While from her hand the wild, sweet scent 31
I drank as from a cup.

O potent witchery of smell !
The dust-dry leaves to life return,
And she who plucked them owns the spell
And lifts her ghostly fern. 36

Or sense or spirit? Who shall say
What touch the chord of memory thrills?
It passed, and left the August day
Ablaze on lonely hills. 40

THE WOOD GIANT.

[Written at Sturtevant's Farm, about a mile from Centre Harbor, N H.]

FROM Alton Bay to Sandwich Dome,
From Mad to Saco river,
For patriarchs of the primal wood
We sought with vain endeavor.

And then we said: 'The giants old 5
Are lost beyond retrieval;
This pygmy growth the axe has spared
Is not the wood primeval.

'Look where we will o'er vale and hill,
How idle are our searches 10
For broad-girthed maples, wide-limbed
oaks,
Centennial pines and birches!

'Their tortured limbs the axe and saw
Have changed to beams and trestles;
They rest in walls, they float on seas, 15
They rot in sunken vessels.

'This shorn and wasted mountain land
Of underbrush and boulder,—
Who thinks to see its full-grown tree
Must live a century older.' 20

At last to us a woodland path,
To open sunset leading,
Revealed the Anakim of pines
Our wildest wish exceeding.

Alone, the level sun before;
Below, the lake's green islands;
Beyond, in misty distance dim,
The rugged Northern Highlands.

Dark Titan on his Sunset Hill
Of time and change defiant! 30
How dwarfed the common woodland
seemed,
Before the old-time giant!

What marvel that, in simpler days
Of the world's early childhood,
Men crowned with garlands, gifts, and
praise 35
Such monarchs of the wild-wood?

That Tyrian maids with flower and song
Danced through the hill grove's spaces,
And hoary-bearded Drunds found
In woods their holy places? 40

With somewhat of that Pagan awe
With Christian reverence blending,
We saw our pine-tree's mighty arms
Above our heads extending.

We heard his needles' mystic rune, 45
Now rising, and now dying,
As erst Dodona's priestess heard
The oak leaves prophesying.

Was it the half-unconscious moan
Of one apart and mateless, 50
The weariness of unshared power,
The loneliness of greatness?

O dawns and sunsets, lend to him
Your beauty and your wonder!
Blithe sparrow, sing thy summer song 55
His solemn shadow under!

Play lightly on his slender keys,
O wind of summer, waking
For hills like these the sound of seas
On far-off beaches breaking! 60

And let the eagle and the crow
Find shelter in his branches,
When winds shake down his winter snow
In silver avalanches.

The brave are braver for their cheer, 65
The strongest need assurance,
The sigh of longing makes not less
The lesson of endurance.

A DAY.

TALK not of sad November, when a day
 Of warm, glad sunshine fills the sky of
 noon,
 And a wind, borrowed from some morn
 of June,
 Stirs the brown grasses and the leafless
 spray.

On the unfrosted pool the pillared pines 5
 Lay their long shafts of shadow: the small rill,
 Singing a pleasant song of summer still,
 A line of silver, down the hill-slope shines.

Hushed the bird-voices and the hum of
 bees,
 In the thin grass the crickets pipe no
 more; 10
 But still the squirrel hoards his winter
 store,
 And drops his nut-shells from the shag-
 • bark trees.

Softly the dark green hemlocks whisper:
 high
 Above, the spires of yellowing larches
 show,
 Where the woodpecker and home-loving crow 15
 And jay and nut-hatch winter's threat defy.

O gracious beauty, ever new and old!
 O sights and sounds of nature, doubly
 dear
 When the low sunshine warns the closing year
 Of snow-blown fields and waves of Arctic
 cold! 20

Close to my heart I fold each lovely thing
 The sweet day yields; and, not dis-console,
 With the calm patience of the woods
 I wait
 For leaf and blossom when God gives us
 Spring!

Personal Poems

A LAMENT.

‘The parted spirit,
Knoweth it not our sorrow? Answereth not
Its blessing to our tears?’

THE circle is broken, one seat is forsaken,
One bud from the tree of our friendship
is shaken;
One heart from among us no longer shall thrill
With joy in our gladness, or grief in our
ill.

Weep! lonely and lowly are slumbering
now
The light of her glances, the pride of her
brow;
Weep! sadly and long shall we listen in
vain
To hear the soft tones of her welcome
again.

Give our tears to the dead! For humanity's claim
From its silence and darkness is ever the
same;
The hope of that world whose existence is bliss
May not stifle the tears of the mourners of this.

For, oh! if one glance the freed spirit can throw
On the scene of its troubled probation
below,
Than the pride of the marble, the pomp
of the dead,
To that glance will be dearer the tears
which we shed.

Oh, who can forget the mild light of her
smile,
Over lips moved with music and feeling
the while,
The eye's deep enchantment, dark, dream-
like, and clear,
In the glow of its gladness, the shade of its tear.

And the charm of her features, while over the whole
Played the hues of the heart and the sunshine of soul;
And the tones of her voice, like the music which seems Murmured low in our ears by the Angel of dreams!

But holier and dearer our memories hold
Those treasures of feeling, more precious than gold,
The love and the kindness and pity which
gave
Fresh flowers for the bridal, green wreaths for the grave!

The heart ever open to Charity's claim,
Unmoved from its purpose by censure
and blame,
While vainly alike on her eye and her ear
Fell the scorn of the heartless, the jesting and jeer.

How true to our hearts was that beautiful sleepers!
With smiles for the joyful, with tears for the weeper!
Yet, evermore prompt, whether mournful
or gay,
With warnings in love to the passing astray.

For, though spotless herself, she could sorrow for them
Who sullied with evil the spirit's pure gem ;
And a sigh or a tear could the erring
reprove,
And the sting of reproof was still tempered by love. 40

As a cloud of the sunset, slow melting in
heaven,
As a star that is lost when the daylight
is given,
As a glad dream of slumber, which wakens
in bliss,
She hath passed to the world of the holy from this.

1834.

TO THE MEMORY OF CHARLES B. STORRS,

Late President of Western Reserve College, who died at his post of duty, overworn by his strenuous labors with tongue and pen in the cause of Human Freedom.

THOU hast fallen in thine armor,
Thou martyr of the Lord !
With thy last breath crying 'Onward !'
And thy hand upon the sword.
The haughty heart derideth, 5
And the sinful lip reviles,
But the blessing of the perishing
Around thy pillow smiles !

When to our cup of trembling
The added drop is given,
And the long-suspended thunder
Falls terribly from Heaven,—
When a new and fearful freedom
Is proffered of the Lord
To the slow-consuming Famine, 15
The Pestilence and Sword !

When the refuges of Falsehood
Shall be swept away in wrath,
And the temple shall be shaken,
With its idol, to the earth, 20

Shall not thy words of warning
Be all remembered then ?
And thy now unheeded message
Burn in the hearts of men ?

Oppression's hand may scatter 25
Its nettles on thy tomb,
And even Christian bosoms
Deny thy memory room ;
For lying lips shall torture
Thy mercy into crime, 30
And the slanderer shall flourish
As the bay-tree for a time.

But where the south-wind lingers
On Carolina's pines,
Or falls the careless sunbeam 35
Down Georgia's golden mines ;
Where now beneath his burthen
The toiling slave is driven ;
Where now a tyrant's mockery
Is offered unto Heaven ; 40

Where Mammon hath its altars
Wet o'er with human blood,
And pride and lust debases
The workmanship of God,—
There shall thy praise be spoken, 45
Redeemed from Falsehood's ban,
When the fetters shall be broken,
And the slave shall be a man !

Joy to thy spirit, brother !
A thousand hearts are warm, 50
A thousand kindred bosoms
Are baring to the storm.
What though red-handed Violence
With secret Fraud combine ?
The wall of fire is round us, 55
Our Present Help was thine.

Lo, the waking up of nations,
From Slavery's fatal sleep ;
The murmur of a Universe,
Deep calling unto Deep ! 60
Joy to thy spirit, brother !
On every wind of heaven
The onward cheer and summons
Of Freedom's voice is given !

Glory to God forever !
 Beyond the despot's will
 The soul of Freedom liveth
 Imperishable still.
 The words which thou hast uttered
 Are of that soul a part,
 And the good seed thou hast scattered
 Is springing from the heart.

In the evil days before us,
 And the trials yet to come,
 In the shadow of the prison,
 Or the cruel martyrdom,—
 We will think of thee, O brother !
 And thy sainted name shall be
 In the blessing of the captive,
 And the anthem of the free.

LINES

ON THE DEATH OF S. OLIVER TORREY,
 SECRETARY OF THE BOSTON YOUNG
 MEN'S ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY.

GONE before us, O our brother,
 To the spirit-land !
 Vainly look we for another
 In thy place to stand.
 Who shall offer youth and beauty
 On the wasting shrine
 Of a stern and lofty duty,
 With a faith like thine ?

Oh, thy gentle smile of greeting
 Who again shall see ?
 Who amidst the solemn meeting
 Gaze again on thee ?
 Who when peril gathers o'er us,
 Wear so calm a brow ?
 Who, with evil men before us,
 So serene as thou ?

Early hath the spoiler found thee,
 Brother of our love !
 Autumn's faded earth around thee,
 And its storms above !
 Evermore that turf lie lightly,
 And, with future showers,
 O'er thy slumbers fresh and brightly
 Blow the summer flowers !

65 In the locks thy forehead gracing, 25
 Not a silvery streak ;
 Nor a line of sorrow's tracing
 On thy fair young cheek ;
 Eyes of light and lips of roses,
 Such as Hylas wore,— 30
 Over all that curtain closes,
 Which shall rise no more !

75 Will the vigil Love is keeping
 Round that grave of thine,
 Mournfully, like Jazer weeping 35
 Over Sibmah's vine ;⁴⁵
 Will the pleasant memories, swelling
 Gentle hearts, of thee,
 In the spirit's distant dwelling
 All unheeded be ? 40

If the spirit ever gazes,
 From its journeyings, back ;
 If the immortal ever traces
 O'er its mortal track ;
 Wilt thou not, O brother, meet us 45
 Sometimes on our way,
 And, in hours of sadness, greet us
 As a spirit may ?

Peace be with thee, O our brother,
 In the spirit-land ! 50
 Vainly look we for another
 In thy place to stand.
 5 Unto Truth and Freedom giving
 All thy early powers,
 Be thy virtues with the living, 55
 And thy spirit ours !

Essays of Elia.

MAIDEN ! with the fair brown tresses
 Shading o'er thy dreamy eye,
 Floating on thy thoughtful forehead
 Cloud wreaths of its sky.

Youthful years and maiden beauty, 5
 Joy with them should still abide,— Instinct take the place of Duty.
 Love, not Reason, guide.

Ever in the New rejoicing, Kindly beckoning back the Old, Turning, with the gift of Midas, All things into gold.	10	Early hath Life's mighty question Thrilled within thy heart of youth, With a deep and strong beseeching : What and where is Truth?	50
And the passing shades of sadness Wearing even a welcome guise, As, when some bright lake lies open To the sunny skies,	15	Hollow creed and ceremonial, Whence the ancient life hath fled, Idle faith unknown to action, Dull and cold and dead.	55
Every wing of bird above it, Every light cloud floating on, Glitters like that flashing mirror In the self-same sun.	20	Oracles, whose wire-worked meanings Only wake a quiet scorn,— Not from these thy seeking spirit Hath its answer drawn.	60
But upon thy youthful forehead Something like a shadow lies ; And a serious soul is looking From thy earnest eyes.		But, like some tired child at even, On thy mother Nature's breast, Thou, methinks, art vainly seeking Truth, and peace, and rest.
With an early introversion, Through the forms of outward things, Seeking for the subtle essence, And the hidden springs.	25	O'er that mother's rugged features Thou art throwing Fancy's veil, Light and soft as woven moonbeams, Beautiful and frail !	65
Deeper than the gilded surface Hath thy wakeful vision seen, Farther than the narrow present Have thy journeyings been.	30	O'er the rough chart of Existence, Rocks of sin and wastes of woe, Soft airs breathe, and green leaves tremble, And cool fountains flow.	70
Thou hast midst Life's empty noises Heard the solemn steps of Time, And the low mysterious voices Of another clime.	35	And to thee an answer cometh From the earth and from the sky, And to thee the hills and waters And the stars reply.	75
All the mystery of Being Hath upon thy spirit pressed,— Thoughts which, like the Deluge wan- derer, Find no place of rest :	40	But a soul-sufficing answer Hath no outward origin ; More than Nature's many voices May be heard within.	80
That which mystic Plato pondered, That which Zeno heard with awe, And the star-rapt Zoroaster In his night-watch saw.		Even as the great Augustine Questioned earth and sea and sky, ³⁶ And the dusty tomes of learning And old poesy.
From the doubt and darkness springing Of the dim, uncertain Past, Moving to the dark still shadows O'er the Future cast,	46	But his earnest spirit needed More than outward Nature taught ; More than blest the poet's vision Or the sage's thought.	85

Only in the gathered silence
Of a calm and waiting frame,
Light and wisdom as from Heaven
To the seeker came.

90

Not to ease and aimless quiet
Doth that inward answer tend,
But to works of love and duty
As our being's end ;

95

Not to idle dreams and trances,
Length of face, and solemn tone,
But to Faith, in daily striving
And performance shown.

100

Earnest toil and strong endeavor
Of a spirit which within Wrestles with familiar evil
And besetting sin ;

And without, with tireless vigor,
Steady heart, and weapon strong,
In the power of truth assailing
Every form of wrong.

105

Guided thus, how passing lovely,
Is the track of Woolman's feet !
And his brief and simple record
How serenely sweet !

110

O'er life's humblest duties throwing
Light the earthling never knew,
Freshening all its dark waste places
As with Hermon's dew.

115

All which glows in Pascal's pages,
All which sancted Guion sought,
Or the blue-eyed German Rahel
Half-unconscious taught :

120

Beauty, such as Goethe pictured,
Such as Shelley dreamed of, shed
Living warmth and starry brightness
Round that poor man's head.

Not a vain and cold ideal,
Not a poet's dream alone,
But a presence warm and real,
Seen and felt and known.

125

When the red right-hand of slaughter
Moulders with the steel it swung,
When the name of seer and poet
Dies on Memory's tongue,

130

All bright thoughts and pure shall gather

Round that meek and suffering one,— Glorious, like the seer-seen angel
Standing in the sun !

135

Take the good man's book and ponder
What its pages say to thee ;
Blessed as the hand of healing
May its lesson be.

140

If it only serves to strengthen
Yearnings for a higher good,
For the fount of living waters
And diviner food ;

If the pride of human reason
Feels its meek and still rebuke,
Quailing like the eye of Peter
From the Just One's look !

145

If with reader ear thou heedest
What the Inward Teacher saith,
Listening with a willing spirit
And a childlike faith,—

150

Thou mayst live to bless the giver,
Who, himself but frail and weak,
Would at least the highest welfare
Of another seek ;

155

And his gift, though poor and lowly
It may seem to other eyes,
Yet may prove an angel holy
In a pilgrim's guise.

LEGGETT'S MONUMENT.

William Leggett, who died in 1839 at the age of thirty-seven, was the intrepid editor of the New York Evening Post and afterwards of The Plain Dealer. His vigorous assault upon the system of slavery brought down upon him the enmity of political defenders of the system.

'Ye build the tombs of the prophets.'

Holy Writ

YES, pile the marble o'er him ! It is well
That ye who mocked him in his long stern strife,
And planted in the pathway of his life

The ploughshares of your hatred hot from hell, Who clamored down the bold reformer when He pleaded for his captive fellow-men, Who spurned him in the market-place, and sought Within thy walls, St. Tammany, to bind In party chains the free and honest thought, The angel utterance of an upright mind, Well is it now that o'er his grave ye raise The stony tribute of your tardy praise, For not alone that pile shall tell to Fame Of the brave heart beneath, but of the builders' shame ! 1841.	5 10	Loose rock and frozen slide, Hung on the mountain-side, Waiting their hour to glide Downward, storm-driven ! Rhine-stream, by castle old, Baron's and robber's hold, Peacefully flowing ; Sweeping through vineyards green, Or where the cliffs are seen O'er the broad wave between Grim shadows throwing. Or, where St. Peter's dome Swell's o'er eternal Rome, Vast, dim, and solemn ; Hymns ever chanting low, Censers swung to and fro, Sable stoles sweeping slow Cornice and column ! Oh, as from each and all Will there not voices call Evermore back again ? In the mind's gallery Wilt thou not always see Dim phantoms beckon thee O'er that old track again ? New forms thy presence haunt, New voices softly chant, New faces greet thee ! Pilgrims from many a shrine Hallowed by poet's line, At memory's magic sign, Rising to meet thee. And when such visions come Unto thy olden home, Will they not waken Deep thoughts of Him whose hand Led thee o'er sea and land Back to the household band Whence thou wast taken ? While, at the sunset time, Swell's the cathedral's chime, Yet, in thy dreaming, While to thy spirit's eye Yet the vast mountains lie Piled in the Switzer's sky, Icy and gleaming :	25 30 35 40 45 50 55 60 65 70
TO A FRIEND, ON HER RETURN FROM EUROPE.³⁷ How smiled the land of France Under thy blue eye's glance, Light-hearted rover ! Old walls of chateaux gray, Towers of an early day, Which the Three Colors play Flauntingly over. Now midst the brilliant train Thronging the banks of Seine : Now midst the splendor Of the wild Alpine range, Waking with change on change Thoughts in thy young heart strange, Lovely, and tender. Vales, soft Elysian, Like those the vision Of Mirza, when, dreaming, He saw the long hollow dell, Touched by the prophet's spell, Into an ocean swell With its isles teeming. Cliffs wrapped in snows of years, Splintering with icy spears Autumn's blue heaven :		5 10 20

Prompter of silent prayer,
Be the wild picture there
In the mind's chamber,
And, through each coming day
Him who, as staff and stay,
Watched o'er thy wandering way,
Freshly remember.

So, when the call shall be
Soon or late unto thee,
As to all given,
Still may that picture live,
All its fair forms survive,
And to thy spirit give Gladness in Heaven !

LUCY HOOPER.

Lucy Hooper died at Brooklyn, L. I., on the 1st of 8th mo., 1841, aged twenty-four years.⁷⁸

THEY tell me, Lucy, thou art dead,
That all of thee we loved and cherished
Has with thy summer roses perished ;
And left, as its young beauty fled,
An ashen memory in its stead,
The twilight of a parted day
Whose fading light is cold and vain,
The heart's faint echo of a strain
Of low, sweet music passed away.
That true and loving heart, that gift
Of a mind, earnest, clear, profound,
Bestowing, with a glad unthrift,
Its sunny light on all around,
Affinities which only could
Cleave to the pure, the true, and good ;
And sympathies which found no rest,
Save with the loveliest and best.
Of them—of thee—remains there naught
But sorrow in the mourner's breast ?
A shadow in the land of thought ?
No ! Even my weak and trembling faith
Can lift for thee the veil which doubt
And human fear have drawn about
The all-awaiting scene of death.

Even as thou wast I see thee still ;
And, save the absence of all ill
And pain and weariness, which here
Summoned the sigh or wrung the tear,

The same as when, two summers back,
Beside our childhood's Merrimac,
I saw thy dark eye wander o'er
Stream, sunny upland, rocky shore,
And heard thy low, soft voice alone
Midst lapse of waters, and the tone
Of pine-leaves by the west-wind blown,
There's not a charm of soul or brow,
Of all we knew and loved in thee,
But lives in holier beauty now,
Baptized in immortality !
Not mine the sad and freezing dream
Of souls that, with their earthly mould,
Cast off the loves and joys of old,
Unbodied, like a pale moonbeam,
As pure, as passionless, and cold ;
Nor mine the hope of Indra's son,
Of slumbering in oblivion's rest,
Life's myriads blending into one,
In blank annihilation blest ;
Dust-atoms of the infinite,
Sparks scattered from the central light,
And winning back through mortal pain
Their old unconsciousness again.
No ! I have friends in Spirit Land,
Not shadows in a shadowy band,
Not others, but themselves are they.
And still I think of them the same
As when the Master's summons came ;
Their change,—the holy morn-light breaking
Upon the dream-worn sleeper, waking,—
A change from twilight into day.

They've laid thee midst the household
graves,
Where father, brother, sister lie ;
Below thee sweep the dark blue waves,
Above thee bends the summer sky.
Thy own loved church in sadness read
Her solemn ritual o'er thy head,
And blessed and hallowed with her prayer
The turf laid lightly o'er thee there.
That church, whose rites and liturgy,
Sublime and old, were truth to thee,
Undoubted to thy bosom taken,
As symbols of a faith unshaken.
Even I, of simpler views, could feel
The beauty of thy trust and zeal ;
And, owning not thy creed, could see
How deep a truth it seemed to thee,

And how thy fervent heart had thrown
O'er all, a coloring of its own,
And kindled up, intense and warm,
A life in every rite and form, 80
As, when on Chebar's banks of old,
The Hebrew's gorgeous vision rolled,
A spirit filled the vast machine,
A life 'within the wheels' was seen.

Farewell ! A little time, and we 85
Who knew thee well, and loved thee
here,

One after one shall follow thee
As pilgrims through the gate of fear,
Which opens on eternity.

Yet shall we cherish not the less 90
All that is left our hearts meanwhile ;
The memory of thy loveliness

Shall round our weary pathway smile,
Like moonlight when the sun has set,
A sweet and tender radiance yet. 95
Thoughts of thy clear-eyed sense of duty,

Thy generous scorn of all things wrong,
The truth, the strength, the graceful beauty

Which blended in thy song.
All lovely things, by thee beloved, 100
Shall whisper to our hearts of thee ;
These green hills, where thy childhood
roved,

Yon river winding to the sea,
The sunset light of autumn eves

Reflecting on the deep, still floods, 105
Cloud, crimson sky, and trembling leaves

Of rainbow-tinted woods,
These, in our view, shall henceforth
take

A tenderer meaning for thy sake ;
And all thou lovedst of earth and sky 110
Seem sacred to thy memory.

FOLLEN.

ON READING HIS ESSAY ON THE 'FUTURE STATE.'

Charles Follen, one of the noblest contributions of Germany to American citizenship, was at an early age driven from his professorship in the University of Jena, and compelled to seek shelter from official prosecution in Switzerland, on account of his liberal political opinions. He became Professor of Civil Law in the University of Basle. The governments of Prussia, Austria, and Russia united in demanding his delivery as a political offender ; and, in consequence, he left Switzerland, and came to the United States. At the time of the formation of the American Anti-Slavery Society he was a Professor in Harvard University, honored for his genius, learning, and estimable character. His love of liberty and hatred of oppression led him to seek an interview with Garrison and express his sympathy with him. Soon after, he attended a meeting of the New England Anti-Slavery Society. An able speech was made by Rev. A. A. Phelps, and a letter of mine addressed to the Secretary of the Society was read. Whereupon he rose and stated that his views were in unison with those of the Society, and that after hearing the speech and the letter, he was ready to join it, and abide the probable consequences of such an unpopular act. He lost by so doing his professorship. He was an able member of the Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society. He perished in the ill-fated steamer Lexington, which was burned on its passage from New York, January 13, 1840. The few writings left behind him show him to have been a profound thinker of rare spiritual insight.

FRIEND of my soul ! as with moist eye
I look up from this page of thine,
Is it a dream that thou art nigh,
Thy mild face gazing into mine ?

That presence seems before me now, 5
A placid heaven of sweet moonrise,
When, dew-like, on the earth below
Descends the quiet of the skies.

The calm brow through the parted hair,
The gentle lips which knew no guile, 10
Softening the blue eye's thoughtful care
With the bland beauty of their smile.

Ah me ! at times that last dread scene
Of Frost and Fire and moaning Sea
Will cast its shade of doubt between 15
The failing eyes of Faith and thee.

Yet, lingering o'er thy charmed page,
Where through the twilight air of earth,
Alike enthusiast and sage,
Prophet and bard, thou gazest forth, 20

Lifting the Future's solemn veil ;
 The reaching of a mortal hand
 To put aside the cold and pale
 Cloud-curtains of the Unseen Land ;

In thoughts which answer to my own, 25
 In words which reach my inward ear,
 Like whispers from the void Unknown,
 I feel thy living presence here.

The waves which lull thy body's rest,
 The dust thy pilgrim footsteps trod, 30
 Unwasted, through each change, attest
 The fixed economy of God.

Shall these poor elements outlive
 The mind whose kingly will they
 wrought ?
 Their gross unconsciousness survive 35
 Thy godlike energy of thought ?

Thou livest, Follen ! not in vain
 Hath thy fine spirit meekly borne
 The burthen of Life's cross of pain,
 And the thorned crown of suffering
 worn. 40

Oh, while Life's solemn mystery glooms
 Around us like a dungeon's wall,
 Silent earth's pale and crowded tombs,
 Silent the heaven which bends o'er all !

While day by day our loved ones glide 45
 In spectral silence, hushed and lone,
 To the cold shadows which divide
 The living from the dread Unknown ;

While even on the closing eye,
 And on the lip which moves in vain, 50
 The seals of that stern mystery
 Their undiscovered trust retain ;

And only midst the gloom of death,
 Its mournful doubts and haunting fears,
 Two pale, sweet angels, Hope and
 Faith, 55
 Smile dimly on us through their tears ;

'Tis something to a heart like mine
 To think of thee as living yet ;
 To feel that such a light as thine
 Could not in utter darkness set. 60

Less dreary seems the untried way
 Since thou hast left thy footprints there,
 And beams of mournful beauty play
 Round the sad Angel's sable hair.

Oh ! at this hour when half the sky 65
 Is glorious with its evening light,
 And fair broad fields of summer lie
 Hung o'er with greenness in my sight ;

While through these elm-boughs wet with
 rain
 The sunset's golden walls are seen, 70
 With clover-bloom and yellow grain
 And wood-draped hill and stream between ;

I long to know if scenes like this
 Are hidden from an angel's eyes ;
 If earth's familiar loveliness 75
 Haunts not thy heaven's serener skies.

For sweetly here upon thee grew
 The lesson which that beauty gave,
 The ideal of the pure and true
 In earth and sky and gliding wave. 80

And it may be that all which lends
 The soul an upward impulse here,
 With a diviner beauty blends,
 And greets us in a holier sphere.

Through groves where blighting never
 fell 85
 The humbler flowers of earth may twine ;
 And simple draughts from childhood's
 well
 Blend with the angel-tasted wine.

But be the prying vision veiled,
 And let the seeking lips be dumb, 90
 Where even seraph eyes have failed
 Shall mortal blindness seek to come ?

We only know that thou hast gone,
 And that the same returnless tide
 Which bore thee from us still glides on, 95
 And we who mourn thee with it glide.

On all thou lookest we shall look,
 And to our gaze erelong shall turn
 That page of God's mysterious book
 We so much wish yet dread to learn. 100

With Him, before whose awful power
Thy spirit bent its trembling knee;
Who, in the silent greeting flower,
And forest leaf, looked out on thee,

We leave thee, with a trust serene, 105
Which Time, nor Change, nor Death can move,
While with thy childlike faith we lean
On Him whose dearest name is Love!
1842.

TO J. P.

John Pierpont, the eloquent preacher and poet
of Boston.

Not as a poor requital of the joy
With which my childhood heard that lay of thine,
Which, like an echo of the song divine
At Bethlehem breathed above the Holy Boy,

Bore to my ear the Airs of Palestine,—
Not to the poet, but the man I bring 6
In friendship's fearless trust my offering:
How much it lacks I feel, and thou wilt
see,

Yet well I know that thou hast deemed
with me

Life all too earnest, and its time too short
For dreamy ease and Fancy's graceful sport; 11

And girded for thy constant strife with
wrong,

Like Nehemiah fighting while he wrought
The broken walls of Zion, even thy song Hath a rude martial tone, a blow in every
thought! 15

CHALKLEY HALL.

Chalkley Hall, near Frankford, Pa., was the residence of Thomas Chalkley, an eminent minister of the Friends' denomination. He was one of the early settlers of the Colony, and his Journal, which was published in 1749, presents a quaint but beautiful picture of a life of unob-tentatious and simple goodness. He was the master of a merchant vessel, and, in his visits to the West Indies and Great Britain, omitted no opportunity to labor for the highest interests of his fellow-men. During a temporary residence in Philadelphia, in the summer of 1838, the quiet and beautiful scenery around the ancient village of Frankford frequently attracted me from the heat and bustle of the city. I have referred to my youthful acquaintance with his writings in Snow-Bound.

How bland and sweet the greeting of this breeze

To him who flies
From crowded street and red wall's weary
gleam,
Till far behind him like a hideous dream
The close dark city lies! 5

Here, while the market murmurs, while men throng
The marble floor
Of Mammon's altar, from the crush and din
Of the world's madness let me gather in
My better thoughts once more. 10

Oh, once again revive, while on my ear
The cry of Gain
And low hoarse hum of Traffic die away,
Ye blessed memories of my early day
Like sere grass wet with rain! 15

Once more let God's green earth and sunset air
Old feelings waken;
Through weary years of toil and strife
and ill,
Oh, let me feel that my good angel still
Hath not his trust forsaken. 20

And well do time and place befit my mood:
Beneath the arms
Of this embracing wood, a good man made His home, like Abraham resting in the shade
Of Mamre's lonely palms. 25

Here, rich with autumn gifts of countless
years,
The virgin soil
Turned from the share he guided, and in
rain
And summer sunshine throve the fruits and grain
Which blessed his honest toil. 30

Here, from his 'voyages on the stormy seas, Weary and worn, He came to meet his children and to bless The Giver of all good in thankfulness And praise for his return. 35	And hence this scene, in sunset glory warm,— Its woods around, Its still stream winding on in light and shade, Its soft, green meadows and its upland glade,— To me is holy ground. 70
And here his neighbors gathered in to greet Their friend again, Safe from the wave and the destroying gales, Which reap untimely green Bermuda's vales, And vex the Carib main. 40	And dearer far than haunts where Genius keeps His vigils still; Than that where Avon's son of song is laid, Or Vacluse hallowed by its Petrarch's shade, Or Virgil's laurelled hill. 75
To hear the good man tell of simple truth, Sown in an hour Of weakness in some far-off Indian isle, From the parched bosom of a barren soil, Raised up in life and power: 45	To the gray walls of fallen Paraclete, To Juliet's urn, Fair Arno and Sorrento's orange-grove, Where Tasso sang, let young Romance and Love Like brother pilgrims turn. 80
How at those gatherings in Barbadian vales, A tendering love Came o'er him, like the gentle rain from heaven, And words of fitness to his lips were given, And strength as from above: 50	But here a deeper and serener charm To all is given; And blessed memories of the faithful dead O'er wood and vale and meadow-stream have shed The holy hues of Heaven! 85 1843.
How the sad captive listened to the Word, Until his chain Grew lighter, and his wounded spirit felt The healing balm of consolation melt Upon its life-long pain: 55	GONE. ANOTHER hand is beckoning us, Another call is given; And glows once more with Angel-steps The path which reaches Heaven.
How the armed warrior sat him down to hear Of Peace and Truth, And the proud ruler and his Creole dame, Jewelled and gorgeous in her beauty came, And fair and bright-eyed youth. 60	Our young and gentle friend, whose smile Made brighter summer hours, 6 Amid the frosts of autumn time Has left us with the flowers.
Oh, far away beneath New England's sky, Even when a boy, Following my plough by Merrimac's green shore, His simple record I have pondered o'er With deep and quiet joy. 65	No paling of the cheek of bloom Forewarned us of decay; 10 No shadow from the Silent Land Fell round our sister's way. The light of her young life went down, As sinks behind the hill The glory of a setting star, 15 Clear, suddenly, and still.

As pure and sweet, her fair brow seemed Eternal as the sky ;
And like the brook's low song, her voice,—
A sound which could not die. 20

And half we deemed she needed not
The changing of her sphere,
To give to Heaven a Shining One,
Who walked an Angel here.

The blessing of her quiet life . 25
Fell on us like the dew ;
And good thoughts where her footsteps
pressed
Like fairy blossoms grew.

Sweet promptings unto kindest deeds
Were in her very look ; 30
We read her face, as one who reads
A true and holy book :

The measure of a blessed hymn,
To which our hearts could move ;
The breathing of an inward psalm, 35
A canticle of love.

We miss her in the place of prayer,
And by the hearth-fire's light ;
We pause beside her door to hear
Once more her sweet 'Good-night !' 40

There seems a shadow on the day,
Her smile no longer cheers ;
A dimness on the stars of night,
Like eyes that look through tears.

Alone unto our Father's will 45
One thought hath reconciled ;
That He whose love exceedeth ours
Hath taken home His child.

Fold her, O Father ! in Thine arms,
And let her henceforth be 50
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and Thee.

Still let her mild rebuking stand
Between us and the wrong,
And her dear memory serve to make 55
Our faith in Goodness strong.

And grant that she who, trembling, here
Distrusted all her powers,
May welcome to her holier home
The well-beloved of ours. 60

TO RONGE.

This was written after reading the powerful and manly protest of Johannes Ronge against the 'pious fraud' of the Bishop of Treves. The bold movement of the young Catholic priest of Prussian Silesia seemed to me full of promise to the cause of political as well as religious liberty in Europe. That it failed was due partly to the faults of the reformer, but mainly to the disagreement of the Liberals of Germany upon a matter of dogma, which prevented them from unity of action. Ronge was born in Silesia in 1813 and died in October, 1887. His autobiography was translated into English and published in London in 1846.

STRIKE home, strong-hearted man ! Down to the root

Of old oppression sink the Saxon steel.
Thy work is to hew down. In God's name then

Put nerve into thy task. Let other men Plant, as they may, that better tree whose fruit 5

The wounded bosom of the Church shall heal.

Be thou the image-breaker. Let thy blows
Fall heavy as the Suabian's iron hand,
On crown or crosier, which shall interpose Between thee and the weal of Father-
land. 10

Leave creeds to closet idlers. First of all, Shake thou all German dream-land with the fall

Of that accursed tree, whose evil trunk
Was spared of old by Erfurt's stalwart monk.

Fight not with ghosts and shadows. Let us hear 15

The snap of chain-links. Let our glad-dened ear

Catch the pale prisoner's welcome, as the
light

Follows thy axe-stroke, through his cell of night.

Be faithful to both worlds; nor think to feed
Earth's starving millions with the husks of creed. 20
Servant of Him whose mission high and holy
Was to the wronged, the sorrowing, and
the lowly,
Thrust not his Eden promise from our sphere,
Distant and dim beyond the blue sky's
span;
Like him of Patmos, see it, now and here,
The New Jerusalem comes down to man!
Be warned by Luther's error. Nor like
him, 27
When the roused Teuton dashes from his limb
The rusted chain of ages, help to bind
His hands for whom thou claim'st the freedom of the mind! 30

CHANNING.

The last time I saw Dr Channing was in the summer of 1841, when, in company with my English friend, Joseph Sturge, so well known for his philanthropic labors and liberal political opinions, I visited him in his summer residence in Rhode Island. In recalling the impressions of that visit, it can scarcely be necessary to say, that I have no reference to the peculiar religious opinions of a man whose life, beautifully and truly manifested above the atmosphere of sect, is now the world's common legacy.

Nor vainly did old poets tell,
Nor vainly did old genius paint
God's great and crowning miracle,
The hero and the saint!

For even in a faithless day 5
Can we our sainted ones discern;
And feel, while with them on the way,
Our hearts within us burn.

And thus the common tongue and pen
Which, world-wide, echo Channing's fame, 10
As one of Heaven's anointed men,
Have sanctified his name.

In vain shall Rome her portals bar,
And shut from him her saintly prize,
Whom, in the world's great calendar, 15
All men shall canonize.

By Narragansett's sunny bay,
Beneath his green embowering wood,
To me it seems but yesterday
Since at his side I stood. 20

The slopes lay green with summer rains,
The western wind blew fresh and free,
And glimmered down the orchard lanes
The white surf of the sea.

With us was one, who, calm and true, 25
Life's highest purpose understood,
And, like his blessed Master, knew
The joy of doing good.

Unlearned, unknown to lettered fame,
Yet on the lips of England's poor 30
And toiling millions dwelt his name,
With blessings evermore.

Unknown to power or place, yet where
The sun looks o'er the Carib sea,
It blended with the freeman's prayer 35
And song of jubilee.

He told of England's sin and wrong,
The ills her suffering children know,
The squalor of the city's throng,
The green field's want and woe. 40

O'er Channing's face the tenderness
Of sympathetic sorrow stole,
Like a still shadow, passionless,
The sorrow of the soul.

But when the generous Briton told 45
How hearts were answering to his own,
And Freedom's rising murmur rolled
Up to the dull-eared throne,

I saw, methought, a glad surprise
Thrill through that frail and pain-worn frame, 50
And, kindling in those deep, calm eyes,
A still and earnest flame.

His few, brief words were such as move
The human heart,—the Faith-sown seeds
Which ripen in the soil of love 55
To high heroic deeds.

No bars of sect or clime were felt,
The Babel strife of tongues had ceased,
And at one common altar knelt
The Quaker and the priest. 60

And not in vain: with strength renewed,
And zeal refreshed, and hope less dim,
For that brief meeting, each pursued
The path allotted him.

How echoes yet each Western hill 65
And vale with Channing's dying word!
How are the hearts of freemen still
By that great warning stirred!

The stranger treads his native soil,
And pleads, with zeal unfelt before, 70
The honest right of British toil,
The claim of England's poor.

Before him time-wrought barriers fall,
Old fears subside, old hatreds melt,
And, stretching o'er the sea's blue wall, 75
The Saxon greets the Celt.

The yeoman on the Scottish lines,
The Sheffield grinder, worn and grim,
The delver in the Cornwall mines,
Look up with hope to him. 80

Swart smiters of the glowing steel,
Dark feeders of the forge's flame,
Pale watchers at the loom and wheel,
Repeat his honored name.

And thus the influence of that hour 85
Of converse on Rhode Island's strand
Lives in the calm, resistless power
Which moves our fatherland.

God blesses still the generous thought,
And still the fitting word He speeds, 90
And Truth, at His requiring taught,
He quickens into deeds.

Where is the victory of the grave?
What dust upon the spirit lies? 95
God keeps the sacred life he gave,—
The prophet never dies!

1844.

TO MY FRIEND ON THE DEATH OF HIS SISTER.

Sophia Sturge, sister of Joseph Sturge, of Birmingham, the President of the British Complete Suffrage Association, died in the 6th month, 1845. She was the colleague, counsellor, and ever-ready helpmate of her brother in all his vast designs of beneficence. The Birmingham Pilot says of her: 'Never, perhaps, were the active and passive virtues of the human character more harmoniously and beautifully blended than in this excellent woman.'

THINE is a grief, the depth of which another
May never know;
Yet, o'er the waters, O my stricken
brother!
To thee I go.

I lean my heart unto thee, sadly folding 5
Thy hand in mine;
With even the weakness of my soul upholding
The strength of thine.

I never knew, like thee, the dear departed;
I stood not by 10
When, in calm trust, the pure and tranquil-hearted
Lay down to die.

And on thy ears my words of weak
condoling
Must vainly fall:
The funeral bell which in thy heart is tolling, 15
Sounds over all!

I will not mock thee with the poor world's common
And heartless phrase,
Nor wrong the memory of a sainted woman
With idle praise. 20

With silence only as their benediction,
God's angels come
Where, in the shadow of a great affliction,
The soul sits dumb!

Yet, would I say what thy own heart
 approveth : 25
 Our Father's will,
 Calling to Him the dear one whom He loveth,
 Is mercy still.

Not upon thee or thine the solemn angel
 Hath evil wrought : 30
 Her funeral anthem is a glad evangel,—
 The good die not !

God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly
 What He hath given ;
 They live on earth, in thought and deed,
 as truly 35
 As in His heaven.

And she is with thee ; in thy path of trial
 She walketh yet ;
 Still with the baptism of thy self-denial
 Her locks are wet. 40

Up, then, my brother ! Lo, the fields of harvest
 Lie white in view !
 She lives and loves thee, and the God
 thou servest
 To both is true.

Thrust in thy sickle ! England's toilworn peasants 45
 Thy call abide ;
 And she thou mourn'st, a pure and holy presence,
 Shall glean beside !

1845.

DANIEL WHEELER.

Daniel Wheeler, a minister of the Society of Friends, who had labored in the cause of his Divine Master in Great Britain, Russia, and the islands of the Pacific, died in New York in the spring of 1840, while on a religious visit to this country.

O DEARLY loved !
 And worthy of our love ! No more
 Thy aged form shall rise before
 The hushed and waiting worshipper.

In meek obedience utterance giving 5
 To words of truth, so fresh and living,
 That, even to the inward sense,
 They bore unquestioned evidence
 Of an anointed Messenger !
 Or, bowing down thy silver hair 10
 In reverent awfulness of prayer,
 The world, its time and sense, shut out,
 The brightness of Faith's holy trance
 Gathered upon thy countenance,
 As if each lingering cloud of doubt, 15
 The cold, dark shadows resting here
 In Time's unluminous atmosphere,
 Were lifted by an angel's hand,
 And through them on thy spiritual eye
 Shone down the blessedness on high, 20
 The glory of the Better Land !

The oak has fallen !
 While, meet for no good work, the vine
 May yet its worthless branches twine,
 Who knoweth not that with thee fell 25
 A great man in our Israel ?
 Fallen, while thy loins were girded still,
 Thy feet with Zion's dews still wet,
 And in thy hand retaining yet
 The pilgrim's staff and scallop-shell ! 30
 Unharm'd and safe, where, wild and free,
 Across the Neva's cold morass
 The breezes from the Frozen Sea
 With winter's arrowy keenness pass ;
 Or where the unwarning tropic gale 35
 Smote to the waves thy tattered sail,
 Or where the noon-hour's fervid heat
 Against Tahiti's mountains beat ;
 The same mysterious Hand which gave Deliverance upon land and wave, 40
 Tempered for thee the blasts which blew
 Ladaga's frozen surface o'er,
 And blessed for thee the baleful dew
 Of evening upon Eimeo's shore,
 Beneath this sunny heaven of ours, 45
 Midst our soft airs and opening flowers
 Hath given thee a grave !

His will be done,
 Who seeth not as man, whose way
 Is not as ours ! 'Tis well with thee ! 50
 Nor anxious doubt nor dark dismay
 Disquieted thy closing day,
 But, evermore, thy soul could say,

'My Father careth still for me !'
Called from thy hearth and home,—from
her, 55

The last bud on thy household tree,
The last dear one to minister
In duty and in love to thee,
From all which nature holdeth dear,
Feeble with years and worn with pain,
To seek our distant land again, 61
Bound in the spirit, yet unknowing
The things which should befall thee
here,
Whether for labor or for death,
In childlike trust serenely going 65
To that last trial of thy faith !

Oh, far away,
Where never shines our Northern star
On that dark waste which Balboa saw
From Darien's mountains stretching far,
So strange, heaven-broad, and lone, that
there, 71

With forehead to its damp wind bare,
He bent his mail'd knee in awe ;
In many an isle whose coral feet
The surges of that ocean beat, 75
In thy palm shadows, Oahu,
And Honolulu's silver bay,
Amidst Owyhee's hills of blue,
And taro-plains of Tooboonaï,
Are gentle hearts, which long shall be 80
Sad as our own at thought of thee,
Worn sowers of Truth's holy seed,
Whose souls in weariness and need
Were strengthened and refreshed by
thine.

For blessed by our Father's hand 85
Was thy deep love and tender care,
Thy ministry and fervent prayer,—
Grateful as Eshcol's clustered vine
To Israel in a weary land !

And they who drew 90
By thousands round thee, in the hour
Of prayerful waiting, hushed and deep,
That He who bade the islands keep Silence before Him, might renew Their strength with His unslumbering
power, 95
They too shall mourn that thou art gone,
That nevermore thy aged lip
Shall soothe the weak, the erring warn,

Of those who first, rejoicing, heard
Through thee the Gospel's glorious
word,— 100

Seals of thy true apostleship.
And, if the brightest diadem,
Whose gems of glory purely burn
Around the ransomed ones in bliss,
Be evermore reserved for them 105
Who here, through toil and sorrow,
turn

Many to righteousness,
May we not think of thee as wearing
That star-like crown of light, and bearing,
Amidst Heaven's white and blissful
band, 110

Th' unfading palm-branch in thy hand ;
And joining with a seraph's tongue
In that new song the elders sung,
Ascribing to its blessed Giver
Thanksgiving, love, and praise forever !

Farewell ! 116
And though the ways of Zion mourn
When her strong ones are called away,
Who like thyself have calmly borne
The heat and burden of the day, 120
Yet He who slumbereth not nor sleepeth
His ancient watch around us keepeth ;
Still, sent from His creating hand,
New witnesses for Truth shall stand,
New instruments to sound abroad 125
The Gospel of a risen Lord ;

To gather to the fold once more
The desolate and gone astray,
The scattered of a cloudy day,
And Zion's broken walls restore ; 130
And, through the travail and the toil
Of true obedience, minister
Beauty for ashes, and the oil

Of joy for mourning, unto her !
So shall her holy bounds increase 135
With walls of praise and gates of peace :
So shall the Vine, which martyr tears
And blood sustained in other years,
With fresher life be clothed upon ;
And to the world in beauty show 140
Like the rose-plant of Jericho,
And glorious as Lebanon !

TO FREDRIKA BREMER.

It is proper to say that these lines are the joint impromptus of my sister and myself. They are inserted here as an expression of our admiration of the gifted stranger whom we have since learned to love as a friend.

SEERESS of the misty Norland,
Daughter of the Vikings bold,
Welcome to the sunny Vineland,
Which thy fathers sought of old !

Soft as flow of Silja's waters, 5
When the moon of summer shines,
Strong as Winter from his mountains
Roaring through the sleeted pines.

Heart and ear, we long have listened
To thy saga, rune, and song ; 10
As a household joy and presence
We have known and loved thee long.

By the mansion's marble mantel,
Round the log-walled cabin's hearth,
Thy sweet thoughts and northern fancies
Meet and mingle with our mirth. 16

And o'er weary spirits keeping
Sorrow's night-watch, long and chill,
Shine they like thy sun of summer
Over midnight vale and hill. 20

We alone to thee are strangers,
Thou our friend and teacher art ;
Come, and know us as we know thee ;
Let us meet thee heart to heart !

To our homes and household altars 25
We, in turn, thy steps would lead,
As thy loving hand has led us
O'er the threshold of the Swede.

1849.

TO AVIS KEENE.

ON RECEIVING A BASKET OF SEA-MOSSSES.

THANKS for thy gift
Of ocean flowers,
Born where the golden drift
Of the slant sunshine falls
Down the green, tremulous walls 5

Of water, to the cool, still coral bowers,
Where, under rainbows of perpetual
showers,

God's gardens of the deep
His patient angels keep ;
Gladdening the dim, strange solitude 10
With fairest forms and hues, and thus

Forever teaching us
The lesson which the many-colored skies,
The flowers, and leaves, and painted butterflies,
The deer's branched antlers, the gay bird that flings 15
The tropic sunshine from its golden wings,
The brightness of the human countenance,
Its play of smiles, the magic of a glance,
Forevermore repeat,
In varied tones and sweet, 20
That beauty, in and of itself, is good.

O kind and generous friend, o'er whom
The sunset hues of Time are cast,
Painting, upon the overpast
And scattered clouds of noonday
sorrow 25

The promise of a fairer morrow,
An earnest of the better life to come ;
The binding of the spirit broken,
The warning to the erring spoken,
The comfort of the sad, 30

The eye to see, the hand to cull
Of common things the beautiful,
The absent heart made glad

By simple gift or graceful token
Of love it needs as daily food, 35
All own one Source, and all are good !
Hence, tracking sunny cove and reach,
Where spent waves glimmer up the beach,

And toss their gifts of weed and
shell

From foamy curve and combing swell,
No unbecfitting task was thine 41
To weave these flowers so soft and
fair

In unison with His design
Who loveth beauty everywhere ;
And makes in every zone and clime,
In ocean and in upper air, 46
'All things beautiful in their time.'

For not alone in tones of awe and power
 He speaks to man ;
 The cloudy horror of the thunder-shower 50
 His rainbows span ;
 And where the caravan
 Winds o'er the desert, leaving, as in air
 The crane-flock leaves, no trace of passage
 there,
 He gives the weary eye 55
 The palm-leaf shadow for the hot noon
 hours,
 And on its branches dry
 Calls out the acacia's flowers ;
 And where the dark shaft pierces down
 Beneath the mountain roots, 60
 Seen by the miner's lamp alone,
 The star-like crystal shoots ;
 So, where, the winds and waves below,
 The coral-branched gardens grow,
 His climbing weeds and mosses show,
 Lake foliage, on each stony bough, 66
 Of varied hues more strangely gay
 Than forest leaves in autumn's day ;—
 Thus evermore,
 "On sky, and wave, and shore, 70
 An all-pervading beauty seems to say :
 God's love and power are one ; and
 they,
 Who, like the thunder of a sultry day,
 Smite to restore,
 And they, who, like the gentle wind, uplift
 The petals of the dew-wet flowers, and drift 76
 Their perfume on the air, Alike may serve Him, each, with their own gift,
 Making their lives a prayer !
 1850.

THE HILL-TOP.

THE burly driver at my side,
 We slowly climbed the hill,
 Whose summit, in the hot noontide,
 Seemed rising, rising still.
 At last, our short noon-shadows hid 5
 The top-stone, bare and brown,
 From whence, like Gizeh's pyramid,
 The rough mass slanted down.

I felt the cool breath of the North ;
 Between me and the sun, 10
 O'er deep, still lake, and ridgy earth,
 I saw the cloud-shades run.
 Before me, stretched for glistening miles,
 Lay mountain-girdled Squam ;
 Like green-winged birds, the leafy isles 15
 Upon its bosom swam.

And, glimmering through the sun-haze
 warm,
 Far as the eye could roam,
 Dark billows of an earthquake storm
 Beflecked with clouds like foam, 20
 Their vales in misty shadow deep,
 Their rugged peaks in shine,
 I saw the mountain ranges sweep
 The horizon's northern line.

There towered Chocoma's peak ; and
 west, 25
 Mooschillock's woods were seen,
 With many a nameless slide-scarred crest
 And pine-dark gorge between.
 Beyond them, like a sun-rimmed cloud,
 The great Notch mountains shone, 30
 Watched over by the solemn-browed
 And awful face of stone !

'A good look-off !' the driver spake :
 'About this time, last year,
 I drove a party to the Lake, 35
 And stopped, at evening, here.
 'T was duskish down below ; but all
 These hills stood in the sun,
 Till, dipped behind yon purple wall,
 He left them, one by one. 40

'A lady, who, from Thornton hill,
 Had held her place outside,
 And, as a pleasant woman will,
 Had cheered the long, dull ride,
 Besought me, with so sweet a smile, 45
 That—though I hate delays—
 I could not choose but rest awhile,—
 (These women have such ways !)

'On yonder mossy ledge she sat,
 Her sketch upon her knees, 50
 A stray brown lock beneath her hat
 Unrolling in the breeze ;

Her sweet face, in the sunset light
 Upraised and glorified,—
 I never saw a prettier sight
 In all my mountain ride.

55

'As good as fair; it seemed her joy
 To comfort and to give;
 My poor, sick wife, and cripple boy,
 Will bless her while they live!' 60
 The tremor in the driver's tone
 His manhood did not shame:
 'I dare say, sir, you may have known'—
 He named a well-known name.

Then sank the pyramidal mounds, 65
 The blue lake fled away;
 For mountain-scope a parlor's bounds,
 A lighted hearth for day!
 From lonely years and weary niles
 The shadows fell apart; 70
 Kind voices cheered, sweet human smiles
 Shone warm into my heart.

We journeyed on; but earth and sky
 Had power to charm no more;
 Still dreamed my inward-turning eye 75
 The dream of memory o'er.
 Ah! human kindness, human love,—
 To few who seek denied;
 Too late we learn to prize above
 The whole round world beside! 80

ELLIOTT.

Ebenezer Elliott was to the artisans of England what Burns was to the peasantry of Scotland. His Corn-law Rhymes contributed not a little to that overwhelming tide of popular opinion and feeling which resulted in the repeal of the tax on bread. Well has the eloquent author of The Reforms and Reformers of Great Britain said of him, 'Not corn-law repealers alone, but all Britons who moisten their scanty bread with the sweat of the brow, are largely indebted to his inspiring lay, for the mighty bound which the laboring mind of England has taken in our day.'

HANDS off! thou tithe-fat plunderer! play
 No trick of priestcraft here!
 Back, puny lordling! darest thou lay
 A hand on Elliott's bier?

Alive, your rank and pomp, as dust, 5
 Beneath his feet he trod:
 He knew the locust swarm that cursed
 The harvest-fields of God.

On these pale lips, the smothered thought
 Which England's millions feel, 10
 A fierce and fearful splendor caught,
 As from his forge the steel.
 Strong-armed as Thor, a shower of fire
 His smitten anvil flung;
 God's curse, Earth's wrong, dumb Hunger's ire, 15
 He gave them all a tongue!

Then let the poor man's horny hands
 Bear up the mighty dead,
 And labor's swart and stalwart bands
 Behind as mourners tread. 20
 Leave cant and craft their baptized
 bounds,
 Leave rank its minster floor;
 Give England's green and daisied grounds
 The poet of the poor!

Lay down upon his Sheaf's green verge 25
 That brave old heart of oak,
 With fitting dirge from sounding forge,
 And pall of furnace smoke!
 Where whirls the stone its dizzy rounds,
 And axe and sledge are swung, 30
 And, timing to their stormy sounds,
 His stormy lays are sung.

There let the peasant's step be heard,
 The grinder chant his rhyme;
 Nor patron's praise nor dainty word 35
 Befits the man or time.
 No soft lament nor dreamer's sigh
 For him whose words were bread;
 The Runic rhyme and spell whereby
 The foodless poor were fed! 40

Pile up the tombs of rank and pride,
 O England, as thou wilt!
 With pomp to nameless worth denied,
 Emblazon titled guilt!
 No part or lot in these we claim; 45
 But, o'er the sounding wave,
 A common right to Elliott's name,
 A freehold in his grave!

ICHABOD.

This poem was the outcome of the surprise and grief and forecast of evil consequences which I felt on reading the seventh of March speech of Daniel Webster in support of the 'compromise,' and the Fugitive Slave Law. No partisan or personal enmity dictated it. On the contrary my admiration of the splendid personality and intellectual power of the great Senator was never stronger than when I laid down his speech, and, in one of the saddest moments of my life, penned my protest. I saw, as I wrote, with painful clearness its sure results,—the Slave Power arrogant and defiant, strengthened and encouraged to carry out its scheme for the extension of its baleful system, or the dissolution of the Union, the guarantees of personal liberty in the free States broken down, and the whole country made the hunting-ground of slave-catchers. In the horror of such a vision, so soon fearfully fulfilled, if one spoke at all, he could only speak in tones of stern and sorrowful rebuke.

But death softens all resentments, and the consciousness of a common inheritance of frailty and weakness modifies the severity of judgment. Years after, in The Lost Occasion, I gave utterance to an almost universal regret that the great statesman did not live to see the flag which he loved trampled under the feet of Slavery, and, in view of this desecration, make his last days glorious in defence of 'Liberty and Union, one and inseparable.'

So fallen ! so lost ! the light withdrawn
Which once he wore !

The glory from his gray hairs gone
Forevermore !

Revile him not, the Tempter hath
A snare for all ;
And pitying tears, not scorn and wrath,
Befit his fall !

Oh, dumb be passion's stormy rage,
When he who might
Have lighted up and led his age,
Falls back in night.

Scorn ! would the angels laugh, to mark
A bright soul driven,
Fiend-goaded, down the endless dark, 15
From hope and heaven !

Let not the land once proud of him
Insult him now,
Nor brand with deeper shame his dim,
Dishonored brow. 20

But let its humbled sons, instead,
From sea to lake,
A long lament, as for the dead,
In sadness make.

Of all we loved and honored, naught 25
Save power remains ;
A fallen angel's pride of thought,
Still strong in chains.

All else is gone ; from those great eyes
The soul has fled : 30
When faith is lost, when honor dies,
The man is dead !

Then, pay the reverence of old days
To his dead fame ;
Walk backward, with averted gaze, 35
And hide the shame !

THE LOST OCCASION.

SOME die too late and some too soon,
At early morning, heat of noon,
Or the chill evening twilight. Thou,
Whom the rich heavens did so endow
With eyes of power and Jove's own brow,
With all the massive strength that fills 6
Thy home-horizon's granite hills,
With rarest gifts of heart and head
From manliest stock inherited,
New England's stateliest type of man, 10
In port and speech Olympian ;
Whom no one met, at first, but took
A second awed and wondering look
(As turned, perchance, the eyes of Greece
On Phidias' unveiled masterpiece) ; 15
Whose words in simplest homespun clad,
The Saxon strength of Cædmon's had,
With power reserved at need to reach
The Roman forum's loftiest speech,
Sweet with persuasion, eloquent 20
In passion, cool in argument,
Or, ponderous, falling on thy foes
As fell the Norse god's hammer blows,

Crushing as if with Talus' flail
Through Error's logic-woven mail, 25
And failing only when they tried
The adamant of the righteous side,—
Thou, foiled in aim and hope, bereaved
Of old friends, by the new deceived,
Too soon for us, too soon for thee, 30
Beside thy lonely Northern sea,
Where long and low the marsh-lands
spread,
Laid wearily down thy august head.

Thou shouldst have lived to feel below
Thy feet Disunion's fierce upthrow; 35
The late-sprung mine that underlaid
Thy sad concessions vainly made.
Thou shouldst have seen from Sumter's
wall

The star-flag of the Union fall,
And armed rebellion pressing on 40
The broken lines of Washington!
No stronger voice than thine had then Called out the utmost might of men,
To make the Union's charter free
And strengthen law by liberty. 45
How had that stern arbitrament
To thy gray age youth's vigor lent,
Shaming ambition's paltry prize
Before thy disillusioned eyes;
Breaking the spell about thee wound 50
Like the green withes that Samson bound;
Redeeming in one effort grand,
Thyself and thy imperilled land!
Ah, cruel fate, that closed to thee,
O sleeper by the Northern sea, 55
The gates of opportunity!
God fills the gaps of human need,
Each crisis brings its word and deed.
Wise men and strong we did not lack;
But still, with memory turning back, 60
In the dark hours we thought of thee,
And thy lone grave beside the sea.

Above that grave the east winds blow,
And from the marsh-lands drifting slow
The sea-fog comes, with evermore 65
The wave-wash of a lonely shore,
And sea-bird's melancholy cry,
As Nature fain would typify
The sadness of a closing scene,
The loss of that which should have been.

But, where thy native mountains bare 71
Their foreheads to diviner air,
Fit emblem of enduring fame,
One lofty summit keeps thy name.
For thee the cosmic forces did 75
The rearing of that pyramid,
The prescient ages shaping with Fire, flood, and frost thy monolith.
Sunrise and sunset lay thereon
With hands of light their benison, 80
The stars of midnight pause to set
Their jewels in its coronet.
And evermore that mountain mass
Seems climbing from the shadowy pass
To light, as if to manifest 85
Thy nobler self, thy life at best!

WORDSWORTH.

WRITTEN ON A BLANK LEAF OF HIS MEMOIRS.

DEAR friends, who read the world aright,
And in its common forms discern
A beauty and a harmony
The many never learn!

Kindred in soul of him who found 5
In simple flower and leaf and stone
The impulse of the sweetest lays
Our Saxon tongue has known,—

Accept this record of a life
As sweet and pure, as calm and good,
As a long day of blandest June 11
In green field and in wood.

How welcome to our ears, long pained
By strife of sect and party noise,
The brook-like murmur of his song 15
Of nature's simple joys!

The violet by its mossy stone,
The primrose by the river's brim,
And chance-sown daffodil, have found 20
Immortal life through him.

The sunrise on his breezy lake,
The rosy tints his sunset brought,
World-seen, are gladdening all the vales
And mountain-peaks of thought.

Art builds on sand ; the works of pride 25
And human passion change and fall ;
But that which shares the life of God
With Him surviveth all.

TO —.

LINES WRITTEN AFTER A SUMMER
DAY'S EXCURSION.

FAIR Nature's priestesses ! to whom,
In hieroglyph of bud and bloom,
Her mysteries are told ;
Who, wise in lore of wood and mead,
The seasons' pictured scrolls can read, 5
In lessons manifold !

Thanks for the courtesy, and gay
Good-humor, which on Washing Day
Our ill-timed visit bore ;
Thanks for your graceful oars, which 10
broke

The morning dreams of Artichoke,
Along his wooded shore !

Varied as varying Nature's ways,
Sprites of the river, woodland fays,
Or mountain nymphs, ye seem ; 15
Free-limbed Dianas on the green,
Loch Katrine's Ellen, or Undine,
Upon your favorite stream.

The forms of which the poets told,
The fair benignities of old, 20
Were doubtless such as you ;
What more than Artichoke the rill
Of Helicon ? Than Pipe-stave hill
Arcadia's mountain-view ?

No sweeter bowers the bee delayed,
In wild Hymettus' scented shade, 25
Than those you dwell among ;
Snow-flowered azaleas, intertwined
With roses, over banks inclined
With trembling harebells hung ! 30

A charm'd life unknown to death,
Immortal freshness Nature hath ;
Her fabled fount and glen
Are now and here : Dodona's shrine
Still murmurs in the wind-swept pine,—
All is that e'er hath been. 36

The beauty which old Greece or Rome Sung, painted, wrought, lies close at
home ;

We need but eye and ear
In all our daily walks to trace 40
The outlines of incarnate grace,
The hymns of gods to hear !

IN PEACE.

A TRACK of moonlight on a quiet lake,
Whose small waves on a silver-sanded
shore

Whisper of peace, and with the low winds
make

Such harmonies as keep the woods awake,
And listening all night long for their sweet sake ; 5

A green-waved slope of meadow,
hovered o'er

By angel-troops of lilies, swaying light
On viewless stems, with folded wings of
white ;

A slumberous stretch of mountain-land,
far seen

Where the low westering day, with gold and green, 10

Purple and amber, softly blended, fills
The wooded vales, and melts among the
hills ;

A vine-fringed river, winding to its rest

On the calm bosom of a stormless sea,
Bearing alike upon its placid breast, 15
With earthly flowers and heavenly stars impressed,

The hues of time and of eternity :
Such are the pictures which the thought
of thee,

O friend, awakeneth,—charming the keen
pain

Of thy departure, and our sense of loss 20

Requiting with the fullness of thy gain.

Lo ! on the quiet grave thy life-borne
cross,

Dropped only at its side, methinks doth
shine,

Of thy beatitude the radiant sign !

No sob of grief, no wild lament be
there, 25
To break the Sabbath of the holy air;
But, in their stead, the silent-breathing
prayer
Of hearts still waiting for a rest like
thine.
O spirit redeemed! Forgive us, if henceforth,
With sweet and pure similitudes of earth,
We keep thy pleasant memory freshly
green, 31
Of love's inheritance a priceless part,
Which Fancy's self, in reverent awe, is seen
To paint, forgetful of the tricks of art,
With pencil dipped alone in colors of the heart. 35

BENEDICITE.

God's love and peace be with thee, where
Soe'er this soft autumnal air
Lifts the dark tresses of thy hair!

Whether through city casements comes
Its kiss to thee, in crowded rooms, 5
Or, out among the woodland blooms,

It freshens o'er thy thoughtful face,
Imparting, in its glad embrace,
Beauty to beauty, grace to grace!

Fair Nature's book together read, 10
The old wood-paths that knew our tread,
The maple shadows overhead,—

The hills we climbed, the river seen
By gleams along its deep ravine,—
All keep thy memory fresh and green. 15

Where'er I look, where'er I stray,
Thy thought goes with me on my way,
And hence the prayer I breathe to-day;

O'er lapse of time and change of scene,
The weary waste which lies between 20
Thyself and me, my heart I lean.

Thou lack'st not Friendship's spell-word,
nor
The half-unconscious power to draw
All hearts to thine by Love's sweet law.

With these good gifts of God is cast 25
Thy lot, and many a charm thou hast
To hold the blessed angels fast.

If, then, a fervent wish for thee
The gracious heavens will heed from me,
What should, dear heart, its burden be?

The sighing of a shaken reed,— 31
What can I more than meekly plead
The greatness of our common need?

God's love,—unchanging, pure, and
true,—
The Paraclete white-shining through 35
His peace,—the fall of Hermon's dew!

With such a prayer, on this sweet day,
As thou mayst hear, and I may say,
I greet thee, dearest, far away!

KOSSUTH.

It can scarcely be necessary to say that there are elements in the character and passages in the history of the great Hungarian statesman and orator, which necessarily command the admiration of those, even, who believe that no political revolution was ever worth the price of human blood.

TYPE of two mighty continents!—combining

The strength of Europe with the warmth and glow

Of Asian song and prophecy,—the shining
Of Orient splendors over Northern
snow!

Who shall receive him? Who, unblushing, speak 5

Welcome to him, who, while he strove to break

The Austrian yoke from Magyar necks, smote off

At the same blow the fetters of the serf,
Rearing the altar of his Fatherland

On the firm base of freedom, and thereby 10

Lifting to Heaven a patriot's stainless
hand,

Mocked not the God of Justice with
a lie!

Who shall be Freedom's mouthpiece?
 Who shall give
 Her welcoming cheer to the great fugitive?
 Not he who, all her sacred trusts betray-
 ing, 15
 Is scourging back to slavery's hell of
 pain
 The swarthy Kossuths of our land
 again!
 Not he whose utterance now from lips designed
 The bugle-march of Liberty to wind,
 And call her hosts beneath the breaking
 light, 20
 The keen reveille of her morn of fight,
 Is but the hoarse note of the blood-
 hound's baying,
 The wolf's long howl behind the bond-man's flight!
 Oh for the tongue of him who lies at rest
 In Quincy's shade of patrimonial trees,
 Last of the Puritan tribunes and the best, 26
 To lend a voice to Freedom's sympathies,
 And hail the coming of the noblest guest
 The Old World's wrong has given the New World of the West!

1851.

TO MY OLD SCHOOLMASTER.

AN EPISTLE NOT AFTER THE MANNER OF HORACE.

These lines were addressed to my worthy friend Joshua Coffin, teacher, historian, and antiquarian. He was one of the twelve persons who with William Lloyd Garrison formed the first anti-slavery society in New England.

OLD friend, kind friend! lightly down
 Drop time's snow-flakes on thy crown!
 Never be thy shadow less,
 Never fail thy cheerfulness;
 Care, that kills the cat, may plough 5
 Wrinkles in the miser's brow,
 Deepen envy's spiteful frown,
 Draw the mouths of bigots down,

Plague ambition's dream, and sit
 Heavy on the hypocrite, 10
 Haunt the rich man's door, and ride
 In the gilded coach of pride;—
 Let the fiend pass!—what can he
 Find to do with such as thee?
 Seldom comes that evil guest 15
 Where the conscience lies at rest,
 And brown health and quiet wit
 Smiling on the threshold sit.

I, the urchin unto whom,
 In that smoked and dingy room, 20
 Where the district gave thee rule
 O'er its ragged winter school,
 Thou didst teach the mysteries
 Of those weary A B C's,—
 Where, to fill the every pause 25
 Of thy wise and learned saws,
 Through the cracked and crazy wall
 Came the cradle-rock and squall,
 And the Goodman's voice, at strife,³⁰
 With his shrill and tipsy wife,—
 Luring us by stories old, 30
 With a comic uncton told,
 More than by the eloquence
 Of terse birchen arguments
 (Doubtful gain, I fear), to look 35
 With complacence on a book!—
 Where the genial pedagogue
 Half forgot his rogues to flog,
 Citing tale or apologue,
 Wise and merry in its drift 40
 As was Phædrus' twofold gift,
 Had the little rebels known it,
Risum et prudentiam monet!
 I,—the man of middle years,
 In whose sable locks appears 45
 Many a warning fleck of gray,—
 Looking back to that far day,
 And thy primal lessons, feel
 Grateful smiles my lips unseal,
 As, remembering thee, I blend 50
 Olden teacher, present friend,
 Wise with antiquarian search,
 In the scrolls of State and Church:
 Named on history's title-page,
 Parish-clerk and justice sage; 55
 For the ferule's wholesome awe
 Wielding now the sword of law.

Threshing Time's neglected sheaves,
Gathering up the scattered leaves
Which the wrinkled sibyl cast
Careless from her as she passed,— Twofold citizen art thou,
Freeman of the past and now.
He who bore thy name of old
Midway in the heavens did hold
Over Gibeon moon and sun ;
Thou hast bidden them backward run ;
Of to-day the present ray
Flinging over yesterday !

Let the busy ones deride
What I deem of right thy pride :
Let the fools their treadmills grind,
Look not forward nor behind,
Shuffle in and wriggle out,
Veer with every breeze about,
Turning like a windmill sail,
Or a dog that seeks his tail :
Let them laugh to see thee fast
Tabernacled in the Past,
Working out with eye and lip,
Riddles of old penmanship,
Patient as Belzoni there
Sorting out, with loving care,
Mummies of dead questions stripped
From their sevenfold manuscript !

Dabbling, in their noisy way,
In the puddles of to-day,
Little know they of that vast
Solemn ocean of the past,
On whose margin, wreck-bespread,
Thou art walking with the dead,
Questioning the stranded years,
Waking smiles by turns, and tears,
As thou callest up again
Shapes the dust has long o'erlain,—
Fair-haired woman, bearded man,
Cavalier and Puritan ;
In an age whose eager view
Seeks but present things, and new,
Mad for party, sect and gold,
Teaching reverence for the old.

On that shore, with fowler's tact,
Coolly bagging fact on fact,
Naught amiss to thee can float,
Tale, or song, or anecdote ;

Village gossip, centuries old,
Scandals by our grandams told,
What the pilgrim's table spread,
Where he lived, and whom he wed,
Long-drawn bill of wine and beer
For his ordination cheer,
Or the flip that wellnigh made
Glad his funeral cavalcade ;
Weary prose, and poet's lines,
Flavored by their age, like wines,
Eulogistic of some quaint,
Doubtful, puritanic saint ;
Lays that quickened husking jigs,
Jests that shook grave periwigs,
When the parson had his jokes
And his glass, like other folks ;
Sermons that, for mortal hours,
Taxed our fathers' vital powers,
As the long nineteenthlies poured
Downward from the sounding-board,
And, for fire of Pentecost,
Touched their beards December's frost.

Time is hastening on, and we
What our fathers are shall be,—
Shadow-shapes of memory !
Joined to that vast multitude
Where the great are but the good,
And the mind of strength shall prove
Weaker than the heart of love ;
Pride of graybeard wisdom less
Than the infant's guilelessness,
And his song of sorrow more
Than the crown the Psalmist wore !
Who shall then, with pious zeal,
At our moss-grown thresholds kneel,
From a stained and stony page
Reading to a careless age,
With a patient eye like thine,
Prosing tale and limping line,
Names and words the hoary rime
Of the Past has made sublime ?
Who shall work for us as well
The antiquarian's miracle ?
Who to seeming life recall
Teacher grave and pupil small ?
Who shall give to thee and me
Freeholds in futurity ?

Well, whatever lot be mine,
Long and happy days be thine.

Ere thy full and honored age
 Dates of time its latest page!
 Squire for master, State for school,
 Wisely lenient, live and rule;
 Over grown-up knave and rogue
 Play the watchful pedagogue;
 Or, while pleasure smiles on duty,
 At the call of youth and beauty,
 Speak for them the spell of law
 Which shall bar and bolt withdraw,
 And the flaming sword remove
 From the Paradise of Love.
 Still, with undimmed eyesight, pore
 Ancient tome and record o'er;
 Still thy week-day lyrics croon,
 Pitch in church the Sunday tune,
 Showing something, in thy part,
 Of the old Puritanic art,
 Singer after Sternhold's heart!
 In thy pew, for many a year,
 Homilies from Oldbug hear,⁴⁰
 Who to wit like that of South,
 And the Syrian's golden mouth,
 Doth the homely pathos add
 Which the pilgrim preachers had;
 Breaking, like a child at play,
 Gilded idols of the day,
 Cant of knave and pomp of fool
 Tossing with his ridicule,
 Yet, in earnest or in jest,
 Ever keeping truth abreast.
 And, when thou art called, at last,
 To thy townsmen of the past,
 Not as stranger shalt thou come;
 Thou shalt find thyself at home
 With the little and the big,
 Woollen cap and periwig,
 Madam in her high-laced ruff,
 Goody in her home-made stuff,—
 Wise and simple, rich and poor,
 Thou hast known them all before!

THE CROSS.

Richard Dillingham, a young member of the Society of Friends, died in the Nashville penitentiary, where he was confined for the act of aiding the escape of fugitive slaves.

155 'THE cross, if rightly borne, shall be
 No burden, but support to thee;
 So, moved of old time for our sake,
 The holy monk of Kempen spake.⁴¹

160 Thou brave and true one! upon whom
 Was laid the cross of martyrdom,
 How didst thou, in thy generous youth,
 Bear witness to this blessed truth!

165 Thy cross of suffering and of shame
 A staff within thy hands became,
 In paths where faith alone could see
 The Master's steps supporting thee.

170 Thine was the seed-time; God alone
 Beholds the end of what is sown;
 Beyond our vision, weak and dim,
 The harvest-time is hid with Him.

175 Yet, unforgotten where it lies,
 That seed of generous sacrifice,
 Though seeming on the desert cast,
 Shall rise with bloom and fruit at last.

THE HERO.

The hero of the incident related in this poem was Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, the well-known philanthropist, who when a young man volunteered his aid in the Greek struggle for independence.

190 'OH for a knight like Bayard,
 Without reproach or fear;
 My light glove on his casque of steel,
 My love-knot on his spear!

5 'Oh for the white plume floating Sad Zutphen's field above,—
 The lion heart in battle,
 The woman's heart in love!

10 'Oh that man once more were manly,
 Woman's pride, and not her scorn:
 That once more the pale young mother
 Dared to boast "a man is born"!

15 'But now life's slumberous current
 No sun-bowed cascade wakes;
 No tall, heroic manhood
 The level dulness breaks.

'Oh for a knight like Bayard,
Without reproach or fear!
My light glove on his casque of steel,
My love-knot on his spear!' 20

Then I said, my own heart throbbing
To the time her proud pulse beat,
'Life hath its regal natures yet,
True, tender, brave, and sweet!

'Smile not, fair unbeliever! 25
One man, at least, I know,
Who might wear the crest of Bayard
Or Sidney's plume of snow.

'Once, when over purple mountains
Died away the Grecian sun,
And the far Cyllenian ranges 30
Paled and darkened, one by one.—

'Fell the Turk, a bolt of thunder,
Cleaving all the quiet sky,
And against his sharp steel lightnings 35
Stood the Suliote but to die.

'Woe for the weak and halting!
The crescent blazed behind
A curving line of sabres,
Like fire before the wind! 40

'Last to fly, and first to rally,
Rode he of whom I speak,
When, groaning in his bridle-path,
Sank down a wounded Greek.

'With the rich Albanian costume 45
Wet with many a ghastly stain,
Gazing on earth and sky as one
Who might not gaze again!

'He looked forward to the mountains,
Back on foes that never spare, 50
Then flung him from his saddle,
And placed the stranger there.

"Allah! hu!" Through flashing sabres,
Through a stormy hail of lead,
The good Thessalian charger 55
Up the slopes of olives sped.

'Hot spurred the turbaned riders;
He almost felt their breath,
Where a mountain stream rolled darkly
down
Between the hills and death. 60

'One brave and manful struggle,—
He gained the solid land,
And the cover of the mountains,
And the carbines of his band!' 65

'It was very great and noble,'
Said the moist-eyed listener then,
'But one brave deed makes no hero;
Tell me what he since hath been!' 70

'Still a brave and generous manhood,
Still an honor without stain, 75
In the prison of the Kaiser,
By the barricades of Seine.

'But dream not helm and harness
The sign of valor true;
Peace hath higher tests of manhood 75
Than battle ever knew.

'Wouldst know him now? Behold him,
The Cadmus of the blind,
Giving the dumb lip language, 80
The idiot-clay a mind.

'Walking his round of duty
Serenely day by day,
With the strong man's hand of labor
And childhood's heart of play.

'True as the knights of story, 85
Sir Lancelot and his peers,
Brave in his calm endurance
As they in tilt of spears.

'As waves in stillest waters,
As stars in noonday skies, 90
All that wakes to noble action
In his noon of calmness lies.

'Wherever outraged Nature
Asks word or action brave, 95
Wherever struggles labor,
Wherever groans a slave,—

'Wherever rise the peoples,
Wherever sinks a throne,
The throbbing heart of Freedom finds 100
An answer in his own.

'Knight of a better era,
Without reproach or fear!
Said I not well that Bayards
And Sidneys still are here?' 105

RANTOUL.

No more fitting inscription could be placed on the tombstone of Robert Rantoul than this: 'He died at his post in Congress, and his last words were a protest in the name of Democracy against the Fugitive-Slave Law.'

ONE day, along the electric wire
His manly word for Freedom sped ;
We came next morn : that tongue of fire
Said only, 'He who spake is dead !'

Dead ! while his voice was living yet, 5
In echoes round the pillared dome !
Dead ! while his blotted page lay wet
With themes of state and loves of
home !

Dead ! in that crowning grace of time,
That triumph of life's zenith hour ! 10
Dead ! while we watched his manhood's prime
Break from the slow bud into flower !

Dead ! he so great, and strong, and wise,
While the mean thousands yet drew
breath ;
How deepened, through that dread surprise, 15
The mystery and the awe of death !

From the high place whereon our votes
Had borne him, clear, calm, earnest,
fell
His first words, like the prelude notes
Of some great anthem yet to swell. 20

We seemed to see our flag unfurled,
Our champion waiting in his place
For the last battle of the world,
The Armageddon of the race.

Through him we hoped to speak the
word 25
Which wins the freedom of a land ;
And lift, for human right, the sword
Which dropped from Hampden's dying
hand.

For he had sat at Sidney's feet,
And walked with Pym and Vane
apart ; 30
And, through the centuries, felt the beat
Of Freedom's march in Cromwell's
heart.

He knew the paths the worthies held,
Where England's best and wisest trod ;
And, lingering, drank the springs that welled 35
Beneath the touch of Milton's rod.

No wild enthusiast of the right,
Self-poised and clear, he showed alway
The coolness of his northern night,
The ripe repose of autumn's day. 40

His steps were slow, yet forward still
He pressed where others paused or failed ;
The calm star clomb with constant will,
The restless meteor flashed and paled !

Skilled in its subtlest wile, he knew 45
And owned the higher ends of Law ;
Still rose majestic on his view
The awful Shape the schoolman saw.

Her home the heart of God ; her voice
The choral harmonies whereby 50
The stars, through all their spheres,
rejoice,
The rhythmic rule of earth and sky !

We saw his great powers misapplied
To poor ambitions ; yet, through all,
We saw him take the weaker side, 55
And right the wronged, and free the thrall.

Now, looking o'er the frozen North,
For one like him in word and act,
To call her old, free spirit forth,
And give her faith the life of fact, — 60

To break her party bonds of shame,
And labor with the zeal of him
To make the Democratic name
Of Liberty the synonyme, —

We sweep the land from hill to strand, 65
We seek the strong, the wise, the brave,
And, sad of heart, return to stand
In silence by a new-made grave!

There, where his breezy hills of home
Look out upon his sail-white seas, 70
The sounds of winds and waters come,
And shape themselves to words like
these:

'Why, murmuring, mourn that he, whose
power
Was lent to Party over-long,
Heard the still whisper at the hour 75
He set his foot on Party wrong?

'The human life that closed so well
No lapse of folly now can stain:
The lips whence Freedom's protest fell
No meaner thought can now profane. 80

'Mightier than living voice his grave
That lofty protest utters o'er;
Through roaring wind and smiting wave
It speaks his hate of wrong once more.

'Men of the North! your weak regret 85
Is wasted here; arise and pay
To freedom and to him your debt,
By following where he led the way!'
1853.

WILLIAM FORSTER.

William Forster, of Norwich, England, died in East Tennessee, in the 1st month, 1854, while engaged in presenting to the governors of the States of this Union the address of his religious society on the evils of slavery. He was the relative and coadjutor of the Buxtons, Gurneys, and Frys; and his whole life, extending almost to threescore and ten years, was a pure and beautiful example of Christian benevolence. He had travelled over Europe, and visited most of its sovereigns, to plead against the slave-trade and slavery; and had twice before made visits to this country, under impressions of religious duty. He was the father of the Right Hon. William Edward Forster. He visited my father's house in Haverhill during his first tour in the United States.

THE years are many since his hand
Was laid upon my head,
Too weak and young to understand
The serious words he said.

Yet often now the good man's look 5
Before me seems to swim,
As if some inward feeling took
The outward guise of him.

As if, in passion's heated war,
Or near temptation's charm, 10
Through him the low-voiced monitor
Forewarned me of the harm.

Stranger and pilgrim! from that day
Of meeting, first and last,
Wherever Duty's pathway lay, 15
His reverent steps have passed.

The poor to feed, the lost to seek,
To proffer life to death,
Hope to the erring,—to the weak
The strength of his own faith. 20

To plead the captive's right; remove
The sting of hate from Law;
And soften in the fire of love
The hardened steel of War

He walked the dark world, in the mild,
Still guidance of the Light; 26
In tearful tenderness a child,
A strong man in the right.

From what great perils, on his way,
He found, in prayer, release; 30
Through what abysmal shadows lay
His pathway unto peace,

God knoweth: we could only see
The tranquil strength he gained;
The bondage lost in liberty, 35
The fear in love unfeigned.

And I,—my youthful fancies grown
The habit of the man,
Whose field of life by angels sown
The wilding vines o'erran,— 40

Low bowed in silent gratitude,
My manhood's heart enjoys
That reverence for the pure and good
Which blessed the dreaming boy's.

Still shines the light of holy lives 45
 Like star-beams over doubt ;
 Each sainted memory, Christlike, drives
 Some dark possession out.

O friend ! O brother ! not in vain
 Thy life so calm and true, 50
 The silver dropping of the rain,
 The fall of summer dew !

How many burdened hearts have prayed
 Their lives like thine might be !
 But more shall pray henceforth for aid
 To lay them down like thee. 56

With weary hand, yet steadfast will,
 In old age as in youth,
 Thy Master found thee sowing still
 The good seed of His truth. 60

As on thy task-field closed the day
 In golden-skied decline,
 His angel met thee on the way,
 And lent his arm to thine.

Thy latest care for man,—thy last 65
 Of earthly thought a prayer,—
 Oh, who thy mantle, backward cast,
 Is worthy now to wear ?

Methinks the mound which marks thy bed
 Might bless our land and save, 70
 As rose, of old, to life the dead
 Who touched the prophet's grave !
 1854.

TO CHARLES SUMNER.

If I have seemed more prompt to censure
 wrong
 Than praise the right ; if seldom to thine ear
 My voice hath mingled with the exultant cheer
 Borne upon all our Northern winds along ;
 If I have failed to join the fickle throng 5
 In wide-eyed wonder, that thou standest
 strong

In victory, surprised in thee to find Brougham's scathing power with Canning's grace combined ;

That he, for whom the ninefold Muses
 sang,
 From their twined arms a giant athlete
 sprang, 10

Barbing the arrows of his native tongue
 With the spent shafts Latona's archer flung.

To smite the Python of our land and
 time,

Fell as the monster born of Crissa's
 slime,

Like the blind bard who in Castalian springs 15

Tempered the steel that clove the crest of
 kings,

And on the shrine of England's freedom
 laid

The gifts of Cumæ and of Delphi's
 shade,—

Small need hast thou of words of praise from me.

Thou knowest my heart, dear friend,
 and well canst guess 20

That, even though silent, I have not the less

Rejoiced to see thy actual life agree
 With the large future which I shaped for
 thee,

When, years ago, beside the summer 22
 sea,

White in the moon, we saw the long waves fall 25

Baffled and broken from the rocky wall,
 That, to the menace of the brawling flood,

Opposed alone its massive quietude,
 Calm as a fate ; with not a leaf nor vine

Nor birch-spray trembling in the still moonshine, 30

Crowning it like God's peace. I sometimes think

That night-scene by the sea prophetic (For Nature speaks in symbols and in
 signs,

And through her pictures human fate
 divines),

That rock, wherefrom we saw the billows sink 35

In murmuring rout, uprising clear and
 tall

In the white light of heaven, the type of
 one

Who, momentarily by Error's host assailed, Stands strong as Truth, in greaves of granite mailed;

And, tranquil-fronted, listening over
all
The tumult, hears the angels say, Well done!

BURNS.

ON RECEIVING A SPRIG OF HEATHER IN BLOSSOM.

No more these simple flowers belong
To Scottish maid and lover;
Sown in the common soil of song,
They bloom the wide world over.

In smiles and tears, in sun and showers,
The minstrel and the heather, 6
The deathless singer and the flowers
He sang of live together.

Wild heather-bells and Robert Burns!
The moorland flower and peasant! 10
How, at their mention, memory turns
Her pages old and pleasant!

The gray sky wears again its gold
And purple of adorning,
And manhood's noonday shadows hold 15
The dews of boyhood's morning.

The dews that washed the dust and soil
From off the wings of pleasure,
The sky, that flecked the ground of toil
With golden threads of leisure. 20

I call to mind the summer day,
The early harvest mowing,
The sky with sun and clouds at play,
And flowers with breezes blowing.

I hear the blackbird in the corn, 25
The locust in the haying;
And, like the fabled hunter's horn,
Old tunes my heart is playing.

How oft that day, with fond delay,
I sought the maple's shadow, 30
And sang with Burns the hours away,
Forgetful of the meadow!

Bees hummed, birds twittered, overhead
I heard the squirrels leaping,
The good dog listened while I read, 35
And wagged his tail in keeping.

I watched him while in sportive mood
I read 'The Two Dogs' story,
And half believed he understood
The poet's allegory. 40

Sweet day, sweet songs! The golden
hours
Grew brighter for that singing,
From brook and bird and meadow flowers
A dearer welcome bringing.

New light on home-seen Nature beamed,
New glory over Woman; 46
And daily life and duty seemed
No longer poor and common.

I woke to find the simple truth
Of fact and feeling better 50
Than all the dreams that held my youth
A still repining debtor:

That Nature gives her handmaid, Art,
The themes of sweet discoursing;
The tender idyls of the heart 55
In every tongue rehearsing.

Why dream of lands of gold and pearl,
Of loving knight and lady,
When farmer boy and barefoot girl
Were wandering there already? 60

I saw through all familiar things
The romance underlying;
The joys and griefs that plume the wings
Of Fancy skyward flying.

I saw the same blithe day return, 65
The same sweet fall of even,
That rose on wooded Craigie-burn,
And sank on crystal Devon.

I matched with Scotland's heathery hills
The sweetbrier and the clover; 70
With Ayr and Doon, my native rills,
Their wood-hymns chanting over.

O'er rank and pomp, as he had seen,
I saw the Man uprising;
No longer common or unclean, 75
The child of God's baptizing!

With clearer eyes I saw the worth
Of life among the lowly ;
The Bible at his Cotter's hearth
Had made my own more holy.

80

And if at times an evil strain,
To lawless love appealing,
Broke in upon the sweet refrain
Of pure and healthful feeling,

It died upon the eye and ear,
No inward answer gaining ;
No heart had I to see or hear
The discord and the staining.

85

Let those who never erred forget
His worth, in vain bewailings ;
Sweet Soul of Song ! I own my debt
Uncancelled by his failings !

90

Lament who will the ribald line
Which tells his lapse from duty,
How kissed the maddening lips of wine
Or wanton ones of beauty ;

96

But think, while falls that shade between
The erring one and Heaven,
That he who loved like Magdalen,
Like her may be forgiven.

100

Not his the song whose thunderous chime
Eternal echoes render ;
The mournful Tuscan's haunted rhyme,
And Milton's starry splendor !

But who his human heart has laid
To Nature's bosom nearer ?
Who sweetened toil like him, or paid
To love a tribute dearer ?

105

Through all his tuneful art, how strong
The human feeling gushes !
The very moonlight of his song
Is warm with smiles and blushes !

110

Give lettered pomp to teeth of Time,
So 'Bonnie Doon' but tarry ;
Blot out the Epic's stately rhyme,
But spare his Highland Mary !

115

1854.

TO GEORGE B. CHEEVER.

So spake Esaias : so, in words of flame, Tekoa's prophet-herdsman smote with
blame
The traffickers in men, and put to shame,
All earth and heaven before,
The sacerdotal robbers of the poor.

5

All the dread Scripture lives for thee
again,
To smite like lightning on the hands
profane
Lifted to bless the slave-whip and the chain.

Once more the old Hebrew tongue Bends with the shafts of God a bow new-strung !

10

Take up the mantle which the prophets wore ;

Warn with their warnings, show the Christ once more

Bound, scourged, and crucified in His blameless poor ;

And shake above our land
The unquenched bolts that blazed in Hosea's hand !

15

Not vainly shalt thou cast upon our years
The solemn burdens of the Orient seers,
And smite with truth a guilty nation's ears.

Mightier was Luther's word
Than Seeking's mailed arm or Hutton's sword !

20

1858.

TO JAMES T. FIELDS.

ON A BLANK LEAF OF 'POEMS PRINTED,
NOT PUBLISHED.'

WELL thought ! who would not rather
hear

The songs to Love and Friendship sung
Than those which move the stranger's
tongue,

And feed his unselected ear ?

Our social joys are more than fame ; 5
Life withers in the public look.
Why mount the pillory of a book,
Or barter comfort for a name?

Who in a house of glass would dwell,
With curious eyes at every pane? 10
To ring him in and out again,
Who wants the public crier's bell?

To see the angel in one's way,
Who wants to play the ass's part,—
Bear on his back the wizard Art, 15
And in his service speak or bray?

And who his manly locks would shave,
And quench the eyes of common sense,
To share the noisy recompense
That mocked the shorn and blinded slave?

The heart has needs beyond the head, 21
And, starving in the plenitude
Of strange gifts, craves its common food,—
Our human nature's daily bread.

We are but men : no gods are we, 25
To sit in mid-heaven, cold and bleak,
Each separate, on his painful peak,
Thin-cloaked in self-complacency !

Better his lot whose axe is swung
In Wartburg's woods, or that poor girl's
Who by the Ilm her spindle whirls 31
And sings the songs that Luther sung,

Than his who, old, and cold, and vain,
At Weimar sat, a demigod,
And bowed with Jove's imperial nod
His votaries in and out again ! 36

Ply, Vanity, thy wing'd feet !
Ambition, hew thy rocky stair !
Who envies him who feeds on air 40
The icy splendor of his seat ?

I see your Alps, above me, cut
The dark, cold sky ; and dim and lone
I see ye sitting,—stone on stone,—
With human senses dulled and shut.

I could not reach you, if I would, 45
Nor sit among your cloudy shapes ;
And (spare the fable of the grapes
And fox) I would not if I could.

Keep to your lofty pedestals !
The safer plain below I choose : 50
Who never wins can rarely lose,
Who never climbs as rarely falls.

Let such as love the eagle's scream
Divide with him his home of ice :
For me shall gentler notes suffice,— 55
The valley-song of bird and stream ;

The pastoral bleat, the drone of bees,
The flail-beat chiming far away,
The cattle-low, at shut of day,
The voice of God in leaf and breeze ! 60

Then lend thy hand, my wiser friend,
And help me to the vales below,
(In truth, I have not far to go,) Where sweet with flowers the fields extend.
1853.

THE MEMORY OF BURNS.

Read at the Boston celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, 25th, 1st mo., 1859. In my absence these lines were read by Ralph Waldo Emerson.

How sweetly come the holy psalms
From saints and martyrs down,
The waving of triumphal palms
Above the thorny crown !
The choral praise, the chanted prayers 5
From harps by angels strung,
The hunted Cameron's mountain airs,
The hymns that Luther sung !

Yet, jarring not the heavenly notes,
The sounds of earth are heard, 10
As through the open minster floats
The song of breeze and bird !
Not less the wonder of the sky
That daisies bloom below ;
The brook sings on, though loud and high
The cloudy organs blow ! 16

And, if the tender ear be jarred
That, haply, hears by turns
The saintly harp of Olney's bard,
The pastoral pipe of Burns,
No discord mars His perfect plan
Who gave them both a tongue;
For he who sings the love of man
The love of God hath sung!

To-day be every fault forgiven
Of him in whom we joy!
We take, with thanks, the gold of Heaven
And leave the earth's alloy.
Be ours his music as of spring,
His sweetness as of flowers,
The songs the bard himself might sing
In holier ears than ours.

Sweet airs of love and home, the hum
Of household melodies,
Come singing, as the robins come
To sing in door-yard trees.
And, heart to heart, two nations lean,
No rival wreaths to twine,
But blending in eternal green
The holly and the pine!
1859.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF JOSEPH STURGE.

In the fair land o'erwatched by Ischia's
mountains,
Across the charmed bay
Whose blue waves keep with Capri's silver fountains
Perpetual holiday,

A king lies dead, his wafer duly eaten, 5
His gold-bought masses given;
And Rome's great altar smokes with gums to sweeten
Her foulest gift to Heaven.

And while all Naples thrills with mute
thanksgiving,
The court of England's queen 10
For the dead monster so abhorred while living
In mourning garb is seen.

With a true sorrow God rebukes that feigning;
By lone Edgbaston's side
Stands a great city in the sky's sad raining, 15
Bareheaded and wet-eyed!

Silent for once the restless hive of labor,
Save the low funeral tread,
Or voice of craftsman whispering to his neighbor
The good deeds of the dead. 20

For him no minster's chant of the immortals
Rose from the lips of sin;
No mitred priest swung back the heavenly portals
To let the white soul in.

But Age and Sickness framed their tearful faces 25
In the low hovel's door,
And prayers went up from all the dark by-places
And Ghettos of the poor.

The pallid toiler and the negro chattel,
The vagrant of the street, 30
The human dice wherewith in games of battle
The lords of earth compete,

Touched with a grief that needs no outward draping,
All swelled the long lament,
Of grateful hearts, instead of marble, shaping 35
His viewless monument!

For never yet, with ritual pomp and splendor,
In the long heretofore,
A heart more loyal, warm, and true, and tender,
Has England's turf closed o'er. 40

And if there fell from out her grand old steeple
No crash of brazen wail,
The murmurous woe of kindreds, tongues,
and peoples
Swept in on every gale.

It came from Holstein's birchen-belted meadows, 45	Tender as woman, manliness and meek- ness
And from the tropic calms	In him were so allied
Of Indian islands in the sun-smit shadows	That they who judged him by his strength or weakness
Of Occidental palms ;	Saw but a single side. 80
From the locked roadsteads of the Both- man peasants,	Men failed, betrayed him, but his zeal seemed nourished
And harbors of the Finn, 50	By failure and by fall ;
Where war's worn victims saw his gentle presence	Still a large faith in human-kind he cherished,
Come sailing, Christ-like, in,	And in God's love for all.
To seek the lost, to build the old waste places,	And now he rests : his greatness and his sweetness 85
To link the hostile shores	No more shall seem at strife ;
Of severing seas, and sow with England's daisies 55	And death has moulded into calm com- pleteness
The moss of Finland's moors.	The statue of his life.
Thanks for the good man's beautiful example,	Where the dews glisten and the songbirds warble,
Who in the vilest saw	His dust to dust is laid, 90
Some sacred crypt or altar of a temple	In Nature's keeping, with no pomp of marble
Still vocal with God's law ; 60	To shame his modest shade.
And heard with tender ear the spirit sighing	The forges glow, the hammers all are ringing ;
As from its prison cell,	Beneath its smoky veil,
Praying for pity, like the mournful crying Of Jonah out of hell.	Hard by, the city of his love is swinging Its clamorous iron flail. 95
Not his the golden pen's or lip's per- suasion, 65	But round his grave are quietude and beauty,
But a fine sense of right,	And the sweet heaven above,—
And Truth's directness, meeting each occasion	The fitting symbols of a life of duty Transfigured into love ! 100
Straight as a line of light.	1859.
His faith and works, like streams that intermingle,	BROWN OF OSSAWATOMIE.
In the same channel ran : 70	JOHN BROWN of Ossawatomie spake on his dying day :
The crystal clearness of an eye kept single	'I will not have to shrive my soul a priest in Slavery's pay.
Shamed all the frauds of man.	But let some poor slave-mother whom I have striven to free,
The very gentlest of all human natures	With her children, from the gallows-stair put up a prayer for me !'
He joined to courage strong,
And love outreaching unto all God's creatures 75
With sturdy hate of wrong.

John Brown of Ossawatomie, they led him out to die; 5
 And lo! a poor slave-mother with her little child pressed nigh.
 Then the bold, blue eye grew tender, and the old harsh face grew mild,
 As he stooped between the jeering ranks and kissed the negro's child!

The shadows of his stormy life that moment fell apart;
 And they who blamed the bloody hand
 forgave the loving heart. 10
 That kiss from all its guilty means redeemed the good intent,
 And round the grisly fighter's hair the martyr's aureole bent!

Perish with him the folly that seeks through evil good!
 Long live the generous purpose unstained
 with human blood!
 Not the raid of midnight terror, but the thought which underlies; 15
 Not the borderer's pride of daring, but the Christian's sacrifice.

Nevermore may yon Blue Ridges the Northern rifle hear,
 Nor see the light of blazing homes flash
 on the negro's spear.
 But let the free-winged angel Truth their guarded passes scale,
 To teach that right is more than might,
 and justice more than mail! 20

So vainly shall Virginia set her battle in array;
 In vain her trampling squadrons knead
 the winter snow with clay.
 She may strike the pouncing eagle, but she dares not harm the dove;
 And every gate she bars to Hate shall open wide to Love!

1859.

NAPLES.

INSCRIBED TO ROBERT C. WATERSTON,
 OF BOSTON.

Helen Waterston died at Naples in her eighteenth year, and lies buried in the Protestant cemetery there. The stone over her grave bears the lines,

Fold her, O Father, in Thine arms,
 And let her henceforth be
 A messenger of love between
 Our human hearts and Thee.

I GIVE thee joy!—I know to thee
 The dearest spot on earth must be Where sleeps thy loved one by the summer sea;

Where, near her sweetest poet's tomb,
 The land of Virgil gave thee room 5
 To lay thy flower with her perpetual
 bloom.

I know that when the sky shut down
 Behind thee on the gleaming town,
 On Baiae's baths and Posilippo's crown;

And, through thy tears, the mocking
 day 10
 Burned Ischia's mountain lines away,
 And Capri melted in its sunny bay;

Through thy great farewell sorrow
 shot
 The sharp pang of a bitter thought
 That slaves must tread around that holy
 spot. 15

Thou knewest not the land was blest
 In giving thy beloved rest,
 Holding the fond hope closer to her breast

That every sweet and saintly grave
 Was freedom's prophecy, and gave 20
 The pledge of Heaven to sanctify and
 save.

That pledge is answered. To thy ear
 The unchained city sends its cheer,
 And, tuned to joy, the muffled bells of
 fear

Ring Victor in. The land sits free
And happy by the summer sea, 26
And Bourbon Naples now is Italy!

She smiles above her broken chain
The languid smile that follows pain,
Stretching her cramped limbs to the sun
again. 30

Oh, joy for all, who hear her call
From gray Camaldoli's convent-wall
And Elmo's towers to freedom's carnival!

A new life breathes among her vines
And olives, like the breath of pines 35
Blown downward from the breezy Apennines.

Lean, O my friend, to meet that
breath,
Rejoice as one who witnesseth
Beauty from ashes rise, and life from
death!

Thy sorrow shall no more be pain, 40
Its tears shall fall in sunlit rain,
Writing the grave with flowers: 'Arisen
again!'
1860.

A MEMORIAL.

Moses Austin Cartland, a dear friend and relation, who led a faithful life as a teacher, and died in the summer of 1863.

Oh, thicker, deeper, darker growing,
The solemn vista to the tomb
Must know henceforth another shadow,
And give another cypress room.

In love surpassing that of brothers, 5
We walked, O friend, from childhood's
day;
And, looking back o'er fifty summers,
Our footprints track a common way.

One in our faith, and one our longing
To make the world within our reach 10
Somewhat the better for our living,
And gladder for our human speech.

Thou heard'st with me the far-off voices,
The old beguiling song of fame,
But life to thee was warm and present, 15
And love was better than a name.

To homely joys and loves and friendships
Thy genial nature fondly clung;
And so the shadow on the dial
Ran back and left thee always young. 20

And who could blame the generous weakness
Which, only to thyself unjust,
So overprized the worth of others,
And dwarfed thy own with self-distrust?

All hearts grew warmer in the presence
Of one who, seeking not his own, 26
Gave freely for the love of giving,
Nor reaped for self the harvest sown.

Thy greeting smile was pledge and prelude
Of generous deeds and kindly words; 30
In thy large heart were fair guest-chambers,
Open to sunrise and the birds!

The task was thine to mould and fashion
Life's plastic newness into grace:
To make the boyish heart heroic, 35
And light with thought the maiden's
face.

O'er all the land, in town and prairie,
With bended heads of mourning, stand
The living forms that owe their beauty
And fitness to thy shaping hand. 40

Thy call has come in ripened manhood,
The noonday calm of heart and mind,
While I, who dreamed of thy remaining
To mourn me, linger still behind:

Live on, to own, with self-upbraiding, 45
A debt of love still due from me,—
The vain remembrance of occasions,
Forever lost, of serving thee.

It was not mine among thy kindred
To join the silent funeral prayers, 50
But all that long sad day of summer
My tears of mourning dropped with theirs.

All day the sea-waves sobbed with sorrow,
 The birds forgot their merry trills:
 All day I heard the pines lamenting 55
 With thine upon thy homestead hills.

Green be those hillside pines forever,
 And green the meadowy lowlands be,
 And green the old memorial beeches,
 Name-carven in the woods of Lee! 60

Still let them greet thy life companions
 Who thither turn their pilgrim feet,
 In every mossy line recalling
 A tender memory sadly sweet.

O friend! if thought and sense avail not
 To know thee henceforth as thou art, 66
 That all is well with thee forever
 I trust the instincts of my heart.

Thine be the quiet habitations,
 Thine the green pastures, blossom-sown,
 And smiles of saintly recognition, 71
 As sweet and tender as thy own.

Thou com'st not from the hush and shadow
 To meet us, but to thee we come;
 With thee we never can be strangers, 75
 And where thou art must still be home.

BRYANT ON HIS BIRTHDAY.

Mr. Bryant's seventieth birthday, November 3, 1864, was celebrated by a festival to which these verses were sent

WE praise not now the poet's art,
 The rounded beauty of his song;
 Who weighs him from his life apart
 Must do his nobler nature wrong.

Not for the eye, familiar grown 5
 With charms to common sight denied,—
 The marvellous gift he shares alone
 With him who walked on Rydal-side;

Not for rapt hymn nor woodland lay,
 Too grave for smiles, too sweet for tears;
 We speak his praise who wears to-day 11
 The glory of his seventy years.

When Peace brings Freedom in her train,
 Let happy lips his songs rehearse;
 His life is now his noblest strain, 15
 His manhood better than his verse!

Thank God! his hand on Nature's keys
 Its cunning keeps at life's full span;
 But, dimmed and dwarfed, in times like
 these,
 The poet seems beside the man! 20

So be it! let the garlands die,
 The singer's wreath, the painter's meed,
 Let our names perish, if thereby
 Our country may be saved and freed!
 1864.

THOMAS STARR KING.

Published originally as a prelude to the posthumous volume of selections edited by Richard Frothingham

THE great work laid upon his twoscore
 years
 Is done, and well done. If we drop our
 tears,
 Who loved him as few men were ever
 loved,
 We mourn no blighted hope nor broken plan
 With him whose life stands rounded and approved 5

In the full growth and stature of a man.
 Mingle, O bells, along the Western slope,
 With your deep toll a sound of faith and
 hope!

Wave cheerily still, O banner, half-way
 down,

From thousand-masted bay and steepled
 town! 10

Let the strong organ with its loftiest swell
 Lift the proud sorrow of the land, and
 tell

That the brave sower saw his ripened
 grain.

O East and West! O morn and sunset twain

No more forever!—has he lived in vain 15
 Who, priest of Freedom, made ye one,
 and told

Your bridal service from his lips of gold?

LINES ON A FLY-LEAF.

[Suggested by the book A New Atmosphere, by Gail Hamilton. The other friends referred to in the lines are Lydia Maria Child, Grace Greenwood, Anna E. Dickinson and Mrs. Stowe.]

I NEED not ask thee, for my sake,
To read a book which well may make
Its way by native force of wit
Without my manual sign to it.
Its piquant writer needs from me
No gravely masculine guaranty,
And well might laugh her merriest laugh
At broken spears in her behalf;
Yet, spite of all the critics tell,
I frankly own I like her well.
It may be that she wields a pen
Too sharply nibbed for thin-skinned men,
That her keen arrows search and try
The armor joints of dignity,
And, though alone for error meant,
Sing through the air irreverent.
I blame her not, the young athlete
Who plants her woman's tiny feet,
And dares the chances of debate
Where bearded men might hesitate,
Who, deeply earnest, seeing well
The ludicrous and laughable,
Mingling in eloquent excess
Her anger and her tenderness,
And, chiding with a half-caress,
Strives, less for her own sex than ours,
With principalities and powers,
And points us upward to the clear
Sunned heights of her new atmosphere.

Heaven mend her faults!—I will not pause
To weigh and doubt and peck at flaws,
Or waste my pity when some fool
Provokes her measureless ridicule.
Strong-minded is she? Better so
Than dulness set for sale or show,
A household folly, capped and belled
In fashion's dance of puppets held,
Or poor pretence of womanhood,
Whose formal, flavorless platitude

Is warranted from all offence 40
Of robust meaning's violence.
Give me the wine of thought whose bead

Sparkles along the page I read,—
Electric words in which I find
The tonic of the northwest wind; 45
The wisdom which itself allies
To sweet and pure humanities,
Where scorn of meanness, hate of wrong,
Are underlaid by love as strong;
The genial play of mirth that lights 50
Grave themes of thought, as when, on nights

Of summer-time, the harmless blaze
Of thunderless heat-lightning plays,
And tree and hill-top resting dim
And doubtful on the sky's vague rim, 55
Touched by that soft and lambent gleam,
Start sharply outlined from their dream.

Talk not to me of woman's sphere,
Nor point with Scripture texts a sneer,
Nor wrong the manliest saint of all 60
By doubt, if he were here, that Paul
Would own the heroines who have lent
Grace to truth's stern arbitrament,
Foregone the praise to woman sweet,
And cast their crowns at Duty's feet; 65
Like her, who by her strong Appeal
Made Fashion weep and Mammon feel,
Who, earliest summoned to withstand
The color-madness of the land,
Counted her life-long losses gain, 70
And made her own her sisters' pain;
Or her who, in her greenwood shade,
Heard the sharp call that Freedom
made,
And, answering, struck from Sappho's
lyre

Of love the Tyrtæan carmen's fire: 75
Or that young girl,—Domrémy's maid
Revived a nobler cause to aid,—
Shaking from warning finger-tips
The doom of her apocalypse;
Or her, who world-wide entrance gave 80
To the log-cabin of the slave,
Made all his want and sorrow known,
And all earth's languages his own.

GEORGE L. STEARNS.

No man rendered greater service to the cause of freedom than Major Stearns in the great struggle between invading slave-holders and the free settlers of Kansas.

HE has done the work of a true man,—
Crown him, honor him, love him.
Weep over him, tears of woman,
Stoop manliest brows above him!

O dusky mothers and daughters, 5
Vigils of mourning keep for him!
Up in the mountains, and down by the waters,
Lift up your voices and weep for him!

For the warmest of hearts is frozen,
The freest of hands is still; 10
And the gap in our picked and chosen
The long years may not fill.

No duty could overtask him,
No need his will outrun;
Or ever our lips could ask him, 15
His hands the work had done.

He forgot his own soul for others,
Himself to his neighbor lending;
He found the Lord in his suffering brothers,
And not in the clouds descending. 20

So the bed was sweet to die on,
Whence he saw the doors wide swung
Against whose bolted iron
The strength of his life was flung.

And he saw ere his eye was darkened 25
The sheaves of the harvest-bringing,
And knew while his ear yet hearkened
The voice of the reapers singing.

Ah, well! The world is discreet;
There are plenty to pause and wait; 30
But here was a man who set his feet
Sometimes in advance of fate;

Plucked off the old bark when the inner
Was slow to renew it,
And put to the Lord's work the sinner 35
When saints failed to do it.

Never rode to the wrong's redressing
A worthier paladin.

Shall he not hear the blessing,
'Good and faithful, enter in!' 40

GARIBALDI.

In trance and dream of old, God's prophet
saw
The casting down of thrones. Thou, watching lone
The hot Sardinian coast-line, hazy-
hilled,
Where, fringing round Caprera's rocky
zone

With foam, the slow waves gather and withdraw, 5
Behold'st the vision of the seer fulfilled,

And hear'st the sea-winds burdened with a sound
Of falling chains, as, one by one, unbound, 15

The nations lift their right hands up and swear

Their oath of freedom. From the chalk-white wall 10
Of England, from the black Carpathian
range,

Along the Danube and the Theiss, through all

The passes of the Spanish Pyrenees,
And from the Seine's thronged banks,
a murmur strange

And glad floats to thee o'er thy summer
seas 15
On the salt wind that stirs thy whitening
hair,—

The song of freedom's bloodless victories!
Rejoice, O Garibaldi! Though thy sword Failed at Rome's gates, and blood seemed vainly poured

Where, in Christ's name, the crowned infidel 20

Of France wrought murder with the arms
of hell

On that sad mountain slope whose ghostly dead,

Unmindful of the gray exorcist's ban,
Walk, unappeased, the chambered Vatican,

And draw the curtains of Napoleon's
bed ! 25
God's providence is not blind, but, full of
eyes,
It searches all the refuges of lies ;
And in His time and way, the accursed
things

Before whose evil feet thy battle-gage
Has clashed defiance from hot youth to age 30
Shall perish. All men shall be priests and kings,

One royal brotherhood, one church made free

By love, which is the law of liberty !

TO LYDIA MARIA CHILD,

ON READING HER POEM IN 'THE STANDARD.'

Mrs. Child wrote her lines, beginning, 'Again
the trees are clothed in vernal green,' May 24, 1859, on the first anniversary of Ellis Gray Loring's death, but did not publish them for some years afterward, when I first read them, or
I could not have made the reference which I did to the extinction of slavery.

The sweet spring day is glad with music,
But through it sounds a sadder strain ;
The worthiest of our narrowing circle
Sings Loring's dirges o'er again.

O woman greatly loved ! I join thee 5
In tender memories of our friend ;
With thee across the awful spaces
The greeting of a soul I send !

What cheer hath he ? How is it with
him ?
Where lingers he this weary while ? 10
Over what pleasant fields of Heaven
Dawns the sweet sunrise of his smile ?

Does he not know our feet are treading
The earth hard down on Slavery's grave ?
That, in our crowning exultations, 15
We miss the charm his presence gave ?

Why on this spring air comes no whisper
From him to tell us all is well ?

Why to our flower-time comes no token
Of lily and of asphodel ? 20

I feel the unutterable longing,
Thy hunger of the heart is mine ;
I reach and grope for hands in darkness,
My ear grows sharp for voice or sign.

Still on the lips of all we question 25
The finger of God's silence lies ;
Will the lost hands in ours be folded ?
Will the shut eyelids ever rise ?

O friend ! no proof beyond this yearning,
This outreach of our hearts, we need ; 30
God will not mock the hope He giveth,
No love He prompts shall vainly plead.

Then let us stretch our hands in darkness,
And call our loved ones o'er and o'er ;
Some day their arms shall close about us,
And the old voices speak once more. 36

No dreary splendors wait our coming
Where rapt ghost sits from ghost apart ;
Homeward we go to Heaven's thanksgiving,

The harvest-gathering of the heart. 40

THE SINGER.

This poem was written on the death of Alice Cary. Her sister Phoebe, heart-broken by her loss, followed soon after. Noble and richly gifted, lovely in person and character, they left behind them only friends and admirers

YEARS since (but names to me before),
Two sisters sought at eve my door ;
Two song-birds wandering from their nest,
A gray old farm-house in the West.

How fresh of life the younger one, 5
Half smiles, half tears, like rain in sun !
Her gravest mood could scarce displace
The dimples of her nut-brown face.

Wit sparkled on her lips not less
For quick and tremulous tenderness; 10
And, following close her merriest glance,
Dreamed through her eyes the heart's romance.

Timid and still, the elder had
Even then a smile too sweetly sad;
The crown of pain that all must wear 15
Too early pressed her midnight hair.

Yet ere the summer eve grew long,
Her modest lips were sweet with song;
A memory haunted all her words
Of clover-fields and singing birds. 20

Her dark, dilating eyes expressed
The broad horizons of the west;
Her speech dropped prairie flowers; the
gold
Of harvest wheat about her rolled.

Fore-doomed to song she seemed to me:
I queried not with destiny: 26
I knew the trial and the need,
Yet, all the more, I said, God speed!

What could I other than I did?
Could I a singing-bird forbid? 30
Deny the wind-stirred leaf? Rebuke
The music of the forest brook?

She went with morning from my door,
But left me richer than before;
Thenceforth I knew her voice of cheer, 35
The welcome of her partial ear.

Years passed: through all the land her
name
A pleasant household word became:
All felt behind the singer stood
A sweet and gracious womanhood. 40

Her life was earnest work, not play;
Her tired feet climbed a weary way;
And even through her lightest strain
We heard an undertone of pain.

Unseen of her her fair fame grew, 45
The good she did she rarely knew,
Ungessed of her in life the love
That rained its tears her grave above.

When last I saw her, full of peace, 1
She waited for her great release; 50
And that old friend so sage and bland,
Our later Franklin, held her hand.

For all that patriot bosoms stirs
Had moved that woman's heart of hers,
And men who toiled in storm and sun 55
Found her their meet companion.

Our converse, from her suffering bed
To healthful themes of life she led:
The out-door world of bud and bloom
And light and sweetness filled her room.

Yet evermore an underthought 61
Of loss to come within us wrought,
And all the while we felt the strain
Of the strong will that conquered pain.

God giveth quietness at last! 65
The common way that all have passed
She went, with mortal yearnings fond,
To fuller life and love beyond.

Fold the rapt soul in your embrace,
My dear ones! Give the singer place! 70
To you, to her,—I know not where,—
I lift the silence of a prayer.

For only thus our own we find;
The gone before, the left behind,
All mortal voices die between; 75
The unheard reaches the unseen.

Again the blackbirds sing; the streams
Wake, laughing, from their winter
dreams,
And tremble in the April showers
The tassels of the maple flowers. 80

But not for her has spring renewed
The sweet surprises of the wood;
And bird and flower are lost to her
Who was their best interpreter!

What to shut eyes has God revealed? 85
What hear the ears that death has sealed?
What undreamed beauty passing show
Requites the loss of all we know?

O silent land, to which we move,
Enough if there alone be love, 90
And mortal need can ne'er outgrow
What it is waiting to bestow!

O white soul! from that far-off shore
Float some sweet song the waters o'er,
Our faith confirm, our fears dispel, 95
With the old voice we loved so well!

1871.

HOW MARY GREW.

These lines were in answer to an invitation to hear a lecture of Mary Grew, of Philadelphia, before the Boston Radical Club. The reference in the last stanza is to an essay on Sappho by T. W. Higginson, read at the club the preceding month.

WITH wisdom far beyond her years,
And graver than her wondering peers,
So strong, so mild, combining still
The tender heart and queenly will,
To conscience and to duty true, 5
So, up from childhood, Mary Grew!

Then in her gracious womanhood
She gave her days to doing good.
She dared the scornful laugh of men,
The hounding mob, the slanderer's pen.
She did the work she found to do,— 11
A Christian heroine, Mary Grew!

The freed slave thanks her; blessing comes
To her from women's weary homes;
The wronged and erring find in her 15
Their censor mild and comforter.
The world were safe if but a few
Could grow in grace as Mary Grew!

So, New Year's Eve, I sit and say,
By this low wood-fire, ashen gray; 20
Just wishing, as the night shuts down,
That I could hear in Boston town,
In pleasant Chestnut Avenue,
From her own lips, how Mary Grew!

And hear her graceful hostess tell 25
The silver-voiced oracle
Who lately through her parlors spoke
As through Dodona's sacred oak,

A wiser truth than any told
By Sappho's lips of ruddy gold,— 30
The way to make the world anew,
Is just to grow—as Mary Grew!

SUMNER.

'I am not one who has disgraced beauty of sentiment by deformity of conduct, or the maxims of a freeman by the actions of a slave; but, by the grace of God, I have kept my life unsullied.'—MILTON'S Defence of the People of England.

O MOTHER STATE! the winds of March
Blew chill o'er Auburn's Field of God,
Where, slow, beneath a leaden arch
Of sky, thy mourning children trod.

And now, with all thy woods in leaf, 5
Thy fields in flower, beside thy dead
Thou sittest, in thy robes of grief,
A Rachel yet uncomforted!

And once again the organ swells,
Once more the flag is half-way hung, 10
And yet again the mournful bells
In all thy steeple-towers are rung.

And I, obedient to thy will,
Have come a simple wreath to lay,
Superfluous, on a grave that still 15
Is sweet with all the flowers of May.

I take, with awe, the task assigned;
It may be that my friend might miss,
In his new sphere of heart and mind,
Some token from my hand in this. 20

By many a tender memory moved,
Along the past my thought I send;
The record of the cause he loved
Is the best record of its friend.

No trumpet sounded in his ear, 25
He saw not Sinai's cloud and flame,
But never yet to Hebrew seer
A clearer voice of duty came.

- God said: 'Break thou these yokes;
undo
These heavy burdens. I ordain 30
A work to last thy whole life through,
A ministry of strife and pain.
- 'Forego thy dreams of lettered ease,
Put thou the scholar's promise by, 34
The rights of man are more than these.'
He heard, and answered: 'Here am I!'
- He set his face against the blast,
His feet against the flinty shard,
Till the hard service grew, at last,
Its own exceeding great reward. 40
- Lifted like Saul's above the crowd,
Upon his kingly forehead fell
The first sharp bolt of Slavery's cloud,
Launched at the truth he urged so well.
- Ah! never yet, at rack or stake, 45
Was sorer loss made Freedom's gain,
Than his, who suffered for her sake
The beak-torn Titan's lingering pain!
- The fixed star of his faith, through all
Loss, doubt, and peril, shone the same;
As through a night of storm, some tall, 51
Strong lighthouse lifts its steady flame.
- Beyond the dust and smoke he saw
The sheaves of Freedom's large increase,
The holy fanes of equal law, 55
The New Jerusalem of peace.
- The weak might fear, the worldling
mock,
The faint and blind of heart regret;
All knew at last th' eternal rock
On which his forward feet were set. 60
- The subtlest scheme of compromise
Was folly to his purpose bold;
The strongest mesh of party lies
Weak to the simplest truth he told.
- One language held his heart and lip, 65
Straight onward to his goal he trod,
And proved the highest statesmanship
Obedience to the voice of God.
- No wail was in his voice,—none heard,
When treason's storm-cloud blackest
grew, 70
The weakness of a doubtful word;
His duty, and the end, he knew.
- The first to smite, the first to spare;
When once the hostile ensigns fell,
He stretched out hands of generous care
To lift the foe he fought so well. 76
- For there was nothing base or small
Or craven in his soul's broad plan;
Forgiving all things personal,
He hated only wrong to man. 80
- The old traditions of his State,
The memories of her great and good,
Took from his life a fresher date,
And in himself embodied stood.
- How felt the greed of gold and place, 85
The venal crew that schemed and planned,
The fine scorn of that haughty face,
The spurning of that bribeless hand!
- If than Rome's tribunes statelier
He wore his senatorial robe, 90
His lofty port was all for her,
The one dear spot on all the globe.
- If to the master's plea he gave
The vast contempt his manhood felt,
He saw a brother in the slave,— 95
With man as equal man he dealt.
- Proud was he? If his presence kept
Its grandeur wheresoe'er he trod,
As if from Plutarch's gallery stepped
The hero and the demigod, 100
- None failed, at least, to reach his ear,
Nor want nor woe appealed in vain;
The homesick soldier knew his cheer,
And blessed him from his ward of
pain.
- Safely his dearest friends may own 105
The slight defects he never hid,
The surface-blemish in the stone
Of the tall, stately pyramid.

Suffice it that he never brought
His conscience to the public mart; 110
But lived himself the truth he taught,
White-souled, clean-handed, pure of
heart.

What if he felt the natural pride
Of power in noble use, too true
With thin humilities to hide 115
The work he did, the lore he knew?

Was he not just? Was any wronged
By that assured self-estimate?
He took but what to him belonged,
Unenvious of another's state. 120

Well might he heed the words he spake,
And scan with care the written page
Through which he still shall warm and wake
The hearts of men from age to age.

Ah! who shall blame him now because
He solaced thus his hours of pain! 126
Should not the o'erworn thresher pause,
And hold to light his golden grain?

No sense of humor dropped its oil
On the hard ways his purpose went;
Small play of fancy lightened toil; 131
He spake alone the thing he meant.

He loved his books, the Art that hints
A beauty veiled behind its own,
The graver's line, the pencil's tints, 135
The chisel's shape evoked from stone.

He cherished, void of selfish ends,
The social courtesies that bless
And sweeten life, and loved his friends
With most unworldly tenderness. 140

But still his tired eyes rarely learned
The glad relief by Nature brought;
Her mountain ranges never turned
His current of persistent thought.

The sea rolled chorus to his speech 145
Three-banked like Latium's tall tri-reme,
With laboring oars; the grove and beach
Were Forum and the Academe.

The sensuous joy from all things fair
His strenuous bent of soul repressed,
And left from youth to silvered hair 151
Few hours for pleasure, none for rest.

For all his life was poor without,
O Nature, make the last amends!
Train all thy flowers his grave about, 155
And make thy singing-birds his friends!

Revive again, thou summer rain,
The broken turf upon his bed!
Breathe, summer wind, thy tenderest
strain
Of low, sweet music overhead! 160

With calm and beauty symbolize
The peace which follows long annoy,
And lend our earth-bent, mourning eyes,
Some hint of his diviner joy.

For safe with right and truth he is, 165
As God lives he must live always;
There is no end for souls like his,
No night for children of the day!

Nor cant nor poor solicitudes 169
Made weak his life's great argument;
Small leisure his for frames and moods
Who followed Duty where she went.

The broad, fair fields of God he saw
Beyond the bigot's narrow bound;
The truths he moulded into law 175
In Christ's beatitudes he found.

His state-craft was the Golden Rule,
His right of vote a sacred trust;
Clear, over threat and ridicule, 179
All heard his challenge: 'Is it just?'

And when the hour supreme had come,
Not for himself a thought he gave;
In that last pang of martyrdom,
His care was for the half-freed slave.

Not vainly dusky hands upbore, 185
In prayer, the passing soul to heaven
Whose mercy to His suffering poor
Was service to the Master given. 188

Long shall the good State's annals tell,
Her children's children long be taught,
How, praised or blamed, he guarded well
The trust he neither shunned nor
sought.

If for one moment turned thy face,
O Mother, from thy son, not long
He waited calmly in his place 195
The sure remorse which follows wrong.

Forgiven be the State he loved
The one brief lapse, the single blot;
Forgotten be the stain removed,
Her righted record shows it not! 200

The lifted sword above her shield
With jealous care shall guard his fame;
The pine-tree on her ancient field
To all the winds shall speak his name.

The marble image of her son 205
Her loving hands shall yearly crown,
And from her pictured Pantheon
His grand, majestic face look down.

O State so passing rich before,
Who now shall doubt thy highest
claim? 210

The world that counts thy jewels o'er
Shall longest pause at Sumner's name!
1874.

THIERS.

I.

FATE summoned, in gray-bearded age, to act

A history stranger than his written fact,
Him who portrayed the splendor and
the gloom

Of that great hour when throne and altar
fell

With long death-groan which still is audible. 5

He, when around the walls of Paris
rung

The Prussian bugle like the blast of doom,

And every ill which follows unblest war

Maddened all France from Finistère to Var,

The weight of fourscore from his shoulders flung, 10

And guided Freedom in the path he saw
Lead out of chaos into light and law,
Peace, not imperial, but republican,
And order pledged to all the Rights of Man.

II.

Death called him from a need as imminent 15

As that from which the Silent William
went

When powers of evil, like the smiting
seas

On Holland's dikes, assailed her liberties.
Sadly, while yet in doubtful balance
hung

The weal and woe of France, the bells were rung 20

For her lost leader. Paralyzed of will,
Above his bier the hearts of men stood
still.

Then, as if set to his dead lips, the horn
Of Roland wound once more to rouse and warn,

The old voice filled the air! His last brave word 25

Not vainly France to all her boundaries
stirred.

Strong as in life, he still for Freedom
wrought,

As the dead Cid at red Toloso fought.

1877.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK.

AT THE UNVEILING OF HIS STATUE.

AMONG their graven shapes to whom

Thy civic wreaths belong,

O city of his love, make room

For one whose gift was song.

Not his the soldier's sword to wield. 5

Nor his the helm of state,

Nor glory of the stricken field,

Nor triumph of debate.

In common ways, with common men,
He served his race and time 10
As well as if his clerkly pen
Had never danced to rhyme.

If, in the thronged and noisy mart,
The Muses found their son,
Could any say his tuneful art 15
A duty left undone?

He toiled and sang ; and year by year
Men found their homes more sweet,
And through a tenderer atmosphere
Looked down the brick-walled street.

The Greek's wild onset Wall Street
knew ; 21
The Red King walked Broadway ;
And Alnwick Castle's roses blew
From Palisades to Bay.

Fair City by the Sea ! upraise 25
His veil with reverent hands ;
And mingle with thy own the praise
And pride of other lands.

Let Greece his fiery lyric breathe
Above her hero-urns ; 30
And Scotland, with her holly, wreath
The flower he culled for Burns.

Oh, stately stand thy palace walls,
Thy tall ships ride the seas ;
To-day thy poet's name recalls 35
A prouder thought than these.

Not less thy pulse of trade shall beat,
Nor less thy tall fleets swim,
That shaded square and dusty street
Are classic ground through him. 40

Alive, he loved, like all who sing,
The echoes of his song ;
Too late the tardy meed we bring,
The praise delayed so long.

Too late, alas ! Of all who knew 45
The living man, to-day
Before his unveiled face, how few
Make bare their locks of gray !

Our lips of praise must soon be dumb,
Our grateful eyes be dim ; 50
O brothers of the days to come,
Take tender charge of him !

New hands the wires of song may sweep,
New voices challenge fame ;
But let no moss of years o'ercreep 55
The lines of Halleck's name.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARTLETT.

Oh, well may Essex sit forlorn
Beside her sea-blown shore ;
Her well beloved, her noblest born,
Is hers in life no more !

No lapse of years can render less 5
Her memory's sacred claim ;
No fountain of forgetfulness
Can wet the lips of Fame.

A grief alike to wound and heal,
A thought to soothe and pain, 10
The sad, sweet pride that mothers feel
To her must still remain.

Good men and true she has not lacked,
And brave men yet shall be ;
The perfect flower, the crowning fact, 15
Of all her years was he !

As Galahad pure, as Merlin sage,
What worthier knight was found
To grace in Arthur's golden age
The fabled Table Round ? 20

A voice, the battle's trumpet-note,
To welcome and restore ;
A hand, that all unwilling smote,
To heal and build once more !

A soul of fire, a tender heart 25
Too warm for hate, he knew
The generous victor's graceful part
To sheathe the sword he drew.

When Earth, as if on evil dreams,
Looks back upon her wars, 30
And the white light of Christ outstreams
From the red disk of Mars,

His fame who led the stormy van
 Of battle well may cease,
 But never that which crowns the man 35
 Whose victory was Peace.

Mourn, Essex, on thy sea-blown shore
 Thy beautiful and brave,
 Whose failing hand the olive bore,
 Whose dying lips forgave! 40

Let age lament the youthful chief,
 And tender eyes be dim;
 The tears are more of joy than grief
 That fall for one like him!
 1878.

BAYARD TAYLOR.

I.

'AND where now, Bayard, will thy footsteps tend?'
 My sister asked our guest one winter's
 day.
 Smiling he answered in the Friends'
 sweet way
 Common to both: 'Wherever thou shalt send!
 What wouldst thou have me see for thee?' She laughed, 5
 Her dark eyes dancing in the woodfire's glow:
 'Loffoden isles, the Kilpis, and the
 low,
 Unsetting sun on Finmark's fishing-craft.'
 'All these and more I soon shall see for
 thee!'
 He answered cheerily: and he kept his pledge 10
 On Lapland snows, the North Cape's
 windy wedge,
 And Tromsø freezing in its winter sea.
 He went and came. But no man knows the track
 Of his last journey, and he comes not back!

II.

He brought us wonders of the new and
 old; 15
 We shared all climes with him. The Arab's tent
 To him its story-telling secret lent.
 And, pleased, we listened to the tales he
 told.
 His task, beguiled with songs that shall endure,
 In manly, honest thoroughness he
 wrought; 20
 From humble home-lays to the heights of thought
 Slowly he climbed, but every step was sure.
 How, with the generous pride that friendship hath,
 We, who so loved him, saw at last the
 crown
 Of civic honor on his brows pressed
 down, 25
 Rejoiced, and knew not that the gift was
 death.
 And now for him, whose praise in deafened ears
 Two nations speak, we answer but with tears!

III.

O Vale of Chester! trod by him so oft,
 Green as thy June turf keep his memory. Let 30
 Nor wood, nor dell, nor storied stream
 forget,
 Nor winds that blow round lonely Cedarcroft;
 Let the home voices greet him in the far Strange land that holds him; let the messages
 Of love pursue him o'er the chartless
 seas 35
 And unmapped vastness of his unknown
 star!

Love's language, heard beyond the loud discourse
Of perishable fame, in every sphere
Itself interprets ; and its utterance here
Somewhere in God's unfolding universe Shall reach our traveller, softening the surprise 41
Of his rapt gaze on unfamiliar skies !
1879.

OUR AUTOCRAT.

Read at the breakfast given in honor of
Dr. Holmes by the publishers of the Atlantic Monthly, December 3, 1879.

His laurels fresh from song and lay,
Romance, art, science, rich in all,
And young of heart, how dare we say
We keep his seventieth festival?

No sense is here of loss or lack ;
Before his sweetness and his light
The dial holds its shadow back,
The charmed hours delay their flight.

His still the keen analysis
Of men and moods, electric wit, 10
Free play of mirth, and tenderness
To heal the slightest wound from it.

And his the pathos touching all
Life's sins and sorrows and regrets,
Its hopes and fears, its final call 15
And rest beneath the violets.

His sparkling surface scarce betrays
The thoughtful tide beneath it rolled,
The wisdom of the latter days,
And tender memories of the old. 20

What shapes and fancies, grave or gay,
Before us at his bidding come !
The Treadmill tramp, the One-Horse
Shay,
The dumb despair of Elsie's doom !

The tale of Avis and the Maid, 25
The plea for lips that cannot speak,
The holy kiss that Iris laid
On Little Boston's pallid cheek !

Long may he live to sing for us
His sweetest songs at evening time, 30
And, like his Chambered Nautilus,
To holier heights of beauty climb !

Though now unnumbered guests surround
The table that he rules at will,
Its Autocrat, however crowned, 35
Is but our friend and comrade still.

The world may keep his honored name,
The wealth of all his varied powers ;
A stronger claim has love than fame,
And he himself is only ours ! 40

WITHIN THE GATE.

L. M. C.

I have more fully expressed my admiration and regard for Lydia Maria Child in the biographical introduction which I wrote for the volume of Letters, published after her death.

We sat together, last May-day, and talked
Of the dear friends who walked
Beside us, sharers of the hopes and fears
Of five and forty years,

Since first we met in Freedom's hope
forlorn, 5
And heard her battle-horn
Sound through the valleys of the sleeping
North,
Calling her children forth,

And youth pressed forward with hope-lighted eyes,
And age, with forecast wise 10
Of the long strife before the triumph won,
Girded his armor on.

Sadly, as name by name we called the roll,
We heard the dead-bells toll
For the unanswering many, and we knew
The living were the few. 16

And we, who waited our own call before
The inevitable door,
Listened and looked, as all have done,
to win
Some token from within. 20

No sign we saw, we heard no voices call;
The impenetrable wall
Cast down its shadow, like an awful doubt,
On all who sat without.

Of many a hint of life beyond the veil, 25
And many a ghostly tale
Wherewith the ages spanned the gulf between
The seen and the unseen,

Seeking from omen, trance, and dream
to gain
Solace to doubtful pain, 30
And touch, with groping hands, the garment hem
Of truth sufficing them,

We talked; and, turning from the sore unrest
Of an all-baffling quest,
We thought of holy lives that from us
passed 35
Hopeful unto the last,

As if they saw beyond the river of death,
Like Him of Nazareth,
The many mansions of the Eternal days
Lift up their gates of praise. 40

And, hushed to silence by a reverent awe,
Methought, O friend, I saw
In thy true life of word, and work, and
thought
The proof of all we sought.

Did we not witness in the life of thee 45
Immortal prophecy?
And feel, when with thee, that thy footsteps trod
An everlasting road?

Not for brief days thy generous sympathies,
Thy scorn of selfish ease; 50
Not for the poor prize of an earthly goal
Thy strong uplift of soul.

Than thine was never turned a fonder
heart
To nature and to art
In fair-formed Hellas in her golden prime,
Thy Philothea's time. 56

Yet, loving beauty, thou couldst pass it by,
And for the poor deny Thyself, and see thy fresh, sweet flower of fame
Wither in blight and blame. 60

Sharing His love who holds in His embrace
The lowliest of our race,
Sure the Divine economy must be Conservative of thee!

For truth must live with truth, self-sacrifice 65
Seek out its great allies;
Good must find good by gravitation sure,
And love with love endure.

And so, since thou hast passed within the gate
Whereby awhile I wait, 70
I give blind grief and blinder sense the lie:
Thou hast not lived to die!

1881.

IN MEMORY.

JAMES T. FIELDS.

As a guest who may not stay
Long and sad farewells to say
Glides with smiling face away,

Of the sweetness and the zest
Of thy happy life possessed 5
Thou hast left us at thy best.

Warm of heart and clear of brain,
Of thy sun-bright spirit's wane
Thou hast spared us all the pain.

Now that thou hast gone away, 10
What is left of one to say
Who was open as the day?

What is there to gloss or shun?
Save with kindly voices none
Speak thy name beneath the sun. 15

Safe thou art on every side,
Friendship nothing finds to hide,
Love's demand is satisfied.

Over manly strength and worth,
At thy desk of toil, or hearth, 20
Played the lambent light of mirth,—

Mirth that lit, but never burned;
All thy blame to pity turned;
Hatred thou hadst never learned.

Every harsh and vexing thing 25
At thy home-fire lost its sting;
Where thou wast was always spring.

And thy perfect trust in good,
Faith in man and womanhood,
Chance and change and time with-
stood.

Small respect for cant and whine, 31
Bigot's zeal and hate malign,
Had that sunny soul of thine.

But to thee was duty's claim
Sacred, and thy lips became 35
Reverent with one holy Name.

Therefore, on thy unknown way,
Go in God's peace! We who stay
But a little while delay.

Keep for us, O friend, where'er 40
Thou art waiting, all that here
Made thy earthly presence dear;

Something of thy pleasant past
On a ground of wonder cast,
In the stiller waters glassed! 45

Keep the human heart of thee;
Let the mortal only be Clothed in immortality.

And when fall our feet as fell
Thine upon the asphodel, 50
Let thy old smile greet us well;

Proving in a world of bliss
What we fondly dream in this,—
Love is one with holiness!

WILSON.

Read at the Massachusetts Club on the seven-tieth anniversary of the birthday of Vice-President Wilson, February 16, 1882.

THE lowliest born of all the land,
He wrung from Fate's reluctant hand
The gifts which happier boyhood claims;
And, tasting on a thankless soil
The bitter bread of unpaid toil, 5
He fed his soul with noble aims.

And Nature, kindly provident,
To him the future's promise lent;
The powers that shape man's destinies,
Patience and faith and toil, he knew, 10
The close horizon round him grew
Broad with great possibilities.

By the low hearth-fire's fitful blaze
He read of old heroic days,
The sage's thought, the patriot's speech;
Unhelped, alone, himself he taught, 16
His school the craft at which he wrought,
His lore the book within his reach.

He felt his country's need; he knew
The work her children had to do; 20
And when, at last, he heard the call
In her behalf to serve and dare,
Beside his senatorial chair
He stood the unquestioned peer of all.

Beyond the accident of birth 25
He proved his simple manhood's worth;
Ancestral pride and classic grace
Confessed the large-brained artisan,
So clear of sight, so wise in plan
And counsel, equal to his place. 30

With glance intuitive he saw
Through all disguise of form and law,
And read men like an open book;
Fearless and firm, he never quailed
Nor turned aside for threats, nor failed
To do the thing he undertook 36

How wise, how brave, he was, how well
He bore himself, let history tell
While waves our flag o'er land and sea,
No black thread in its warp or weft; 40
He found dissevered States, he left
A grateful Nation, strong and free!

THE POET AND THE CHILDREN.

LONGFELLOW.

WITH a glory of winter sunshine
Over his locks of gray,
In the old historic mansion
He sat on his last birthday ;

With his books and his pleasant pictures,
And his household and his kin, 6
While a sound as of myriads singing
From far and near stole in.

It came from his own fair city,
From the prairie's boundless plain, 10
From the Golden Gate of sunset,
And the cedarn woods of Maine.

And his heart grew warm within him,
And his moistening eyes grew dim,
For he knew that his country's children
Were singing the songs of him : 16

The lays of his life's glad morning,
The psalms of his evening time,
Whose echoes shall float forever
On the winds of every clime. 20

All their beautiful consolations,
Sent forth like birds of cheer,
Came flocking back to his windows,
And sang in the Poet's ear.

Grateful, but solemn and tender, 25
The music rose and fell
With a joy akin to sadness
And a greeting like farewell.

With a sense of awe he listened
To the voices sweet and young ; 30
The last of earth and the first of heaven
Seemed in the songs they sung.

And waiting a little longer
For the wonderful change to come, 35
He heard the Summoning Angel,
Who calls God's children home !

And to him in a holier welcome
Was the mystical meaning given
Of the words of the blessed Master :
'Of such is the kingdom of heaven !' 40

1882.

A WELCOME TO LOWELL.

TAKE our hands, James Russell Lowell,
Our hearts are all thy own ;
To-day we bid thee welcome
Not for ourselves alone.

In the long years of thy absence 5
Some of us have grown old,
And some have passed the portals
Of the Mystery untold ;

For the hands that cannot clasp thee,
For the voices that are dumb, 10
For each and all I bid thee
A grateful welcome home !

For Cedarcroft's sweet singer
To the nine-fold Muses dear ;
For the Seer the winding Concord 15
Paused by his door to hear ;

For him, our guide and Nestor,
Who the march of song began,
The white locks of his ninety years
Bared to thy winds, Cape Ann ! 20

For him who, to the music
Her pines and hemlocks played,
Set the old and tender story
Of the lorn Acadian maid ;

For him, whose voice for freedom 25
Swayed friend and foe at will,
Hushed is the tongue of silver,
The golden lips are still !

For her whose life of duty
At scoff and menace smiled, 30
Brave as the wife of Roland,
Yet gentle as a Child.

And for him the three-hilled city
Shall hold in memory long,
Whose name is the hint and token 35
Of the pleasant Fields of Song !

For the old friends unforgotten,
For the young thou hast not known,
I speak their heart-warm greeting ;
Come back and take thy own ! 40

From England's royal farewells,
And honors fitly paid,
Come back, dear Russell Lowell,
To Elmwood's waiting shade!

Come home with all the garlands
That crown of right thy head.
I speak for comrades living,
I speak for comrades dead!

AMESBURY, 6th mo., 1885.

AN ARTIST OF THE BEAUTIFUL.

GEORGE FULLER.

HAUNTED of Beauty, like the marvellous
youth

Who sang Saint Agnes' Eve! How passing
fair

Hershapetook color in thy homestead air!
How on thy canvas even her dreams were
truth!

Magician! who from commonest elements
Called up divine ideals, clothed upon 6
By mystic lights soft blending into one
Womanly grace and child-like innocence.
Teacher! thy lesson was not given in vain.
Beauty is goodness; ugliness is sin: 10
Art's place is sacred: nothing foul therein
May crawl or tread with bestial feet profane.

If rightly choosing is the painter's test,
Thy choice, O master, ever was the best.

MULFORD.

Author of The Nation and The Republic of God.

UNNOTED as the setting of a star

He passed; and sect and party scarcely
knew

When from their midst a sage and seer withdrew

To fitter audience, where the great dead are

In God's republic of the heart and mind,
Leaving no purer, nobler soul behind. 6

TO A CAPE ANN SCHOONER.

LUCK to the craft that bears this name of
mine,
Good fortune follow with her golden spoon

The glazed hat and tarry pantaloons;
And wheresoe'er her keel shall cut the brine,

Cod, hake and haddock quarrel for her
line. 5

Shipped with her crew, whatever wind
may blow,

Or tides delay, my wish with hershall go, Fishing by proxy. Would that it might
show

At need her course, in lack of sun and
star,

Where icebergs threaten, and the sharp reefs are; 10

Lift the blind fog on Anticosti's lee And Avalon's rock; make populous the
sea

Round Grand Manan with eager finny
swarms,

Break the long calms, and charm away
the storms.

OAK KNOLL, 23, 3rd mo., 1886.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

GREYSTONE, AUG. 4, 1886.

ONCE more, O all-adjusting Death!

The nation's Pantheon opens wide;

Once more a common sorrow saith

A strong, wise man has died.

Faults doubtless had he. Had we not 5
Our own, to question and asperse

The worth we doubted or forgot
Until beside his hearse?

Ambitious, cautious, yet the man
To strike down fraud with resolute
hand; 10

A patriot, if a partisan,
He loved his native land.

So let the mourning bells be rung,
The banner droop its folds half way,
And while the public pen and tongue 15
Their fitting tribute pay,

Shall we not vow above his bier
To set our feet on party lies,
And wound no more a living ear
With words that Death denies? 20

Occasional Poems

EVA.

Suggested by Mrs. Stowe's tale of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and written when the characters in the tale were realities by the fireside of countless American homes.

DRY the tears for holy Eva,
With the blessed angels leave her;
Of the form so soft and fair
Give to earth the tender care.

For the golden locks of Eva
Let the sunny south-land give her
Flowery pillow of repose,
Orange-bloom and budding rose.

In the better home of Eva
Let the shining ones receive her,
With the welcome-voiced psalm,
Harp of gold and waving palm !

All is light and peace with Eva ;
There the darkness cometh never ;
Tears are wiped, and fetters fall,
And the Lord is all in all.

Weep no more for happy Eva,
Wrong and sin no more shall grieve her ;
Care and pain and weariness
Lost in love so measureless.

Gentle Eva, loving Eva,
Child confessor, true believer,
Listener at the Master's knee,
'Suffer such to come to Me.'

Oh, for faith like thine, sweet Eva, 25
Lighting all the solemn river,
And the blessings of the poor
Wafting to the heavenly shore !

1852.

A LAY OF OLD TIME.

Written for the Essex County Agricultural Fair, and sung at the banquet at Newburyport, October 2, 1856.

ONE morning of the first sad Fall,
Poor Adam and his bride
Sat in the shade of Eden's wall—
But on the outer side.

She, blushing in her fig-leaf suit 5
For the chaste garb of old ;
He, sighing o'er his bitter fruit
For Eden's drupes of gold.

Behind them, smiling in the morn,
Their forfeit garden lay, 10
Before them, wild with rock and thorn,
The desert stretched away.

They heard the air above them ranned,
A light step on the sward,
And lo ! they saw before them stand 15
The angel of the Lord !

'Arise,' he said, 'why look behind,
When hope is all before,
And patient hand and willing mind,
Your loss may yet restore ?' 20

'I leave with you a spell whose power
Can make the desert glad,
And call around you fruit and flower
As fair as Eden had.

'I clothe your hands with power to lift
The curse from off your soil ; 26
Your very doom shall seem a gift,
Your loss a gain through Toil.

'Go, cheerful as yon humming-bees,
To labor as to play.' 30
White glimmering over Eden's trees
The angel passed away.

The pilgrims of the world went forth
Obedient to the word,
And found where'er they tilled the earth
A garden of the Lord ! 36

The thorn-tree cast its evil fruit
And blushed with plum and pear,
And seeded grass and trodden root
Grew sweet beneath their care. 40

We share our primal parents' fate,
And, in our turn and day,
Look back on Eden's sworded gate
As sad and lost as they.

But still for us his native skies 45
The pitying Angel leaves,
And leads through Toil to Paradise
New Adams and new Eves !

A SONG OF HARVEST.

For the Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibition at Amesbury and Salisbury, September 28, 1858.

THIS day, two hundred years ago,
The wild grape by the river's side,
And tasteless groundnut trailing low,
The table of the woods supplied.

Unknown the apple's red and gold, 5
The blushing tint of peach and pear ;
The mirror of the Powow told
No tale of orchards ripe and rare.

Wild as the fruits he scorned to till,
These vales the idle Indian trod ; 10
Nor knew the glad, creative skill,
The joy of him who toils with God.

O Painter of the fruits and flowers !
We thank Thee for thy wise design
Whereby these human hands of ours 15
In Nature's garden work with Thine.

And thanks that from our daily need
The joy of simple faith is born ;
That he who smites the summer weed,
May trust Thee for the autumn corn. 20

Give fools their gold, and knaves their
power ;
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall ;
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

For he who blesses most is blest ; 25
And God and man shall own his worth
Who toils to leave as his bequest
An added beauty to the earth.

And, soon or late, to all that sow,
The time of harvest shall be given ; 30
The flower shall bloom, the fruit shall grow,
If not on earth, at last in heaven.

KENOZA LAKE.

This beautiful lake in East Haverhill was the 'Great Pond' of the writer's boyhood. In 1859 a movement was made for improving its shores as a public park. At the opening of the park, August 31, 1859, the poem which gave it the name of Kenoza (in the Indian language signifying Pickerel) was read.

As Adam did in Paradise,
To-day the primal right we claim :
Fair mirror of the woods and skies,
We give to thee a name.

Lake of the pickerel !—let no more 5
The echoes answer back, 'Great Pond,'
But sweet Kenoza, from thy shore
And watching hills beyond,

Let Indian ghosts, if such there be
Who ply unseen their shadowy lines, 10
Call back the ancient name to thee,
As with the voice of pines.

The shores we trod as barefoot boys,
The nutted woods we wandered through,
To friendship, love, and social joys 15
We consecrate anew.

Here shall the tender song be sung,
And memory's dirges soft and low,
And wit shall sparkle on the tongue,
And mirth shall overflow, 20

Harmless as summer lightning plays
From a low, hidden cloud by night,
A light to set the hills ablaze,
But not a bolt to smite.

In sunny South and prairied West 25
Are exiled hearts remembering still,
As bees their hive, as birds their nest,
The homes of Haverhill.

They join us in our rites to-day ;
And, listening, we may hear, ere long,
From inland lake and ocean bay, 31
The echoes of our song.

Kenoza ! o'er no sweeter lake
Shall morning break or noon-cloud sail,—

No fairer face than thine shall take 35
The sunset's golden veil.

Long be it ere the tide of trade
Shall break with harsh-resounding din
The quiet of thy banks of shade,
And hills that fold thee in. 40

Still let thy woodlands hide the hare,
The shy loon sound his trumpet-note,
Wind-weary from his fields of air,
The wild-geese on thee float.

Thy peace rebuke our feverish stir, 45
Thy beauty our deforming strife ;
Thy woods and waters minister
The healing of their life.

And sinless Mirth, from care released,
Behold, unawed, thy mirrored sky, 50
Smiling as smiled on Cana's feast
The Master's loving eye.

And when the summer day grows dim,
And light mists walk thy mimic sea,
Revive in us the thought of Him 55
Who walked on Galilee !

FOR AN AUTUMN FESTIVAL.

THE Persian's flowery gifts, the shrine
Of fruitful Ceres, charm no more ;
The woven wreaths of oak and pine
Are dust along the Isthmian shore.

But beauty hath its homage still, 5
And nature holds us still in debt ;
And woman's grace and household skill,
And manhood's toil, are honored yet.

And we, to-day, amidst our flowers
And fruits, have come to own again 10
The blessings of the summer hours,
The early and the latter rain ;

To see our Father's hand once more
Reverse for us the plenteous horn
Of autumn, filled and running o'er 15
With fruit, and flower, and golden
corn !

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems or gold ;
Once more with harvest-song and shout
Is Nature's bloodless triumph told. 20

Our common mother rests and sings,
Like Ruth, among her garnered sheaves ;
Her lap is full of goodly things,
Her brow is bright with autumn leaves.

Oh, favors every year made new ! 25
Oh, gifts with rain and sunshine sent !
The bounty overruns our due,
The fulness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, the flowers bloom on ;
We murmur, but the corn-ears fill, 30
We choose the shadow, but the sun
That casts it shines behind us still.

God gives us with our rugged soil
The power to make it Eden-fair,
And richer fruits to crown our toil 35
Than summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmurs at his lot to-day?
 Who scorns his native fruit and bloom?
 Or sighs for dainties far away,
 Beside the bounteous board of home? 40

Thank Heaven, instead, that Freedom's
 arm

Can change a rocky soil to gold,—
 That brave and generous lives can warm

A clime with northern ices cold.

And let these altars, wreathed with flowers
 And piled with fruits, awake again 46

Thanksgivings for the golden hours,
 The early and the latter rain!

1859.

THE QUAKER ALUMNI.

Read at the Friends' School Anniversary, Providence, R. I., 6th mo, 1860.

FROM the well-springs of Hudson, the sea-cliffs of Maine,
 Grave men, sober matrons, you gather
 again;
 And, with hearts warmer grown as your heads grow more cool,
 Play over the old game of going to school.

All your strifes and vexations, your whims and complaints, 5
 (You were not saints yourselves, if the children of saints!)
 All your petty self-seekings and rivalries
 done,
 Round the dear Alma Mater your hearts
 beat as one!

How widely soe'er you have strayed from the fold,
 Though your 'thee' has grown 'you,'
 and your drab blue and gold, 10
 To the old friendly speech and the garb's sober form,
 Like the heart of Argyle to the tartan,
 you warm.

But, the first greetings over, you glance
 round the hall;
 Your hearts call the roll, but they answer
 not all:

Through the turf green above them the dead cannot hear; 15
 Name by name, in the silence, falls sad
 as a tear!

In love, let us trust, they were summoned
 so soon

From the morning of life, while we toil
 through its noon;

They were frail like ourselves, they had needs like our own,

And they rest as we rest in God's mercy
 alone. 20

Unchanged by our changes of spirit and
 frame,

Past, now, and henceforward the Lord is the same;

Though we sink in the darkness, His arms
 break our fall,

And in death as in life, He is Father of
 all!

We are older: our footsteps, so light in the play 25

Of the far-away school-time, move slower
 to-day;—

Here a beard touched with frost, there a bald, shining crown,

And beneath the cap's border gray mingles with brown.

But faith should be cheerful, and trust should be glad,

And our follies and sins, not our years,
 make us sad. 30

Should the heart closer shut as the bonnet grows prim,

And the face grow in length as the hat
 grows in brim?

Life is brief, duty grave; but, with rain-
 folded wings,

Of yesterday's sunshine the grateful heart
 sings;

And we, of all others, have reason to pay
 The tribute of thanks, and rejoice on our
 way: 36

For the counsels that turned from the follies of youth ;
For the beauty of patience, the whiteness
of truth ;
For the wounds of rebuke, when love
tempered its edge ;
For the household's restraint, and the discipline's hedge ; 40

For the lessons of kindness vouchsafed to the least
Of the creatures of God, whether human or beast,
Bringing hope to the poor, lending strength
to the frail,
In the lanes of the city, the slave-hut,
and jail ;

For a womanhood higher and holier, by
all 45
Her knowledge of good, than was Eve ere her fall,—
Whose task-work of duty moves lightly
as play,
Serene as the moonlight and warm as the
day ;

And, yet more, for the faith which embraces the whole,
Of the creeds of the ages the life and the
soul, 50
Wherein letter and spirit the same channel
run,
And man has not severed what God has made one !

For a sense of the Goodness revealed everywhere,
As sunshine impartial, and free as the
air ;
For a trust in humanity, Heathen or Jew,
And a hope for all darkness the Light
shineth through. 56

Who scoffs at our birthright?—the words of the seers,
And the songs of the bards in the twilight
of years,
All the foregleams of wisdom in santon
and sage,
In prophet and priest, are our true heritage. 60

The Word which the reason of Plato
discerned ;
The truth, as whose symbol the Mithra-
fire burned ;
The soul of the world which the Stoic but guessed,
In the Light Universal the Quaker confessed !

No honors of war to our worthies belong ;
Their plain stem of life never flowered into song ; 66
But the fountains they opened still gush
by the way,
And the world for their healing is better
to-day.

He who lies where the minster's groined arches curve down
To the tomb-crowded transept of England's renown, 70
The glorious essayist, by genius enthroned,
Whose pen as a sceptre the Muses all owned,—

Who through the world's pantheon walked in his pride,
Setting new statues up, thrusting old ones
aside,
And in fiction the pencils of history
dipped, 75
To gild o'er or blacken each saint in his crypt,—

How vainly he labored to sully with
blame
The white bust of Penn, in the niche of his fame !
Self-will is self-wounding, perversity blind:
On himself fell the stain for the Quaker
designed ! 80

For the sake of his true-hearted father
before him ;
For the sake of the dear Quaker mother
that bore him ;
For the sake of his gifts, and the works
that outlive him,
And his brave words for freedom, we freely forgive him !

There are those who take note that our numbers are small,— 85
New Gibbons who write our decline and our fall;
But the Lord of the seed-field takes care
of His own,
And the world shall yet reap what our sowers have sown.

The last of the sect to his fathers may go,
Leaving only his coat for some Barnum to show; 90
But the truth will outlive him, and broaden with years,
Till the false dies away, and the wrong disappears.

Nothing fails of its end. Out of sight
sinks the stone,
In the deep sea of time, but the circles sweep on,
Till the low-rippled murmurs along the shores run, 95
And the dark and dead waters leap glad in the sun.

Meanwhile shall we learn, in our ease, to forget
To the martyrs of Truth and of Freedom
our debt?—
Hide their words out of sight, like the garb that they wore,
And for Barclay's Apology offer one
more? 100

Shall we fawn round the priestcraft that glutted the shears,
And festooned the stocks with our grandfathers' ears?
Talk of Woolman's unsoundness? count
Penn heterodox?
And take Cotton Mather in place of George Fox?

Make our preachers war-chaplains? quote
Scripture to take 105
The hunted slave back, for Onesimus'
sake?
Go to burning church-candle, and chanting in choir,
And on the old meeting-house stick up
a spire?

No! the old paths we'll keep until better are shown,
Credit good where we find it, abroad or
our own; 110
And while 'Lo here' and 'Lo there' the multitude call,
Be true to ourselves, and do justice to all.

The good round about us we need not refuse,
Nor talk of our Zion as if we were Jews;
But why shirk the badge which our fathers have worn, 115
Or beg the world's pardon for having been born?

We need not pray over the Pharisee's
prayer,
Nor claim that our wisdom is Benjamin's
share;
Truth to us and to others is equal and one:
Shall we bottle the free air, or hoard up
the sun? 120

Well know we our birthright may serve but to show
How the meanest of weeds in the richest soil grow;
But we need not disparage the good which we hold;
Though the vessels be earthen, the treasure is gold!

Enough and too much of the sect and the
name. 125
What matters our label, so truth be our aim?
The creed may be wrong, but the life may be true,
And hearts beat the same under drab
coats or blue.

So the man be a man, let him worship, at
will,
In Jerusalem's courts, or on Gerizim's
hill. 130
When she makes up her jewels, what cares yon good town
For the Baptist of Wayland, the Quaker
of Brown?

And this green, favored island, so fresh and sea-blown,
When she counts up the worthies her annals have known,
Never waits for the pitiful gaugers of sect 135
To measure her love, and mete out her respect.

Three shades at this moment seem walking her strand,
Each with head halo-crowned, and with palms in his hand,— Wise Berkeley, grave Hopkins, and, smiling serene
On prelate and puritan, Channing is seen.

One holy name bearing, no longer they need 141
Credentials of party, and pass-words of
creed:
The new song they sing hath a threefold
accord,
And they own one baptism, one faith,
and one Lord!

But the golden sands run out: occasions
like these 145
Glide swift into shadow, like sails on the
seas:
While we sport with the mosses and pebbles ashore,
They lessen and fade, and we see them
no more.

Forgive me, dear friends, if my vagrant thoughts seem Like a school-boy's who idles and plays with his theme. 150
Forgive the light measure whose changes display
The sunshine and rain of our brief April
day.

There are moments in life when the lip and the eye
Try the question of whether to smile or to cry;
And scenes and reunions that prompt like our own 155
The tender in feeling, the playful in tone.

I, who never sat down with the boys and the girls
At the feet of your Slocums, and Cart-lands, and Earles,—
By courtesy only permitted to lay
On your festival's altar my poor gift,
to-day,— 160

I would joy in your joy: let me have a friend's part
In the warmth of your welcome of hand and of heart,—
On your play-ground of boyhood unbend
the brow's care,
And shift the old burdens our shoulders
must bear.

Long live the good School! giving out year by year 165
Recruits to true manhood and womanhood
dear:
Brave boys, modest maidens, in beauty
sent forth,
The living epistles and proof of its worth!

In and out let the young life as steadily flow
As in broad Narragansett the tides come and go; 170
And its sons and its daughters in prairie and town
Remember its honor, and guard its renown.

Not vainly the gift of its founder was
made;
Not prayerless the stones of its corner
were laid:
The blessing of Him whom in secret they
sought 175
Has owned the good work which, the fathers have wrought.

To Him be the glory forever! We bear
To the Lord of the Harvest our wheat with the tare.
What we lack in our work may He find in our will,
And winnow in mercy our good from the
ill! 180

OUR RIVER.

FOR A SUMMER FESTIVAL AT 'THE LAURELS' ON THE MERRIMAC.

Jean Pierre Brissot, the famous leader of the Girondist party in the French Revolution, when a young man travelled extensively in the United States. He visited the valley of the Merrimac, and speaks in terms of admiration of the view from Moulton's hill opposite Amesbury. The 'Laurel Party' so called, was composed of ladies and gentlemen in the lower valley of the Merrimac, and invited friends and guests in other sections of the country. Its thoroughly enjoyable annual festivals were held in the early summer on the pine-shaded, laurel-blossomed slopes of the Newbury side of the river opposite Pleasant Valley in Amesbury. The several poems called out by these gatherings are here printed in sequence.

ONCE more on yonder laurelled height

The summer flowers have budded ;

Once more with summer's golden light

The vales of home are flooded ;

And once more, by the grace of Him 5

Of every good the Giver,

We sing upon its wooded rim

The praises of our river :

Its pines above, its waves below,

The west-wind down it blowing, 10

As fair as when the young Brissot

Beheld it seaward flowing, —

And bore its memory o'er the deep,

To soothe the martyr's sadness,

And fresco, in his troubled sleep, 15

His prison-walls with gladness.

We know the world is rich with streams

Renowned in song and story,

Whose music murmurs through our dreams

Of human love and glory : 20

We know that Arno's banks are fair,

And Rhine has castled shadows,

And, poet-tuned, the Doon and Ayr

Go singing down their meadows.

But while, unpictured and unsung 25

By painter or by poet,

Our river waits the tuneful tongue

And cunning hand to show it, —

We only know the fond skies lean

Above it, warm with blessing, 30

And the sweet soul of our Undine

Awakes to our caressing.

No fickle sun-god holds the flocks

That graze its shores in keeping ;

No icy kiss of Dian mocks 35

The youth beside it sleeping :

Our Christian river loveth most

The beautiful and human ;

The heathen streams of Naiads boast,

But ours of man and woman. 40

The miner in his cabin hears

The ripple we are hearing ;

It whispers soft to homesick ears

Around the settler's clearing :

In Sacramento's vales of corn, 45

Or Santee's bloom of cotton,

Our river by its valley-born

Was never yet forgotten.

The drum rolls loud, the bugle fills

The summer air with clangor ; 50

The war-storm shakes the solid hills

Beneath its tread of anger ;

Young eyes that last year smiled in ours

Now point the rifle's barrel,

And hands then stained with fruits and

flowers 55

Bear redder stains of quarrel.

But blue skies smile, and flowers bloom on,

And rivers still keep flowing,

The dear God still His rain and sun

On good and ill bestowing. 60

His pine-trees whisper, 'Trust and wait !'

His flowers are prophesying

That all we dread of change or fate

His love is underlying.

And thou, O Mountain-born !—no more

We ask the wise Allotter 66

Than for the firmness of thy shore,

The calmness of thy water,

The cheerful lights that overlay

Thy rugged slopes with beauty, 70

To match our spirits to our day

And make a joy of duty.

REVISITED.

Read at 'The Laurels,' on the Merrimac,
6th month, 1865.

THE roll of drums and the bugle's wailing
Vex the air of our vales no more;
The spear is beaten to hooks of pruning,
The share is the sword the soldier wore !

Sing soft, sing low, our lowland river, 5
Under thy banks of laurel bloom ;
Softly and sweet, as the hour becometh,
Sing us the songs of peace and home.

Let all the tenderer voices of nature
Temper the triumph and chasten mirth,
Full of the infinite love and pity 11
For fallen martyr and darkened hearth.

But to Him who gives us beauty for ashes,
And the oil of joy for mourning long,
Let thy hills give thanks, and all thy waters 15
Break into jubilant waves of song !

Bring us the airs of hills and forests,
The sweet aroma of birch and pine,
Give us a waft of the north-wind laden
With sweetbrier odors and breath of kine ! 20

Bring us the purple of mountain sunsets,
Shadows of clouds that rake the hills,
The green repose of thy Plymouth
meadows,
The gleam and ripple of Campton rills.

Lead us away in shadow and sunshine, 25
Slaves of fancy, through all thy miles,
The winding ways of Pemigewasset.
And Winnepesaukee's hundred isles.

Shatter in sunshine over thy ledges,
Laugh in thy plunges from fall to fall ; 30
Play with thy fringes of elms, and darken
Under the shade of the mountain wall.

The cradle-song of thy hillside fountains
Here in thy glory and strength repeat ;
Give us a taste of thy upland music, 35
Show us the dance of thy silver feet.

Into thy dutiful life of uses
Pour the music and weave the flowers :
With the song of birds and bloom of meadows
Lighten and gladden thy heart and ours. 40

Sing on ! bring down, O lowland river,
The joy of the hills to the waiting sea ;
The wealth of the vales, the pomp of
mountains,
The breath of the woodlands, bear with
thee.

Here, in the calm of thy seaward valley, 45
Mirth and labor shall hold their truce ;
Dance of water and mill of grinding,
Both are beauty and both are use.

Type of the Northland's strength and
glory,
Pride and hope of our home and race,—
Freedom lending to rugged labor 51
Tints of beauty and lines of grace.

Once again, O beautiful river,
Hear our greetings and take our thanks ;
Hither we come, as Eastern pilgrims 55
Throng to the Jordan's sacred banks.

For though by the Master's feet un-trodden,
Though never His word has stilled thy
waves,
Well for us may thy shores be holy,
With Christian altars and saintly
graves. 60

And well may we own thy hint and token
Of fairer valleys and streams than
these,
Where the rivers of God are full of
water,
And full of sap are His healing trees !

'THE LAURELS.'

At the twentieth and last anniversary.

FROM these wild rocks I look to-day
O'er leagues of dancing waves, and see
The far, low coast-line stretch away
To where our river meets the sea.

The light wind blowing off the land 5
Is burdened with old voices; through
Shut eyes I see how lip and hand
The greeting of old days renew.

O friends whose hearts still keep their prime,
Whose bright example warms and cheers, 10

Ye teach us how to smile at Time,
And set to music all his years!

I thank you for sweet summer days,⁴³
For pleasant memories lingering long,
For joyful meetings, fond delays, 15
And ties of friendship woven strong.

As for the last time, side by side,
You tread the paths familiar grown,
I reach across the severing tide,
And blend my farewells with your
own. 20

Make room, O river of our home!
For other feet in place of ours,
And in the summers yet to come,
Make glad another Feast of Flowers!

Hold in thy mirror, calm and deep, 25
The pleasant pictures thou hast seen;
Forget thy lovers not, but keep
Our memory like thy laurels green.

ISLES OF SHOALS, 7th mo., 1870.

JUNE ON THE MERRIMAC.

O DWELLERS in the stately towns,
What come ye out to see?
This common earth, this common sky,
This water flowing free?

As gayly as these kalmia flowers 5
Your door-yard blossoms spring;
As sweetly as these wild-wood birds
Your caged minstrels sing.

You find but common bloom and green,
The rippling river's rune, 10
The beauty which is everywhere
Beneath the skies of June;

The Hawkswood oaks, the storm-torn plumes
Of old pine-forest kings,
Beneath whose century-woven shade 15
Deer Island's mistress sings.

And here are pictured Artichoke,
And Curson's bowery mill;
And Pleasant Valley smiles between
The river and the hill. 20

You know full well these banks of bloom,
The upland's wavy line,
And how the sunshine tips with fire
The needles of the pine.

Yet, like some old remembered psalm, 25
Or sweet, familiar face,
Not less because of commonness
You love the day and place.

And not in vain in this soft air
Shall hard-strung nerves relax, 30
Not all in vain tho' o'erworn brain
Forego its daily tax.

The lust of power, the greed of gain
Have all the year their own;
The haunting demons well may let 35
Our one bright day alone.

Unheeded let the newsboy call,
Aside the ledger lay:
The world will keep its treadmill step
Though we fall out to-day. 40

The truants of life's weary school,
Without excuse from thrift
We change for once the gains of toil
For God's unpurchased gift.

From ceiled rooms, from silent books, 45
From crowded car and town,
Dear Mother Earth, upon thy lap
We lay our tired heads down.

Cool, summer wind, our heated brows;
Blue river, through the green 50
Of clustering pines, refresh the eyes
Which all too much have seen.

For us these pleasant woodland ways Are thronged with memories old, Have felt the grasp of friendly hands And heard love's story told.	55	We walk on holy ground ; above A sky more holy smiles ; The chant of the beatitudes Swells down these leafy aisles.	100
A sacred presence overbroods The earth whereon we meet ; These winding forest-paths are trod By more than mortal feet.	60	Thanks to the gracious Providence That brings us here once more ; For memories of the good behind And hopes of good before !
Old friends called from us by the voice Which they alone could hear, From mystery to mystery, From life to life, draw near.		And if, unknown to us, sweet days Of June like this must come, Unseen of us these laurels clothe The river-banks with bloom ;	105
More closely for the sake of them Each other's hands we press ; Our voices take from them a tone Of deeper tenderness.	65	And these green paths must soon be trod By other feet than ours, Full long may annual pilgrims come To keep the Feast of Flowers ;	110
Our joy is theirs, their trust is ours, Alike below, above, Or here or there, about us fold The arms of one great love !	70	The matron be a girl once more, The bearded man a boy, And we, in heaven's eternal June, Be glad for earthly joy !	115
We ask to-day no countersign, No party names we own ; Unlabelled, individual, We bring ourselves alone.	75	1876.
What cares the unconventioned wood For pass-words of the town ? The sound of fashion's shibboleth The laughing waters drown.	80	HYMN FOR THE OPENING OF THOMAS STARR KING'S HOUSE OF WORSHIP, 1864. The poetic and patriotic preacher, who had won fame in the East, went to California in 1860 and became a power on the Pacific coast. It was not long after the opening of the house of worship built for him that he died.
Here cant forgets his dreary tone, And care his face forlorn ; The liberal air and sunshine laugh The bigot's zeal to scorn.
From manhood's weary shoulder falls His load of selfish cares ; And woman takes her rights as flowers And brooks and birds take theirs.	85	AMIDST these glorious works of Thine, The solemn minarets of the pine, And awful Shasta's icy shrine,—
The license of the happy woods, The brook's release are ours ; The freedom of the unshamed wind Among the glad-eyed flowers.	90	Where swell Thy hymns from wave and gale, And organ-thunders never fail, Behind the cataract's silver veil,—	5
Yet here no evil thought finds place, Nor foot profane comes in ; Our grove, like that of Samothrace, Is set apart from sin.	95	Our puny walls to Thee we raise, Our poor reed-music sounds Thy praise : Forgive, O Lord, our childish ways !
		For, kneeling on these altar-stairs, We urge Thee not with selfish prayers, Nor murmur at our daily cares.	10

Before Thee, in an evil day,
Our country's bleeding heart we lay,
And dare not ask Thy hand to stay; 15
But, through the war-cloud, pray to Thee
For union, but a union free,
With peace that comes of purity!
That Thou wilt bare Thy arm to save
And, smiting through this Red Sea wave,
Make broad a pathway for the slave! 21

For us, confessing all our need,
We trust nor rite nor word nor deed,
Nor yet the broken staff of creed.

Assured alone that Thou art good 25
To each, as to the multitude,
Eternal Love and Fatherhood,—

Weak, sinful, blind, to Thee we kneel,
Stretch dumbly forth our hands, and feel
Our weakness is our strong appeal. 30

So, by these Western gates of Even
We wait to see with Thy forgiven
The opening Golden Gate of Heaven!

Suffice it now. In time to be Shall holier altars rise to Thee,— 35
Thy Church our broad humanity!

White flowers of love its walls shall climb,
Soft bells of peace shall ring its chime,
Its days shall all be holy time.

A sweeter song shall then be heard,— 40
The music of the world's accord
Confessing Christ, the Inward Word!

That song shall swell from shore to shore,
One hope, one faith, one love, restore
The seamless robe that Jesus wore. 45

HYMN

FOR THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP AT GEORGETOWN, ERECTED IN MEMORY
OF A MOTHER.⁴⁴

The giver of the house was the late George Peabody, of London.

THOU dwellest not, O Lord of all!
In temples which Thy children raise;
Our work to Thine is mean and small,
And brief to Thy eternal days.

Forgive the weakness and the pride, 5
If marred thereby our gift may be,
For love, at least, has sanctified
The altar that we rear to Thee.

The heart and not the hand has wrought
From sunken base to tower above 10
The image of a tender thought,
The memory of a deathless love!

And though should never sound of speech
Or organ echo from its wall,
Its stones would pious lessons teach, 15
Its shade in benedictions fall.

Here should the dove of peace be found,
And blessings and not curses given;
Nor strife profane, nor hatred wound 19
The mingled loves of earth and heaven.

Thou, who didst soothe with dying breath
The dear one watching by Thy cross,
Forgetful of the pains of death
In sorrow for her mighty loss,

In memory of that tender claim, 25
O Mother-born, the offering take,
And make it worthy of Thy name,
And bless it for a mother's sake!
1868.

A SPIRITUAL MANIFESTATION.

Read at the President's Levee, Brown University, 29th, 6th month, 1870.

TO-DAY the plant by Williams set
Its summer bloom discloses;
The wilding sweetbrier of his prayers
Is crowned with cultured roses.

Once more the Island State repeats 5
The lesson that he taught her,
And binds his pearl of charity
Upon her brown-locked daughter.

Is 't fancy that he watches still
His Providence plantations? 10
That still the careful Founder takes
A part on these occasions?

- Methinks I see that reverend form,
Which all of us so well know :
He rises up to speak ; he jogs 15
The presidential elbow.
- 'Good friends,' he says, 'you reap a field
I sowed in self-denial,
For toleration had its griefs
And charity its trial. 20
- 'Great grace, as saith Sir Thomas More,
To him must needs be given
Who heareth heresy and leaves
The heretic to Heaven !
- 'I hear again the snuffled tones, 25
I see in dreary vision
Dyspeptic dreamers, spiritual bores,
And prophets with a mission.
- 'Each zealot thrust before my eyes
His Scripture-garbled label ; 30
All creeds were shouted in my ears
As with the tongues of Babel.
- 'Scourged at one cart-tail, each denied
The hope of every other ;
Each martyr shook his branded fist 35
At the conscience of his brother !
- 'How cleft the dreary drone of man
The shriller pipe of woman,
As Gorton led his saints elect,
Who held all things in common ! 40
- 'Their gay robes trailed in ditch and swamp,
And torn by thorn and thicket,
The dancing-girls of Merry Mount
Came dragging to my wicket.
- 'Shrill Anabaptists, shorn of ears ; 45
Gray witch-wives, hobbling slowly ;
And Antinomians, free of law,
Whose very sins were holy.
- 'Hoarse ranters, crazed Fifth Monarchists,
Of stripes and bondage braggarts, 50
Pale Churchmen, with singed rubrics snatched
From Puritanic ragots.
- 'And last, not least, the Quakers came,
With tongues still sore from burning,
The Bay State's dust from off their feet
Before my threshold spurning ; 56
- 'A motley host, the Lord's débris,
Faith's odds and ends together ;
Well might I shrink from guests with lungs
Tough as their breeches leather : 60
- 'If, when the hangman at their heels
Came, rope in hand to catch them,
I took the hunted outcasts in,
I never sent to fetch them.
- 'I fed, but spared them not a whit ; 65
I gave to all who walked in,
Not clams and succotash alone,
But stronger meat of doctrine.
- 'I proved the prophets false, I pricked
The bubble of perfection, 70
And clapped upon their inner light
The snuffers of election.
- 'And looking backward on my times,
This credit I am taking ;
I kept each sectary's dish apart, 75
No spiritual chowder making.
- 'Where now the blending signs of sect
Would puzzle their assorter,
The dry-shod Quaker kept the land,
The Baptist held the water. 80
- 'A common coat now serves for both,
The hat's no more a fixture ;
And which was wet and which was dry,
Who knows in such a mixture ?
- 'Well ! He who fashioned Peter's dream
To bless them all is able ; 86
And bird and beast and creeping thing
Make clean upon His table !
- 'I walked by my own light ; but when
The ways of faith divided, 90
Was I to force unwilling feet
To tread the path that I did ?

'I touched the garment-hem of truth,
Yet saw not all its splendor ;
I knew enough of doubt to feel 95
For every conscience tender.

'God left men free of choice, as when
His Eden-trees were planted ;
Because they chose amiss, should I
Deny the gift He granted ? 100

'So, with a common sense of need,
Our common weakness feeling,
I left them with myself to God
And His all-gracious dealing !

'I kept His plan whose rain and sun 105
To tare and wheat are given ;
And if the ways to hell were free,
I left them free to heaven !'

Take heart with us, O man of old,
Soul-freedom's brave confessor, 110
So love of God and man wax strong,
Let sect and creed be lesser.

The jarring discords of thy day
In ours one hymn are swelling ;
The wandering feet, the severed paths
All seek our Father's dwelling. 116

And slowly learns the world the truth
That makes us all thy debtor,—
That holy life is more than rite,
And spirit more than letter ; 120

That they who differ pole-wide serve
Perchance the common Master,
And other sheep He hath than they
Who graze one narrow pasture !

For truth's worst foe is he who claims
To act as God's avenger, 126
And deems, beyond his sentry-beat,
The crystal walls in danger !

Who sets for heresy his traps
Of verbal quirk and quibble, 130
And weeds the garden of the Lord
With Satan's borrowed dibble.

To-day our hearts like organ keys
One Master's touch are feeling ;
The branches of a common Vine 135
Have only leaves of healing.

Co-workers, yet from varied fields,
We share this restful nooning ;
The Quaker with the Baptist here
Believes in close communing. 140

Forgive, dear saint, the playful tone,
Too light for thy deserving ;
Thanks for thy generous faith in man,
Thy trust in God unswerving.

Still echo in the hearts of men 145
The words that thou hast spoken ;
No forge of hell can weld again
The fetters thou hast broken.

The pilgrim needs a pass no more
From Roman or Genevan ; 150
Thought-free, no ghostly tollman keeps Henceforth the road to Heaven !

CHICAGO.

The great fire at Chicago was on 8-10 October, 1871.

MEN said at vespers : ' All is well !'
In one wild night the city fell ;
Fell shrines of prayer and marts of gain
Before the fiery hurricane.

On threescore spires had sunset shone, 5
Where ghastly sunrise looked on none.
Men clasped each other's hands, and
said :

'The City of the West is dead !'

Brave hearts who fought, in slow retreat,
The fiends of fire from street to street, 10
Turned, powerless, to the blinding glare,
The dumb defiance of despair.

A sudden impulse thrilled each wire
That signalled round that sea of fire ;
Swift words of cheer, warm heart-throbs
came ; 15
In tears of pity died the flame !

From East, from West, from South and
North,
The messages of hope shot forth,
And, underneath the severing wave, 19
The world, full-handed, reached to save.

Fair seemed the old ; but fairer still
The new, the dreary void shall fill
With dearer homes than those o'erthrown,
For love shall lay each corner-stone.

Rise, stricken city ! from thee throw 25
The ashen sackcloth of thy woe ;
And build, as to Amphion's strain,
To songs of cheer thy walls again !

How shrivelled in thy hot distress
The primal sin of selfishness ! 30
How instant rose, to take thy part,
The angel in the human heart !

Ah ! not in vain the flames that tossed
Above thy dreadful holocaust ;
The Christ again has preached through
thee 35
The Gospel of Humanity !

Then lift once more thy towers on high,
And fret with spires the western sky,
To tell that God is yet with us,
And love is still miraculous ! 40

KINSMAN.

Died at the Island of Panay (Philippine group), aged nineteen years

WHERE ceaseless Spring her garland
twines,

As sweetly shall the loved one rest,
As if beneath the whispering pines
And maple shadows of the West.

Ye mourn, O hearts of home ! for him, 5
But, haply, mourn ye not alone ;
For him shall far-off eyes be dim,
And pity speak in tongues unknown.

There needs no graven line to give
The story of his blameless youth ; 10
All hearts shall throb intuitive,
And nature guess the simple truth.

The very meaning of his name
Shall many a tender tribute win ;
The stranger own his sacred claim,
And all the world shall be his kin. 15

And there, as here, on main and isle,
The dews of holy peace shall fall,
The same sweet heavens above him smile,
And God's dear love be over all ! 20

1874.

THE GOLDEN WEDDING OF LONGWOOD.

Longwood, not far from Bayard Taylor's birthplace in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, was the home of my esteemed friends John and Hannah
Cox, whose golden wedding was celebrated in 1874.

WITH fifty years between you and your well-kept wedding vow,
The Golden Age, old friends of mine, is not a fable now.

And, sweet as has life's vintage been through all your pleasant past,
Still, as at Cana's marriage-feast, the best wine is the last !

Again before me, with your names, fair
Chester's landscape comes, 5
Its meadows, woods, and ample barns, and quaint, stone-built homes.

The smooth-shorn vales, the wheaten slopes, the bosage green and soft,
Of which their poet sings so well from towered Cedarcroft.

And lo ! from all the country-side come neighbors, kith and kin ;
From city, hamlet, farm-house old, the wedding guests come in. 10

And they who, without scrip or purse,
mob-hunted, travel-worn,
In Freedom's age of martyrs came, as victors now return.

Older and slower, yet the same, files in the long array,
And hearts are light and eyes are glad,
though heads are badger-gray.

The fire-tried men of Thirty-eight who saw with me the fall, 15
Midst roaring flames and shouting mob,
of Pennsylvania Hall ;

And they of Lancaster who turned the cheeks of tyrants pale,
Singing of freedom through the grates of Moyamensing jail !

And haply with them, all unseen, old comrades, gone before,
Pass, silently as shadows pass, within your open door,— 20

The eagle face of Lindley Coates, brave
Garrett's daring zeal,
The Christian grace of Pennock, the steadfast heart of Neal.

Ah me ! beyond all power to name, the worthies tried and true,
Grave men, fair women, youth and maid,
pass by in hushed review.

Of varying faiths, a common cause fused
all their hearts in one. 25
God give them now, whate'er their names,
the peace of duty done !

How gladly would I tread again the old-remembered places,
Sit down beside your hearth once more and look in the dear old faces !

And thank you for the lessons your fifty years are teaching,
For honest lives that louder speak than half our noisy preaching ; 30

For your steady faith and courage in that dark and evil time,
When the Golden Rule was treason, and to feed the hungry crime ;

For the poor slave's house of refuge when the hounds were on his track,
And saint and sinner, church and state,
joined hands to send him back.

Blessings upon you !—What you did for each sad, suffering one, 35
So homeless, faint, and naked, unto our Lord was done !

Fair fall on Kennett's pleasant vales and Longwood's bowery ways
The mellow sunset of your lives, friends of my early days.

May many more of quiet years be added
to your sum,
And, late at last, in tenderest love, the beckoning angel come. 40

Dear hearts, are here, dear hearts are there, alike below, above ;
Our friends are now in either world, and love is sure of love.

HYMN

FOR THE OPENING OF PLYMOUTH
CHURCH, ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA.

ALL things are Thine : no gift have we,
Lord of all gifts, to offer Thee ;
And hence with grateful hearts to-day,
Thy own before Thy feet we lay.

Thy will was in the builders' thought ; 5
Thy hand unseen amidst us wrought ;
Through mortal motive, scheme and plan,
Thy wise eternal purpose ran.

No lack Thy perfect fulness knew ;
For human needs and longings grew 10
This house of prayer, this home of rest,
In the fair garden of the West.

In weakness and in want we call
On Thee for whom the heavens are small ;
Thy glory is Thy children's good, 15
Thy joy Thy tender Fatherhood.

O Father ! deign these walls to bless,
Fill with Thy love their emptiness,
And let their door a gateway be
To lead us from ourselves to Thee ! 20 1872.

LEXINGTON.

1775.

No Berserk thirst of blood had they,
No battle-joy was theirs, who set
Against the alien bayonet
Their homespun breasts in that old day,

Their feet had trodden peaceful ways ; 5
They loved not strife, they dreaded
pain ;

¶ They saw not, what to us is plain,
That God would make man's wrath His
praise.

No seers were they, but simple men ;
Its vast results the future hid : 10
The meaning of the work they did
Was strange and dark and doubtful then.

Swift as their summons came they left
The plough mid-furrow standing still,
The half-ground corn grist in the mill,
The spade in earth, the axe in cleft. 16

They went where duty seemed to call,
They scarcely asked the reason why ;
They only knew they could but die,
And death was not the worst of all ! 20

Of man for man the sacrifice,
All that was theirs to give, they gave.
The flowers that blossomed from their
grave

Have sown themselves beneath all skies.

Their death-shot shook the feudal tower,
And shattered slavery's chain as well ;
On the sky's dome, as on a bell, 27
Its echo struck the world's great hour.

That fateful echo is not dumb :
The nations listening to its sound 30
Wait, from a century's vantage-ground,
The holier triumphs yet to come,—

The bridal time of Law and Love,
The gladness of the world's release,
When, war-sick, at the feet of Peace 35
The hawk shall nestle with the dove!—

The golden age of brotherhood
Unknown to other rivalries
Than of the mild humanities,
And gracious interchange of good, 40

When closer strand shall lean to strand,
Till meet, beneath saluting flags,
The eagle of our mountain-crag,
The lion of our Motherland !

1875.

THE LIBRARY.

Sung at the opening of the Haverhill Library,
November 11, 1875.

'LET there be light !' God spake of old,
And over chaos dark and cold,
And through the dead and formless
frame
Of nature, life and order came.

Faint was the light at first that shone 5
On giant fern and mastodon,
On half-formed plant and beast of prey,
And man as rude and wild as they.

Age after age, like waves, o'erran
The earth, uplifting brute and man ; 10
And mind, at length, in symbols dark
Its meanings traced on stone and bark.

On leaf of palm, on sedge-wrought roll ;
On plastic clay and leathern scroll,
Man wrote his thoughts ; the ages passed,
And lo ! the Press was found at last ! 16

Then dead souls woke ; the thoughts of
men
Whose bones were dust revived again ;
The cloister's silence found a tongue,
Old prophets spake, old poets sung. 20

And here, to-day, the dead look down,
The kings of mind again we crown ;
We hear the voices lost so long,
The sage's word, the sibyl's song.

Here Greek and Roman find themselves
Alive along these crowded shelves ; 26
And Shakespeare treads again his stage,
And Chaucer paints anew his age.

As if some Pantheon's marbles broke
Their stony trance, and lived and spoke,
Life thrills along the alcoved hall, 31
The lords of thought await our call !

'I WAS A STRANGER, AND YE TOOK ME IN.'

An Incident in St. Augustine, Florida.

'NEATH skies that winter never knew
The air was full of light and balm,
And warm and soft the Gulf wind blew
Through orange bloom and groves of palm.

A stranger from the frozen North, 5
Who sought the fount of health in
vain,
Sank homeless on the alien earth,
And breathed the languid air with
pain.

God's angel came! The tender shade
Of pity made her blue eye dim; 10
Against her woman's breast she laid
The drooping, fainting head of him.

She bore him to a pleasant room,
Flower-sweet and cool with salt sea air,
And watched beside his bed, for whom 15
His far-off sisters might not care.

She fanned his feverish brow and smoothed
Its lines of pain with tenderest touch.
With holy hymn and prayer she soothed
The trembling soul that feared so much. 20

Through her the peace that passeth sight
Came to him, as he lapsed away
As one whose troubled dreams of night
Slide slowly into tranquil day.

The sweetness of the Land of Flowers 25
Upon his lonely grave she laid:
The jasmine dropped its golden showers,
The orange lent its bloom and shade.

And something whispered in her thought,
More sweet than mortal voices be: 30
'The service thou for him hast wrought
O daughter! hath been done for Me.'

CENTENNIAL HYMN.

Written for the opening of the International Exhibition, Philadelphia, May 10, 1876. The music for the hymn was written by John K.
Paine, and may be found in *The Atlantic
Monthly* for June, 1876.

I.

OUR fathers' God! from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,
We meet to-day, united, free,
And loyal to our land and Thee,
To thank Thee for the era done, 5
And trust Thee for the opening one.

II.

Here, where of old, by Thy design,
The fathers spake that word of Thine
Whose echo is the glad refrain
Of rended bolt and falling chain, 10
To grace our festal time, from all
The zones of earth our guests we call.

III.

Be with us while the New World greets
The Old World thronging all its streets,
Unveiling all the triumphs won 15
By art or toil beneath the sun;
And unto common good ordain
This rivalry of hand and brain.

IV.

Thou, who hast here in concord furled
The war flags of a gathered world, 20
Beneath our Western skies fulfil
The Orient's mission of good-will,
And, freighted with love's Golden Fleece,
Send back its Argonauts of peace.

V.

For art and labor met in truce, 25
For beauty made the bride of use,
We thank Thee; but, withal, we crave
The austere virtues strong to save,
The honor proof to place or gold,
The manhood never bought nor sold! 30

VI.

Oh make Thou us, through centuries long,
 In peace secure, in justice strong ;
 Around our gift of freedom draw
 The safeguards of Thy righteous law :
 And, cast in some diviner mould, 35
 Let the new cycle shame the old !

AT SCHOOL-CLOSE.

BOWDOIN STREET, BOSTON, 1877.

THE end has come, as come it must
 To all things ; in these sweet June
 days

The teacher and the scholar trust
 Their parting feet to separate ways.

They part : but in the years to be 5
 Shall pleasant memories cling to each,
 As shells bear inland from the sea
 The murmur of the rhythmic beach.

One knew the joy the sculptor knows 10
 When, plastic to his lightest touch,
 His clay-wrought model slowly grows
 To that fine grace desired so much.

So daily grew before her eyes
 The living shapes whereon she wrought,
 Strong, tender, innocently wise, 15
 The child's heart with the woman's
 thought.

And one shall never quite forget
 The voice that called from dream and
 play,
 The firm but kindly hand that set
 Her feet in learning's pleasant way,—

The joy of Undine soul-possessed, 21
 The wakening sense, the strange delight
 That swelled the fabled statue's breast
 And filled its clouded eyes with sight !

O Youth and Beauty, loved of all ! 25
 Ye pass from girlhood's gate of dreams ;
 In broader ways your footsteps fall,
 Ye test the truth of all that seems.

Her little realm the teacher leaves,
 She breaks her wand of power apart, 30
 While, for your love and trust, she gives
 The warm thanks of a grateful heart.

Hers is the sober summer noon
 Contrasted with your morn of spring,
 The waning with the waxing moon, 35
 The folded with the outspread wing.

Across the distance of the years
 She sends her God-speed back to you ;
 She has no thought of doubts or fears :
 Be but yourselves, be pure, be true, 40

And prompt in duty ; heed the deep,
 Low voice of conscience ; through the
 ill
 And discord round about you, keep
 Your faith in human nature still.

Be gentle : unto griefs and needs, 45
 Be pitiful as woman should,
 And, spite of all the lies of creeds,
 Hold fast the truth that God is good.

Give and receive ; go forth and bless
 The world that needs the hand and
 heart 50
 Of Martha's helpful carefulness
 No less than Mary's better part.

So shall the stream of time flow by
 And leave each year a richer good,
 And matron loveliness outvie 55
 The nameless charm of maidenhood.

And, when the world shall link your names
 With gracious lives and manners fine,
 The teacher shall assert her claims,
 And proudly whisper, 'These were
 mine !' 60

HYMN OF THE CHILDREN.

Sung at the anniversary of the Children's Mission, Boston, 1878.

THINE are all the gifts, O God !
 Thine the broken bread ;
 Let the naked feet be shod,
 And the starving fed.

Let Thy children, by Thy grace,
Give as they abound,
Till the poor have breathing-space,
And the lost are found.

Wiser than the miser's hoards
Is the giver's choice;
Sweeter than the song of birds
Is the thankful voice.

Welcome smiles on faces sad
As the flowers of spring;
Let the tender hearts be glad
With the joy they bring.

Happier for their pity's sake
Make their sports and plays,
And from lips of childhood take Thy perfected praise!

THE LANDMARKS.

This poem was read at a meeting of citizens of Boston having for its object the preservation of the Old South Church, famous in Colonial and Revolutionary history.

I.

THROUGH the streets of Marblehead
Fast the red-winged terror sped;

Blasting, withering, on it came,
With its hundred tongues of flame,

Where St. Michael's on its way
Stood like chained Andromeda,

Waiting on the rock, like her,
Swift doom or deliverer!

Church that, after sea-moss grew
Over walls no longer new,

Counted generations five,
Four entombed and one alive;

Heard the martial thousand tread
Battleward from Marblehead;

Saw within the rock-walled bay
Treville's lilled pennons play,

5 And the fisher's dory met
By the barge of Lafayette,

Telling good news in advance
Of the coming fleet of France! 20

10 Church to reverend memories dear,
Quaint in desk and chandelier;

Bell, whose century-rusted tongue
Burials tolled and bridals rung;

15 Loft, whose tiny organ kept
Keys that Snetzler's hand had swept; 25

Altar, o'er whose tablet old
Sinai's law its thunders rolled!

Suddenly the sharp cry came:
20 'Look! St. Michael's is aflame!' 30

Round the low tower wall the fire
Snake-like wound its coil of ire.

Sacred in its gray respect
From the jealousies of sect,

'Save it,' seemed the thought of all, 35
'Save it, though our roof-trees fall!'

Up the tower the young men sprung;
One, the bravest, outward swung

By the rope, whose kindling strands
Smoked beneath the holder's hands, 40

Smiting down with strokes of power
Burning fragments from the tower.

5 Then the gazing crowd beneath
Broke the painful pause of breath;

Brave men cheered from street to street,
With home's ashes at their feet; 46

10 Houseless women kerchiefs waved:
'Thank the Lord! St. Michael's saved!'

II.

In the heart of Boston town
Stands the church of old renown, 50

15 From whose walls the impulse went
Which set free a continent;

From whose pulpit's oracle
Prophecies of freedom fell ;

And whose steeple-rocking din 55
Rang the nation's birth-day in !

Standing at this very hour
Perilled like St. Michael's tower,

Held not in the clasp of flame,
But by mammon's grasping claim. 60

Shall it be of Boston said
She is shamed by Marblehead ?

City of our pride ! as there,
Hast thou none to do and dare ?

Life was risked for Michael's shrine ; 65
Shall not wealth be staked for thine ?

Woe to thee, when men shall search
Vainly for the Old South Church ;

When from Neck to Boston Stone,
All thy pride of place is gone ; 70

When from Bay and railroad car,
Stretched before them wide and far,

Men shall only see a great
Wilderness of brick and slate,

Every holy spot o'erlaid 75
By the commonplace of trade !

City of our love ! to thee
Duty is but destiny.

True to all thy record saith,
Keep with thy traditions faith ; 80

Ere occasion's overpast,
Hold its flowing forelook fast ;

Honor still the precedents
Of a grand munificence ;

In thy old historic way 85
Give, as thou didst yesterday

At the South-land's call, or on Need's demand from fired St. John.

Set thy Church's muffled bell
Free the generous deed to tell. 90

Let thy loyal hearts rejoice
In the glad, sonorous voice,
Ringing from the brazen mouth
Of the bell of the Old South,—
Ringing clearly, with a will, 95
'What she was is Boston still !'

GARDEN.

A hymn for the American Horticultural Society, 1882. [Originally written to be sung at an agricultural and horticultural fair in Amesbury in 1853. It was translated into Portuguese by Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, and read at a harvest festival. It has been translated into Italian also and sung by peasants at the gathering of the vintage.]

O PAINTER of the fruits and flowers,
We own Thy wise design,
Whereby these human hands of ours
May share the work of Thine !

Apart from Thee we plant in vain 5
The root and sow the seed ;
Thy early and Thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.

Our toil is sweet with thankfulness,
Our burden is our boon ; 10
The curse of Earth's gray morning is
The blessing of its noon.

Why search the wide world everywhere
For Eden's unknown ground ?
That garden of the primal pair 15
May nevermore be found.

But, blest by Thee, our patient toil
May right the ancient wrong,
And give to every clime and soil
The beauty lost so long. 20

Our homestead flowers and fruited trees
May Eden's orchard shame ;
We taste the tempting sweets of these
Like Eve, without her blame.

And, North and South and East and
West, 25
The pride of every zone,
The fairest, rarest, and the best
May all be made our own.

Its earliest shrines the young world
sought

In hill-groves and in bowers, 30
The fittest offerings thither brought
Were Thy own fruits and flowers.

And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed ;
The good is always beautiful, 35
The beautiful is good.

A GREETING.

Read at Harriet Beecher Stowe's seventieth anniversary, June 14, 1882, at a garden party at ex-Governor Claflin's in Newtonville, Mass.

THRICE welcome from the Land of
Flowers

And golden-fruited orange bowers
To this sweet, green-turfed June of ours !
To her who, in our evil time,
Dragged into light the nation's crime 5
With strength beyond the strength of
men,

And, mightier than their swords, her pen !

To her who world-wide entrance gave
To the log-cabin of the slave ;
Made all his wrongs and sorrows known,
And all earth's languages his own,— 11
North, South, and East and West, made
all

The common air electrical,
Until the o'ercharged bolts of heaven
Blazed down, and every chain was riven !

Welcome from each and all to her 16
Whose Wooing of the Minister
Revealed the warm heart of the man
Beneath the creed-bound Puritan,
And taught the kinship of the love 20
Of man below and God above ;
To her whose vigorous pencil-strokes
Sketched into life her Oldtown Folks ;
Whose fireside stories, grave or gay,
In quaint Sam Lawson's vagrant way, 25
With old New England's flavor rife,
Waifs from her rude idyllic life,
Are racy as the legends old
By Chaucer or Boccaccio told ;

To her who keeps, through change of
place 30

And time, her native strength and grace,
Alike where warm Sorrento smiles,
Or where, by birchen-shaded isles,
Whose summer winds have shivered o'er
The icy drift of Labrador, 35
She lifts to light the priceless Pearl
Of Harpswell's angel-beckoned girl !

To her at threescore years and ten
Be tributes of the tongue and pen ; 39
Be honor, praise, and heart-thanks given,
The loves of earth, the hopes of heaven !

Ah, dearer than the praise that stirs
The air to-day, our love is hers !
She needs no guaranty of fame
Whose own is linked with Freedom's
name. 45

Long ages after ours shall keep
Her memory living while we sleep ;
The waves that wash our gray coast lines,
The winds that rock the Southern pines,
Shall sing of her ; the unending years 50
Shall tell her tale in unborn ears.
And when, with sins and follies past,
Are numbered color-hate and caste,
White, black, and red shall own as one
The noblest work by woman done. 55

GODSPEED.

Written on the occasion of a voyage made by my friends Annie Fields and Sarah Orne Jewett.

OUTBOUND, your bark awaits you. Were
I one

Whose prayer availeth much, my wish
should be
Your favoring trade-wind and consenting sea.

By sail or steed was never love outrun,
And, here or there, love follows her in
whom 5

All graces and sweet charities unite,
The old Greek beauty set in holier
light ;

And her for whom New England's byways
bloom,
Who walks among us welcome as the Spring,

Calling up blossoms where her light feet
 stray. 10
 God keep you both, make beautiful
 your way,
 Comfort, console, and bless; and safely
 bring,
 Ere yet I make upon a vaster sea
 The unreturning voyage, my friends to me.
 1882.

WINTER ROSES.

In reply to a flower gift from Mrs. Putnam's school at Jamaica Plain.

My garden roses long ago
 Have perished from the leaf-strewn
 walks;
 Their pale, fair sisters smile no more
 Upon the sweet-brier stalks.

Gone with the flower-time of my life, 5
 Spring's violets, summer's blooming
 pride,

And Nature's winter and my own
 Stand, flowerless, side by side.

So might I yesterday have sung;
 To-day, in bleak December's noon, 10
 Come sweetest fragrance, shapes, and hues,
 The rosy wealth of June!

Bless the young hands that culled the
 gift,
 And bless the hearts that prompted it;
 If undeserved it comes, at least 15
 It seems not all unfit.

Of old my Quaker ancestors
 Had gifts of forty stripes save one;
 To-day as many roses crown
 The gray head of their son. 20

And with them, to my fancy's eye,
 The fresh-faced givers smiling come,
 And nine and thirty happy girls
 Make glad a lonely room.

They bring the atmosphere of youth; 25
 The light and warmth of long ago
 Are in my heart, and on my cheek
 The airs of morning blow.

O buds of girlhood, yet unblown,
 And fairer than the gift ye chose, 30
 For you may years like leaves unfold
 The heart of Sharon's rose!
 1883.

THE REUNION.

Read September 10, 1885, to the surviving students of Haverhill Academy in 1827-1830.

The gulf of seven and fifty years
 We stretch our welcoming hands across;
 The distance but a pebble's toss
 Between us and our youth appears.

For in life's school we linger on 5
 The remnant of a once full list;
 Conning our lessons, undismissed,
 With faces to the setting sun.

And some have gone the unknown way,
 And some await the call to rest; 10
 Who knoweth whether it is best
 For those who went or those who stay?

And yet despite of loss and ill,
 If faith and love and hope remain,
 Our length of days is not in vain, 15
 And life is well worth living still.

Still to a gracious Providence
 The thanks of grateful hearts are due,
 For blessings when our lives were new,
 For all the good vouchsafed us since. 20

The pain that spared us sorer hurt,
 The wish denied, the purpose crossed,
 And pleasure's fond occasions lost,
 Were mercies to our small desert.

'Tis something that we wander back, 25
 Gray pilgrims, to our ancient ways,
 And tender memories of old days
 Walk with us by the Merrimac;

That even in life's afternoon
 A sense of youth comes back again, 30
 As through this cool September rain
 The still green woodlands dream of June.

The eyes grown dim to present things
 Have keener sight for bygone years,
 And sweet and clear, in deafening ears,
 The bird that sang at morning sings. 36

Dear comrades, scattered wide and far,
Send from their homes their kindly
word,

And dearer ones, unseen, unheard,
Smile on us from some heavenly star. 40

For life and death with God are one,
Unchanged by seeming change His care
And love are round us here and there;
He breaks no thread His hand has spun.

Soul touches soul, the muster roll 45
Of life eternal has no gaps;
And after half a century's lapse
Our school-day ranks are closed and
whole.

Hail and farewell! We go our way;
Where shadows end, we trust in light;
The star that ushers in the night 51
Is herald also of the day!

NORUMBEGA HALL.

Norumbega Hall at Wellesley College, named in honor of Eben Norton Horsford, who was one of the most munificent patrons of that noble institution, and who had just published an essay claiming the discovery of the site of the somewhat mythical city of Norumbega, was opened with appropriate ceremonies, in April, 1886. The following sonnet was written for the occasion, and was read by President Alice E. Freeman, to whom it was addressed

Nor on Penobscot's wooded bank the spires
Of the sought City rose, nor yet beside
The winding Charles, nor where the daily
tide
Of Naumkeag's haven rises and retires,
The vision barred; but somewhere we
knew 5
The beautiful gates must open to our quest,
Somewhere that marvellous City of the West
Would lift its towers and palace domes
in view,
And, lo! at last its mystery is made
known—

Its only dwellers maidens fair and young,
Its Princess such as England's Laureate
sung; 11

And safe from capture, save by love
alone,
It lends its beauty to the lake's green
shore,
And Norumbega is a myth no more.

THE BARTHOLDI STATUE.

1886.

THE land, that, from the rule of kings,
In freeing us, itself made free,
Our Old World Sister, to us brings
Her sculptured Dream of Liberty:

Unlike the shapes on Egypt's sands 5
Uplifted by the toil-worn slave,
On Freedom's soil with freemen's hands
We rear the symbol free hands gave.

O France, the beautiful! to thee
Once more a debt of love we owe: 10
In peace beneath thy Colors Three,
We hail a later Rochambeau!

Rise, stately Symbol! holding forth
Thy light and hope to all who sit 14
In chains and darkness! Belt the earth
With watch-fires from thy torch uplit!

Reveal the primal mandate still
Which Chaos heard and ceased to be,
Trace on mid-air th' Eternal Will
In signs of fire: 'Let man be free!' 20

Shine far, shine free, a guiding light
To Reason's ways and Virtue's aim,
A lightning-flash the wretch to smite
Who shields his license with thy name!

ONE OF THE SIGNERS.

Written for the unveiling of the statue of Josiah Bartlett at Amesbury, Mass., July 4, 1888. Governor Bartlett, who was a native of the town, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence Amesbury or Ambresbury, so called from the 'anointed stones' of the great Druidical temple near it, was the seat of one of the earliest religious houses in Britain. The tradition that the guilty wife of King Arthur fled thither for protection forms one of the finest passages in Tennyson's Idylls of the King.

O STORIED vale of Merrimac,
Rejoice through all thy shade and
shine,
And from his century's sleep call back
A brave and honored son of thine

Unveil his effigy between 5
The living and the dead to-day;
The fathers of the Old Thirteen
Shall witness bear as spirits may.

Unseen, unheard, his gray compeers,
The shades of Lee and Jefferson, 10
Wise Franklin reverend with his years,
And Carroll, lord of Carrollton!

Be thine henceforth a pride of place
Beyond thy namesake's over-sea,
Where scarce a stone is left to trace 15
The Holy House of Amesbury.

A prouder memory lingers round
The birthplace of thy true man here
Than that which haunts the refuge found 20
By Arthur's mythic Guinevere.

The plain deal table where he sat
And signed a nation's title-deed
Is dearer now to fame than that
Which bore the scroll of Runnymede.

Long as, on Freedom's natal morn, 25
Shall ring the Independence bells,
Give to thy dwellers yet unborn
The lesson which his image tells.

For in that hour of Destiny,
Which tried the men of bravest stock,
He knew the end alone must be 31
A free land or a traitor's block.

Among those picked and chosen men
Than his, who here first drew his breath,
No firmer fingers held the pen 35
Which wrote for liberty or death.

Not for their hearths and homes alone,
But for the world their work was done;
On all the winds their thought has flown
Through all the circuit of the sun. 40

We trace its flight by broken chains,
By songs of grateful Labor still;
To-day, in all her holy fanes,
It rings the bells of freed Brazil. 44

O hills that watched his boyhood's home,
O earth and air that nursed him, give,
In this memorial semblance, room
To him who shall its bronze outlive!

And thou, O Land he loved, rejoice
That in the countless years to come, 50
Whenever Freedom needs a voice,
These sculptured lips shall not be dumb!

The Tent on the Beach

THE TENT ON THE BEACH.

It can scarcely be necessary to name as the two companions whom I reckoned with myself in this poetical picnic, Fields the lettered magnate, and Taylor the free cosmopolite. The long line of sandy beach which defines almost the whole of the New Hampshire sea-coast is especially marked near its southern extremity, by the salt-meadows of Hampton. The Hampton River winds through these meadows, and the reader may, if he choose, imagine my tent pitched near its mouth, where also was the scene of the Wreck of Rivermouth. The green bluff to the northward is Great Boar's Head; southward is the Merrimac, with Newburyport lifting its steeples above brown roofs and green trees on its banks. [Mr. Whittier originally designed following the Decameron method and feigning that each person read his own poem, but abandoned it as too hackneyed.]

I WOULD not sin, in this half-playful strain,—

Too light perhaps for serious years, though born

Of the enforced leisure of slow pain,—

Against the pure ideal which has drawn
My feet to follow its far-shining gleam. 5
A simple plot is mine: legends and runes
Of credulous days, old fancies that have lain

Silent from boyhood taking voice again,
Warmed into life once more, even as the tunes

That, frozen in the fabled hunting-horn,
Thawed into sound:—a winter fireside
dream 11

Of dawns and sunsets by the summer sea,
Whose sands are traversed by a silent throng

Of voyagers from that vaster mystery
Of which it is an emblem;—and the dear Memory of one who might have tuned my
song 16

To sweeter music by her delicate ear.

When heats as of a tropic clime

Burned all our inland valleys through,
Three friends, the guests of summer
time, 20

Pitched their white tent where sea-winds blew.

Behind them, marshes, seamed and crossed

With narrow creeks, and flower-embossed,

Stretched to the dark oak wood, whose leafy arms

Screened from the stormy East the pleasant inland farms. 25

At full of tide their bolder shore

Of sun-bleached sand the waters beat;

At ebb, a smooth and glistening floor
They touched with light, receding
feet.

Northward a green bluff broke the
chain 30

Of sand-hills; southward stretched a
plain

Of salt grass, with a river winding down,
Sail-whitened, and beyond the steeples
of the town,

Whence sometimes, when the wind was
light

And dull the thunder of the beach, 35
They heard the bells of morn and night
Swing, miles away, their silver speech.

Above low scarp and turf-grown wall
 They saw the fort-flag rise and fall ;
 And, the first star to signal twilight's
 hour, 40
 The lamp-fire glimmer down from the tall light-house tower.

They rested there, escaped awhile
 From cares that wear the life away,
 To eat the lotus of the Nile
 And drink the poppies of Cathay,—
 To fling their loads of custom down, 46
 Like drift-weed, on the sand-slopes
 brown,
 And in the sea-waves drown the restless
 pack
 Of duties, claims, and needs that barked
 upon their track.

One, with his beard scarce silvered,
 bore 50
 A ready credence in his looks,
 A lettered magnate, lording o'er
 An ever-widening realm of books.
 In him brain-currents, near and far,
 Converged as in a Leyden jar ; 55
 The old, dead authors thronged him round
 about,
 And Elzevir's gray ghosts from leathern
 graves looked out.

He knew each living pundit well,
 Could weigh the gifts of him or her,
 And well the market value tell 60
 Of poet and philosopher.
 But if he lost, the scenes behind,
 Somewhat of reverence vague and blind,
 Finding the actors human at the best,
 No readier lips than his the good he saw confessed. 65

His boyhood fancies not outgrown,
 He loved himself the singer's art ;
 Tenderly, gently, by his own
 He knew and judged an author's
 heart.
 No Rhadamanthine brow of doom 70
 Bowed the dazed pedant from his room ;
 And bards, whose name is legion, if denied,
 Bore off alike intact their verses and their
 pride.

Pleasant it was to roam about
 The lettered world as he had done, 75
 And see the lords of song without
 Their singing robes and garlands on.
 With Wordsworth paddle Rydal mere,
 Taste rugged Elliott's home-brewed
 beer,
 And with the ears of Rogers, at fourscore,
 Hear Garrick's buskined tread and Walpole's wit once more. 81

And one there was, a dreamer born,
 Who, with a mission to fulfil,
 Had left the Muses' haunts to turn 85
 The crank of an opinion-mill,
 Making his rustic reed of song
 A weapon in the war with wrong,
 Yoking his fancy to the breaking-plough
 That beam-deep turned the soil for truth to spring and grow.

Too quiet seemed the man to ride 90
 The winged Hippogriff Reform ;
 Was his a voice from side to side
 To pierce the tumult of the storm ?
 A silent, shy, peace-loving man,
 He seemed no fiery partisan 95
 To hold his way against the public frown,
 The ban of Church and State, the fierce mob's hounding down.

For while he wrought with strenuous
 will
 The work his hands had found to do,
 He heard the fitful music still 100
 Of winds that out of dream-land blew.
 The din about him could not drown
 What the strange voices whispered
 down ;
 Along his task-field weird processions
 swept,
 The visionary pomp of stately phantoms
 stepped. 105

The common air was thick with
 dreams,—
 He told them to the toiling crowd ;
 Such music as the woods and streams
 Sang in his ear he sang aloud ;
 In still, shut bays, on windy capes, 110
 He heard the call of beckoning shapes,

And, as the gray old shadows prompted him,
To homely moulds of rhyme he shaped their legends grim.

He rested now his weary hands,
And lightly moralized and laughed,
As, tracing on the shifting sands 116
A burlesque of his paper-craft,
He saw the careless waves o'errun
His words, as time before had done,
Each day's tide-water washing clean away,
Like letters from the sand, the work of yesterday. 121

And one, whose Arab face was tanned
By tropic sun and boreal frost,
So travelled there was scarce a land
Or people left him to exhaust, 125
In idling mood had from him hurled
The poor squeezed orange of the world,
And in the tent-shade, as beneath a palm,
Smoked, cross-legged like a Turk, in Oriental calm.

The very waves that washed the sand
Below him, he had seen before 131
Whitening the Scandinavian strand
And sultry Mauritanian shore.
From ice-rimmed isles, from summer
seas

Palm-fringed, they bore him messages;
He heard the plaintive Nubian songs
again, 136
And mule-bells tinkling down the mountain-paths of Spain.

His memory round the ransacked earth
On Puck's long girdle slid at ease;
And, instant, to the valley's girth 140
Of mountains, spice isles of the seas,
Faith flowered in minster stones, Art's guess

At truth and beauty, found access;
Yet loved the while, that free cosmopolite,
Old friends, old ways, and kept his boy-hood's dreams in sight. 145

Untouched as yet by wealth and pride,
That virgin innocence of beach:
No shingly monster, hundred-eyed,
Stared its gray sand-birds out of
reach;

Unhoused, save where, at intervals, 150
The white tents showed their canvas
walls,
Where brief sojourners, in the cool, soft
air,
Forgot their inland heats, hard toil, and year-long care.

Sometimes along the wheel-deep sand
A one-horse wagon slowly crawled,
Deep laden with a youthful band, 156
Whose look some homestead old recalled;
Brother perchance, and sisters twain,
And one whose blue eyes told, more
plain
Than the free language of her rosy lip, 160
Of the still dearer claim of love's relationship.

With cheeks of russet-orchard tint,
The light laugh of their native
rills,
The perfume of their garden's mint,
The breezy freedom of the hills, 165
They bore, in unrestrained delight,
The motto of the Garter's knight,
Careless as if from every gazing thing Hid by their innocence, as Gyges by his ring.

The clanging sea-fowl came and went,
The hunter's gun in the marshes rang; 171
At nightfall from a neighboring tent
A flute-voiced woman sweetly sang.
Loose-haired, barefooted, hand-in-hand,
Young girls went tripping down the
sand; 175
And youths and maidens, sitting in the
moon,
Dreamed o'er the old fond dream from which we wake too soon.

At times their fishing-lines they plied,
With an old Triton at the oar,
Salt as the sea-wind, tough and dried
As a lean cusk from Labrador. 181
Strange tales he told of wreck and storm,—
Had seen the sea-snake's awful form,

And heard the ghosts on Haley's Isle complain,
Speak him off shore, and beg a passage to old Spain ! 185

And there, on breezy morns, they saw
The fishing-schooners outward run,
Their low-bent sails in tack and flaw Turned white or dark to shade and
sun.

Sometimes, in calms of closing day, 190
They watched the spectral mirage play, Saw low, far islands looming tall and
nigh,
And ships, with upturned keels, sail like a sea the sky.

Sometimes a cloud, with thunder black,
Stooped low upon the darkening
main, 195

Piercing the waves along its track
With the slant javelins of rain.

And when west-wind and sunshine
warm

Chased out to sea its wrecks of storm,
They saw the prisms hues in thin spray
showers 200

Where the green buds of waves burst into white froth flowers.

And when along the line of shore
The mists crept upward chill and damp,

Stretched, careless, on their sandy floor
Beneath the flaring lantern lamp, 205

They talked of all things old and new,
Read, slept, and dreamed as idlers do ;
And in the unquestioned freedom of the
tent,

Body and o'er-taxed mind to healthful ease unbent. 209

Once, when the sunset splendors died,
And, trampling up the sloping sand,
In lines outreaching far and wide,
The white-maned billows swept to
land,

Dim seen across the gathering shade,
A vast and ghostly cavalcade, 215
They sat around their lighted kerosene, Hearing the deep bass roar their every pause between.

Then, urged thereto, the Editor
Within his full portfolio dipped,
Feigning excuse while searching for 220
(With secret pride) his manuscript.
His pale face flushed from eye to beard,
With nervous cough his throat he cleared,

And, in a voice so tremulous it betrayed
The anxious fondness of an author's heart,
he read : 225

THE WRECK OF RIVERMOUTH.

The Goody Cole who figures in this poem and The Changeling was Eunice Cole, who for a quarter of a century or more was feared, persecuted, and hated as the witch of Hampton. She lived alone in a hovel a little distant from the spot where the Hampton Academy now stands, and there she died, unattended. When her death was discovered, she was hastily covered up in the earth near by, and a stake driven through her body, to exorcise the evil spirit. Rev. Stephen Bachiler or Batchelder was one of the ablest of the early New England preachers. His marriage late in life to a woman regarded by his church as disreputable induced him to return to England,
where he enjoyed the esteem and favor of Oliver
Cromwell during the Protectorate

RIVERMOUTH Rocks are fair to see,
By dawn or sunset shone across,
When the ebb of the sea has left them
free,

To dry their fringes of gold-green moss :
For there the river comes winding down,
From salt sea-meadows and uplands
brown, 6

And waves on the outer rocks afoam
Shout to its waters, 'Welcome home !'

And fair are the sunny isles in view
East of the grisly Head of the Boar, 10
And Agamenticus lifts its blue
Disk of a cloud the woodlands o'er ;
And southerly, when the tide is down,
'Twixt white sea-waves and sand-hills
brown,

The beach-birds dance and the gray gulls
wheel 15
Over a floor of burnished steel.

Once, in the old Colonial days,
Two hundred years ago and more,
A boat sailed down through the winding
ways

Of Hampton River to that low shore. 20
Full of a goodly company
Sailing out on the summer sea,
Veering to catch the land-breeze light,
With the Boar to left and the Rocks to
right.

In Hampton meadows, where mowers
laid 25
Their scythes to the swaths of salted
grass,

'Ah, well-a-day! our hay must be made!'
A young man sighed, who saw them pass.

Loud laughed his fellows to see him stand
Whetting his scythe with a listless hand,
Hearing a voice in a far-off song, 31
Watching a white hand beckoning long.

45 'Fie on the witch!' cried a merry girl,
As they rounded the point where Goody
Cole

Sat by her door with her wheel atwirl, 35
A bent and bleary-eyed poor old soul.

'Oho!' she muttered, 'ye're brave to-day!
But I hear the little waves laugh and say,
"The broth will be cold that waits at
home;

For it's one to go, but another to come!"'

'She's cursed,' said the skipper; 'speak
her fair: 41

I'm scary always to see her shake
Her wicked head, with its wild gray hair,
And nose like a hawk, and eyes like a
snake.'

But merrily still, with laugh and shout, 45
From Hampton River the boat sailed out, Till the huts and the flakes on Star seemed
nigh,

And they lost the scent of the pines of Rye.

They dropped their lines in the lazy tide,
Drawing up haddock and mottled cod;
They saw not the Shadow that walked beside, 51

They heard not the feet with silence shod.

But thicker and thicker a hot mist grew,
Shot by the lightnings through and
through;

And muffled growls, like the growl of a beast, 55
Ran along the sky from west to east.

Then the skipper looked from the darken-
ing sea

Up to the dimmed and wading sun;
But he spake like a brave man cheerily,
'Yet there is time for our homeward
run.' 60

Veering and tacking, they backward
wore;
And just as a breath from the woods
ashore

Blew out to whisper of danger past,
The wrath of the storm came down at
last!

The skipper hauled at the heavy sail: 65
'God be our help!' he only cried,
As the roaring gale, like the stroke of a flail,

Smote the boat on its starboard side.
The Shoalsmen looked, but saw alone 69
Dark films of rain-cloud slantwise blown,
Wild rocks lit up by the lightning's
glare,

The strife and torment of sea and air.

Goody Cole looked out from her door:
The Isles of Shoals were drowned and
gone,

Scarcely she saw the Head of the Boar 75
Toss the foam from tusks of stone.
She clasped her hands with a grip of
pain,

The tear on her cheek was not of rain:
'They are lost,' she muttered, 'boat and crew!

Lord, forgive me! my words were true!'

Suddenly seaward swept the squall; 81
The low sun smote through cloudy
rack;

The Shoals stood clear in the light, and
all

The trend of the coast lay hard and
black.

But far and wide as eye could reach, 85
No life was seen upon wave or beach;
The boat that went out at morning never Sailed back again into Hampton River.

O mower, lean on thy bended snath,
Look from the meadows green and low:
The wind of the sea is a waft of death, 91
The waves are singing a song of woe!
By silent river, by moaning sea,
Long and vain shall thy watching be:
Never again shall the sweet voice call, 95
Never the white hand rise and fall!

O Rivermouth Rocks, how sad a sight
Ye saw in the light of breaking day!
Dead faces looking up cold and white 99
From sand and seaweed where they lay.
The mad old witch-wife wailed and wept,
And cursed the tide as it backward crept:
'Crawl back, crawl back, blue water-
snake!
Leave your dead for the hearts that break!'

Solemn it was in that old day 105
In Hampton town and its log-built
church,
Where side by side the coffins lay
And the mourners stood in aisle and porch.
In the singing-seats young eyes were dim,
The voices faltered that raised the hymn,
And Father Dalton, grave and stern, 111
Sobbed through his prayer and wept in turn.

But his ancient colleague did not pray;
Under the weight of his fourscore years
He stood apart with the iron-gray 115
Of his strong brows knitted to hide his
tears;
And a fair-faced woman of doubtful fame,
Linking her own with his honored name,
Subtle as sin, at his side withstood
The felt reproach of her neighborhood.

Apart with them, like them forbid, 121
Old Goody Cole looked drearily round,
As, two by two, with their faces hid,
The mourners walked to the burying-
ground.

She let the staff from her clasped hands
fall: 125

'Lord, forgive us! we're sinners all!'
And the voice of the old man answered
her:

'Amen!' said Father Bachiler.⁴⁶

So, as I sat upon Appledore 129
In the calm of a closing summer day,
And the broken lines of Hampton shore
In purple mist of cloudland lay,
The Rivermouth Rocks their story told;
And waves aglow with sunset gold,
Rising and breaking in steady chime, 135
Beat the rhythm and kept the time.

And the sunset paled, and warmed once
more

With a softer, tenderer after-glow;
In the east was moon-rise, with boats off-
shore

And sails in the distance drifting slow.
The beacon glimmered from Portsmouth bar, 141

The White Isle kindled its great red star;
And life and death in my old-time lay
Mingled in peace like the night and day!

'Well!' said the Man of Books, 'your story 145

Is really not ill told in verse.

As the Celt said of purgatory,
One might go farther and fare worse.'

The Reader smiled; and once again
With steadier voice took up his strain,

While the fair singer from the neighboring
tent 151

Drew near, and at his side a graceful listener bent.

THE GRAVE BY THE LAKE.

At the mouth of the Melvin River, which empties into Moultonboro Bay in Lake Winni-pesaukee, is a great mound. The Ojibwe Indians had their home in the neighborhood of the bay, which is plentifully stocked with fish, and many relics of their occupation have been found.

WHERE the Great Lake's sunny smiles
Dimple round its hundred isles,
And the mountain's granite ledge
Cleaves the water like a wedge,
Ringed about with smooth, gray stones, 5
Rest the giant's mighty bones.

Close beside, in shade and gleam,
Laughs and ripples Melvin stream;
Melvin water, mountain-born,
All fair flowers its banks adorn; 10
All the woodland voices meet,
Mingling with its murmurs sweet.

Over lowlands forest-grown,
Over waters island-strown,
Over silver-sanded beach,
Leaf-locked bay and misty reach, 15
Melvin stream and burial-heap,
Watch and ward the mountains keep.

Who that Titan cromlech fills?
Forest-kaiser, lord o' the hills?
Knight who on the birchen tree
Carved his savage heraldry?
Priest o' the pine-wood temples dim,
Prophet, sage, or wizard grim?

Rugged type of primal man,
Grim utilitarian,
Loving woods for hunt and prowl,
Lake and hill for fish and fowl,
As the brown bear blind and dull
To the grand and beautiful: 30

Not for him the lesson drawn
From the mountains smit with dawn.
Star-rise, moon-rise, flowers of May,
Sunset's purple bloom of day,—
Took his life no hue from thence,
Poor amid such affluence?

Haply unto hill and tree
All too near akin was he:
Unto him who stands afar
Nature's marvels greatest are;
Who the mountain purple seeks
Must not climb the higher peaks. 40

Yet who knows, in winter tramp,
Or the midnight of the camp,

What revealings faint and far, 45
Stealing down from moon and star,
Kindled in that human clod
Thought of destiny and God?

Stateliest forest patriarch,
Grand in robes of skin and bark, 50
What sepulchral mysteries,
What weird funeral-rites, were his?
What sharp wail, what drear lament,
Back scared wolf and eagle sent?

Now, whate'er he may have been, 55
Low he lies as other men;
On his mound the partridge drums,
There the noisy blue-jay comes;
Rank nor name nor pomp has he 60
In the grave's democracy.

Part thy blue lips, Northern lake!
Moss-grown rocks, your silence break!
Tell the tale, thou ancient tree!
Thou, too, slide-worn Ossipee!
Speak, and tell us how and when 65
Lived and died this king of men!

Wordless moans the ancient pine;
Lake and mountain give no sign;
Vain to trace this ring of stones;
Vain the search of crumbling bones: 70
Deepest of all mysteries,
And the saddest, silence is.

Nameless, noteless, clay with clay
Mingles slowly day by day;
But somewhere, for good or ill, 75
That dark soul is living still;
Somewhere yet that atom's force
Moves the light-poised universe.

Strange that on his burial-sod
Harebells bloom, and golden-rod, 80
While the soul's dark horoscope
Holds no starry sign of hope!
Is the Unseen with sight at odds?
Nature's pity more than God's?

Thus I mused by Melvin's side, 85
While the summer eventide
Made the woods and inland sea
And the mountains mystery;
And the hush of earth and air
Seemed the pause before a prayer,— 90

Prayer for him, for all who rest,
Mother Earth, upon thy breast,—
Lapped on Christian turf, or hid
In rock-cave or pyramid:
All who sleep, as all who live, 95
Well may need the prayer, 'Forgive!'

Desert-smothered caravan,
Knee-deep dust that once was man,
Battle-trenches ghastly piled,
Ocean-floors with white bones tiled, 100
Crowded tomb and mounded sod,
Dumbly crave that prayer to God.

Oh, the generations old
Over whom no church-bells tolled,
Christless, lifting up blind eyes 105
To the silence of the skies!
For the innumerable dead
Is my soul disquieted.

Where be now these silent hosts?
Where the camping-ground of ghosts? 110
Where the spectral conscripts led
To the white tents of the dead?
What strange shore or chartless sea
Holds the awful mystery?

Then the warm sky stooped to make 115
Double sunset in the lake;
While above I saw with it,
Range on range, the mountains lit;
And the calm and splendor stole
Like an answer to my soul. 120

Hear'st thou, O of little faith,
What to thee the mountain saith,
What is whispered by the trees?—
'Cast on God thy care for these;
Trust Him, if thy sight be dim: 125
Doubt for them is doubt of Him.

'Blind must be their close-shut eyes
Where like night the sunshine lies,
Fiery-linked the self-forged chain
Binding ever sin to pain, 130
Strong their prison-house of will,
But without He waiteth still.

'Not with hatred's undertow
Doth the Love Eternal flow;

Every chain that spirits wear 135
Crumbles in the breath of prayer;
And the penitent's desire
Opens every gate of fire.

'Still Thy love, O Christ arisen,
Yearns to reach these souls in prison! 140
Through all depths of sin and loss
Drops the plummet of Thy cross!
Never yet abyss was found
Deeper than that cross could sound!'

Therefore well may Nature keep 145
Equal faith with all who sleep,
Set her watch of hills around
Christian grave and heathen mound,
And to cairn and kirkyard send Summer's flowery dividend. 150

Keep, O pleasant Melvin stream,
Thy sweet laugh in shade and gleam!
On the Indian's grassy tomb
Swing, O flowers, your bells of bloom!
Deep below, as high above, 155
Sweeps the circle of God's love.

1865,

He paused and questioned with his eye
The hearers' verdict on his song.
A low voice asked: 'Is't well to pry
Into the secrets which belong 160
Only to God?—The life to be
Is still the unguessed mystery:
Unscaled, unpierced the cloudy walls
remain,
We beat with dream and wish the soundless doors in vain. 164

'But faith beyond our sight may go.'
He said: 'The gracious Fatherhood
Can only know above, below,
Eternal purposes of good.
From our free heritage of will,
The bitter springs of pain and ill 170
Flow only in all worlds. The perfect day
Of God is shadowless, and love is love always.'

'I know,' she said, 'the letter kills;
That on our arid fields of strife
And heat of clashing texts distils 175
The dew of spirit and of life.

But, searching still the written Word,
I fain would find, Thus saith the Lord,
A voucher for the hope I also feel
That sin can give no wound beyond love's power to heal.' 180

'Pray,' said the Man of Books, 'give
o'er
A theme too vast for time and place.
Go on, Sir Poet, ride once more
Your hobby at his old free pace.
But let him keep, with step discreet,
The solid earth beneath his feet. 186
In the great mystery which around us
lies,
The wisest is a fool, the fool Heaven-helped is wise.'

The Traveller said: 'If songs have
creeds,
Their choice of them let singers make ;
But Art no other sanction needs 191
Than beauty for its own fair sake.
It grinds not in the mill of use,
Nor asks for leave, nor begs excuse ;
It makes the flexile laws it deigns to
own, 195
And gives its atmosphere its color and its tone.

'Confess, old friend, your austere school
Has left your fancy little chance ;
You square to reason's rigid rule
The flowing outlines of romance. 200
With conscience keen from exercise,
And chronic fear of compromise,
You check the free play of your rhymes,
to clap
A moral underneath, and spring it like a trap.'

The sweet voice answered: 'Better so Than bolder flights that know no check ; 206
Better to use the bit, than throw
The reins all loose on fancy's neck.
The liberal range of Art should be
The breadth of Christian liberty, 210
Restrained alone by challenge and alarm
Where its charmed footsteps tread the border land of harm.

'Beyond the poet's sweet dream lives
The eternal epic of the man.
He wisest is who only gives, 215
True to himself, the best he can ;
Who, drifting in the winds of praise,
The inward monitor obeys ;
And, with the boldness that confesses fear,
Takes in the crowded sail, and lets his conscience steer. 220

'Thanks for the fitting word he speaks,
Nor less for doubtful word unspoken,
For the false model that he breaks,
As for the moulded grace unbroken ;
For what is missed and what remains,
For losses which are truest gains, 226
For reverence conscious of the Eternal
eye,
And truth too fair to need the garnish of
a lie.'

Laughing, the Critic bowed. 'I yield
The point without another word ; 230
Who ever yet a case appealed Where beauty's judgment had been
heard ?
And you, my good friend, owe to me
Your warmest thanks for such a plea,
As true withal as sweet. For my offence
Of cavil, let her words be ample recompense.' 236

Across the sea one lighthouse star,
With crimson ray that came and went,
Revolving on its tower afar,
Looked through the doorway of the tent. 240
While outward, over sand-slopes wet,
The lamp flashed down its yellow jet
On the long wash of waves, with red and
green
Tangles of weltering weed through the white foam-wreaths seen.

"Sing while we may,—another day 245
May bring enough of sorrow ;"—thus
Our Traveller in his own sweet lay,
His Crimean camp-song, hints to us, '47
The lady said. 'So let it be ;
Sing us a song,' exclaimed all three. 250

She smiled: 'I can but marvel at your choice
To hear our poet's words through my poor borrowed voice.'

Her window opens to the bay,
On glistening light or misty gray,
And there at dawn and set of day 255

In prayer she kneels.
'Dear Lord!' she saith, 'to many a
home
From wind and wave the wanderers come;
I only see the tossing foam
Of stranger keels. 260

'Blown out and in by summer gales,
The stately ships, with crowded sails,
And sailors leaning o'er their rails,
Before me glide;
They come, they go, but nevermore, 265
Spice-laden from the Indian shore,
I see his swift-winged Isidore
The waves divide.

'O Thou! with whom the night is day
And one the near and far away, 270
Look out on yon gray waste, and say
Where lingers he.
Alive, perchance, on some lone beach
Or thirsty isle beyond the reach
Of man, he hears the mocking speech 275
Of wind and sea.

'O dread and cruel deep, reveal
The secret which thy waves conceal,
And, ye wild sea-birds, hither wheel
And tell your tale. 280
Let winds that tossed his raven hair
A message from my lost one bear,—
Some thought of me, a last fond prayer
Or dying wail!

'Come, with your dreariest truth shut out 285
The fears that haunt me round about;
O God! I cannot bear this doubt
That stifles breath.
The worst is better than the dread;
Give me but leave to mourn my dead 290
Asleep in trust and hope, instead
Of life in death!'

It might have been the evening breeze
That whispered in the garden trees,
It might have been the sound of seas 295
That rose and fell;
But, with her heart, if not her ear,
The old loved voice she seemed to hear:
'I wait to meet thee: be of cheer,
For all is well!' 300

1865.

The sweet voice into silence went,
A silence which was almost pain
As through it rolled the long lament,
The cadence of the mournful main.
Glancing his written pages o'er, 305
The Reader tried his part once more;
Leaving the land of hackmatack and pine
For Tuscan valleys glad with olive and with vine.

THE BROTHER OF MERCY.

[Suggested by reading C. E. Norton's account]

PIERO LUCA, known of all the town
As the gray porter by the Pitti wall
Where the noon shadows of the gardens
fall,
Sick and in dolor, waited to lay down
His last sad burthen, and beside his mat 5
The barefoot monk of La Certosa sat.

Unseen, insquare and blossoming garden
drifted,
Soft sunset lights through green Val
d'Arno sifted;
Unheard, below the living shuttles shifted Backward and forth, and wove, in love or strife, 10
In mirth or pain, the mottled web of life:
But when at last came upward from the
street
Tinkle of bell and tread of measured feet,
The sick man started, strove to rise in
vain,
Sinking back heavily with a moan of
pain. 15
And the monk said, 'Tis but the Brotherhood
Of Mercy going on some errand good:
Their black masks by the palace-wall
I see.'

Piero answered faintly, 'Woe is me! 19
This day for the first time in forty years
In vain the bell hath sounded in my ears,
Calling me with my brethren of the mask,
Beggar and prince alike, to some new task
Of love or pity,—haply from the street
To bear a wretch plague-stricken, or,
with feet 25

Hushed to the quickened ear and feverish
brain,

To tread the crowded lazaretto's floors,
Down the long twilight of the corridors,
Midst tossing arms and faces full of pain.
I loved the work: it was its own reward.
I never counted on it to offset 31

My sins, which are many, or make less my debt

To the free grace and mercy of our Lord;
But somehow, father, it has come to be
In these long years so much a part of me,
I should not know myself, if lacking it, 36
But with the work the worker too would
die,

And in my place some other self would sit
Joyful or sad,—what matters, if not I?

And now all's over. Woe is me!—'My son,' 40

The monk said soothingly, 'thy work is
done;

And no more as a servant, but the guest
Of God thou enterest thy eternal rest.

No toil, no tears, no sorrow for the lost,
Shall mar thy perfect bliss. Thou shalt sit down 45

Clad in white robes, and wear a golden
crown

Forever and forever.'—Piero tossed
On his sick-pillow: 'Miserable me!

I am too poor for such grand company;
The crown would be too heavy for this
gray 50

Old head; and God forgive me if I say
It would be hard to sit there night and
day,

Like an image in the Tribune, doing
naught

With these hard hands, that all my life
have wrought,

Not for bread only, but for pity's sake. 55
I'm dull at prayers: I could not keep awake,

Counting my beads. Mine's but a crazy
head,

Scarce worth the saving, if all else be
dead.

And if one goes to heaven without a
heart,

God knows he leaves behind his better
part. 60

I love my fellow-men: the worst I know
I would do good to. Will death change me so

That I shall sit among the lazy saints,
Turning a deaf ear to the sore complaints
Of souls that suffer? Why, I never yet 65
Left a poor dog in the strada hard beset,
Or ass o'erladen! Must I rate man less
Than dog or ass, in holy selfishness?

Methinks (Lord, pardon, if the thought be sin!) 69

The world of pain were better, if therein One's heart might still be human, and desires

Of natural pity drop upon its fires
Some cooling tears.'

Thereat the pale monk crossed
His brow, and muttering, 'Madman!
thou art lost!'

Took up his pyx and fled; and, left alone,
The sick man closed his eyes with a great
groan 76

That sank into a prayer, 'Thy will be
done!'

Then was he made aware, by soul or
ear,

Of somewhat pure and holy bending o'er
him,

And of a voice like that of her who bore
him, 80

Tender and most compassionate: 'Never
fear!

For heaven is love, as God Himself is love;
Thy work below shall be thy work above.'
And when he looked, lo! in the stern
monk's place

He saw the shining of an angel's face! 85 1864.

The Traveller broke the pause. 'I've
seen

The Brothers down the long street
steal,

Black, silent, masked, the crowd between,
And felt to doff my hat and kneel
With heart, if not with knee, in prayer,
For blessings on their pious care.' 91
The Reader wiped his glasses: 'Friends
of mine,
We'll try our home-brewed next, instead of foreign wine.'

THE CHANGELING.

For the fairest maid in Hampton
They needed not to search,
Who saw young Anna Favor
Come walking into church,—

Or bringing from the meadows,
At set of harvest-day,
The frolic of the blackbirds,
The sweetness of the hay.

Now the weariest of all mothers,
The saddest two years' bride,
She scowls in the face of her husband,
And spurns her child aside.

'Rake out the red coals, Goodman,—
For there the child shall lie,
Till the black witch comes to fetch her 15
And both up chimney fly.

'It's never my own little daughter,
It's never my own,' she said;
'The witches have stolen my Anna,
And left me an imp instead. 20

'Oh, fair and sweet was my baby,
Blue eyes, and hair of gold;
But this is ugly and wrinkled,
Cross, and cunning, and old.

'I hate the touch of her fingers,
I hate the feel of her skin;
It's not the milk from my bosom,
But my blood, that she sucks in.

'My face grows sharp with the torment;
Look! my arms are skin and bone! 30
Rake open the red coals, Goodman,
And the witch shall have her own.

'She'll come when she hears it crying,
In the shape of an owl or bat,
And she'll bring us our darling Anna 35
In place of her screeching brat.'

Then the Goodman, Ezra Dalton,
Laid his hand upon her head:
'Thy sorrow is great, O woman!
I sorrow with thee,' he said. 40

'The paths to trouble are many,
And never but one sure way
Leads out to the light beyond it:
My poor wife, let us pray.'

Then he said to the great All-Father, 45
'Thy daughter is weak and blind;
Let her sight come back, and clothe her
Once more in her right mind.

5 'Lead her out of this evil shadow,
Out of these fancies wild; 50
Let the holy love of the mother
Turn again to her child.

10 'Make her lips like the lips of Mary
Kissing her blessed Son;
Let her hands, like the hands of Jesus, 55
Rest on her little one.

'Comfort the soul of thy handmaid,
Open her prison-door,
And Thine shall be all the glory
And praise forevermore.' 60

Then into the face of its mother
The baby looked up and smiled;
And the cloud of her soul was lifted,
And she knew her little child.

A beam of the slant west sunshine 65
Made the wan face almost fair,
Lit the blue eyes' patient wonder,
And the rings of pale gold hair.

25 She kissed it on lip and forehead,
She kissed it on cheek and chin, 70
And she bared her snow-white bosom
To the lips so pale and thin.

Oh, fair on her bridal morning
Was the maid who blushed and smiled,
But fairer to Ezra Dalton 75
Looked the mother of his child.

With more than a lover's fondness
He stooped to her worn young face,
And the nursing child and the mother
He folded in one embrace. 80

'Blessed be God!' he murmured.
'Blessed be God!' she said;
'For I see, who once was blinded,—
I live, who once was dead.

'Now mount and ride, my goodman, 85
As thou lovest thy own soul!
Woe's me, if my wicked fancies
Be the death of Goody Cole!'

His horse he saddled and bridled,
And into the night rode he, 90
Now through the great black woodland,
Now by the white-beached sea.

He rode through the silent clearings,
He came to the ferry wide,
And thrice he called to the boatman 95
Asleep on the other side.

He set his horse to the river,
He swam to Newbury town,
And he called up Justice Sewall
In his nightcap and his gown. 100

And the grave and worshipful justice
(Upon whose soul be peace!)
Set his name to the jailer's warrant
For Goodwife Cole's release.

Then through the night the hoof-beats 105
Went sounding like a flail;
And Goody Cole at cockcrow
Came forth from Ipswich jail.
1865.

'Here is a rhyme: I hardly dare
To venture on its theme worn out; 110
What seems so sweet by Doon and Ayr
Sounds simply silly hereabout;
And pipes by lips Arcadian blown
Are only tin horns at our own.

Yet still the muse of pastoral walks with us, 115
While Hosea Biglow sings, our new Theocritus.'

THE MAIDS OF ATTITASH.

Attitash, an Indian word signifying 'huckleberry,' is the name of a large and beautiful lake in the northern part of Amesbury [In a letter to Mr. Fields, Whittier wrote: 'I should like to show thee Attitash, as it is as pretty as St. Mary's Lake which Wordsworth sings, in fact a great deal prettier. The glimpse of the Pawtuckaway range of mountains in Nottingham seen across it is very fine, and it has noble groves of pines and maples and ash trees']

In sky and wave the white clouds swam,
And the blue hills of Nottingham
Through gaps of leafy green
Across the lake were seen,

When, in the shadow of the ash 5
That dreams its dream in Attitash,
In the warm summer weather,
Two maidens sat together.

They sat and watched in idle mood
The gleam and shade of lake and wood; 10
The beach the keen light smote,
The white sail of a boat;

Swan flocks of lilies shoreward lying,
In sweetness, not in music, dying;
Hardhack, and virgin's-bower, 15
And white-spiked clethra-flower.

With careless ears they heard the plash
And breezy wash of Attitash,
The wood-bird's plaintive cry,
The locust's sharp reply. 20

And teased the while, with playful hand,
The shaggy dog of Newfoundland,
Whose uncouth frolic spilled
Their baskets berry-filled.

Then one, the beauty of whose eyes 25
Was evermore a great surprise,
Tossed back her queenly head,
And, lightly laughing, said:

'No bridegroom's hand be mine to hold
That is not lined with yellow gold; 30
I tread no cottage-floor;
I own no lover poor.

'My love must come on silken wings, With bridal lights of diamond rings, Not foul with kitchen smirch, With tallow-dip for torch.'	35	Through the long gold-hazed afternoon, Alone, but for the diving loon, The partridge in the brake, The black duck on the lake,	80
The other, on whose modest head Was lesser dower of beauty shed, With look for home-hearths meet, And voice exceeding sweet,	40	Beneath the shadow of the ash Sat man and maid by Attitash; And earth and air made room For human hearts to bloom.
Answered, 'We will not rivals be; Take thou the gold, leave love to me; Mine be the cottage small, And thine the rich man's hall.		Soft spread the carpets of the sod, And scarlet-oak and golden-rod With blushes and with smiles Lit up the forest aisles.	85
'I know, indeed, that wealth is good; But lowly roof and simple food, With love that hath no doubt, Are more than gold without.'	45	The mellow light the lake aslant, The pebbled margin's ripple-chant Attempered and low-toned, The tender mystery owned.	90
Hard by a farmer hale and young His cradle in the rye-field swung, Tracking the yellow plain With windrows of ripe grain.	50	And through the dream the lovers dreamed Sweet sounds stole in and soft lights streamed; The sunshine seemed to bless, The air was a caress.	95
And still, when'er he paused to whet His scythe, the sidelong glance he met Of large dark eyes, where strove False pride and secret love.	55	Not she who lightly laughed is there, With scornful toss of midnight hair, Her dark, disdainful eyes, And proud lip worldly-wise.	100
Be strong, young mower of the grain; That love shall overmatch disdain, Its instincts soon or late The heart shall vindicate.	60	Her haughty vow is still unsaid, But all she dreamed and coveted Wears, half to her surprise, The youthful farmer's guise!
In blouse of gray, with fishing-rod, Half screened by leaves, a stranger trod The margin of the pond, Watching the group beyond.		With more than all her old-time pride She walks the rye-field at his side, Careless of cot or hall, Since love transfigures all.	105
The supreme hours unnoted come; Unfelt the turning tides of doom; And so the maids laughed on, Nor dreamed what Fate had done,—	65	Rich beyond dreams, the vantage-ground Of life is gained; her hands have found The talisman of old That changes all to gold.	111
Nor knew the step was Destiny's That rustled in the birchen trees, As, with their lives forecast, Fisher and mower passed.	70	While she who could for love dispense With all its glittering accidents, And trust her heart alone, Finds love and gold her own.	115
Erelong by lake and rivulet side The summer roses faded and died, And Autumn's fingers shed The maple's leaves of red.	75

What wealth can buy or art can build Awaits her; but her cup is filled
Even now unto the brim;
Her world is love and him! 120
1866.

The while he heard, the Book-man drew
A length of make-believing face,
With smothered mischief laughing
through:

'Why, you shall sit in Ramsay's place,
And, with his Gentle Shepherd, keep
On Yankee hills immortal sheep, 126
While love-lorn swans and maids the seas beyond
Hold dreamy tryst around your huckleberry-pond.'

The Traveller laughed: 'Sir Galahad
Singing of love the Trouvere's lay! 130
How should he know the blindfold lad
From one of Vulcan's forge-boys?' —
'Nay,

He better sees who stands outside
Than they who in procession ride,'
The Reader answered: 'selectmen and squire 135
Miss, while they make, the show that wayside folks admire.

'Here is a wild tale of the North,
Our travelled friend will own as one
Fit for a Norland Christmas hearth
And lips of Christian Andersen. 140
They tell it in the valleys green
Of the fair island he has seen,
Low lying off the pleasant Swedish shore,
Washed by the Baltic Sea, and watched by Elsinore.'

KALLUNDBORG CHURCH.

'Tie stille, barn min'
Imorgen kommer Fin,
Fa'er din,
Og gi'er dig Esbern Snares tåne og hjerte at lege med 11

Zealand Rhyme.

'BUILD at Kallundborg by the sea
A church as stately as church may be,
And there shalt thou wed my daughter
fair,'
Said the Lord of Nesvek to Esbern Snare.

And the Baron laughed. But Esbern
said, 5
'Though I lose my soul, I will Helva
wed!'

And off he strode, in his pride of will,
To the Troll who dwelt in Ulshoi hill.

'Build, O Troll, a church for me
At Kallundborg by the mighty sea; 10
Build it stately, and build it fair,
Build it quickly,' said Esbern Snare.

But the sly Dwarf said, 'No work is
wrought
By Trolls of the Hills, O man, for naught.
What wilt thou give for thy church so
fair?' 15
'Set thy own price,' quoth Esbern Snare.

'When Kallundborg church is builded
well,

Thou must the name of its builder tell,
Or thy heart and thy eyes must be my boon.' 19

'Build,' said Esbern, 'and build it soon.'
By night and by day the Troll wrought on;
He hewed the timbers, he piled the stone;
But day by day, as the walls rose fair,
Darker and sadder grew Esbern Snare.

He listened by night, he watched by day,
He sought and thought, but he dared not pray; 25
In vain he called on the Elle-maids shy,
And the Neck and the Nis gave no reply.

Of his evil bargain far and wide
A rumor ran through the country-side; 30
And Helva of Nesvek, young and fair,
Prayed for the soul of Esbern Snare.

And now the church was wellnigh done;
One pillar it lacked, and one alone;
And the grim Troll muttered, 'Fool thou art! 35
To-morrow gives me thy eyes and heart!'

By Kallundborg in black despair,
Through wood and meadow, walked
Esbern Snare,
Till, worn and weary, the strong man sank

Under the birches on Ulshoi bank. 40

At his last day's work he heard the Troll
Hammer and delve in the quarry's hole;
'Before him the church stood large and
fair:

'I have builded my tomb,' said Esbern
Snare.

And he closed his eyes the sight to hide,
When he heard a light step at his side:
'O Esbern Snare!' a sweet voice said,
'Would I might die now in thy stead!'

With a grasp by love and by fear made
strong,

He held her fast, and he held her long; 50
With the beating heart of a bird afeard,
She hid her face in his flame-red beard.

'O love!' he cried, 'let me look to-day
In thine eyes ere mine are plucked away;
Let me hold thee close, let me feel thy
heart 55

'Tere mine by the Troll is torn apart!

'I sinned, O Helva, for love of thee!
Pray that the Lord Christ pardon me!'
But fast as she prayed, and faster still,
Hammered the Troll in Ulshoi hill. 60

He knew, as he wrought, that a loving
heart

Was somehow baffling his evil art;
For more than spell of Elf or Troll
Is a maiden's prayer for her lover's soul.

And Esbern listened, and caught the
sound 65

Of a Troll-wife singing underground:

'To-morrow comes Fine, father thine:
Lie still and hush thee, baby mine!

'Lie still, my darling! next sunrise
Thou'lt play with Esbern Snare's heart and eyes!' 70

'Ho! ho!' quoth Esbern, 'is that your game?

Thanks to the Troll-wife, I know his
name!'

The Troll he heard him, and hurried on
To Kallundborg church with the lacking
stone.

'Too late, Gaffer Fine!' cried Esbern
Snare; 75

And Troll and pillar vanished in air!

That night the harvesters heard the sound
Of a woman sobbing underground,
And the voice of the Hill-Troll loud with
blame

Of the careless singer who told his name.

Of the Troll of the Church they sing the rune 81

By the Northern Sea in the harvest moon;
And the fishers of Zealand hear him still Scolding his wife in Ulshoi hill.

And seaward over its groves of birch 85
Still looks the tower of Kallundborg
church,

Where, first at its altar, a wedded pair,
Stood Helva of Nesvek and Esbern Snare!
1865.

'What,' asked the Traveller, 'would our sires,

The old Norse story-tellers, say 90
Of sun-graved pictures, ocean wires,
And smoking steamboats of to-day?

And this, O lady, by your leave,
Recalls your song of yester eve:

Pray, let us have that Cable-hymn once
more.' 95

'Hear, hear!' the Book-man cried, 'the lady has the floor.

'These noisy waves below perhaps

To such a strain will lend their ear,

With softer voice and lighter lapse

Come stealing up the sands to hear,

And what they once refused to do 101

For old King Knut accord to you.

Nay, even the fishes shall your listeners be,
As once, the legend runs, they heard St.
Anthony.'

THE CABLE HYMN.

O LONELY bay of Trinity,

O dreary shores, give ear!

Lean down unto the white-lipped sea

The voice of God to hear!

From world to world His couriers fly, 5

Thought-winged and shod with fire;

The angel of His stormy sky

Rides down the sunken wire.

What saith the herald of the Lord?
'The world's long strife is done;
Close wedded by that mystic cord,
Its continents are one.

'And one in heart, as one in blood,
Shall all her peoples be;
The hands of human brotherhood
Are clasped beneath the sea.

'Through Orient seas, o'er Afric's plain
And Asian mountains borne,
The vigor of the Northern brain
Shall nerve the world outworn.

'From clime to clime, from shore to shore,
Shall thrill the magic thread;
The new Prometheus steals once more
The fire that wakes the dead.'

Throb on, strong pulse of thunder! beat
From answering beach to beach;
Fuse nations in thy kindly heat,
And melt the chains of each!

Wild terror of the sky above,
Glide tamed and dumb below!
Bear gently, Ocean's carrier-dove,
Thy errands to and fro.

Weave on, swift shuttle of the Lord,
Beneath the deep so far,
The bridal robe of earth's accord,
The funeral shroud of war!

For lo! the fall of Ocean's wall
Space mocked and time outrun;
And round the world the thought of all
Is as the thought of one!

The poles unite, the zones agree,
The tongues of striving cease;
As on the Sea of Galilee
The Christ is whispering, Peace!
1858.

'Glad prophecy! to this at last,'
The Reader said, 'shall all things
come.

Forgotten be the bugle's blast,
And battle-music of the drum.
A little while the world may run
Its old mad way, with needle-gun

And ironclad, but truth, at last, shall reign:
The cradle-song of Christ was never sung
in vain!

Shifting his scattered papers, 'Here,'
He said, as died the faint applause,
'Is something that I found last year
Down on the island known as Orr's.
I had it from a fair-haired girl
Who, oddly, bore the name of Pearl, (As if by some droll freak of circumstance,)
Classic, or wellnigh so, in Harriet Stowe's
romance.'

THE DEAD SHIP OF HARPSWELL.

WHAT flecks the outer gray beyond
The sundown's golden trail?
The white flash of a sea-bird's wing,
Or gleam of slanting sail?
Let young eyes watch from Neck and Point,
And sea-worn elders pray,—
The ghost of what was once a ship
Is sailing up the bay!

From gray sea-fog, from icy drift,
From peril and from pain,
The home-bound fisher greets thy lights,
O hundred-harbored Maine!
But many a keel shall seaward turn,
And many a sail outstand,
When, tall and white, the Dead Ship looms
Against the dusk of land.

She rounds the headland's bristling pines;
She threads the isle-set bay;
No spur of breeze can speed her on,
Nor ebb of tide delay.
Old men still walk the Isle of Orr
Who tell her date and name,
Old shipwrights sit in Freeport yards
Who hewed her oaken frame.

What weary doom of baffled quest,
Thou sad sea-ghost, is thine?
What makes thee in the haunts of home
A wonder and a sign?

No foot is on thy silent deck,
 Upon thy helm no hand ;
 No ripple hath the soundless wind
 That smites thee from the land !

For never comes the ship to port,
 Howe'er the breeze may be ;
 Just when she nears the waiting shore
 She drifts again to sea.
 No tack of sail, nor turn of helm,
 Nor sheer of veering side ;
 Stern-fore she drives to sea and night,
 Against the wind and tide.

In vain o'er Harpswell Neck the star
 Of evening guides her in ;
 In vain for her the lamps are lit
 Within thy tower, Seguin :
 In vain the harbor-boat shall hail,
 In vain the pilot call ;
 No hand shall reef her spectral sail,
 Or let her anchor fall.

Shake, brown old wives, with dreary joy,
 Your gray-head hints of ill ;
 And, over sick-beds whispering low,
 Your prophecies fulfil.
 Some home amid yon birchen trees
 Shall drape its door with woe ;
 And slowly where the Dead Ship sails,
 The burial boat shall row !

From Wolf Neck and from Flying Point,
 From island and from main,
 From sheltered cove and tided creek,
 Shall glide the funeral train.
 The dead-boat with the bearers four,
 The mourners at her stern,—
 And one shall go the silent way
 Who shall no more return !

And men shall sigh, and women weep,
 Whose dear ones pale and pine,
 And sadly over sunset seas
 Await the ghostly sign.

They know not that its sails are filled
 By pity's tender breath,
 Nor see the Angel at the helm
 Who steers the Ship of Death !

1866.

'Chill as a down-cast breeze should be,'
 The Book-man said. 'A ghostly touch

The legend has. I'm glad to see
 Your flying Yankee beat the Dutch.'
 'Well, here is something of the sort
 Which one midsummer day I caught
 In Narragansett Bay, for lack of fish.'
 'We wait,' the Traveller said ; 'serve hot or cold your dish.'

THE PALATINE.⁴⁸

Block Island in Long Island Sound, called by the Indians Manisces, the isle of the little god, was the scene of a tragic incident a hundred years or more ago, when The Palatine, an emigrant ship bound for Philadelphia, driven off its course, came upon the coast at this point. A mutiny on board, followed by an inhuman desertion on the part of the crew, had brought the unhappy passengers to the verge of starvation and madness. Tradition says that wreckers on shore, after rescuing all but one of the survivors, set fire to the vessel, which was driven out to sea before a gale which had sprung up. Every twelvemonth, according to the same tradition, the spectacle of a ship on fire is visible to the inhabitants of the island.

LEAGUES north, as fly the gull and auk,
 Point Judith watches with eye of hawk ;
 Leagues south, thy beacon flames, Mon-tauk !

Lonely and wind-shorn, wood-forsaken,
 With never a tree for Spring to waken,
 For tryst of lovers or farewells taken,

Circled by waters that never freeze,
 Beaten by billow and swept by breeze,
 Lieth the island of Manisces,

Set at the mouth of the Sound to hold
 The coast lights up on its turret old,
 Yellow with moss and sea-fog mould.

Dreary the land when gust and sleet
 At its doors and windows howl and beat,
 And Winter laughs at its fires of peat !

But in summer time, when pool and pond,
 Held in the laps of valleys fond,
 Are blue as the glimpses of sea beyond ;

When the hills are sweet with the brier-
rose,
And, hid in the warm, soft dells, uncloso
Flowers the mainland rarely knows; 21

When boats to their morning fishing go,
And, held to the wind and slanting low,
Whitemng and darkening the small sails
show,—

Then is that lonely island fair; 25
And the pale health-seeker findeth there
The wine of life in its pleasant air.

No greener valleys the sun invite,
On smoother beaches no sea-birds light,
No blue waves shatter to foam more
white! 30

There, circling ever their narrow range,
Quaint tradition and legend strange
Live on unchallenged, and know no
change.

Old wives spinning their webs of tow,
Or rocking weirdly to and fro 35
In and out of the peat's dull glow,

And old men mending their nets of twine,
Talk together of dream and sign,
Talk of the lost ship Palatine,—

The ship that, a hundred years before, 40
Freighted deep with its goodly store,
In the gales of the equinox went ashore.

The eager islanders one by one
Counted the shots of her signal gun,
And heard the crash when she drove right on! 45

Into the teeth of death she sped:
(May God forgive the hands that fed
The false lights over the rocky Head!)

O men and brothers! what sights were
there!

White upturned faces, hands stretched in
prayer! 50

Where waves had pity, could ye not spare?

Down swooped the wreckers, like birds of prey

Tearing the heart of the ship away,
And the dead had never a word to say.

And then, with ghastly shimmer and
shine 55
Over the rocks and the seething brine,
They burned the wreck of the Palatine.

In their cruel hearts, as they homeward
sped,

'The sea and the rocks are dumb,' they
said:

'There'll be no reckoning with the dead.'

But the year went round, and when once
more 61

Along their foam-white curves of shore
They heard the linc-storm rave and roar,

Behold! again, with shimmer and shine,
Over the rocks and the seething brine, 65
The flaming wreck of the Palatine!

So, haply in fitter words than these,
Mending their nets on their patient knees,
They tell the legend of Manisees.

Nor looks nor tones a doubt betray; 70
'It is known to us all,' they quietly say;
'We too have seen it in our day.'

Is there, then, no death for a word once spoken?

Was never a deed but left its token
Written on tables never broken? 75

Do the elements subtle reflections give?
Do pictures of all the ages live
On Nature's infinite negative,

Which, half in sport, in malice half,
She shows at times, with shudder or laugh, 80

Phantom and shadow in photograph?

For still, on many a moonless night,
From Kingston Head and from Montauk
light

The spectre kindles and burns in sight.

Now low and dim, now clear and higher,
Leaps up the terrible Ghost of Fire, 86
Then, slowly sinking, the flames expire.

And the wise Sound skippers, though skies be fine,
 Reef their sails when they see the sign
 Of the blazing wreck of the Palatine! 90 1867.

'A fitter tale to scream than sing,'

The Book-man said. 'Well, fancy,
 then,'

The Reader answered, 'on the wing
 The sea-birds shriek it, not for men,
 But in the ear of wave and breeze!' 95
 The Traveller mused: 'Your Manisees
 Is fairy-land: off Narragansett shore
 Who ever saw the isle or heard its name
 before?

'Tis some strange land of Flyaway,
 Whose dreamy shore the ship beguiles, 100

St. Brandan's in its sea-mist gray,
 Or sunset loom of Fortunate Isles!'

'No ghost, but solid turf and rock
 Is the good island known as Block,'

The Reader said. 'For beauty and for ease 105

I chose its Indian name, soft-flowing Manisees!

'But let it pass; here is a bit
 Of unrhymed story, with a hint
 Of the old preaching mood in it,
 The sort of sidelong moral squint 110
 Our friend objects to, which has grown,
 I fear, a habit of my own.

'Twas written when the Asian plague drew near,
 And the land held its breath and paled
 with sudden fear.'

ABRAHAM DAVENPORT.

The famous Dark Day of New England, May 19, 1780, was a physical puzzle for many years to our ancestors, but its occurrence brought something more than philosophical speculation into the minds of those who passed through it. The incident of Colonel Abraham Davenport's sturdy protest is a matter of history.

In the old days (a custom laid aside
 With breeches and cocked hats) the people sent

Their wisest men to make the public laws.
 And so, from a brown homestead, where the Sound

Drinks the small tribute of the Mianas, 5
 Waved over by the woods of Rippowams,
 And hallowed by pure lives and tranquil deaths,

Stamford sent up to the councils of the State

Wisdom and grace in Abraham Davenport. 9

'T was on a May-day of the far old year
 Seventeen hundred eighty, that there fell
 Over the bloom and sweet life of the Spring,

Over the fresh earth and the heaven of
 noon,

A horror of great darkness, like the night
 In day of which the Norland sagas tell,—
 The Twilight of the Gods. The low-hung
 sky 16

Was black with ominous clouds, save where its rim

Was fringed with a dull glow, like that which climbs

The crater's sides from the red hell below.
 Birds ceased to sing, and all the barnyard fowls 20

Roosted; the cattle at the pasture bars
 Lowed, and looked homeward; bats on leathern wings

Flitted abroad; the sounds of labor died;
 Men prayed, and women wept; all ears grew sharp

To hear the doom-blast of the trumpet shatter 25

The black sky, that the dreadful face of Christ

Might look from the rent clouds, not as He looked

A loving guest at Bethany, but stern
 As Justice and inexorable Law.

Meanwhile in the old State House, dim as ghosts, 30

Sat the lawgivers of Connecticut,
 Trembling beneath their legislative robes.
 'It is the Lord's Great Day! Let us adjourn.'

Some said; and then, as if with one
 accord,

All eyes were turned to Abraham Davenport. 35

He rose, slow cleaving with his steady voice

The intolerable hush. 'This well may be The Day of Judgment which the world awaits;

But be it so or not, I only know

My present duty, and my Lord's command 40

To occupy till He come. So at the post Where He hath set me in His providence, I choose, for one, to meet Him face to face,—

No faithless servant frightened from my task,

But ready when the Lord of the harvest calls; 45

And therefore, with all reverence, I would say,

Let God do His work, we will see to ours.

Bring in the candles.' And they brought them in.

Then by the flaring lights the Speaker read,

Albeit with husky voice and shaking hands, 50

An act to amend an act to regulate

The shad and alewife fisheries. Where-upon

Wisely and well spake Abraham Davenport,

Straight to the question, with no figures of speech

Save the ten Arab signs, yet not without The shrewd dry humor natural to the man : 56

His awe-struck colleagues listening all the while,

Between the pauses of his argument, To hear the thunder of the wrath of God

Break from the hollow trumpet of the cloud. 60

And there he stands in memory to this day,

Erect, self-poised, a rugged face, half seen Against the background of unnatural dark,

A witness to the ages as they pass, 64
That simple duty hath no place for fear.
1866.

He ceased: just then the ocean seemed To lift a half-faced moon in sight;

And, shore-ward, o'er the waters gleamed, From crest to crest, a line of light,

Such as of old, with solemn awe, 70
The fishers by Gennesaret saw,

When dry-shod o'er it walked the Son of God,

Tracking the waves with light where'er His sandals trod.

Silently for a space each eye

Upon that su 'den glory turned : 75

Cool from the land the breeze blew by,
The tent-ropes flapped, the long beach churned

Its waves to foam; on either hand

Stretched, far as sight, the hills of sand ;
With bays of marsh, and capes of bush and tree, 80

The wood's black shore-line loomed beyond the meadowy sea.

The lady rose to leave. 'One song,

Or hymn,' they urged, 'before we part.'

And she, with lips to which belong

Sweet intuitions of all art, 85

Gave to the winds of night a strain

Which they who heard would hear again ;

And to her voice the solemn ocean lent,
Touching its harp of sand, a deep accompaniment.

THE WORSHIP OF NATURE.

THE harp at Nature's advent strung

Has never ceased to play ;

The song the stars of morning sung

Has never died away.

And prayer is made, and praise is given, 5

By all things near and far ;

The ocean looketh up to heaven,

And mirrors every star.

Its waves are kneeling on the strand, As kneels the human knee, Their white locks bowing to the sand, The priesthood of the sea !	10	So Nature keeps the reverent frame With which her years began, And all her signs and voices shame The prayerless heart of man.	40
They pour their glittering treasures forth, Their gifts of pearl they bring, And all the listening hills of earth Take up the song they sing.	15	1867.
The green earth sends her incense up From many a mountain shrine ; From folded leaf and dewy cup She pours her sacred wine.	20	The singer ceased. The moon's white rays Fell on the rapt, still face of her. 'Allah ! Allah !' He hath praise From all things,' said the Traveller. 'Oft from the desert's silent nights, 45 And mountain hymns of sunset lights, My heart has felt rebuke, as in his tent The Moslem's prayer has shamed my Christian knee unbent.'
The mists above the morning rills Rise white as wings of prayer ; The altar-curtains of the hills Are sunset's purple air.		He paused, and lo ! far, faint, and slow The bells in Newbury's steeples tolled The twelve dead hours ; the lamp burned low ; 51 The singer sought her canvas fold. One sadly said, 'At break of day We strike our tent and go our way.' But one made answer cheerily, 'Never fear, 55 We'll pitch this tent of ours in type another year.'
The winds with hymns of praise are loud, Or low with sobs of pain, -- The thunder-organ of the cloud, The dropping tears of rain.	26
With drooping head and branches crossed The twilight forest grieves, Or speaks with tongues of Pentecost From all its sunlit leaves.	30
The blue sky is the temple's arch, Its transept earth and air, The music of its starry march The chorus of a prayer.	35

Anti-Slavery Poems

TO WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON.

[Read at the Convention which formed the American Anti-Slavery Society, in Philadelphia, December, 1833.]

CHAMPION of those who groan beneath
Oppression's iron hand :
In view of penury, hate, and death,
I see thee fearless stand.
Still bearing up thy lofty brow,
In the steadfast strength of truth,
In manhood sealing well the vow
And promise of thy youth.

Go on, for thou hast chosen well ;
On in the strength of God !
Long as one human heart shall swell
Beneath the tyrant's rod.
Speak in a slumbering nation's ear,
As thou hast ever spoken,
Until the dead in sin shall hear,
The fetter's link be broken !

I love thee with a brother's love,
I feel my pulses thrill,
To mark thy spirit soar above
The cloud of human ill.
My heart hath leaped to answer thine,
And echo back thy words,
As leaps the warrior's at the shine
And flash of kindred swords !

They tell me thou art rash and vain,
A searcher after fame ;
That thou art striving but to gain
A long-enduring name ;

That thou hast nerved the Afric's hand
And steeled the Afric's heart, 30
To shake aloft his vengeful brand,
And rend his chain apart.

Have I not known thee well, and read
'Thy mighty purpose long ?
And watched the trials which have made
Thy human spirit strong ? 36
And shall the slanderer's demon breath
Avail with one like me,
To dim the sunshine of my faith
And earnest trust in thee ? 40

Go on, the dagger's point may glare
Amid thy pathway's gloom ;
The fate which sternly threatens there
Is glorious martyrdom ! 10
Then onward with a martyr's zeal ; 45
And wait thy sure reward
When man to man no more shall kneel,
And God alone be Lord !

TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

Toussaint L'Ouverture, the black chieftain of Hayti, was a slave on the plantation 'de Libertas,' belonging to M Bayou. When the rising of the negroes took place, in 1791, Toussaint refused to join them until he had aided M Bayou and his family to escape to Baltimore. The white man had discovered in Toussaint many noble qualities, and had instructed him in some of the first branches of education ; and the preservation of his life was owing to the negro's gratitude for this kindness.

In 1797, Toussaint L'Ouverture was appointed, by the French government, General-in-Chief of the armies of St. Domingo, and, as such, signed the Convention with General Maitland for the evacuation of the island by the British. From this period until 1801 the island, under the government of Toussaint, was happy, tranquil, and prosperous. The miserable attempt of Napoleon to re-establish slavery in St. Domingo, although it failed of its intended object, proved fatal to the negro chieftain Treacherously seized by Leclerc, he was hurried on board a vessel by night, and conveyed to France, where he was confined in a cold subterranean dungeon, at Besançon, where, in April, 1803, he died. The treatment of Toussaint finds a parallel only in the murder of the Duke D'Enghien. It was the remark of Godwin, in his Lectures, that the West India Islands, since their first discovery by Columbus, could not boast of a single name which deserves comparison with that of Toussaint L'Ouverture.¹⁹

'T WAS night. The tranquil moonlight smile

With which Heaven dreams of Earth, shed down

Its beauty on the Indian isle,—

On broad green field and white-walled
town;

And inland waste of rock and wood, 5
In searching sunshine, wild and rude,
Rose, mellowed through the silver gleam,
Soft as the landscape of a dream.

All motionless and dewy wet,
Tree, vine, and flower in shadow met : 10
The myrtle with its snowy bloom,
Crossing the nightshade's solemn gloom,—

The white cecropia's silver rind
Relieved by deeper green behind,
The orange with its fruit of gold, 15

The lithe paullinia's verdant fold,
The passion-flower, with symbol holy,
Twining its tendrils long and lowly,
The rhexias dark, and cassia tall,

And proudly rising over all, 20
The kingly palm's imperial stem,
Crowned with its leafy diadem,
Star-like, beneath whose sombre shade,
The fiery-winged cucullo played !

How lovely was thine aspect, then, 25
Fair island of the Western Sea !
Lavish of beauty, even when

Thy brutes were happier than thy men,
For they, at least, were free !

Regardless of thy glorious clime, 30
Unmindful of thy soil of flowers,
The toiling negro sighed, that Time
No faster sped his hours.

For, by the dewy moonlight still,
He fed the weary-turning mill, 35
Or bent him in the chill morass,
To pluck the long and tangled grass,
And hear above his scar-worn back
The heavy slave-whip's frequent crack :
While in his heart one evil thought 40

In solitary madness wrought,
One baleful fire surviving still

The quenching of the immortal mind,
One sterner passion of his kind,
Which even fetters could not kill, 45
The savage hope, to deal, ere long,
A vengeance bitterer than his wrong !

Hark to that cry ! long, loud, and shrill,
From field and forest, rock and hill,
Thrilling and horrible it rang, 50
Around, beneath, above ;

The wild beast from his cavern sprang,
The wild bird from her grove !
Nor fear, nor joy, nor agony

Were mingled in that midnight cry ; 55
But like the lion's growl of wrath,
When falls that hunter in his path
Whose barbed arrow, deeply set,

Is rankling in his bosom yet,
It told of hate, full, deep, and strong, 60
Of vengeance kindling out of wrong ;
It was as if the crimes of years—

The unrequited toil, the tears,
The shame and hate, which liken well
Earth's garden to the nether hell— 65

Had found in nature's self a tongue,
On which the gathered horror hung ;
As if from cliff, and stream, and glen
Burst on the startled ears of men

That voice which rises unto God, 70
Solemn and stern,—the cry of blood !
It ceased, and all was still once more,
Save ocean chafing on his shore,

The sighing of the wind between
The broad banana's leaves of green, 75
Or bough by restless plumage shook,
Or murmuring voice of mountain brook.

Brief was the silence. Once again
Pealed to the skies that frantic yell,

Glowed on the heavens a fiery stain, 80 And flashes rose and fell; And painted on the blood-red sky, Dark, naked arms were tossed on high; And, round the white man's lordly hall, Trod, fierce and free, the brute he made; And those who crept along the wall, 86 And answered to his lightest call With more than spaniel dread, The creatures of his lawless beck, Were trampling on his very neck! 90 And on the night-air, wild and clear, Rose woman's shriek of more than fear; For bloodied arms were round her thrown, And dark cheeks pressed against her own! Then, injured Afric! for the shame 95 Of thy own daughters, vengeance came Full on the scornful hearts of those, Who mocked thee in thy nameless woes, And to thy hapless children gave One choice,—pollution or the grave! 100 Where then was he whose fiery zeal Had taught the trampled heart to feel, Until despair itself grew strong, And vengeance fed its torch from wrong? Now, when the thunderbolt is speeding; Now, when oppression's heart is bleeding; Now, when the latent curse of Time 107 Is raining down in fire and blood, That curse which, through long years of crime, Has gathered, drop by drop, its flood, Why strikes he not, the foremost one, 111 Where murder's sternest deeds are done? He stood the aged palms beneath, That shadowed o'er his humble door, Listening, with half-suspended breath, 115 To the wild sounds of fear and death, Toussaint l'Ouverture! What marvel that his heart beat high! The blow for freedom had been given, And blood had answered to the cry 120 Which Earth sent up to Heaven! What marvel that a fierce delight Smiled grimly o'er his brow of night, As groan and shout and bursting flame Told where the midnight tempest came, With blood and fire along its van, 126 And death behind! he was a Man!	Yes, dark-souled chieftain! if the light Of mild Religion's heavenly ray Unveiled not to thy mental sight 130 The lowlier and the purer way, In which the Holy Sufferer trod, Meekly amidst the sons of crime; That calm reliance upon God For justice in His own good time; 135 That gentleness to which belongs Forgiveness for its many wrongs, Even as the primal martyr, kneeling For mercy on the evil-dealing; Let not the favored white man name 140 Thy stern appeal, with words of blame. Has he not, with the light of heaven Broadly around him, made the same? Yea, on his thousand war-fields striven, And gloried in his ghastly shame? 145 Kneeling amidst his brother's blood, To offer mockery unto God, As if the High and Holy One Could smile on deeds of murder done! As if a human sacrifice 150 Were purer in His holy eyes, Though offered up by Christian hands, Than the foul rites of Pagan lands! . Sternly, amidst his household band, His carbine grasped within his hand, 155 The white man stood, prepared and still, Waiting the shock of maddened men, Unchained, and fierce as tigers, when The horn winds through their caverned lull. And one was weeping in his sight, 160 The sweetest flower of all the isle, The bride who seemed but yesternight Love's fair embodied smile. And, clinging to her trembling knee, Looked up the form of infancy, 165 With tearful glance in either face The secret of its fear to trace. 'Ha! stand or die!' The white man's eye His steady musket gleamed along, As a tall Negro hastened nigh, 170 With fearless step and strong. 'What ho, Toussaint!' A moment more, His shadow crossed the lighted floor. 'Away!' he shouted; 'fly with me, The white man's bark is on the sea; 175
---	---

Her sails must catch the seaward wind,
For sudden vengeance sweeps behind.
Our brethren from their graves have
spoken,

The yoke is spurned, the chain is broken;
On all the hills our fires are glowing, 180
Through all the vales red blood is flowing!

No more the mocking White shall rest
His foot upon the Negro's breast;
No more, at morn or eve, shall drip
The warm blood from the driver's whip:
Yet, though Toussaint has vengeance
sworn 186

For all the wrongs his race have borne,
Though for each drop of Negro blood
The white man's veins shall pour a flood;
Not all alone the sense of ill 190
Around his heart is lingering still,
Nor deeper can the white man feel
The generous warmth of grateful zeal.
Friends of the Negro! fly with me,
The path is open to the sea: 195
Away, for life!' He spoke, and pressed
The young child to his manly breast,
As, headlong, through the cracking cane,
Down swept the dark insurgent train,
Drunken and grim, with shout and yell 200
Howled through the dark, like sounds from hell.

Far out, in peace, the white man's sail
Swayed free before the sunrise gale.

Cloud-like that island hung afar,
Along the bright horizon's verge, 205

O'er which the curse of servile war
Rolled its red torrent, surge on surge;

And he, the Negro champion, where
In the fierce tumult struggled he?

Go trace him by the fiery glare 210
Of dwellings in the midnight air,
The yells of triumph and despair,

The streams that crimson to the sea!
Sleep calmly in thy dungeon-tomb,

Beneath Besançon's alien sky. 215
Dark Haytien! for the time shall come,

Yea, even now is nigh,
When, everywhere, thy name shall be

Redeemed from color's infamy;
And men shall learn to speak of thee 220

As one of earth's great spirits, born
In servitude, and nursed in scorn,

Casting aside the weary weight
And fetters of its low estate,
In that strong majesty of soul 225

Which knows no color, tongue, or
clime,

Which still hath spurned the base control
Of tyrants through all time!

Far other hands than mine may wreath
The laurel round thy brow of death, 230
And speak thy praise, as one whose
word

A thousand fiery spirits stirred,
Who crushed his foeman as a worm,

Whose step on human hearts fell firm:
Be mine the better task to find 235

A tribute for thy lofty mind,
Amidst whose gloomy vengeance shone

Some milder virtues all thine own,
Some gleams of feeling pure and warm,

Like sunshine on a sky of storm, 240
Proofs that the Negro's heart retains
Some nobleness amid its chains,—

That kindness to the wronged is never
Without its excellent reward,

Holy to human-kind and ever 245
Acceptable to God.

1833.

THE SLAVE-SHIPS.

'That fatal, that perfidious bark,
Built 't the eclipse, and rigged with curses dark,'
MILTON'S Lycidas.

'The French ship Le Rodeur, with a crew of twenty-two men, and with one hundred and sixty negro slaves, sailed from Bonny, in Africa, April, 1819. On approaching the line, a terrible malady broke out,—an obstinate disease of the eyes,—contagious, and altogether beyond the resources of medicine. It was aggravated by the scarcity of water among the slaves (only half a wine-glass per day being allowed to an individual), and by the extreme impurity of the air in which they breathed. By the advice of the physician, they were brought upon deck occasionally; but some of the poor wretches, locking themselves in each other's arms, leaped overboard, in the hope, which so universally prevails among them, of being swiftly transported to their own homes in Africa. To check this, the captain ordered several, who were stopped in the attempt, to be shot, or hanged, before their companions. The disease extended to the crew, and one after another were smitten with it, until only one remained unaffected. Yet even this dreadful condition did not preclude calculation to save the expense of supporting slaves rendered unsalable, and to obtain grounds for a claim against the underwriters, thirty-six of the negroes, having become blind, were thrown into the sea and drowned!—Speech of M. Benjamin Constant, in the French Chamber of Deputies, June 17, 1820

In the midst of their dreadful fears lest the solitary individual whose sight remained unaffected should also be seized with the malady, a sail was discovered. It was the Spanish slaver, Leon. The same disease had been there, and, horrible to tell, all the crew had become blind! Unable to assist each other, the vessels parted. The Spanish ship has never since been heard of. The Rodeur reached Guadalupe on the 21st of June, the only man who had escaped the disease, and had thus been enabled to steer the slaver into port, caught it in three days after its arrival—Bibliothèque Ophthalmologique for November, 1819.

'ALL ready?' cried the captain;
'Ay, ay!' the seamen said;
'Heave up the worthless lubbers,—
The dying and the dead.'
Up from the slave-ship's prison
Fierce, bearded heads were thrust:
'Now let the sharks look to it,—
Toss up the dead ones first!'

Corpse after corpse came up,—
Death had been busy there;
Where every blow is mercy,
Why should the spoiler spare?
Corpse after corpse they cast
Sullenly from the ship,
Yet bloody with the traces
Of fetter-link and whip.

Gloomily stood the captain,
With his arms upon his breast,
With his cold brow sternly knotted,
And his iron lip compressed.
'Are all the dead dogs over?'
Growled through that matted lip;
'The blind ones are no better,
Let's lighten the good ship.'

Hark! from the ship's dark bosom,
The very sounds of hell!
The ringing clank of iron,
The maniac's short, sharp yell!
The hoarse, low curse, throat-stifled;
The starving infant's moan,
The horror of a breaking heart
Poured through a mother's groan.

Up from that loathsome prison
The stricken blind ones came:
Below, had all been darkness,
Above, was still the same.
Yet the holy breath of heaven
Was sweetly breathing there,
And the heated brow of fever
Cooled in the soft sea air.

'Overboard with them, shipmates!'
Cutlass and dirk were plied;
Fettered and blind, one after one,
Plunged down the vessel's side.
The sabre smote above,
Beneath, the lean shark lay,
Waiting with wide and bloody jaw
His quick and human prey.

God of the earth! what cries
Rang upward unto Thee?
Voices of agony and blood,
From ship-deck and from sea.
The last dull plunge was heard,
The last wave caught its stain.
And the unsated shark looked up
For human hearts in vain.

Red glowed the western waters,
The setting sun was there,
Scattering alike on wave and cloud
His fiery mesh of hair.
Amidst a group in blindness,
A solitary eye
Gazed, from the burdened slaver's deck,
Into that burning sky.

'A storm,' spoke out the gazer,
'Is gathering and at hand;
Curse on 't, I'd give my other eye
For one firm rood of land.'

And then he laughed, but only
His echoed laugh replied,
For the blinded and the suffering
Alone were at his side. 70

Night settled on the waters,
And on a stormy heaven,
While fiercely on that lone ship's track 75
The thunder-gust was driven.
'A sail!—thank God, a sail!'
And as the helmsman spoke,
Up through the stormy murmur
A shout of gladness broke. 80

Down came the stranger vessel,
Unheeding on her way,
So near that on the slaver's deck
Fell off her driven spray.
'Ho! for the love of mercy,
We're perishing and blind!' 85
A wail of utter agony
Came back upon the wind:

'Help us! for we are stricken
With blindness every one;
Ten days we've floated fearfully,
Unnoting star or sun.
Our ship's the slaver Leon,—
We've but a score on board;
Our slaves are all gone over,—
Help, for the love of God!' 90 95

On livid brows of agony
The broad red lightning shone;
But the roar of wind and thunder
Stifled the answering groan;
Wailed from the broken waters
A last despairing cry,
As, kindling in the stormy light,
The stranger ship went by. 100

In the sunny Guadaloupe
A dark-hulled vessel lay,
With a crew who noted never
The nightfall or the day.
The blossom of the orange
Was white by every stream,
And tropic leaf, and flower, and bird 105
Were in the warm sunbeam. 110

And the sky was bright as ever,
And the moonlight slept as well,
On the palm-trees by the hillside, 115
And the streamlet of the dell:
And the glances of the Creole
Were still as archly deep,
And her smiles as full as ever
Of passion and of sleep. 120

But vain were bird and blossom,
The green earth and the sky,
And the smile of human faces,
To the slaver's darkened eye;
At the breaking of the morning, 125
At the star-lit evening time,
O'er a world of light and beauty
Fell the blackness of his crime.

EXPOSTULATION.

[Originally termed Stanzas, then Follen] Dr Charles Follen, a German patriot, who had come to America for the freedom which was denied him in his native land, allied himself with the abolitionists, and at a convention of delegates from all the anti-slavery organizations in New England, held at Boston in May, 1834, was chairman of a committee to prepare an address to the people of New England Toward the close of the address occurred the passage which suggested these lines:—

'The despotism which our fathers could not bear in their native country is expiring, and the sword of justice in her reformed hands has applied its exterminating edge to slavery. Shall the United States—the free United States, which could not bear the bonds of a king—cradle the bondage which a king is abolishing? Shall a Republic be less free than a Monarchy? Shall we, in the vigor and buoyancy of our manhood, be less energetic in righteousness than a kingdom
in its age?'—Dr Follen's Address

'Genius of America!—Spirit of our free institution!—where art thou? How art thou fallen,
O Lucifer! son of the morning,—how art thou fallen from Heaven! Hell from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming!
The kings of the earth cry out to thee, Aha!
Aha! Art thou become like unto us?'—Speech of Samuel J. May.

OUR fellow-countrymen in chains !
 Slaves, in a land of light and law !
 Slaves, crouching on the very plains
 Where rolled the storm of Freedom's war !

A groan from Eutaw's haunted wood, 5
 A wail where Camden's martyrs fell,
 By every shrine of patriot blood,
 From Moultrie's wall and Jasper's well !

By storied hill and hallowed grot,
 By mossy wood and marshy glen, 10
 Whence rang of old the rifle-shot,
 And hurrying shout of Marion's men !
 The groan of breaking hearts is there,
 The falling lash, the fetter's clank !
 Slaves, slaves are breathing in that air 15
 Which old De Kalb and Sumter drank !

What ho ! our countrymen in chains !
 The whip on woman's shrinking flesh !
 Our soil yet reddening with the stains Caught from her scourging, warm and fresh ! 20
 What ! mothers from their children riven !
 What ! God's own image bought and sold !

Americans to market driven,
 And bartered as the brute for gold !

Speak ! shall their agony of prayer 25
 Come thrilling to our hearts in vain ?
 To us whose fathers scorned to bear
 The paltry menace of a chain ;
 To us, whose boast is loud and long
 Of holy Liberty and Light ; 30
 Say, shall these writhing slaves of
 Wrong
 Plead vainly for their plundered Right ?

What ! shall we send, with lavish breath,
 Our sympathies across the wave,
 Where Manhood, on the field of death, 35
 Strikes for his freedom or a grave ?
 Shall prayers go up, and hymns be sung

For Greece, the Moslem fetter spurning,
 And millions hail with pen and tongue
 Our light on all her altars burning ? 40

Shall Belgium feel, and gallant France,
 By Vendome's pile and Schoenbrunn's
 wall,

And Poland, gasping on her lance,
 The impulso of our cheering call ?
 And shall the slave, beneath our eye, 45
 Clank o'er our fields his hateful chain ?
 And toss his fettered arms on high,
 And groan for Freedom's gift, in vain ?

Oh, say, shall Prussia's banner be
 A refuge for the stricken slave ? 50
 And shall the Russian serf go free
 By Baikal's lake and Neva's wave ?
 And shall the wintry-bosomed Dane
 Relax the iron hand of pride,
 And bid his bondmen cast the chain 55
 From fettered soul and limb aside ?

Shall every flap of England's flag
 Proclaim that all around are free,
 From farthest Ind to each blue crag
 That beetles o'er the Western Sea ? 60
 And shall we scoff at Europe's kings,
 When Freedom's fire is dim with us,
 And round our country's altar clings
 The damning shade of Slavery's curse ?

Go, let us ask of Constantine 65
 To loose his grasp on Poland's throat ;
 And beg the lord of Mahmoud's line
 To spare the struggling Suliote ;
 Will not the scorching answer come 69
 From turbaned Turk, and scornful Russ :
 ' Go, loose your fettered slaves at home,
 Then turn, and ask the like of us ! '

Just God ! and shall we calmly rest,
 The Christian's scorn, the heathen's
 mirth,
 Content to live the lingering jest 75
 And by-word of a mocking Earth ?
 Shall our own glorious land retain
 That curse which Europe scorns to bear ?
 Shall our own brethren drag the chain
 Which not even Russia's menials wear ?

Up, then, in Freedom's manly part, 81
 From graybeard old to fiery youth,
 And on the nation's naked heart
 Scatter the living coals of Truth !

Up ! while ye slumber, deeper yet 85
 The shadow of our fame is growing !
 Up ! while ye pause, our sun may set
 In blood around our altars flowing !

Oh ! rouse ye, ere the storm comes forth,
 The gathered wrath of God and man, 90
 Like that which wasted Egypt's earth,
 When hail and fire above it ran.

Hear ye no warnings in the air ?
 Feel ye no earthquake underneath ?
 Up, up ! why will ye slumber where 95
 The sleeper only wakes in death ?

Rise now for Freedom ! not in strife
 Like that your sterner fathers saw,
 The awful waste of human life,
 The glory and the guilt of war : 100
 But break the chain, the yoke remove,
 And smite to earth Oppression's rod,
 With those mild arms of Truth and Love,
 Made mighty through the living God !

Down let the shrine of Moloch sink, 105
 And leave no traces where it stood ;
 Nor longer let its idol drink
 His daily cup of human blood ;
 But rear another altar there,
 To Truth and Love and Mercy given, 110
 And Freedom's gift, and Freedom's prayer,
 Shall call an answer down from Heaven !
 1834.

HYMN.

Written for the meeting of the Anti-Slavery
 Society, at Chatham Street Chapel, New York, held on the 4th of the seventh month, 1834
 [Originally entitled Lunes.]

O THOU, whose presence went before
 Our fathers in their weary way,
 As with Thy chosen moved of yore
 The fire by night, the cloud by day !

When from each temple of the free, 5
 A nation's song ascends to Heaven,
 Most Holy Father ! unto Thee
 May not our humble prayer be given ?

Thy children all, though hue and form 10
 Are varied in Thine own good will,
 With Thy own holy breathings warm,
 And fashioned in Thine image still.

We thank Thee, Father ! hill and plain
 Around us wave their fruits once more,
 And clustered vine, and blossomed grain,
 Are bending round each cottage door. 16

And peace is here ; and hope and love
 Are round us as a mantle thrown,
 And unto Thee, supreme above,
 The knee of prayer is bowed alone. 20

But oh, for those this day can bring,
 As unto us, no joyful thrill ;
 For those who, under Freedom's wing,
 Are bound in Slavery's fetters still :

For those to whom Thy written word 25
 Of light and love is never given ;
 For those whose ears have never heard
 The promise and the hope of heaven !

For broken heart, and clouded mind,
 Whereon no human mercies fall ; 30
 Oh, be Thy gracious love inclined,
 Who, as a Father, pitiest all !

And grant, O Father ! that the time
 Of Earth's deliverance may be near,
 When every land and tongue and clime 35
 The message of Thy love shall hear ;

When, smitten as with fire from heaven,
 The captive's chain shall sink in dust,
 And to his fettered soul be given
 The glorious freedom of the just ! 40

THE YANKEE GIRL.

SHE sings by her wheel at that low cottage-
 door,

Which the long evening shadow is stretching before,

With a music as sweet as the music which seems

Breathed softly and faint in the ear of our dreams !

How brilliant and mirthful the light of her eye, 5

Like a star glancing out from the blue of the sky !

And lightly and freely her dark tresses
 play

O'er a brow and a bosom as lovely as they !

Who comes in his pride to that low cottage-door,
The haughty and rich to the humble and
poor? 10
'Tis the great Southern planter, the master
who waves
His whip of dominion o'er hundreds of slaves.

'Nay, Ellen, for shame! Let those Yankee fools spin,
Who would pass for our slaves with a change of their skin;
Let them toil as they will at the loom or
the wheel, 15
Too stupid for shame, and too vulgar to feel!

'But thou art too lovely and precious a gem
To be bound to their burdens and sullied
by them;
For shame, Ellen, shame, cast thy bondage
aside,
And away to the South, as my blessing
and pride. 20

'Oh, come where no winter thy footsteps
can wrong,
But where flowers are blossoming all the year long,
Where the shade of the palm-tree is over my home,
And the lemon and orange are white in
their bloom!

'Oh, come to my home, where my servants shall all 25
Depart at thy bidding and come at thy
call;
They shall heed thee as mistress with trembling and awe,
And each wish of thy heart shall be felt
as a law.'

Oh, could ye have seen her—that pride of our girls—
Arise and cast back the dark wealth of her curls, 30
With a scorn in her eye which the gazer
could feel,
And a glance like the sunshine that flashes
on steel!

'Go back, haughty Southron! thy treasures of gold
Are dim with the blood of the hearts thou hast sold;
Thy home may be lovely, but round it
I hear 35
The crack of the whip and the footsteps of fear!

'And the sky of thy South may be brighter than ours,
And greener thy landscapes, and fairer
thy flowers;
But dearer the blast round our mountains
which raves,
Than the sweet summer zephyr which
breathes over slaves! 40

'Full low at thy bidding thy negroes may kneel,
With the iron of bondage on spirit and heel;
Yet know that the Yankee girl sooner would be
In fetters with them, than in freedom with
thee!' 1835.

THE HUNTERS OF MEN.

These lines were written when the orators of the American Colonization Society were demanding that the free blacks should be sent to Africa, and opposing Emancipation unless expatriation followed. See the report of the proceedings of the society at its annual meeting in 1834.

HAVE ye heard of our hunting, o'er mountain and glen,
Through cane-brake and forest, — the
hunting of men?
The lords of our land to this hunting have
gone,
As the fox-hunter follows the sound of the horn;
Hark! the cheer and the hallo! the crack of the whip, 5
And the yell of the hound as he fastens his grip!

All blithe are our hunters, and noble their match,
Though hundreds are caught, there are millions to catch.
So speed to their hunting, o'er mountain
and glen,
Through cane-brake and forest, — the
hunting of men ! 10

Gay luck to our hunters ! how nobly they ride
In the glow of their zeal, and the strength of their pride !
The priest with his cassock flung back on the wind,
Just screening the politic statesman
behind ;
The saint and the sinner, with cursing
and prayer, 15
The drunk and the sober, ride merrily
there.
And woman, kind woman, wife, widow,
and maid,
For the good of the hunted, is lending her aid :
Her foot's in the stirrup, her hand on the rein,
How blithely she rides to the hunting of
men ! 20

Oh, goodly and grand is our hunting to
see,
In this 'land of the brave and this home
of the free.'
Priest, warrior, and statesman, from Georgia to Maine,
All mounting the saddle, all grasping the rein ;
Right merrily hunting the black man, whose sin 25
Is the curl of his hair and the hue of his skin !
Woe, now, to the hunted who turns him
at bay !
Will our hunters be turned from their purpose and prey ?
Will their hearts fail within them ? their nerves tremble, when
All roughly they ride to the hunting of
men ? 30

Ho ! alms for our hunters ! all weary and
faint,
Wax the curse of the sinner and prayer of the saint.
The horn is wound faintly, the echoes are
still,
Over cane-brake and river, and forest and
hill.
Haste, alms for our hunters ! the hunted
once more 35
Have turned from their flight with their backs to the shore :
What right have they here in the home of the white,
Shadowed o'er by our banner of Freedom and Right ?
Ho ! alms for the hunters ! or never again
Will they ride in their pomp to the hunting of men ! 40
Alms, alms for our hunters ! why will ye delay,
When their pride and their glory are melting away ?
The parson has turned ; for, on charge of
his own,
Who goeth a warfare, or hunting, alone ?
The politic statesman looks back with a sigh, 45
There is doubt in his heart, there is fear
in his eye.
Oh, haste, lest that doubting and fear
shall prevail,
And the head of his steed take the place
of the tail.
Oh, haste, ere he leave us ! for who will ride then,
For pleasure or gain, to the hunting of
men ? 50
1835.

STANZAS FOR THE TIMES.

The 'Times' referred to were those evil times of the pro-slavery meeting in Faneuil Hall,
August 21, 1835, in which a demand was made for the suppression of free speech, lest it should endanger the foundation of commercial society.

Is this the land our fathers loved,
The freedom which they toiled to win ?

Is this the soil whereon they moved ?
Are these the graves they slumber in ?
Are we the sons by whom are borne 5
The mantles which the dead have worn ?

And shall we crouch above these graves,
With craven soul and fettered lip ?
Yoke in with marked and branded slaves,
And tremble at the driver's whip ? 10
Bend to the earth our pliant knees,
And speak but as our masters please ?

Shall outraged Nature cease to feel ?
Shall Mercy's tears no longer flow ?
Shall ruffian threats of cord and steel, 15
The dungeon's gloom, the assassin's
blow,
Turn back the spirit roused to save
The Truth, our Country, and the Slave ?

Of human skulls that shrine was made,
Round which the priests of Mexico 20
Before their loathsome idol prayed ;
Is Freedom's altar fashioned so ?
And must we yield to Freedom's God,
As offering meet, the negro's blood ?

Shall tongue be mute, when deeds are
wrought 25
Which well might shame extremest
hell ?

Shall freemen lock the indignant thought ?
Shall Pity's bosom cease to swell ?
Shall Honor bleed ?—shall Truth succumb ?
Shall pen, and press, and soul be dumb ? 30

No ; by each spot of haunted ground,
Where Freedom weeps her children's
fall ;
By Plymouth's rock, and Bunker's mound ;
By Griswold's stained and shattered
wall ;
By Warren's ghost, by Langdon's shade ;
By all the memories of our dead ! 36

By their enlarging souls, which burst
The bands and fetters round them set ;
By the free Pilgrim spirit nursed
Within our inmost bosoms, yet, 40
By all above, around, below,
Be ours the indignant answer,—No !

No ; guided by our country's laws,
For truth, and right, and suffering
man,

Be ours to strive in Freedom's cause, 45
As Christians may, as freemen can !
Still pouring on unwilling ears
That truth oppression only fears.

What ! shall we guard our neighbor still,
While woman shrieks beneath his rod,
And while he tramples down at will 51
The image of a common God ?
Shall watch and ward be round him set,
Of Northern nerve and bayonet ?

And shall we know and share with him 55
The danger and the growing shame ?
And see our Freedom's light grow dim,
Which should have filled the world with flame ?

And, writhing, feel, where'er we turn,
A world's reproach around us burn ? 60

Is 't not enough that this is borne ?
And asks our haughty neighbor more ?
Must fetters which his slaves have worn
Clank round the Yankee farmer's door ?
Must he be told, beside his plough, 65
What he must speak, and when, and how ?

Must he be told his freedom stands
On Slavery's dark foundations strong ;
On breaking hearts and fettered hands,
On robbery, and crime, and wrong ? 70
That all his fathers taught is vain,
That Freedom's emblem is the chain ?

Its life, its soul, from slavery drawn !
False, foul, profane ! Go, teach as well
Of holy Truth from Falsehood born ! 75
Of Heaven refreshed by airs from Hell !
Of Virtue in the arms of Vice !
Of Demons planting Paradise !

Rail on, then, brethren of the South,
Ye shall not hear the truth the less ; 80
No seal is on the Yankee's mouth,
No fetter on the Yankee's press !
From our Green Mountains to the sea,
One voice shall thunder, We are free !

CLERICAL OPPRESSORS.

In the report of the celebrated pro-slavery meeting in Charleston, S C, on the 4th of the ninth month, 1835, published in the Courier of that city, it is stated: 'The clergy of all denominations attended in a body, lending their sanction to the proceedings, and adding by their presence to the impressive character of the scene!'

JUST God! and these are they
Who minister at Thine altar, God of Right!
Men who their hands with prayer and blessing lay
On Israel's Ark of light!

What! preach, and kidnap men? 5
Give thanks, and rob Thy own afflicted poor?
Talk of Thy glorious liberty, and then
Bolt hard the captive's door?

What! servants of Thy own
Merciful Son, who came to seek and save 10
The homeless and the outcast, fettering down
The tasked and plundered slave!

Pilate and Herod, friends!
Chief priests and rulers, as of old, combine!
Just God and holy! is that church, which lends 15
Strength to the spoiler, Thine?

Paid hypocrites, who turn
Judgment aside, and rob the Holy Book
Of those high words of truth which search and burn
In warning and rebuke; 20

Feed fat, ye locusts, feed!
And, in your tasselled pulpits, thank the Lord
That, from the toiling bondman's utter need,
Ye pile your own full board.

How long, O Lord! how long 25
Shall such a priesthood barter truth away,

And in Thy name, for robbery and wrong
At Thy own altars pray?

Is not Thy hand stretched forth
Visibly in the heavens, to awe and smite? 30
Shall not the living God of all the earth,
And heaven above, do right?

Woe, then, to all who grind
Their brethren of a common Father down!
To all who plunder from the immortal mind 35
Its bright and glorious crown!

Woe to the priesthood! woe
To those whose hire is with the price of blood;
Perverting, darkening, changing, as they go,
The searching truths of God! 40

Their glory and their might Shall perish; and their very names shall be Vile before all the people, in the light
Of a world's liberty.

Oh, speed the moment on 45
When Wrong shall cease, and Liberty and Love
And Truth and Right throughout the earth be known
As in their home above.
1836.

A SUMMONS.

Written on the adoption of Pinckney's Resolutions in the House of Representatives, and the passage of Calhoun's 'Bill for excluding Papers written or printed, touching the subject of Slavery, from the U. S. Post-office,' in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. Pinckney's resolutions were in brief that Congress had no authority to interfere in any way with slavery in the States; that it ought not to interfere with it in the District of Columbia, and that all resolutions to that end should be laid on the table without printing Mr. Calhoun's bill made it a penal offence for postmasters in any State, District, or Territory 'knowingly to deliver, to any person whatever, any pamphlet, newspaper, handbill, or other printed paper or pictorial representation, touching the subject of slavery, where, by the laws of the said State, District, or Territory, their circulation was prohibited.' [Originally entitled Lines.]

MEN of the North-land ! where's the manly spirit

Of the true-hearted and the unshackled
gone ?

Sons of old freemen, do we but inherit
Their names alone ?

Is the old Pilgrim spirit quenched within us, 5

Stoops the strong manhood of our souls
so low,

That Mammon's lure or Party's wile can win us

To silence now ?

Now, when our land to ruin's brink is verging,

In God's name, let us speak while there is time ! 10

Now, when the padlocks for our lips are forging,

Silence is crime !

What ! shall we henceforth humbly ask as favors

Rights all our own ? In madness shall we barter,

For treacherous peace, the freedom Nature gave us, 15

God and our charter ?

Here shall the statesman forge his human fetters,

Here the false jurist human rights deny,
And in the church, their proud and skilled abettors

Make truth a lie ? 20

Torture the pages of the hallowed Bible,
To sanction crime, and robbery, and
blood ?

And, in Oppression's hateful service, libel
Both man and God ?

Shall our New England stand erect no longer, 25

But stoop in chains upon her downward
way,

Thicker to gather on her limbs and stronger
Day after day ?

Oh no ; methinks from all her wild, green
mountains ;

From valleys where her slumbering fathers lie ; 30

From her blue rivers and her welling
fountains,

And clear, cold sky ;

From her rough coast, and isles, which hungry Ocean

Gnaws with his surges ; from the fisher's skiff,

With white sail swaying to the billow's motion 35

Round rock and cliff ;

From the free fireside of her unbought
farmer ;

From her free laborer at his loom and
wheel ;

From the brown smith-shop, where, beneath the hammer,

Rings the red steel ; 40

From each and all, if God hath not forsaken

Our land, and left us to an evil choice, Loud as the summer thunderbolt shall waken

A People's voice.

Startling and stern ! the Northern winds shall bear it 45

Over Potomac's to St. Mary's wave ;
And buried Freedom shall awake to hear it

Within her grave.

Oh, let that voice go forth ! The bondman sighing

By Santee's wave, in Mississippi's cane,
Shall feel the hope, within his bosom dying, 51

Revive again.

Let it go forth! The millions who are gazing

Sadly upon us from afar shall smile,
And unto God devout thanksgiving raising, 55

Bless us the while.

Oh for your ancient freedom, pure and
holy,

For the deliverance of a groaning earth,
For the wronged captive, bleeding,
crushed, and lowly,

Let it go forth! 60

Sons of the best of fathers! will ye falter
With all they left ye perilled and at stake?

Ho! once again on Freedom's holy altar
The fire awake!

Prayer-strengthened for the trial, come together, 65

Put on the harness for the moral fight,
And, with the blessing of your Heavenly Father,

Maintain the right!

* 1836.

TO THE MEMORY OF THOMAS. SHIPLEY.

Thomas Shipley of Philadelphia was a lifelong Christian philanthropist, and advocate of emancipation. At his funeral thousands of colored people came to take their last look at their friend and protector. He died September 17, 1836.

GONE to thy Heavenly Father's rest!

The flowers of Eden round thee blowing,
And on thine ear the murmurs blest
Of Siloa's waters softly flowing!

Beneath that Tree of Life which gives 5
To all the earth its healing leaves
In the white robe of angels clad,

And wandering by that sacred river,
Whose streams of holiness make glad
The city of our God forever! 10

Gentlest of spirits! not for thee
Our tears are shed, our sighs are given;
Why mourn to know thou art a free
Partaker of the joys of heaven?

Finished thy work, and kept thy faith 15
In Christian firmness unto death;

And beautiful as sky and earth,
When autumn's sun is downward going,
The blessed memory of thy worth
Around thy place of slumber glowing!

But woe for us! who linger still 21
With feebler strength and hearts less lowly,

And minds less steadfast to the will
Of Him whose every work is holy.
For not like thine, is crucified 25

The spirit of our human pride:
And at the bondman's tale of woe,
And for the outcast and forsaken,
Not warm like thine, but cold and slow,
Our weaker sympathies awaken. 30

Darkly upon our struggling way
The storm of human hate is sweeping;
Hunted and branded, and a prey,

Our watch amidst the darkness keeping,
Oh, for that hidden strength which can
Nerve unto death the inner man! 36

Oh, for thy spirit, tried and true,
And constant in the hour of trial,
Prepared to suffer, or to do,

In meekness and in self-denial. 40

Oh, for that spirit, meek and mild,
Dered, spurned, yet uncomplaining;
By man deserted and reviled,

Yet faithful to its trust remaining.
Still prompt and resolute to save 45
From scourge and chain the hunted
slave;

Unwavering in the Truth's defence,
Even where the fires of Hate were burn-
ing,

The unquailing eye of innocence
Alone upon the oppressor turning! 50

O loved of thousands! to thy grave,
Sorrowing of heart, thy brethren bore
thee.

The poor man and the rescued slave Wept as the broken earth closed o'er
thee;

And grateful tears, like summer rain, 55
Quickened its dying grass again!

And there, as to some pilgrim-shrine,
Shall come the outcast and the lowly,
Of gentle deeds and words of thine
Recalling memories sweet and holy ! 60

Oh, for the death the righteous die !
An end, like autumn's day declining,
On human hearts, as on the sky,
With holier, tenderer beauty shining ;
As to the parting soul were given 65
The radiance of an opening heaven !
As if that pure and blessed light,
From off the Eternal altar flowing,
Were bathing, in its upward flight,
The spirit to its worship going ! 70
1836.

THE MORAL WARFARE.

WHEN Freedom, on her natal day,
Within her war-rocked cradle lay,
An iron race around her stood,
Baptized her infant brow in blood ;
And, through the storm which round her
swept, 5
Their constant ward and watching kept.

Then, where our quiet herds repose,
The roar of baleful battle rose,
And brethren of a common tongue
To mortal strife as tigers sprung, 10
And every gift on Freedom's shrine
Was man for beast, and blood for wine !

Our fathers to their graves have gone ;
Their strife is past, their triumph won ;
But sterner trials wait the race 15
Which rises in their honored place ;
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.

So let it be. In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight, 20
And, strong in Him whose cause is ours
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons He has given,—
The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.

RITNER.

Written on reading the Message of Governor
Ritner, of Pennsylvania, 1836. The fact redounds to the credit and serves to perpetuate the memory of the independent farmer and highsouled statesman, that he alone of all the Governors of the Union in 1836 met the insulting demands and menaces of the South in a manner becoming a freeman and hater of Slavery, in his message to the Legislature of Pennsylvania.
[Originally entitled Lines]

THANK God for the token ! one lip is still
free,
One spirit untrammelled, unbending one
knee !
Like the oak of the mountain, deep-rooted and firm,
Erect, when the multitude bends to the
storm ;
When traitors to Freedom, and Honor,
and God, 5
Are bowed at an Idol polluted with blood ;
When the recreant North has forgotten
her trust,
And the lip of her honor is low in the dust,—
Thank God, that one arm from the shackle has broken !
Thank God, that one man as a freeman has spoken ! 10
O'er thy crags, Alleghany, a blast has been
blown !
Down thy tide, Susquehanna, the murmur has gone !
To the land of the South, of the charter
and chain,
Of Liberty sweetened with Slavery's
pain ;
Where the cant of Democracy dwells on the lips 15
Of the forgers of fetters, and wielders of whips !
Where 'chivalric' honor means really no
more
Than scourging of women, and robbing the poor !
Where the Moloch of Slavery sitteth on
high,
And the words which he utters, are—
Worship, or die ! 20

Right onward, oh, speed it! Wherever the blood
Of the wronged and the guiltless is crying
to God;
Wherever a slave in his fetters is pining;
Wherever the lash of the driver is twin-
ing;
Wherever from kindred, torn rudely
apart, 25
Comes the sorrowful wail of the broken
of heart;
Wherever the shackles of tyranny bind,
In silence and darkness, the God-given
mind;
There, God speed it onward! its truth
will be felt,
The bonds shall be loosened, the iron shall melt! 30
And oh, will the land where the free soul
of Penn
Still lingers and breathes over mountain
and glen;
Will the land where a Benezet's spirit
went forth
To the peeled and the meted, and outcast
of Earth;
Where the words of the Charter of Liberty
first 35
From the soul of the sage and the patriot burst;
Where first for the wronged and the weak
of their kind,
The Christian and statesman their efforts
combined;
Will that land of the free and the good wear a chain?
Will the call to the rescue of Freedom be
vain? 40
No, Ritner! her 'Friends' at thy warning shall stand
Erect for the truth, like their ancestral
band;
Forgetting the feuds and the strife of past
time,
Counting coldness injustice, and silence
a crime;
Turning back from the cavil of creeds, to unite 45
Once again for the poor in defence of the Right;

Breasting calmly, but firmly, the full tide
of Wrong,
Overwhelmed, but not borne on its surges
along;
Unappalled by the danger, the shame,
and the pain,
And counting each trial for Truth as their
gain! 50
And that bold-hearted yeomanry, honest
and true,
Who, haters of fraud, give to labor its
due;
Whose fathers, of old, sang in concert
with thine,
On the banks of Swetara, the songs of the Rhine,—
The German-born pilgrims, who first dared to brave 55
The scorn of the proud in the cause of the
slave;
Will the sons of such men yield the lords
of the South
One brow for the brand, for the padlock
one mouth?
They cater to tyrants? They rivet the
chain,
Which their fathers smote off, on the negro again? 60
No, never! one voice, like the sound in
the cloud,
When the roar of the storm waxes loud
and more loud,
Wherever the foot of the freeman hath pressed
From the Delaware's marge to the Lake of the West,
On the South-going breezes shall deepen and grow 65
Till the land it sweeps over shall tremble
below!
The voice of a people, uprisen, awake,
Pennsylvania's watchword, with Freedom
at stake,
Thrilling up from each valley, flung down
from each height,
'Our Country and Liberty! God for the Right!' 70

THE PASTORAL LETTER.

The General Association of Congregational ministers in Massachusetts met at Brookfield, June 27, 1837, and issued a Pastoral Letter to the churches under its care. The immediate occasion of it was the profound sensation produced by the recent public lecture in Massachusetts by Angelina and Sarah Grimké, two noble women from South Carolina, who bore their testimony against slavery. The Letter demanded that 'the perplexed and agitating subjects which are now common amongst us . . . should not be forced upon any church as matters for debate, at the hazard of alienation and division,' and called attention to the dangers now seeming 'to threaten the female character with widespread and permanent injury'

So, this is all,—the utmost reach

Of priestly power the mind to fetter !

When laymen think, when women preach,

A war of words, a 'Pastoral Letter !'

Now, shame upon ye, parish Popes ! 5

Was it thus with those, your predecessors,

Who sealed with racks, and fire, and ropes

Their loving-kindness to transgressors ?

A 'Pastoral Letter,' grave and dull ;

Alas ! in hoof and horns and features, 10

How different is your Brookfield bull

From him who bellows from St. Peter's !

Your pastoral rights and powers from harm,

Think ye, can words alone preserve them ?

Your wiser fathers taught the arm 15

And sword of temporal power to serve them.

Oh, glorious days, when Church and State

Were wedded by your spiritual fathers !

And on submissive shoulders sat

Your Wilsons and your Cotton Mathers.

No vile 'itinerant' then could mar 21

The beauty of your tranquil Zion,

But at his peril of the scar

Of hangman's whip and branding-iron.

Then, wholesome laws relieved the Church

Of heretic and mischief-maker, 26

And priest and bailiff joined in search,

By turns, of Papist, witch, and Quaker !

The stocks were at each church's door,

The gallows stood on Boston Common,

A Papist's ears the pillory bore,— 31

The gallows-rope, a Quaker woman !

Your fathers dealt not as ye deal

With 'non-professing' frantic teachers ;

They bored the tongue with red-hot steel,

And flayed the backs of 'female preachers.' 36

Old Hampton, had her fields a tongue,

And Salem's streets could tell their story,

Of fainting woman dragged along,

Gashed by the whip accursed and gory !

And will ye ask me, why this taunt 41

Of memories sacred from the scorner ?

And why with reckless hand I plant

A nettle on the graves ye honor ?

Not to reproach New England's dead 45

This record from the past I summon,

Of manhood to the scaffold led,

And suffering and heroic woman.

No, for yourselves alone, I turn

The pages of intolerance over, 50

That, in their spirit, dark and stern,

Ye haply may your own discover !

For, if ye claim the 'pastoral right'

To silence Freedom's voice of warning,

And from your precincts shut the light 55

Of Freedom's day around ye dawning ;

If when an earthquake voice of power

And signs in earth and heaven are showing

That forth, in its appointed hour,

The Spirit of the Lord is going ! 60

And, with that Spirit, Freedom's light

On kindred, tongue, and people breaking,

Whose slumbering millions, at the sight,

In glory and in strength are waking !

When for the sighing of the poor, 65
 And for the needy, God hath risen,
 And chains are breaking, and a door
 Is opening for the souls in prison !
 If then ye would, with puny hands,
 Arrest the very work of Heaven, 70
 And bind anew the evil bands
 Which God's right arm of power hath
 riven ;

What marvel that, in many a mind,
 Those darker deeds of bigot madness
 Are closely with your own combined, 75
 Yet 'less in anger than in sadness' ?
 What marvel, if the people learn
 To claim the right of free opinion ?
 What marvel, if at times they spurn
 The ancient yoke of your dominion ? 80

A glorious remnant linger yet,
 Whose lips are wet at Freedom's foun-
 tains,
 The coming of whose welcome feet
 Is beautiful upon our mountains !
 Men, who the gospel tidings bring 85
 Of Liberty and Love forever,
 Whose joy is an abiding spring,
 Whose peace is as a gentle river !

But ye, who scorn the thrilling tale
 Of Carolina's high-souled daughters, 90
 Which echoes here the mournful wail
 Of sorrow from Edisto's waters,
 Close while ye may the public ear,
 With malice vex, with slander wound
 them,
 The pure and good shall throng to
 hear, 95
 And tried and manly hearts surround
 them.

Oh, ever may the power which led
 Their way to such a fiery trial,
 And strengthened womanhood to tread
 The wine-press of such self-denial, 100
 Be round them in an evil land,
 With wisdom and with strength from
 Heaven,
 With Miriam's voice, and Judith's hand,
 And Deborah's song, for triumph given !

And what are ye who strive with God 105
 Against the ark of His salvation,
 Moved by the breath of prayer abroad,
 With blessings for a dying nation ?
 What, but the stubble and the hay
 To perish, even as flax consuming, 110
 With all that bars His glorious way,
 Before the brightness of His coming ?

And thou, sad Angel, who so long
 Hast waited for the glorious token,
 That Earth from all her bonds of wrong
 To liberty and light has broken, — 116
 Angel of Freedom ! soon to thee
 The sounding trumpet shall be given,
 And over Earth's full jubilee
 Shall deeper joy be felt in Heaven ! 120

HYMN.

Written for the celebration of the third anniversary of British emancipation, at the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, first of August, 1837.
 [Originally entitled Lines.]

O HOLY FATHER ! just and true
 Are all Thy works and words and ways,
 And unto Thee alone are due
 Thanksgiving and eternal praise !
 As children of Thy gracious care, 5
 We veil the eye, we bend the knee,
 With broken words of praise and prayer,
 Father and God, we come to Thee.

For Thou hast heard, O God of Right,
 The sighing of the island slave ; 10
 And stretched for him the arm of might,
 Not shortened that it could not save.
 The laborer sits beneath his vine,
 The shackled soul and hand are free ;
 Thanksgiving ! for the work is Thine ! 15
 Praise ! for the blessing is of Thee !

And oh, we feel Thy presence here,
 Thy awful arm in judgment bare !
 Thine eye hath seen the bondman's tear ;
 Thine ear hath heard the bondman's
 prayer. 20

Praise! for the pride of man is low,
The counsels of the wise are naught,
The fountains of repentance flow;
What hath our God in mercy wrought?

Speed on Thy work, Lord God of Hosts! 25
And when the bondman's chain is
riven,

And swells from all our guilty coasts
The anthem of the free to Heaven,
Oh, not to those whom Thou hast led,
As with Thy cloud and fire before, 30
But unto Thee, in fear and dread,
Be praise and glory evermore.

THE FAREWELL

OF A VIRGINIA SLAVE MOTHER TO HER DAUGHTERS SOLD INTO SOUTHERN BONDAGE.

GONE, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone.
Where the slave-whip ceaseless swings,
Where the noisome insect stings,
Where the fever demon strews 5
Poison with the falling dew,
Where the sickly sunbeams glare
Through the hot and misty air;
Gone, gone,—sold and gone, 10
To the rice-swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters!

Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone.
There no mother's eye is near them, 15
There no mother's ear can hear them;
Never, when the torturing lash
Seams their back with many a gash,
Shall a mother's kindness bless them,
Or a mother's arms caress them. 20
Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters!

Gone, gone,—sold and gone, 25
To the rice-swamp dank and lone.
Oh, when weary, sad, and slow,
From the fields at night they go,

Faint with toil, and racked with pain,
To their cheerless homes again, 30
There no brother's voice shall greet
them;

There no father's welcome meet them.
Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters; 35
Woe is me, my stolen daughters!

Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone.
From the tree whose shadow lay
On their childhood's place of play; 40
From the cool spring where they drank;
Rock, and hill, and rivulet bank;
From the solemn house of prayer,
And the holy counsels there;
Gone, gone,—sold and gone, 45
To the rice-swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters!

Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone; 50
Toiling through the weary day,
And at night the spoiler's prey.
Oh, that they had earlier died,
Sleeping calmly, side by side,
Where the tyrant's power is o'er, 55
And the fetter galls no more!
Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters! 60

Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone.
By the holy love He beareth;
By the bruised reed He spareth;
Oh, may He, to whom alone 65
All their cruel wrongs are known,
Still their hope and refuge prove,
With a more than mother's love.
Gone, gone,—sold and gone,
To the rice-swamp dank and lone, 70
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters!

PENNSYLVANIA HALL.

Read at the dedication of Pennsylvania Hall, Philadelphia, May 15, 1838. The building was erected by an association of gentlemen, irrespective of sect or party, 'that the citizens of Philadelphia should possess a room wherein the principles of Liberty, and Equality of Civil Rights, could be freely discussed, and the evils of slavery fearlessly portrayed.' On the evening of the 17th it was burned by a mob, destroying the office of the Pennsylvania Freeman, of which I was editor, and with it my books and papers.

Not with the splendors of the days of old,
The spoil of nations, and barbaric gold ;
No weapons wrested from the fields of
blood,

Where dark and stern the unyielding
Roman stood,

And the proud eagles of his cohorts saw 5
A world, war-wasted, crouching to his
law ;

Nor blazoned car, nor banners floating
gay,

Like those which swept along the Appian
Way,

When, to the welcome of imperial Rome,
The victor warrior came in triumph home,
And trumpet peal, and shoutings wild and high, 11

Stirred the blue quiet of the Italian sky ;
But calm and grateful, prayerful and sincere,

As Christian freemen only, gathering here,
We dedicate our fair and lofty Hall, 15
Pillar and arch, entablature and wall,
As Virtue's shrine, as Liberty's abode,
Sacred to Freedom, and to Freedom's
God !

Far statelier Halls, 'neath brighter skies than these,

Stood darkly mirrored in the Ægean seas,
Pillar and shrine, and life-like statues
seen, 21

Graceful and pure, the marble shafts
between ;

Where glorious Athens from her rocky
hill

Saw Art and Beauty subject to her will ;

And the chaste temple, and the classic grove, 25

The hall of sages, and the bowers of love,
Arch, fane, and column, graced the shores,
and gave

Their shadows to the blue Saronic wave ;
And statelier rose, on Tiber's winding
side,

The Pantheon's dome, the Coliseum's
pride, 30

The Capitol, whose arches backward flung
The deep, clear cadence of the Roman
tongue,

Whence stern decrees, like words of fate,
went forth

To the awed nations of a conquered earth,
Where the proud Caesars in their glory
came, 35

And Brutus lightened from his lips of
flame !

Yet in the porches of Athena's halls,
And in the shadow of her stately walls,
Lurked the sad bondman, and his tears
of woe

Wet the cold marble with unheeded flow ;
And fetters clanked beneath the silver dome 41

Of the proud Pantheon of imperious Rome.
Oh, not for him, the chained and stricken
slave,

By Tiber's shore, or blue Ægina's wave,
In the thronged forum, or the sages' seat,
The bold lip pleaded, and the warm heart beat ; 46

No soul of sorrow melted at his pain,
No tear of pity rusted on his chain !

But this fair Hall to Truth and Freedom
given,

Pledged to the Right before all Earth
and Heaven, 50

A free arena for the strife of mind,
To caste, or sect, or color unconfined,
Shall thrill with echoes such as ne'er of old
From Roman hall or Grecian temple
rolled ;

Thoughts shall find utterance such as never yet 55

The Propyleæ or the Forum met.
Beneath its roof no gladiator's strife
Shall win applauses with the waste of life ;

No lordly licitor urge the barbarous game,
 No wanton Lais glory in her shame. 60
 But here the tear of sympathy shall flow,
 As the ear listens to the tale of woe;
 Here in stern judgment of the oppressor's
 wrong
 Shall strong rebukings thrill on Freedom's
 tongue, 64
 No partial justice hold th' unequal scale,
 No pride of caste a brother's rights assail,
 No tyrant's mandates echo from this wall,
 Holy to Freedom and the Rights of All!
 But a fair field, where mind may close with mind,
 Free as the sunshine and the chainless
 wind; 70
 Where the high trust is fixed on Truth
 alone,
 And bonds and fetters from the soul are
 thrown;
 Where wealth, and rank, and worldly pomp, and might,
 Yield to the presence of the True and
 Right.

And fitting is it that this Hall should stand 75
 Where Pennsylvania's Founder led his
 band,
 From thy blue waters, Delaware!—to press
 The virgin verdure of the wilderness.
 Here, where all Europe with amazement
 saw
 The soul's high freedom trammelled by no law; 80
 Here, where the fierce and warlike forest-
 men
 Gathered, in peace, around the home of Penn,
 Awd by the weapons Love alone had
 given
 Drawn from the holy armory of Heaven;
 Where Nature's voice against the bond-
 man's wrong 85
 First found an earnest and indignant
 tongue;
 Where Lay's bold message to the proud was borne;
 And Keith's rebuke, and Franklin's manly scorn!

Fitting it is that here, where Freedom
 first
 From her fair feet shook off the Old
 World's dust, 90
 Spread her white pinions to our Western
 blast,
 And her free tresses to our sunshine cast,
 One Hall should rise redeemed from Slavery's ban,
 One Temple sacred to the Rights of Man!

Oh! if the spirits of the parted come, 95
 Visting angels, to their olden home;
 If the dead fathers of the land look forth
 From their fair dwellings, to the things of
 earth,
 Is it a dream, that with their eyes of love,
 They gaze now on us from the bowers
 above? 100
 Lay's ardent soul, and Benezet the mild,
 Steadfast in faith, yet gentle as a child,
 Meek-hearted Woolman, and that brother-
 band,
 The sorrowing exiles from their 'Father-
 land,'
 Leaving their homes in Krieshiem's bowers
 of vine, 105
 And the blue beauty of their glorious
 Rhine,
 To seek amidst our solemn depths of wood
 Freedom from man, and holy peace with
 God;
 Who first of all their testimonial gave Against the oppressor, for the outcast
 slave, 110
 Is it a dream that such as these look down,
 And with their blessing our rejoicings
 crown?
 Let us rejoice, that while the pulpit's door
 Is barred against the pleaders for the poor;
 While the Church, wrangling upon points of faith, 115
 Forgets her bondmen suffering unto death;
 While crafty Traffic and the lust of Gain
 Unite to forge Oppression's triple chain,
 One door is open, and one Temple free,
 As a resting-place for hunted Liberty! 120
 Where men may speak, unshackled and unawed,
 High words of Truth, for Freedom and for God.

And when that truth its perfect work hath done,
And rich with blessings o'er our land hath
gone;
When not a slave beneath his yoke shall pine, ¹²⁵
From broad Potomac to the far Sabine:
When unto angel lips at last is given
The silver trump of Jubilee in Heaven;
And from Virginia's plains, Kentucky's shades,
And through the dim Floridian everglades, ¹³⁰
Rises, to meet that angel-trumpet's sound,
The voice of millions from their chains unbound;
Then, though this Hall be crumbling in
decay,
Its strong walls blending with the common clay,
Yet round the ruins of its strength shall stand ¹³⁵
The best and noblest of a ransomed
land—
Pilgrims, like these who throng around the shrine
Of Mecca, or of holy Palestine!
A prouder glory shall that ruin own
Than that which lingers round the Parthenon. ¹⁴⁰
Here shall the child of after years be
taught
The works of Freedom which his fathers
wrought;
Told of the trials of the present hour,
Our weary strife with prejudice and
power;
How the high errand quickened woman's soul, ¹⁴⁵
And touched her lip as with a living coal;
How Freedom's martyrs kept their lofty
faith
True and unwavering, unto bonds and
death;
The pencil's art shall sketch the ruined
Hall,
The Muses' garland crown its aged wall, ¹⁵⁰
And History's pen for after times record
Its consecration unto Freedom's God!

THE NEW YEAR.

Addressed to the Patrons of the Pennsylvania
Freeman.

THE wave is breaking on the shore,
The echo fading from the chime;
Again the shadow moveth o'er
The dial-plate of time!

O seer-seen Angel! waiting now ⁵
With weary feet on sea and shore,
Impatient for the last dread vow
That time shall be no more!

Once more across thy sleepless eye
The semblance of a smile has passed: ¹⁰
The year departing leaves more nigh
Time's fearfullest and last.

Oh, in that dying year hath been
The sum of all since time began;
The birth and death, the joy and pain, ¹⁵
Of Nature and of Man.

Spring, with her change of sun and shower,
And streams released from Winter's
chain,
And bursting bud, and opening flower,
And greenly growing grain; ²⁰

And Summer's shade, and sunshine warm,
And rainbows o'er her hull-tops bowed,
And voices in her rising storm;
God speaking from His cloud!

And Autumn's fruits and clustering sheaves, ²⁵
And soft, warm days of golden light,
The glory of her forest leaves,
And harvest-moon at night;

And Winter with her leafless grove,
And prisoned stream, and drifting snow,
The brilliance of her heaven above ³¹
And of her earth below:

And man, in whom an angel's mind
With earth's low instincts finds abode,
The highest of the links which bind ³⁵
Brute nature to her God;

His infant eye hath seen the light, His childhood's merriest laughter rung, And active sports to manlier might The nerves of boyhood strung ! 40	And this, too, sanctioned by the men Vested with power to shield the right, And throw each vile and robber den Wide open to the light. 8c
And quiet love, and passion's fires, Have soothed or burned in manhood's breast, And lofty aims and low desires By turns disturbed his rest.	Yet, shame upon them ! there they sit, Men of the North, subdued and still ; Meek, pliant poltroons, only fit To work a master's will.
The wailing of the newly-born 45 Has mingled with the funeral knell ; And o'er the dying's ear has gone The merry marriage-bell.	Sold, bargained off for Southern votes, 85 A passive herd of Northern mules, Just braying through their purchased throats Whate'er their owner rules.
And Wealth has filled his halls with mirth, While Want, in many a humble shed, 50 Toiled, shivering by her cheerless hearth, The live-long night for bread.	And he, ⁵⁰ the basest of the base, The vilest of the vile, whose name, 9c Embalmed in infinite disgrace, Is deathless in its shame !
And worse than all, the human slave, The sport of lust, and pride, and scorn ! Plucked off the crown his Maker gave, 55 His regal manhood gone !	A tool, to bolt the people's door Against the people clamoring there, An ass, to trample on their floor 95 A people's right of prayer !
Oh, still, my country ! o'er thy plains, Blackened with slavery's blight and ban, That human chattel drags his chains, An uncreated man ! 60	Nailed to his self-made gibbet fast, Self-pilloried to the public view, A mark for every passing blast Of scorn to whistle through ; 100
And still, where'er to sun and breeze, My country, is thy flag unrolled, With scorn, the gazing stranger sees A stain on every fold.	There let him hang, and hear the boast Of Southrons o'er their pliant tool,— A new Stylites on his post, 'Sacred to ridicule !'
Oh, tear the gorgeous emblem down ! 65 It gathers scorn from every eye, And despots smile and good men frown Whene'er it passes by.	Look we at home ! our noble hall, 105 To Freedom's holy purpose given, Now rears its black and ruined wall, Beneath the wintry heaven,
Shame ! shame ! its starry splendors glow Above the slaver's loathsome jail ; 70 Its folds are ruffling even now His crimson flag of sale.	Telling the story of its doom, The fiendish mob, the prostrate law, 110 The fiery jet through midnight's gloom, Our gazing thousands saw.
Still round our country's proudest hall The trade in human flesh is driven, And at each careless hammer-fall 75 A human heart is riven.	Look to our State ! the poor man's right Torn from him : and the sons of those Whose blood in Freedom's sternest fight Sprinkled the Jersey snows, 116

Outlawed within the land of Penn,
That Slavery's guilty fears might cease,
And those whom God created men
Toil on as brutes in peace. 120

Yet o'er the blackness of the storm
A bow of promise bends on high,
And gleams of sunshine, soft and warm,
Break through our clouded sky.

East, West, and North, the shout is heard,
Of freemen rising for the right : 126
Each valley hath its rallying word,
Each hill its signal light.

O'er Massachusetts' rocks of gray
The strengthening light of freedom
shines, 130
Rhode Island's Narragansett Bay,
And Vermont's snow-hung pines !

From Hudson's frowning palisades
To Alleghany's laurelled crest, O'er lakes and prairies, streams and glades, 135
It shines upon the West.

Speed on the light to those who dwell
In Slavery's land of woe and sin,
And through the blackness of that Hell,
•Let Heaven's own light break in. 140

So shall the Southern conscience quake
Before that light poured full and strong,
So shall the Southern heart awake
To all the bondman's wrong.

And from that rich and sunny land 145
The song of grateful millions rise,
Like that of Israel's ransomed band
Beneath Arabia's skies :

And all who now are bound beneath
Our banner's shade, our eagle's wing,
From Slavery's night of moral death 151
To light and life shall spring.

Broken the bondman's chain, and gone
The master's guilt, and hate, and fear,
And unto both alike shall dawn 155
A New and Happy Year.

1839.

THE RELIC.

Written on receiving a cane wrought from a fragment of the wood-work of Pennsylvania
Hall which the fire had spared.

TOKEN of friendship true and tried,
From one whose fiery heart of youth
With mine has beaten, side by side,
For Liberty and Truth ;
With honest pride the gift I take, 5
And prize it for the giver's sake.

But not alone because it tells
Of generous hand and heart sincere ;
Around that gift of friendship dwells
A memory doubly dear ; 10
Earth's noblest aim, man's holiest
thought,
With that memorial frail inwrought !

Pure thoughts and sweet like flowers
unfold,
And precious memories round it cling,
Even as the Prophet's rod of old 15
In beauty blossoming :
And buds of feeling, pure and good,
Spring from its cold unconscious wood.

Relic of Freedom's shrine ! a brand
Plucked from its burning ! let it be 20
Dear as a jewel from the hand
Of a lost friend to me !
Flower of a perished garland left,
Of life and beauty unbereft !

Oh, if the young enthusiast bears, 25
O'er weary waste and sea, the stone
Which crumbled from the Forum's stairs,
Or round the Parthenon ;
Or olive-bough from some wild tree
Hung over old Thermopylae : 30

If leaflets from some hero's tomb,
Or moss-wreath torn from ruins hoary ;
Or faded flowers whose sisters bloom
On fields renowned in story ;
Or fragment from the Alhambra's crest,
Or the gray rock by Druids blessed ; 36

Sad Erin's shamrock greenly growing
Where Freedom led her stalwart
kern,
Or Scotia's 'rough bur thistle' blowing
On Bruce's Bannockburn ; 40
Or Runnymede's wild English rose,
Or lichen plucked from Sempach's snows !

If it be true that things like these
To heart and eye bright visions bring,
Shall not far holier memories 45
To this memorial cling ?
Which needs no mellowing mist of time
To hide the crimson stains of crime !

Wreck of a temple, unprofaned ;
Of courts where Peace with Freedom
trod, 50
Lifting on high, with hands unstained,
Thanksgiving unto God ;
Where Mercy's voice of love was pleading
For human hearts in bondage bleeding !

Where, midst the sound of rushing feet
And curses on the night-air flung, 56
That pleading voice rose calm and sweet
From woman's earnest tongue ;
And Riot turned his scowling glance,
Awed, from her tranquil countenance ! 60

That temple now in ruin lies !
The fire-stain on its shattered wall,
And open to the changing skies
Its black and roofless hall,
It stands before a nation's sight, 65
A gravestone over buried Right !

But from that ruin, as of old,
The fire-scorched stones themselves are crying,
And from their ashes white and cold
Its timbers are replying ! 70
A voice which slavery cannot kill
Speaks from the crumbling arches still !

And even this relic from thy shrine,
O holy Freedom ! hath to me
A potent power, a voice and sign 75
To testify of thee ;
And, grasping it, methinks I feel
A deeper faith, a stronger zeal.

And not unlike that mystic rod, 79
Of old stretched o'er the Egyptian wave,
Which opened, in the strength of God,
A pathway for the slave,
It yet may point the bondman's way,
And turn the spoiler from his prey.

THE WORLD'S CONVENTION

OF THE FRIENDS OF EMANCIPATION,
HELD IN LONDON IN 1840.

Joseph Sturge, the founder of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, proposed the calling of a world's anti-slavery convention, and the proposal was promptly seconded by the American Anti-Slavery Society. The call was addressed to 'friends of the slave of every nation and of every clime.'

YES, let them gather ! Summon forth
The pledged philanthropy of Earth.
From every land, whose hills have heard
The bugle blast of Freedom waking ;
Or shrieking of her symbol-bird 5
From out his cloudy eyrie breaking :
Where Justice hath one worshipper,
Or truth one altar built to her ;
Where'er a human eye is weeping
O'er wrongs which Earth's sad children
know ; 10
Where'er a single heart is keeping
Its prayerful watch with human woe :
Thence let them come, and greet each other,
And know in each a friend and brother !

Yes, let them come ! from each green vale
Where England's old baronial halls 16
Still bear upon their storied walls
The grim crusader's rusted mail,
Battered by Paynim spear and brand
On Malta's rock or Syria's sand ! 20
And mouldering pennon-staves once set
Within the soil of Palestine,
By Jordan and Gennesaret ;
Or, borne with England's battle line,
O'er Acre's shattered turrets stooping, 25

Or, midst the camp their banners drooping,
With dews from hallowed Hermon wet,
A holier summons now is given

Than that gray hermit's voice of old,
Which unto all the winds of heaven 30
The banners of the Cross unrolled !

Not for the long-deserted shrine ;
Not for the dull unconscious sod,
Which tells not by one lingering sign

That there the hope of Israel trod ; 35
But for that truth, for which alone
In pilgrim eyes are sanctified

The garden moss, the mountain stone,
Whereon His holy sandals pressed,— 39
The fountain which His lip hath blessed,—

Whate'er hath touched His garment's hem

At Bethany or Bethlehem,
Or Jordan's river-side.

For Freedom in the name of Him
Who came to raise Earth's drooping
poor, 45

To break the chain from every limb,
The bolt from every prison door !
For these, o'er all the earth hath passed
An ever-deepening trumpet blast,
As if an angel's breath had lent 50
Its vigor to the instrument.

And Wales, from Snowdon's mountain
wall,

Shall startle at that thrilling call,
As if she heard her bards again ;

And Erin's 'harp on Tara's wall' 55
Give out its ancient strain,

Mirthful and sweet, yet sad withal,—
The melody which Erin loves,

When o'er that harp, 'mid bursts of glad-
ness

And slogan cries and lyke-wake sadness,
The hand of her O'Connell moves ! 61

Scotland, from lake and tarn and rill,
And mountain hold, and heathery hill,

Shall catch and echo back the note,
As if she heard upon the air 65

Once more her Cameronian's prayer
And song of Freedom float.

And cheering echoes shall reply
From each remote dependency,

Where Britain's mighty sway is known,
In tropic sea or frozen zone ; 71

Where'er her sunset flag is furling,
Or morning gun-fire's smoke is curling ;
From Indian Bengal's groves of palm

And rosy fields and gales of balm, 75
Where Eastern pomp and power are rolled

Through regal Ava's gates of gold ;
And from the lakes and ancient woods
And dim Canadian solitudes, 79

Whence, sternly from her rocky throne,
Queen of the North, Quebec looks down ;

And from those bright and ransomed Isles
Where all unwonted Freedom smiles,

And the dark laborer still retains
The scar of slavery's broken chains ! 85

From the hoar Alps, which sentinel
The gateways of the land of Tell,

Where morning's keen and earliest glance
On Jura's rocky wall is thrown,

And from the olive bowers of France 90
And vinegroves garlanding the Rhone,—

'Friends of the Blacks,' as true and tried
As those who stood by Oge's side,

And heard the Haytien's tale of wrong,
Shall gather at that summons strong ; 95

Brogie, Passy, and he whose song
Breathed over Syria's holy sod,

And in the paths which Jesus trod,
And murmured midst the hills which hem

Crownless and sad Jerusalem, 100
Hath echoes wheresoe'er the tone

Of Israel's prophet-lyre is known.

Still let them come ; from Quito's walls,
And from the Orinoco's tide,

From Lima's Inca-haunted halls, 105
From Santa Fé and Yucatan,—

Men who by swart Guerrero's side
Proclaimed the deathless rights of man,

Broke every bond and fetter off,
And hailed in every sable serf 110

A free and brother Mexican !
Chiefs who across the Andes' chain

Have followed Freedom's flowing pen-non,

And seen on Junin's fearful plain,
Glare o'er the broken ranks of Spain 115

The fire-burst of Bolivar's cannon !
And Hayti, from her mountain land,

Shall send the sons of those who hurled
Defiance from her blazing strand,

The war-gage from her Petion's hand, 120
Alone against a hostile world.

Nor all unmindful, thou, the while,
Land of the dark and mystic Nile !
Thy Moslem mercy yet may shame
All tyrants of a Christian name, 125
When in the shade of Gizeh's pile,
Or, where, from Abyssinian hills
El Gerek's upper fountain fills,
Or where from Mountains of the Moon
El Abiad bears his watery boon, 130
Where'er thy lotus blossoms swim
Within their ancient hallowed waters ;
Where'er is heard the Coptic hymn,
Or song of Nubia's sable daughters ;
The curse of slavery and the crime, 135
Thy bequest from remotest time,
At thy dark Mehemet's decree
Forevermore shall pass from thee ;
And chains forsake each captive's limb
Of all those tribes, whose hills around 140
Have echoed back the cymbal sound
And victor horn of Ibrahim.

And thou whose glory and whose crime
To earth's remotest bound and clime,
In mingled tones of awe and scorn, 145
The echoes of a world have borne,
My country ! glorious at thy birth,
A day-star flashing brightly forth,
The herald-sign of Freedom's dawn !
Oh, who could dream that saw thee then,
And watched thy rising from afar, 151
That vapors from oppression's fen
Would cloud the upward tending star ?
Or, that earth's tyrant powers, which
heard,
Awe-struck, the shout which hailed thy dawning, 155
Would rise so soon, prince, peer, and king,
To mock thee with their welcoming,
Like Hades when her thrones were stirred
To greet the down-cast Star of Morning !
'Aha ! and art thou fallen thus ?' 160
Art thou become as one of us ?'

Land of my fathers ! there will stand,
Amidst that world-assembled band,
Those owning thy maternal claim
Unweakened by thy crime and shame ;

The sad reprovers of thy wrong ; 166
The children thou hast spurned so long.
Still with affection's fondest yearning
To their unnatural mother turning.
No traitors they ! but tried and leal, 170
Whose own is but thy general weal,
Still blending with the patriot's zeal
The Christian's love for human kind,
To caste and climate unconfined.

A holy gathering ! peaceful all : 175
No threat of war, no savage call
For vengeance on an erring brother !
But in their stead the godlike plan
To teach the brotherhood of man
To love and reverence one another, 180
As sharers of a common blood,
The children of a common God !
Yet, even at its lightest word,
Shall Slavery's darkest depths be stirred :
Spain, watching from her Moro's keep 185
Her slave-ships traversing the deep,
And Rio, in her strength and pride,
Lifting, along her mountain-side,
Her snowy battlements and towers,
Her lemon-groves and tropic bowers, 190
With bitter hate and sullen fear
Its freedom-giving voice shall hear ;
And where my country's flag is flowing,
On breezes from Mount Vernon blowing,
Above the Nation's council halls, 195
Where Freedom's praise is loud and
long,

While close beneath the outward walls
The driver plies his reeking thong ;
The hammer of the man-thief falls,
O'er hypocritic cheek and brow 200
The crimson flush of shame shall glow :
And all who for their native land
Are pledging life and heart and hand,
Worn watchers o'er her changing weal,
Who for her tarnished honor feel, 205
Through cottage door and council-hall
Shall thunder an awakening call.
The pen along its page shall burn
With all intolerable scorn ;
An eloquent rebuke shall go 210
On all the winds that Southward blow ;
From priestly lips, now sealed and dumb,
Warning and dread appeal shall come,

Like those which Israel heard from him,
 The Prophet of the Cherubim ; 215
 Or those which sad Esaias hurled
 Against a sin-accursed world !
 Its wizard leaves the Press shall fling
 Unceasing from its iron wing,
 With characters inscribed thereon, 220
 As fearful in the despot's hall
 As to the pomp of Babylon
 The fire-sign on the palace wall !

And, from her dark iniquities,
 Methinks I see my country rise : 225
 Not challenging the nations round
 To note her tardy justice done ;
 Her captives from their chains unbound,
 Her prisons opening to the sun :
 But tearfully her arms extending 230
 Over the poor and unoffending ;
 Her regal emblem now no longer
 A bird of prey, with talons reeking,
 Above the dying captive shrieking,
 But, spreading out her ample wing, 235
 A broad, impartial covering,
 The weaker sheltered by the stronger !
 Oh, then to Faith's anointed eyes
 The promised token shall be given ;
 And on a nation's sacrifice, 240
 Atoning for the sin of years,
 And wet with penitential tears,
 The fire shall fall from Heaven !

MASSACHUSETTS TO VIRGINIA.

Written on reading an account of the proceedings of the citizens of Norfolk, Va., in reference to George Latimer, the alleged fugitive slave, who was seized in Boston without warrant at the request of James B. Grey, of Norfolk, claiming to be his master. The case caused great excitement North and South, and led to the presentation of a petition to Congress, signed by more than fifty thousand citizens of Massachusetts, calling for such laws and proposed amendments to the Constitution as should relieve the Commonwealth from all further participation in the crime of oppression. George Latimer himself was finally given free papers for the sum of four hundred dollars.

THE blast from Freedom's Northern hills,
 upon its Southern way,
 Bears greeting to Virginia from Massachusetts Bay :

No word of haughty challenging, nor battle bugle's peal,
 Nor steady tread of marching files, nor clang of horsemen's steel.

No trains of deep-mouthed cannon along our highways go ; 5

Around our silent arsenals untrodden lies the snow ;

And to the land-breeze of our ports, upon their errands far,

A thousand sails of commerce swell, but none are spread for war.

We hear thy threats, Virginia ! thy stormy words and high,

Swell harshly on the Southern winds which melt along our sky ; 10

Yet, not one brown, hard hand foregoes
 its honest labor here,

No hewer of our mountain oaks suspends
 his axe in fear.

Wild are the waves which lash the reefs
 along St. George's bank ;

Cold on the shores of Labrador the fog lies white and dank ;

Through storm, and wave, and blinding mist, stout are the hearts which
 man 15

The fishing-smacks of Marblehead, the sea-boats of Cape Ann.

The cold north light and wintry sun glare
 on their icy forms,

Bent grimly o'er their straining lines or wrestling with the storms ;

Free as the winds they drive before, rough
 as the waves they roam,

They laugh to scorn the slaver's threat against their rocky home. 20

What means the Old Dominion ? Hath she forgot the day

When o'er her conquered valleys swept the Briton's steel array ?

How side by side, with sons of hers, the Massachusetts men

Encountered Tarleton's charge of fire, and stout Cornwallis, then ?

Forgets she how the Bay State, in answer to the call 25

Of her old House of Burgesses, spoke out from Faneuil Hall?

When, echoing back her Henry's cry,
came pulsing on each breath

Of Northern winds the thrilling sounds of 'Liberty or Death!'

What asks the Old Dominion? If now her sons have proved

False to their fathers' memory, false to the faith they loved; 30

If she can scoff at Freedom, and its great charter spurn,

Must we of Massachusetts from truth
and duty turn?

We hunt your bondmen, flying from
Slavery's hateful hell;

Our voices, at your bidding, take up the bloodhound's yell;

We gather, at your summons, above our fathers' graves, 35

From Freedom's holy altar-horns to tear your wretched slaves!

Thank God! not yet so vilely can Massachusetts bow;

The spirit of her early time is with her
even now;

Dream not because her Pilgrim blood
moves slow and calm and cool,

She thus can stoop her chainless neck,
a sister's slave and tool! 40

All that a sister State should do, all that a free State may,

Heart, hand, and purse we proffer, as in our early day;

But that one dark loathsome burden ye must stagger with alone,

And reap the bitter harvest which ye yourselves have sown!

Hold, while ye may, your struggling slaves, and burden God's free air 45

With woman's shriek beneath the lash,
and manhood's wild despair;

Cling closer to the 'cleaving curse' that writes upon your plains

The blasting of Almighty wrath against a land of chains.

Still shame your gallant ancestry, the cavaliers of old,

By watching round the shambles where human flesh is sold; 50

Gloat o'er the new-born child, and count his market value, when

The maddened mother's cry of woe shall pierce the slaver's den!

Lower than plummet soundeth, sink the Virginia name;

Plant, if ye will, your fathers' graves with rankest weeds of shame;

Be, if ye will, the scandal of God's fair universe; 55

We wash our hands forever of your sin
and shame and curse.

A voice from lips whereon the coal from Freedom's shrine hath been,

Thrilled, as but yesterday, the hearts of Berkshire's mountain men:

The echoes of that solemn voice are sadly lingering still

In all our sunny valleys, on every windswept hill. 60

And when the prowling man-thief came hunting for his prey

Beneath the very shadow of Bunker's shaft of gray,

How, through the free lips of the son, the father's warning spoke;

How, from its bonds of trade and sect,
the Pilgrim city broke!

A hundred thousand right arms were lifted up on high, 65

A hundred thousand voices sent back their loud reply;

Through the thronged towns of Essex the startling summons rang,

And up from bench and loom and wheel
her young mechanics sprang!

The voice of free, broad Middlesex, of thousands as of one,

The shaft of Bunker calling to that of
Lexington; 70

From Norfolk's ancient villages, from Plymouth's rocky bound

To where Nantucket feels the arms of ocean close her round;

From rich and rural Worcester, where through the calm repose
 Of cultured vales and fringing woods the gentle Nashua flows,
 To where Wachusett's wintry blasts the mountain larches stir, 75
 Swelled up to Heaven the thrilling cry of
 'God save Latimer!'

And sandy Barnstable rose up, wet with the salt sea spray;
 And Bristol sent her answering shout down Narragansett Bay!
 Along the broad Connecticut old Hampden felt the thrill,
 And the cheer of Hampshire's woodmen swept down from Holyoke Hill. 80

The voice of Massachusetts! Of her free sons and daughters,
 Deep calling unto deep aloud, the sound of many waters!
 Against the burden of that voice what tyrant power shall stand?
 No fetters in the Bay State! No slave upon her land!

Look to it well, Virginians! In calmness
 we have borne, 85
 In answer to our faith and trust, your insult and your scorn;
 You've spurned our kindest counsels;
 you've hunted for our lives;
 And shaken round our hearths and homes
 your manacles and gyves!

We wage no war, we lift no arm, we fling
 no torch within
 The fire-damps of the quaking mine
 beneath your soil of sin; 90
 We leave ye with your bondmen, to wrestle, while ye can,
 With the strong upward tendencies and godlike soul of man!

But for us and for our children, the vow which we have given
 For freedom and humanity is registered in heaven;
 No slave-hunt in our borders,—no pirate
 on our strand! 95
 No fetters in the Bay State,—no slave
 upon our land!

THE CHRISTIAN SLAVE.

In a publication of L. F. Tasistro—Random Shots and Southern Breezes—is a description of a slave auction at New Orleans, at which the auctioneer recommended the woman on the stand as 'A GOOD CHRISTIAN!' It was not uncommon to see advertisements of slaves for sale, in which they were described as pious or as members of the church. In one advertisement a slave was noted as 'a Baptist preacher'

A CHRISTIAN! going, gone!
 Who bids for God's own image? for His
 grace,
 Which that poor victim of the market-
 place
 Hath in her suffering won?

My God! can such things be? 5
 Hast Thou not said that whatsoever is
 done
 Unto Thy weakest and Thy humblest
 one
 Is even done to Thee?

In that sad victim, then,
 Child of Thy pitying love, I see Thee
 stand; 10
 Once more the jest-word of a mocking
 band,
 Bound, sold, and scourged again!

A Christian up for sale!
 Wet with her blood your whips, o'ertask
 her frame,
 Make her life loathsome with your wrong and shame, 15
 Her patience shall not fail!

A heathen hand might deal
 Back on your heads the gathered wrong
 of years:
 But her low, broken prayer and nightly
 tears,
 Ye neither heed nor feel. 20

Con well thy lesson o'er,
 Thou prudent teacher, tell the toiling
 slave
 No dangerous tale of Him who came to
 save
 The outcast and the poor.

But wisely shut the ray 25
Of God's free Gospel from her simple
heart,
And to her darkened mind alone impart
One stern command, Obey !
So shalt thou deftly raise
The market price of human flesh ^{50a}; and
while 30
On thee, their pampered guest, the planters smile,
Thy church shall praise.
Grave, reverend men shall tell
From Northern pulpits how thy work was blest,
While in that vile South Sodom first and
best, 35
Thy poor disciples sell.
Oh, shame ! the Moslem thrall,
Who, with his master, to the Prophet
kneels,
While turning to the sacred Kebla feels
His fetters break and fall. 40
Cheers for the turbaned Bey
Of robber-peopled Tunis ! he hath torn
The dark slave-dungeons open, and hath borne
Their inmates into day :
But our poor slave in vain 45
Turns to the Christian shrine his aching
eyes ;
Its rites will only swell his market price,
And rivet on his chain.
God of all right ! how long Shall priestly robbers at Thine altar
stand, 50
Lifting in prayer to Thee the bloody hand
And haughty brow of wrong ?
Oh, from the fields of cane,
From the low rice-swamp, from the trader's cell ;
From the black slave-ship's foul and loathsome hell, 55
And coffle's weary chain ;
Hoarse, horrible, and strong,
Rises to Heaven that agonizing cry,
Filling the arches of the hollow sky,
How long, O God, how long ? 60

THE SENTENCE OF JOHN L. BROWN.

John L. Brown, a young white man of South Carolina, was in 1844 sentenced to death for aiding a young slave woman, whom he loved and had married, to escape from slavery. In pronouncing the sentence Judge O'Neale addressed to the prisoner words of appalling blasphemy [of which the following passages give some notion] :—

'You are to die' To die an ignominious death—the death on the gallows ! This announcement is, to you, I know, most appalling. Little did you dream of it when you stepped into the bar with an air as if you thought it was a fine frolic. But the consequences of crime are just such as you are realizing. Punishment often comes when it is least expected. Let me entreat you to take the present opportunity to commence the work of reformation. Time will be furnished you to prepare for the great change just before you. Of your past life I know nothing, except what your trial furnished. That told me that the crime for which you are to suffer was the consequence of a want of attention on your part to the duties of life. The strange woman snared you. She flattered you with her words, and you became her victim. The consequence was, that, led on by a desire to serve her, you committed the offence of aiding a slave to run away and depart from her master's service ; and now, for it you are to die !

'You are a young man, and I fear you have been dissolute ; and if so, these kindred vices have contributed a full measure to your ruin. Reflect on your past life, and make the only useful devotion of the remnant of your days in preparing for death.

'Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth is the language of inspired wisdom. This comes home appropriately to you in this trying moment.

'You are young, quite too young to be where you are. If you had remembered your Creator in your past days, you would not now be in a felon's place, to receive a felon's judgment. Still, it is not too late to remember your Creator. He calls early, and He calls late. He stretches out the arms of a Father's love to you—to the vilest sinner—and says : "Come unto Me and be saved." You can perhaps read. If so, read the Scriptures ; read them without note, and without comment ; and pray to God for His assistance ; and you will be able to say when you pass from prison to execution, as a poor slave said under similar circumstances: "I am glad my Friday has come" If you cannot read the Scriptures, the ministers of our holy religion will be ready to aid you. They will read and explain to you until you will be able to understand; and understanding, to call upon the only One who can help you and save you—Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world. To Him I commend you. And through Him may you have that opening of the Day-Spring of mercy from on high, which shall bless you here, and crown you as a saint in an everlasting world, forever and ever

'The sentence of the law is that you be taken hence to the place from whence you came last; thence to the jail of Fairfield District; and that there you be closely and securely confined until Friday, the 26th day of April next; on which day, between the hours of ten in the forenoon and two in the afternoon, you will be taken to the place of public execution, and there be hanged by the neck till your body be dead And may God have mercy on your soul!'

No event in the history of the anti-slavery struggle so stirred the two hemispheres as did this dreadful sentence. A cry of horror was heard from Europe. In the British House of Lords Brougham and Denman spoke of it with mingled pathos and indignation. Thirteen hundred clergymen and church officers in Great Britain addressed a memorial to the churches of South Carolina against the atrocity. Indeed, so strong was the pressure of the sentiment of abhorrence and disgust that South Carolina yielded to it, and the sentence was commuted to scourging and banishment

Ho! thou who seekest late and long

A License from the Holy Book

For brutal lust and fiendish wrong,

Man of the Pulpit, look!

Lift up those cold and atheist eyes, 5

This ripe fruit of thy teaching see;

And tell us how to heaven will rise

The incense of this sacrifice—

This blossom of the gallows tree!

Search out for slavery's hour of need 10

Some fitting text of sacred writ;

Give Heaven the credit of a deed

Which shames the nether pit.

Kneel, smooth blasphemer, unto Him

Whose truth is on thy lips a lie; 15

Aak that His bright winged cherubim

May bend around that scaffold grim

To guard and bless and sanctify.

O champion of the people's cause!

Suspend thy loud and vain rebuke 20

Of foreign wrong and Old World's laws,

Man of the Senate, look!

Was this the promise of the free,

The great hope of our early time,

That slavery's poison vine should be 25

Upborne by Freedom's prayer-nursed tree

O'erclustering with such fruits of crime?

Send out the summons East and West,

And South and North, let all be there

Where he who pitied the oppressed 30

Swings out in sun and air.

Let not a Democratic hand

The grisly hangman's task refuse;

There let each loyal patriot stand,

Awaiting slavery's command, 35

To twist the rope and draw the noose!

But vain is irony—unmeet

Its cold rebuke for deeds which start

In fiery and indignant beat

The pulses of the heart. 40

Leave studied wit and guarded phrase

For those who think but do not feel;

Let men speak out in words which raise

Where'er they fall, an answering blaze

Like flints which strike the fire from steel.

Still let a mousing priesthood ply 46

Their garbled text and gloss of sin,

And make the lettered scroll deny

Its living soul within:

Still let the place-fed, titled knave 50

Plead robbery's right with purchased lips,

And tell us that our fathers gave

For Freedom's pedestal, a slave,

The frieze and moulding, chains and whips!

But ye who own that Higher Law 55

Whose tablets in the heart are set,

Speak out in words of power and awe

That God is living yet!

Breathe forth once more those tones sublime

Which thrilled the burdened prophet's lyre, 60

And in a dark and evil time
Smote down on Israel's fast of crime
And gift of blood, a rain of fire !

Oh, not for us the graceful lay
To whose soft measures lightly move 65
The footsteps of the faun and fay,
O'er-locked by mirth and love !
But such a stern and startling strain
As Britain's hurtled bards flung down
From Snowden to the conquered plain, 70
Where harshly clanked the Saxon chain,
On trampled field and smoking town.

By Liberty's dishonored name,
By man's lost hope and failing trust,
By words and deeds which bow with shame 75
Our foreheads to the dust,
By the exulting strangers' sneer,
Borne to us from the Old World's thrones,
And by their victims' grief who hear,
In sunless mines and dungeons drear, 80
How Freedom's land her faith disowns !

Speak out in acts. The time for words
Has passed, and deeds suffice alone ;
In vain against the clang of swords
The wailing pipe is blown ! 85
Act, act in God's name, while ye may !
Smite from the church her leprous limb !
Throw open to the light of day
The bondman's cell, and break away
The chains the state has bound on him ! 90

Ho ! every true and living soul,
To Freedom's perilled altar bear
The Freeman's and the Christian's whole
Tongue, pen, and vote, and prayer !
One last, great battle for the right— 95
One short, sharp struggle to be free !
To do is to succeed—our fight
Is waged in Heaven's approving sight ;
The smile of God is Victory.

TEXAS.

VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND.

The five poems immediately following indicate the intense feeling of the friends of freedom in view of the annexation of Texas, with its vast territory sufficient, as was boasted, for six new slave States [The first poem seems to have been written at the earnest entreaty of Lowell, who called on Whittier 'to cry aloud and spare not against the accursed Texas plot.']

Up the hillside, down the glen,
Rouse the sleeping citizen ;
Summon out the might of men !

Like a lion growling low,
Like a night-storm rising slow, 5
Like the tread of unseen foe ;

It is coming, it is nigh !
Stand your homes and altars by ;
On your own free thresholds die.

Clang the bells in all your spires ; 10
On the gray hills of your sires
Fling to heaven your signal-fires.

From Wachuset, lone and bleak,
Unto Berkshire's tallest peak,
Let the flame-tongued heralds speak. 15

Oh, for God and duty stand,
Heart to heart and hand to hand,
Round the old graves of the land.

Whoso shrinks or falters now,
Whoso to the yoke would bow, 20
Brand the craven on his brow !

Freedom's soil hath only place
For a free and fearless race,
None for traitors false and base.

Perish party, perish clan ; 25
Strike together while ye can,
Like the arm of one strong man.

Like that angel's voice sublime,
Heard above a world of crime,
Crying of the end of time ; 30

With one heart and with one mouth,
Let the North unto the South
Speak the word befitting both :

'What though Issachar be strong !
Ye may load his back with wrong
Overmuch and over long :

'Patience with her cup o'errun,
With her weary thread outspun,
Murmurs that her work is done.

'Make our Union-bond a chain,
Weak as tow in Freedom's strain
Link by link shall snap in twain.

'Vainly shall your sand-wrought rope
Bind the starry cluster up,
Shattered over heaven's blue cope !

'Give us bright though broken rays,
Rather than eternal haze,
Clouding o'er the full-orbed blaze.

'Take your land of sun and bloom ;
Only leave to Freedom room
For her plough, and forge, and loom ;

'Take your slavery-blackened vales ;
Leave us but our own free gales,
Blowing on our thousand sails.

'Boldly, or with treacherous art,
Strike the blood-wrought chain apart ;
Break the Union's mighty heart ;

'Work the ruin, if ye will ;
Pluck upon your heads an ill
Which shall grow and deepen still.

'With your bondman's right arm bare,
With his heart of black despair,
Stand alone, if stand ye dare !

'Onward with your fell design ;
Dig the gulf and draw the line :
Fire beneath your feet the mine :

'Deeply, when the wide abyss
Yawns between your land and this,
Shall ye feel your helplessness.

'By the hearth, and in the bed,
Shaken by a look or tread,
Ye shall own a guilty dread.

'And the curse of unpaid toil,
Downward through your generous soil
Like a fire shall burn and spoil. 75

'Our bleak hills shall bud and blow,
Vines our rocks shall overgrow,
Plenty in our valleys flow ;—

'And when vengeance clouds your skies,
Hither shall ye turn your eyes,
As the lost on Paradise ! 80

'We but ask our rocky strand,
Freedom's true and brother band,
Freedom's strong and honest hand ;

'Valleys by the slave untrod, 85
And the Pilgrim's mountain sod,
Blessed of our fathers' God !'

1844.

TO FANEUIL HALL.

Written in 1844, on reading a call by 'a Massachusetts Freeman' for a meeting in Faneuil Hall of the citizens of Massachusetts, without distinction of party, opposed to the annexation of Texas and the aggressions of South Carolina, and in favor of decisive action against slavery.

MEN ! if manhood still ye claim,
If the Northern pulse can thrill,
Roused by wrong or stung by shame,
Freely, strongly still ;
Let the sounds of traffic die : 5
Shut the mill-gate, leave the stall,
Fling the axe and hammer by ;
Throng to Faneuil Hall !

Wrongs which freemen never brooked,
Dangers grim and fierce as they, 10
Which, like couching lions, looked
On your fathers' way ;
These your instant zeal demand,
Shaking with their earthquake-call
Every rood of Pilgrim land, 15
Ho, to Faneuil Hall !

From your capes and sandy bars,
From your mountain-ridges cold,
Through whose pines the westerling stars
Stoop their crowns of gold ; 20

Come, and with your footsteps wake
 Echoes from that holy wall ;
 Once again, for Freedom's sake,
 Rock your fathers' hall !

Up, and tread beneath your feet
 Every cord by party spun :
 Let your hearts together beat
 As the heart of one.
 Banks and tariffs, stocks and trade,
 Let them rise or let them fall :
 Freedom asks your common aid,—
 Up, to Faneuil Hall !

Up, and let each voice that speaks
 Ring from thence to Southern plains,
 Sharply as the blow which breaks
 Prison-bolts and chains !
 Speak as well becomes the free :
 Dreaded more than steel or ball,
 Shall your calmest utterance be,
 Heard from Faneuil Hall !

Have they wronged us ? Let us then
 Render back nor threats nor prayers ;
 Have they chained our free-born men ?
 Let us unchain theirs !
 Up, your banner leads the van,
 Blazoned, 'Liberty for all !'
 Finish what your sires began !
 Up, to Faneuil Hall !

TO MASSACHUSETTS.

WHAT though around thee blazes
 No fiery rallying sign ?
 From all thy own high places,
 Give Heaven the light of thine !
 What though unthrilled, unmoving,
 The statesman stand apart,
 And comes no warm approving
 From Mammon's crowded mart ?

Still let the land be shaken
 By a summons of thine own !
 By all save truth forsaken,
 Stand fast with that alone !
 Shrink not from strife unequal !
 With the best is always hope ;
 And ever in the sequel
 God holds the right side up !

But when, with thine uniting,
 Come voices long and loud,
 And far-off hills are writing
 Thy fire-words on the cloud ;
 When from Penobscot's fountains
 A deep response is heard,
 And across the Western mountains
 Rolls back thy rallying word ;

Shall thy line of battle falter,
 With its allies just in view ?
 Oh, by hearth and holy altar,
 My fatherland, be true !
 Fling abroad thy scrolls of Freedom !
 Speed them onward far and fast !
 Over hill and valley speed them,
 Like the sibil's on the blast !

Lo ! the Empire State is shaking
 The shackles from her hand ;
 With the rugged North is waking
 The level sunset land !
 On they come, the free battalions !
 East and West and North they come,
 And the heart-beat of the mullions
 Is the beat of Freedom's drum.

'To the tyrant's plot no favor !
 No heed to place-fed knaves !
 Bar and bolt the door forever
 Against the land of slaves !'
 Hear it, mother Earth, and hear it,
 The heavens above us spread !
 The land is roused,—its spirit
 Was sleeping, but not dead !
 1844.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

GOD bless New Hampshire ! from her
 granite peaks
 Once more the voice of Stark and Langdon speaks.
 The long-bound vassal of the exulting
 South
 For very shame her self-forged chain
 has broken ;
 Torn the black seal of slavery from her
 mouth,
 And in the clear tones of her old time
 spoken !

Oh, all undreamed-of, all unhopèd-for changes!

The tyrant's ally proves his sternest
foe;

To all his biddings, from her mountain ranges,

New Hampshire thunders an indignant
No! 10

Who is it now despairs? Oh, faint of
heart,

Look upward to those Northern mountains cold,

Flouted by Freedom's victor-flag un-
rolled,

And gather strength to bear a manlier
part!

All is not lost. The angel of God's blessing 15

Encamps with Freedom on the field of fight;

Still to her banner, day by day, are press-
ing,

Unlooked-for allies, striking for the
right!

Courage, then, Northern hearts! Be firm,
be true:

What one brave State hath done, can ye not also do? 20

THE PINE-TREE.⁵¹

Written on hearing that the Anti-Slavery
Resolves of Stephen C. Phillips had been rejected by the Whig Convention in Faneuil Hall, in 1846.

LIFT again the stately emblem on the Bay State's rusted shield,

Give to Northern winds the Pine-Tree on our banner's tattered field.

Sons of men who sat in council with their Bibles round the board,

Answering England's royal missive with a firm, 'Thus saith the Lord!'

Rise again for home and freedom! set the battle in array! 5

What the fathers did of old time we their sons must do to-day.

Tell us not of banks and tariffs, cease
your paltry pedler cries;

Shall the good State sink her honor that your gambling stocks may rise?

Would ye barter man for cotton? That your gains may sum up higher,

Must we kiss the feet of Moloch, pass our children through the fire? 10

Is the dollar only real? God and truth and right a dream?

Weighed against your lying ledgers must our manhood kick the beam?

O my God! for that free spirit, which of old in Boston town

Smote the Province House with terror, struck the crest of Andros down!

For another strong-voiced Adams in the city's streets to cry, 15

'Up for God and Massachusetts! Set your feet on Mammon's lie!

Perish banks and perish traffic, spin your cotton's latest pound,

But in Heaven's name keep your honor,
keep the heart o' the Bay State
sound!'

Where's the man for Massachusetts?
Where's the voice to speak her free?

Where's the hand to light up bonfires from her mountains to the sea? 20

Beats her Pilgrim pulse no longer? Sits she dumb in her despair?

Has she none to break the silence? Has she none to do and dare?

O my God! for one right worthy to lift up her rusted shield,

And to plant again the Pine-Tree in her banner's tattered field!

1846.

TO A SOUTHERN STATESMAN.

John C. Calhoun, who had strongly urged the extension of slave territory by the annexation of Texas, even if it should involve a war with England, was unwilling to promote the acquisition of Oregon, which would enlarge the Northern domain of freedom, and pleaded as an excuse the peril of foreign complications which he had defied when the interests of slavery were involved.

Is this thy voice whose treble notes of fear
Wail in the wind? And dost thou shake to hear,

Actæon-like, the bay of thine own hounds,
Spurning the leash, and leaping o'er their bounds?

Sore-baffled statesman! when thy eager
hand,

With game afoot, unslipped the hungry
pack,

To hunt down Freedom in her chosen land,
Hadst thou no fear, that, ere long, doubling
back,

These dogs of thine might snuff on Slavery's track?

Where's now the boast, which even thy guarded tongue,

Cold, calm, and proud, in the teeth o' the Senate flung,

O'er the fulfilment of thy baleful plan,
Like Satan's triumph at the fall of man?

How stood'st thou then, thy feet on Freedom planting,

And pointing to the lurid heaven afar, 15
Whence all could see, through the south
windows slanting,

Crimson as blood, the beams of that Lone
Star!

The Fates are just; they give us but our
own;

Nemesis ripens what our hands have sown.
There is an Eastern story, not unknown, Doubtless, to thee, of one whose magic skill

Called demons up his water-jars to fill;
Defly and silently, they did his will,
But, when the task was done, kept pouring
still.

In vain with spell and charm the wizard
wrought,

Faster and faster were the buckets brought,
Higher and higher rose the flood around,
Till the fiends clapped their hands above their master drowned!

So, Carolinian, it may prove with thee,
For God still overrules man's schemes,
and takes

Craftiness in its self-set snare, and makes
The wrath of man to praise Him. It may be,

That the roused spirits of Democracy

May leave to freer States the same wide
door

Through which thy slave-cursed Texas entered in,

From out the blood and fire, the wrong
and sin,

Of the stormed city and the ghastly
plain,

Beat by hot hail, and wet with bloody
rain,

The myriad-handed pioneer may pour,
And the wild West with the roused North combine

And heave the engineer of evil with his mine.

1846.

AT WASHINGTON.

Suggested by a visit to the city of Washington, in the 12th month of 1845. [Originally entitled Lines]

With a cold and wintry noon-light
On its roofs and steeples shed,
Shadows weaving with the sunlight
From the gray sky overhead,

Broadly, vaguely, all around me, lies the half-built town outspread.

Through this broad street, restless ever,
Ebbs and flows a human tide,
Wave on wave a living river;
Wealth and fashion side by side;

Toiler, idler, slave and master, in the same quick current glide.

Underneath yon dome, whose coping
Springs above them, vast and tall,
Grave men in the dust are groping
For the largess, base and small,
Which the hand of Power is scattering,
crumbs which from its table fall.

Base of heart! They vilely barter
Honor's wealth for party's place;
Step by step on Freedom's charter
Leaving footprints of disgrace;
For to-day's poor pittance turning from the great hope of their race.

Yet, where festal lamps are throwing
 Glory round the dancer's hair,
 Gold-tressed, like an angel's, flowing
 Backward on the sunset air;
 And the low quick pulse of music beats its measure sweet and rare: 25

There to-night shall woman's glances,
 Star-like, welcome give to them;
 Fawning fools with shy advances
 Seek to touch their garments' hem,
 With the tongue of flattery glozing deeds which God and Truth condemn. 30

From this glittering lie my vision
 Takes a broader, sadder range,
 Full before me have arisen
 Other pictures dark and strange;
 From the parlor to the prison must the scene and witness change. 35

Hark! the heavy gate is swinging
 On its hinges, harsh and slow;
 One pale prison lamp is flinging
 On a fearful group below
 Such a light as leaves to terror whatsoever
 it does not show. 40

Pitying God! Is that a woman
 On whose wrist the shackles clash?
 Is that shriek she utters human,
 Underneath the stinging lash?
 Are they men whose eyes of madness from that sad procession flash? 45

Still the dance goes gayly onward!
 What is it to Wealth and Pride
 That without the stars are looking
 On a scene which earth should hide?
 That the slave-ship lies in waiting, rocking on Potomac's tide! 50

Vainly to that mean Ambition
 Which, upon a rival's fall,
 Winds above its old condition,
 With a reptile's slimy crawl,
 Shall the pleading voice of sorrow, shall the slave in anguish call. 55

Vainly to the child of Fashion,
 Giving to ideal woe
 Graceful luxury of compassion,
 Shall the stricken mourner go;
 Hateful seems the earnest sorrow, beautiful
 the hollow show! 60

Nay, my words are all too sweeping:
 In this crowded human mart,
 Feeling is not dead, but sleeping;
 Man's strong will and woman's heart,
 In the coming strife for Freedom, yet shall bear their generous part. 65

And from yonder sunny valleys,
 Southward in the distance lost,
 Freedom yet shall summon allies
 Worthier than the North can boast,
 With the Evil by their hearth-stones grappling at severer cost. 70

Now, the soul alone is willing:
 Faint the heart and weak the knee;
 And as yet no lip is thrilling
 With the mighty words, 'Be Free!'
 Tarryeth long the land's Good Angel, but his advent is to be! 75

Meanwhile, turning from the revel
 To the prison-cell my sight,
 For intenser hate of evil,
 For a keener sense of right,
 Shaking off thy dust, I thank thee, City of the Slaves, to-night! 80

'To thy duty now and ever!
 Dream no more of rest or stay:
 Give to Freedom's great endeavor
 All thou art and hast to-day.'
 Thus, above the city's murmur, saith a
 Voice, or seems to say. 85

Ye with heart and vision gifted
 To discern and love the right,
 Whose worn faces have been lifted
 To the slowly-growing light,
 Where from Freedom's sunrise drifted slowly back the murk of night! 90

Ye who through long years of trial
 Still have held your purpose fast,
 While a lengthening shade the dial
 From the westering sunshine cast,
 And of hope each hour's denial seemed an echo of the last! 95

O my brothers! O my sisters!
 Would to God that ye were near,
 Gazing with me down the vistas
 Of a sorrow strange and drear;
 Would to God that ye were listeners to the Voice I seem to hear! 100

With the storm above us driving,
 With the false earth mined below,
 Who shall marvel if thus striving
 We have counted friend as foe ;
 Unto one another giving in the darkness blow for blow. 105

Well it may be that our natures
 Have grown sterner and more hard,
 And the freshness of their features
 Somewhat harsh and battle-scarred,
 And their harmonies of feeling overtaken and rudely jarred. 110

Be it so. It should not swerve us
 From a purpose true and brave ;
 Dearer Freedom's rugged service
 Than the pastime of the slave ;
 Better is the storm above it than the quiet of the grave. 115

Let us then, uniting, bury
 All our idle feuds in dust,
 And to future conflicts carry
 Mutual faith and common trust ;
 Always he who most forgiveth in his brother is most just. 120

From the eternal shadow rounding
 All our sun and starlight here,
 Voices of our lost ones sounding
 Bid us be of heart and cheer,
 Through the silence, down the spaces,
 falling on the inward ear. 125

Know we not our dead are looking
 Downward with a sad surprise,
 All our strife of words rebuking
 With their mild and loving eyes ?
 Shall we grieve the holy angels ? Shall we cloud their blessed skies ? 130

Let us draw their mantles o'er us
 Which have fallen in our way ;
 Let us do the work before us,
 Cheerly, bravely, while we may,
 Ere the long night-silence cometh, and with us it is not day ! 135

THE BRANDED HAND.

Captain Jonathan Walker, of Harwich, Mass., was solicited by several fugitive slaves at Pensacola, Florida, to carry them in his vessel to the British West Indies. Although well aware of the great hazard of the enterprise he attempted to comply with the request, but was seized at sea by an American vessel, consigned to the authorities at Key West, and thence sent back to Pensacola, where, after a long and rigorous confinement in prison, he was tried and sentenced to be branded on his right hand with the letters 'S S' (slave-stealer) and amerced in a heavy fine

WELCOME home again, brave seaman !
 with thy thoughtful brow and gray,
 And the old heroic spirit of our earlier,
 better day ;
 With that front of calm endurance, on whose steady nerve in vain
 Pressed the iron of the prison, smote the fiery shafts of pain !

Is the tyrant's brand upon thee ? Did the brutal cravens aim 5
 To make God's truth thy falsehood, His holiest work thy shame ?
 When, all blood-quenched, from the torture the iron was withdrawn,
 How laughed their evil angel the baffled fools to scorn !

They change to wrong the duty which God hath written out
 On the great heart of humanity, too legible for doubt ! 10
 They, the loathsome moral lepers, blotched
 from footsole up to crown,
 Give to shame what God hath given unto honor and renown !

Why, that brand is highest honor ! than its traces never yet Upon old armorial hatchments was a prouder blazon set ;
 And thy unborn generations, as they tread our rocky strand, 15
 Shall tell with pride the story of their father's branded hand !

As the Templar home was welcome, bearing back from Syrian wars

The scars of Arab lances and of Paynim
scimitars,

The pallor of the prison, and the shackle's
crimson span,

So we meet thee, so we greet thee, truest friend of God and man. 20

He suffered for the ransom of the dear
Redeemer's grave,

Thou for His living presence in the bound
and bleeding slave;

He for a soil no longer by the feet of angels trod,

Thou for the true Shechinah, the present home of God!

For, while the jurist, sitting with the slave-whip o'er him swung, 25

From the tortured truths of freedom the lie of slavery wrung,

And the solemn priest to Moloch, on each
God-deserted shrine,

Broke the bondman's heart for bread, poured the bondman's blood for wine;

While the multitude in blindness to a far-off Saviour knelt,

And spurned, the while, the temple where a present Saviour dwelt; 30

Thou beheld'st Him in the task-field, in the prison shadows dim,

And thy mercy to the bondman, it was mercy unto Him!

In thy lone and long night-watches, sky
above and wave below,

Thou didst learn a higher wisdom than the babbling schoolmen know;

God's stars and silence taught thee, as
His angels only can, 35

That the one sole sacred thing beneath the cope of heaven is Man!

That he who treads profanely on the scrolls of law and creed,

In the depth of God's great goodness may find mercy in his need;

But woe to him who crushes the soul with chain and rod,

And herds with lower natures the awful form of God! 40

Then lift that manly right-hand, bold
ploughman of the wave!

Its branded palm shall prophesy, 'Salvation to the Slave!'

Hold up its fire-wrought language, that whoso reads may feel

His heart swell strong within him, his sinews change to steel.

Hold it up before our sunshine, up against our Northern air; 45

Ho! men of Massachusetts, for the love of God, look there!

Take it henceforth for your standard, like
the Bruce's heart of yore,

In the dark strife closing round ye, let that hand be seen before!

And the masters of the slave-land shall tremble at that sign,

When it points its finger Southward along the Puritan line: 50

Can the craft of State avail them? Can a Christless church withstand,

In the van of Freedom's onset, the coming of that hand?

1846.

THE FREED ISLANDS.

Written for the anniversary celebration of the first of August, at Milton, 1846. [Originally entitled Lines]

A FEW brief years have passed away

Since Britain drove her million slaves

Beneath the tropic's fiery ray:

God willed their freedom; and to-day

Life blooms above those island graves! 5

He spoke! across the Carib Sea,

We heard the clash of breaking chains,

And felt the heart-throb of the free,

The first, strong pulse of liberty

Which thrilled along the bondman's veins. 10

Though long delayed, and far, and slow,

The Briton's triumph shall be ours:

Wears slavery here a prouder brow

Than that which twelve short years ago

Scowled darkly from her island bowers?

Mighty alike for good or ill 16
 With Mother-land, we fully share
 The Saxon strength, the nerve of steel,
 The tireless energy of will,
 The power to do, the pride to dare. 20
 What she has done can we not do?
 Our hour and men are both at hand;
 The blast which Freedom's angel blew
 O'er her green islands, echoes through
 Each valley of our forest land. 25
 Hear it, old Europe! we have sworn
 The death of slavery. When it falls,
 Look to your vassals in their turn,
 Your poor dumb millions, crushed and
 worn,
 Your prisons and your palace walls ' 30
 O kingly mockers! scoffing show
 'What deeds in Freedom's name we do;
 Yet know that every taunt ye throw
 Across the waters, goads our slow
 Progression towards the right and true.
 Not always shall your outraged poor, 36
 Appalled by democratic crime,
 Grind as their fathers ground before;
 The hour which sees our prison door
 Swing wide shall be their triumph time.
 On then, my brothers! every blow 41
 Ye deal is felt the wide earth through;
 Whatever here uplifts the low
 Or humbles Freedom's hateful foe,
 Blesses the Old World through the
 New. 45
 Take heart! The promised hour draws
 near;
 I hear the downward beat of wings,
 And Freedom's trumpet sounding clear:
 'Joy to the people! woe and fear 49
 To new-world tyrants, old-world kings!'

A LETTER

Supposed to be written by the chairman of the 'Central Clique' at Concord, N H., to the Hon.
 M N, Jr., at Washington, giving the result of the election.

The following verses were published in the Boston Chronotype in 1846. They refer to the contest in New Hampshire, which resulted in the defeat of the pro-slavery Democracy, and in the election of John P. Hale to the United States Senate. Although their authorship was not acknowledged, it was strongly suspected

 They furnish a specimen of the way, on the whole rather good-natured, in which the liberty-lovers of half a century ago answered the social and political outlawry and mob violence to which they were subjected.

'T is over, Moses! All is lost!
 I hear the bells a-ringing;
 Of Pharaoh and his Red Sea host
 I hear the Free-Wills singing.⁵²
 We're routed, Moses, horse and foot, 5
 If there be truth in figures,
 With Federal Whigs in hot pursuit,
 And Hale, and all the 'niggers.'

Alack! alas! this month or more
 We've felt a sad foreboding; 10
 Our very dreams the burden bore
 Of central cliques exploding;
 Before our eyes a furnace shone,
 Where heads of dough were roasting,
 And one we took to be your own 15
 The traitor Hale was toasting!

Our Belknap brother heard with awe⁵³
 The Congo minstrels playing;
 At Pittsfield Reuben Leavitt saw⁵⁴
 The ghost of Storrs a-praying; 20
 And Carroll's woods were sad to see,
 With black-winged crows a-darting;
 And Black Snout looked on Ossipee,
 New-glossed with Day and Martin.

We thought the 'Old Man of the Notch'
 His face seemed changing wholly— 26
 His lips seemed thick; his nose seemed flat;
 His misty hair looked woolly;
 And Coös teamsters, shrieking, fled
 From the metamorphosed figure. 30
 'Look there!' they said, 'the Old Stone
 Head
 Himself is turning nigger!'

The schoolhouse, out of Canaan hauled⁵⁵
 Seemed turning on its track again,
 And like a great swamp-turtle crawled 35
 To Canaan village back again,

Shook off the mud and settled flat
Upon its underpinning;
A nigger on its ridge-pole sat,
From ear to ear a-grinning. 40

Gray H——d heard o' nights the
sound
Of rail-cars onward faring;
Right over Democratic ground
The iron horse came tearing.
A flag waved o'er that spectral train, 45
As high as Pittsfield steeple;
Its emblem was a broken chain,
Its motto: 'To the people!'

I dreamed that Charley took his bed,
With Hale for his physician; 50
His daily dose an old 'unread
And unreferr'd' petition.
There Hayes and Tuck as nurses sat,
As near as near could be, man;
They leech'd him with the 'Democrat';
They blistered with the 'Freeman.' 56

Ah! grisly portents! What avail
Your terrors of forewarning?
We wake to find the nightmare Hale
Astride our breasts at morning! 60
From Portsmouth lights to Indian stream
Our foes their throats are trying;
The very factory-spindles seem
To mock us while they're flying.

The hills have bonfires; in our streets 65
Flags flout us in our faces;
The newsboys, peddling off their sheets,
Are hoarse with our disgraces.
In vain we turn, for gibing wit
And shoutings follow after, 70
As if old Kearsarge had split
His granite sides with laughter!

What boots it that we pelted out
⁶⁶The anti-slavery women,
And bravely strewed their hall about 75
With tattered lace and trimming?
Was it for such a sad reverse
Our mobs became peacemakers,
And kept their tar and wooden horse
For Englishmen and Quakers? 80

For this did shifty Atherton
Make gag rules for the Great House? ⁸⁷
Wiped we for this our feet upon
Petitions in our State House?
Plied we for this our axe of doom, 85
No stubborn traitor sparing,
Who scoffed at our opinion loom,
And took to homespun wearing?

Ah, Moses! hard it is to scan
These crooked providences, • 90
Deducing from the wisest plan
The saddest consequences!
Strange that, in trampling as was meet
The nigger-men's petition,
We sprung a mine beneath our feet 95
Which opened up perdition.

How goodly, Moses, was the game
In which we've long been actors,
Supplying freedom with the name
And slavery with the practice! 100
Our smooth words fed the people's mouth,
Their ears our party rattle;
We kept them headed to the South,
As drovers do their cattle.

But now our game of politics 105
The world at large is learning;
And men grown gray in all our tricks
State's evidence are turning.
Votes and preambles subtly spun
They cram with meanings louder, 110
And load the Democratic gun
With abolition powder.

The ides of June! Woe worth the day
When, turning all things over,
The traitor Hale shall make his hay 115
From Democratic clover!
Who then shall take him in the law,
Who punish crime so flagrant?
Whose hand shall serve, whose pen shall
draw,
A writ against that 'vagrant'? 120

Alas! no hope is left us here,
And one can only pine for
The envied place of overseer
Of slaves in Carolina!

Pray, Moses, give Calhoun the wink, 125
 And see what pay he's giving!
 We've practised long enough, we think,
 To know the art of driving.

And for the faithful rank and file,
 Who know their proper stations, 130
 Perhaps it may be worth their while
 To try the rice plantations.
 Let Hale exult, let Wilson scoff,
 To see us southward scamper;
 The slaves, we know, are 'better off' 135
 Than laborers in New Hampshire !'

LINES

FROM A LETTER TO A YOUNG
CLERICAL FRIEND.

A STRENGTH Thy service cannot tire,
 A faith which doubt can never dim,
 A heart of love, a lip of fire,
 O Freedom's God ! be Thou to him !
 Speak through him words of power and
 fear, 5
 As through Thy prophet bards of old,
 And let a scornful people hear
 Once more Thy Sinai-thunders rolled.
 For lying lips Thy blessing seek, 9
 And hands of blood are raised to Thee,
 And on Thy children, crushed and weak,
 The oppressor plants his kneeling knee.
 Let then, O God ! Thy servant dare
 Thy truth in all its power to tell,
 Unmask the priestly thieves, and tear 15
 The Bible from the grasp of hell !
 From hollow rite and narrow span
 Of law and sect by Thee released,
 Oh, teach him that the Christian man
 Is holier than the Jewish priest. 20
 Chase back the shadows, gray and old,
 Of the dead ages, from his way,
 And let his hopeful eyes behold
 The dawn of Thy millennial day ;
 That day when fettered limb and mind 25
 Shall know the truth which maketh free,
 And he alone who loves his kind
 Shall, childlike, claim the love of Thee !

DANIEL NEALL.

Dr. Neall, a worthy disciple of that venerated philanthropist, Warner Mifflin, whom the Gron-dist statesman, Jean Pierre Brissot, pronounced 'an angel of mercy, the best man he ever knew,' was one of the noble band of Pennsylvania abolitionists, whose bravery was equalled only by their gentleness and tenderness. He presided at the great anti-slavery meeting in Pennsylvania Hall, May 17, 1838, when the Hall was surrounded by a furious mob. I was standing near him while the glass of the windows broken by missiles showered over him, and a deputation from the rioters forced its way to the platform, and demanded that the meeting should be closed at once. Dr. Neall drew up his tall form to its utmost height

'I am here,' he said, 'the president of this meeting, and I will be torn in pieces before I leave my place at your dictation. Go back to those who sent you. I shall do my duty.' Some years after, while visiting his relatives in his native State of Delaware, he was dragged from the house of his friends by a mob of slave holders and brutally maltreated. He bore it like a martyr of the old times ; and when released, told his persecutors that he forgave them, for it was not they but Slavery which had done the wrong. If they should ever be in Philadelphia and needed hospitality or aid, let them call on him

I.

FRIEND of the Slave, and yet the friend
 of all ;
 Lover of peace, yet ever foremost when
 The need of battling Freedom called for men
 To plant the banner on the outer wall ;
 Gentle and kindly, ever at distress 5
 Melted to more than woman's tenderness
 Yet firm and steadfast, at his duty's post
 Fronting the violence of a maddened host,
 Like some gray rock from which the waves are tossed !
 Knowing his deeds of love, men questioned
 not 10
 The faith of one whose walk and word
 were right ;
 Who tranquilly in Life's great task-field
 wrought,
 And, side by side with evil, scarcely caught
 A stain upon his pilgrim garb of white :

Prompt to redress another's wrong, his
own 15
Leaving to Time and Truth and Penitence alone.

II.

Such was our friend. Formed on the good old plan,
A true and brave and downright honest
man!

He blew no trumpet in the market-place,
Nor in the church with hypocritical face 20
Supplied with cant the lack of Christian
grace;

Loathing pretence, he did with cheerful
will

What others talked of while their hands were still;

And, while 'Lord, Lord!' the pious tyrants cried,

Who, in the poor, their Master crucified,
His daily prayer, far better understood 26
In acts than words, was simply doing
good.

So calm, so constant was his rectitude,
That by his loss alone we know its worth,
And feel how true a man has walked with us on earth. 30

SONG OF SLAVES IN THE DESERT.

'Sebah, Oasis of Fezzan, 10th March, 1846.—
This evening the female slaves were unusually excited in singing, and I had the curiosity to ask my negro servant, Said, what they were singing about. As many of them were natives of his own country, he had no difficulty in translating the Mandara or Bornou language. I had often asked the Moors to translate their songs for me, but got no satisfactory account from them. Said at first said, "Oh, they sing of Rubee" (God).
"What do you mean?" I replied, impatiently.
"Oh, don't you know?" he continued, "they asked God to give them their Atka?" (certificate of freedom). I inquired, "Is that all?" Said:
"No; they say, 'Where are we going? The world is large. O God! Where are we going?
O God!'" I inquired, "What else?" Said:
"They remember their country, Bornou, and say,
'Bornou was a pleasant country, full of all good things; but this is a bad country, and we are miserable!'" "Do they say anything else?"
Said: "No; they repeat these words over and over again, and add, 'O God! give us our Atka, and let us return again to our dear home.'"

'I am not surprised I got little satisfaction when I asked the Moors about the songs of their slaves. Who will say that the above words are not a very appropriate song? What could have been more congenially adapted to their then woful condition? It is not to be wondered at that these poor bondwomen cheer up their hearts, in their long, lonely, and painful wanderings over the desert, with words and sentiments like these; but I have often observed that their fatigue and sufferings were too great for them to strike up this melancholy dirge, and many days their plaintive strains never broke over the silence of the desert'—Richardson's Journal in Africa.

WHERE are we going? where are we going,

Where are we going, Rubee?

Lord of peoples, lord of lands,
Look across these shining sands,
Through the furnace of the noon, 5
Through the white light of the moon.

Strong the Ghiblee wind is blowing,
Strange and large the world is growing!
Speak and tell us where we are going,

Where are we going, Rubee? 10

Bornou land was rich and good,
Wells of water, fields of food,
Dourra field, and bloom of bean,
And the palm-tree cool and green:
Bornou land we see no longer, 15
Here we thirst and here we hunger,
Here the Moor-man smites in anger:

Where are we going, Rubee?

When we went from Bornou land,
We were like the leaves and sand, 20
We were many, we are few;
Life has one, and death has two:
Whitened bones our path are showing,
Thou All-seeing, thou All-knowing!
Hear us, tell us, where are we going, 25

Where are we going, Rubee?

Moons of marches from our eyes
Bornou land behind us lies;
Stranger round us day by day
Bends the desert circle gray; 30
Wild the waves of sand are flowing,
Hot the winds above them blowing,—
Lord of all things! where are we going?

Where are we going, Rubee?

We are weak, but Thou art strong ; 35
 Short our lives, but Thine is long ;
 We are blind, but Thou hast eyes
 We are fools, but Thou art wise !
 Thou, our morrow's pathway knowing
 Through the strange world round us growing, 40
 Hear us, tell us where are we going,
 Where are we going, Rubee ?

TO DELAWARE.

Written during the discussion in the Legislature of that State, in the winter of 1846-47, of a bill for the abolition of slavery.

THRICE welcome to thy sisters of the East,
 To the strong tillers of a rugged home,
 With spray-wet locks to Northern winds released,
 And hardy feet o'erswept by ocean's
 foam ;
 And to the young nymphs of the golden
 West, 5
 Whose harvest mantles, fringed with prairie bloom,
 Trail in the sunset,—O redeemed and blest,
 To the warm welcome of thy sisters
 come !
 Broad Pennsylvania, down her sail-white
 bay
 Shall give thee joy, and Jersey from her
 plains, 10
 And the great lakes, where echo, free
 away,
 Moaned never shoreward with the clank
 of chains,
 Shall weave new sun-bows in their tossing
 spray,
 And all their waves keep grateful holiday.
 And, smiling on thee through her mountain rains, 15
 Vermont shall bless thee ; and the
 granite peaks,
 And vast Katahdin o'er his woods, shall wear
 Their snow-crowns brighter in the cold,
 keen air ;
 And Massachusetts, with her rugged cheeks

O'errun with grateful tears, shall turn to
 thee, 20
 When, at thy bidding, the electric wire Shall tremble northward with its words of
 fire ;
 Glory and praise to God ! another State is free !

YORKTOWN.

Dr Thacher, surgeon in Scammiel's regiment, in his description of the siege of Yorktown, says : 'The labor on the Virginia plantations is performed altogether by a species of the human race cruelly wrested from their native country, and doomed to perpetual bondage, while their masters are manfully contending for freedom and the natural rights of man. Such is the inconsistency of human nature.' Eighteen hundred slaves were found at Yorktown, after its surrender, and restored to their masters. Well was it said by Dr. Barnes, in his late work on Slavery : 'No slave was any nearer his freedom after the surrender of Yorktown than when Patrick Henry first taught the notes of liberty to echo among the hills and vales of Virginia.'

FROM Yorktown's ruins, ranked and still,
 Two lines stretch far o'er vale and hill :
 Who curbs his steed at head of one ?
 Hark ! the low murmur : Washington !
 Who bends his keen, approving glance, 5
 Where down the gorgeous line of France
 Shine knightly star and plume of snow ?
 Thou too art victor, Rochambeau !

The earth which bears this calm array
 Shook with the war-charge yesterday, 10
 Ploughed deep with hurrying hoof and
 wheel,
 Shot-sown and bladed thick with steel ;
 October's clear and noonday sun
 Paled in the breath-smoke of the gun,
 And down night's double blackness fell, 15
 Like a dropped star, the blazing shell.

Now all is hushed : the gleaming lines
 Stand moveless as the neighboring pines ;
 While through them, sullen, grim, and
 slow,
 The conquered hosts of England go : 20
 O'Hara's brow belies his dress,
 Gay Tarleton's troop rides bannerless :

Shout, from thy fired and wasted homes,
Thy scourge, Virginia, captive comes!

Nor thou alone: with one glad voice 25
Let all thy sister States rejoice;
Let Freedom, in whatever clime
She waits with sleepless eye her time,
Shouting from cave and mountain wood
Make glad her desert solitude, 30
While they who hunt her quail with fear;
The New World's chain lies broken here!

But who are they, who, cowering, wait
Within the shattered fortress gate?
Dark tillers of Virginia's soil, 35
Classed with the battle's common spoil,
With household stuffs, and fowl, and swine,
With Indian weed and planters' wine,
With stolen beeves, and foraged corn,—
Are they not men, Virginian born? 40

Oh, veil your faces, young and brave!
Sleep, Scammel, in thy soldier grave!
Sons of the Northland, ye who set
Stout hearts against the bayonet,
And pressed with steady footfall near 45
The moated battery's blazing tier,
Turn your scarred faces from the sight,
Let shame do homage to the right!

Lo! fourscore years have passed; and
where
The Gallic bugles stirred the air, 50
And, through breached batteries, side by
side,
To victory stormed the hosts allied,
And brave foes ground, pale with pain,
The arms they might not lift again,
As abject as in that old day 55
The slave still toils his life away.

Oh, fields still green and fresh in story,
Old days of pride, old names of glory,
Old marvels of the tongue and pen,
Old thoughts which stirred the hearts of
men, 60

Ye spared the wrong; and over all
Behold the avenging shadow fall!
Your world-wide honor stained with
shame,—
Your freedom's self a hollow name!

Where's now the flag of that old war? 65
Where flows its stripe? Where burns its star?

Bear witness, Palo Alto's day,
Dark Vale of Palms, red Monterey,
Where Mexic Freedom, young and weak,
Fleshes the Northern eagle's beak; 70
Symbol of terror and despair,
Of chains and slaves, go seek it there!

Laugh, Prussia, midst thy iron ranks!
Laugh, Russia, from thy Neva's banks!
Brave sport to see the fledgling born 75
Of Freedom by its parent torn!
Safe now is Spielberg's dungeon cell,
Safe drear Siberia's frozen hell:
With Slavery's flag o'er both unrolled, 79
What of the New World fears the Old?

1847.

RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE.

[Though not published until 1847, several lines indicate that the poem was written not long after Randolph's death in 1838. In a letter published in July, 1833, Whittier says: 'In the last hour of his [Randolph's] existence, when his soul was struggling from its broken tenement, his latest effort was the confirmation of this generous act of a former period [the manumission of his slaves]. Light rest the turf upon him, beneath his patrimonial oaks! The prayers of many hearts made happy by his benevolence shall linger over his grave and bless it!']

O MOTHER EARTH! upon thy lap
Thy weary ones receiving,
And o'er them, silent as a dream,
Thy grassy mantle weaving,
Fold softly in thy long embrace 5
That heart so worn and broken,
And cool its pulse of fire beneath
Thy shadows old and oaken.

Shut out from him the bitter word
And serpent hiss of scorning; 10
Nor let the storms of yesterday
Disturb his quiet morning.
Breathe over him forgetfulness
Of all save deeds of kindness,
And, save to smiles of grateful eyes, 15
Press down his lids in blindness.

There, where with living ear and eye He heard Potomac's flowing, And, through his tall ancestral trees, Saw autumn's sunset glowing, He sleeps, still looking to the west, Beneath the dark wood shadow, As if he still would see the sun Sink down on wave and meadow.	20	He held his slaves, yet made withal No false and vain pretences, Nor paid a lying priest to seek For Scriptural defences. His harshest words of proud rebuke, His bitterest taunt and scorning, Fell fire-like on the Northern brow That bent to him in fawning.	65 70
Bard, Sage, and Tribune ! in himself All moods of mind contrasting,— The tenderest wail of human woe, The scorn like lightning blasting ; The pathos which from rival eyes Unwilling tears could summon, The stinging taunt, the fiery burst Of hatred scarcely human !	25 30	He held his slaves ; yet kept the while His reverence for the Human ; In the dark vassals of his will He saw but Man and Woman ! No hunter of God's outraged poor His Roanoke valley entered ; No trader in the souls of men Across his threshold ventured.	75 80
Mirth, sparkling like a diamond shower, From lips of life-long sadness ; Clear picturings of majestic thought Upon a ground of madness ; And over all Romance and Song A classic beauty throwing, And laurelled Olio at his side Her storied pages showing.	35 40	And when the old and wearied man Lay down for his last sleeping, And at his side, a slave no more, His brother-man stood weeping, His latest thought, his latest breath, To Freedom's duty giving, With failing tongue and trembling hand The dying blest the living.	85
All parties feared him : each in turn Beheld its schemes disjointed, As right or left his fatal glance And spectral finger pointed. Sworn foe of Cant, he smote it down With trenchant wit unsparing, And, mocking, rent with ruthless hand The robe Pretence was wearing.	45	Oh, never bore his ancient State A truer son or braver ! None trampling with a calmer scorn On foreign hate or favor. He knew her faults, yet never stooped His proud and manly feeling To poor excuses of the wrong Or meanness of concealing.	90 95
Too honest or too proud to feign A love he never cherished, Beyond Virginia's border line His patriotism perished. While others hailed in distant skies Our eagle's dusky pinion, He only saw the mountain bird Stoop o'er his Old Dominion !	50 55	But none beheld with clearer eye The plague-spot o'er her spreading, None heard more sure the steps of Doom Along her future treading. For her as for himself he spake, When, his gaunt frame upbracing, He traced with dying hand 'Remorse !' And perished in the tracing.	100
Still through each change of fortune strange, Racked nerve, and brain all burning, His loving faith in Mother-land Knew never shade of turning ; By Britain's lakes, by Neva's tide, Whatever sky was o'er him, He heard her rivers' rushing sound, Her blue peaks rose before him.	60	As from the grave where Henry sleeps, From Vernon's weeping willow, And from the grassy pall which hides The Sage of Monticello, So from the leaf-strewn burial-stone Of Randolph's lowly dwelling, Virginia ! o'er thy land of slaves A warning voice is swelling !	105 110

And hark ! from thy deserted fields
 Are sadder warnings spoken,
 From quenched hearths, where thy exiled
 sons 115

Their household gods have broken.
 The curse is on thee,—wolves for men,
 And briers for corn-sheaves giving !
 Oh, more than all thy dead renown
 Were now one hero living ! 120

THE LOST STATESMAN.

Written on hearing of the death of Silas
 Wright of New York. [Originally entitled Lines.]

As they who, tossing midst the storm at
 night,
 While turnings shoreward, where a beacon
 shone,

Meet the walled blackness of the heaven
 alone,
 So, on the turbulent waves of party tossed,
 In gloom and tempest, men have seen thy
 light 5

Quenched in the darkness. At thy hour of noon,
 While life was pleasant to thy undimmed
 sight,

And, day by day, within thy spirit grew
 A holier hope than young Ambition knew,
 As through thy rural quiet, not in vain, 10
 Pierced the sharp thrill of Freedom's cry
 of pain,

Man of the millions, thou art lost too
 soon !

Portents at which the bravest stand aghast,—

The birth-throes of a Future, strange and vast,

Alarm the land ; yet thou, so wise and
 strong, 15

Suddenly summoned to the burial bed,
 Lapped in its slumbers deep and ever
 long,

Hear'st not the tumult surging overhead.
 Who now shall rally Freedom's scattering host ?

Who wear the mantle of the leader lost ?

Who stay the march of slavery ? He whose voice 21

Hath called thee from thy task-field shall not lack

Yet bolder champions, to beat bravely
 back

The wrong which, through His poor ones,
 reaches Him :

Yet firmer hands shall Freedom's torch-lights trim, 25

And wave them high across the abysmal
 black,

Till bound, dumb millions there shall see them and rejoice.

THE SLAVES OF MARTINIQUE.

Suggested by a daguerreotype taken from a small French engraving of two negro figures, sent to the writer by Oliver Johnson

BEAMS of noon, like burning lances, through the tree-tops flash and glisten,
 As she stands before her lover, with raised face to look and listen.

Dark, but comely, like the maiden in the ancient Jewish song :

Scarcely has the toil of task-fields done
 her graceful beauty wrong.

He, the strong one and the manly, with the vassal's garb and hue, 5
 Holding still his spirit's birthright, to his higher nature true ;

Hiding deep the strengthening purpose
 of a freeman in his heart,

As the gregree holds his Fetich from the white man's gaze apart.

Ever foremost of his comrades, when the driver's morning horn

Calls away to stifling mill-house, to the fields of cane and corn : 10

Fall the keen and burning lashes never on his back or limb ;

Scarce with look or word of censure, turns the driver unto him.

Yet, his brow is always thoughtful, and his eye is hard and stern ;
Slavery's last and humblest lesson he has never deigned to learn.

And, at evening, when his comrades dance before their master's door, 15
Folding arms and knitting forehead, stands he silent evermore.

God be praised for every instinct which rebels against a lot
Where the brute survives the human, and man's upright form is not !

As the serpent-like bejuco winds his spiral fold on fold
Round the tall and stately ceiba, till it withers in his hold ; 20

Slow decays the forest monarch, closer girds the fell embrace,
Till the tree is seen no longer, and the vine is in its place ;

So a base and bestial nature round the
vassal's manhood twines,
And the spirit wastes beneath it, like the ceiba choked with vines.

God is Love, saith the Evangel ; and our world of woe and sin 25
Is made light and happy only when a Love is shining in.

Ye whose lives are free as sunshine, finding, wheresoe'er ye roam,
Smiles of welcome, looks of kindness,
making all the world like home ;

In the veins of whose affections kindred blood is but a part,
Of one kindly current throbbing from the universal heart ; 30

Can ye know the deeper meaning of a love
in Slavery nursed,
Last flower of a lost Eden, blooming in that Soil accursed ?

Love of Home, and Love of Woman !—
dear to all, but doubly dear
To the heart whose pulses elsewhere measure only hate and fear.

All around the desert circles, underneath
a brazen sky, 35
Only one green spot remaining where the dew is never dry !

From the horror of that desert, from its atmosphere of hell,
Turns the fainting spirit thither, as the diver seeks his bell.

'Tis the fervid tropic noontime ; faint and low the sea-waves beat ;
Hazy rise the inland mountains through the glimmer of the heat,— 40

Where, through mingled leaves and blossoms, arrowy sunbeams flash and glisten,
Speaks her lover to the slave-girl, and she lifts her head to listen.—

'We shall live as slaves no longer ! Freedom's hour is close at hand !
Rocks her bark upon the waters, rests the boat upon the strand !

'I have seen the Haytien Captain ; I have seen his swarthy crew, 45
Haters of the pallid faces, to their race and color true.

'They have sworn to wait our coming till the night has passed its noon,
And the gray and darkening waters roll
above the sunken moon !'

Oh, the blessed hope of freedom ! how with joy and glad surprise,
For an instant throbs her bosom, for an instant beam her eyes ! 50

But she looks across the valley, where her mother's hut is seen,
Through the snowy bloom of coffee, and the lemon-leaves so green.

And she answers, sad and earnest : 'It were wrong for thee to stay ;
God hath heard thy prayer for freedom,
and His finger points the way.

'Well I know with what endurance, for the sake of me and mine, 55
Thou hast borne too long a burden never meant for souls like thine.

'Go; and at the hour of midnight, when our last farewell is o'er,
Kneeling on our place of parting, I will bless thee from the shore.

'But for me, my mother, lying on her sick-bed all the day,
Lifts her weary head to watch me, coming through the twilight ray. 60

'Should I leave her sick and helpless,
even freedom, shared with thee.
Would be sadder far than bondage, lonely toil, and stripes to me.

'For my heart would die within me, and my brain would soon be wild;
I should hear my mother calling through the twilight for her child !'

Blazing upward from the ocean, shines
the sun of morning-time, 65
Through the coffee-trees in blossom, and green hedges of the lime.

Side by side, amidst the slave-gang, toil
the lover and the maid;
Wherefore looks he o'er the waters, leaning forward on his spade?

Sadly looks he, deeply sighs he: 'tis the Haytien's sail he sees,
Like a white cloud of the mountains,
driven seaward by the breeze ! 70

But his arm a light hand presses, and he hears a low voice call:
Hate of Slavery, hope of Freedom, Love is mightier than all.

1848.

THE CURSE OF THE CHARTER- BREAKERS.

The rights and liberties affirmed by Magna Charta were deemed of such importance, in the thirteenth century, that the Bishops, twice a year, with tapers burning, and in their pontifical robes, pronounced, in the presence of the king and the representatives of the estates of England, the greater excommunication against the infringer of that instrument. The imposing ceremony took place in the great Hall of Westminster.

A copy of the curse, as pronounced in 1253, declares that, 'by the authority of Almighty God, and the blessed Apostles and Martyrs, and all the saints in heaven, all those who violate the English liberties, and secretly or openly, by deed, word, or counsel, do make statutes, or observe them being made, against said liberties, are accursed and sequestered from the company of heaven and the sacraments of the Holy Church'

William Penn, in his admirable political pamphlet, England's Present Interest Considered, alluding to the curse of the Charter-breakers, says: 'I am no Roman Catholic, and little value their other curses; yet I declare I would not for the world incur this curse, as every man deservedly doth, who offers violence to the fundamental freedom thereby repeated and confirmed'

In Westminster's royal halls,
Robed in their pontificals,
England's ancient prelates stood
For the people's right and good.

Closed around the waiting crowd, 5
Dark and still, like winter's cloud;
King and council, lord and knight,
Squire and yeoman, stood in sight;

Stood to hear the priest rehearse,
In God's name, the Church's curse, 10
By the tapers round them lit,
Slowly, sternly uttering it.

'Right of voice in framing laws,
Right of peers to try each cause;
Peasant homestead, mean and small, 15
Sacred as the monarch's hall,—

'Whoso lays his hand on these,
England's ancient liberties;
Whoso breaks, by word or deed,
England's vow at Runnymede; 20

'Be he Prince or belted knight,
Whatsoever his rank or might,
If the highest, then the worst,
Let him live and die accursed.

'Thou, who to Thy Church hast given 25
Keys alike of hell and heaven,
Make our word and witness sure,
Let the curse we speak endure !'

Silent, while that curse was said,
Every bare and listening head 30
Bowed in reverent awe, and then
All the people said, Amen !

Seven times the bells have tolled,
For the centuries gray and old,
Since that stoled and mitred band
Cursed the tyrants of their land. 35

Since the priesthood, like a tower,
Stood between the poor and power;
And the wronged and trodden down
Blessed the abbot's shaven crown. 40

Gone, thank God, their wizard spell,
Lost, their keys of heaven and hell;
Yet I sigh for men as bold
As those bearded priests of old.

Now too oft the priesthood wait 45
At the threshold of the state;
Waiting for the beck and nod
Of its power as law and God.

Fraud exults, while solemn words
Sanctify his stolen hoards; 50
Slavery laughs, while ghostly lips
Bless his manacles and whips.

Not on them the poor rely,
Not to them looks liberty,
Who with fawning falsehood cower 55
To the wrong, when clothed with power.

Oh, to see them meanly cling,
Round the master, round the king,
Sported with, and sold and bought,— Pitiful sight is not! 60

Tell me not that this must be:
God's true priest is always free;
Free, the needed truth to speak,
Right the wronged, and raise the weak.

Not to fawn on wealth and state, 65
Leaving Lazarus at the gate;
Not to peddle creeds like wares;
Not to mutter hireling prayers;

Nor to paint the new life's bliss
On the sable ground of this; 70
Golden streets for idle knave,
Sabbath rest for weary slave!

Not for words and works like these,
Priest of God, thy mission is;
But to make earth's desert glad, 75
In its Eden greenness clad;

And to level manhood bring
Lord and peasant, serf and king;
And the Christ of God to find
In the humblest of thy kind! 80

Thine to work as well as pray,
Clearing thorny wrongs away;
Plucking up the weeds of sin,
Letting heaven's warm sunshine in;

Watching on the hills of Faith; 85
Listening what the spirit saith,
Of the dim-seen light afar,
Growing like a nearing star.

God's interpreter art thou,
To the waiting ones below; 90
'Twixt them and its light midway
Heralding the better day;

Catching gleams of temple spires,
Hearing notes of angel choirs,
Where, as yet unseen of them, 95
Comes the New Jerusalem!

Like the seer of Patmos gazing,
On the glory downward blazing;
Till upon Earth's grateful sod
Rests the City of our God! 100 1848.

ÆAN.

This poem indicates the exultation of the anti-slavery party, in view of the revolt of the friends of Martin Van Buren in New York from the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1848.

Now, joy and thanks forevermore!
The dreary night has wellnigh passed,
The slumbers of the North are o'er,
The Giant stands erect at last!

More than we hoped in that dark time 5
When, faint with watching, few and worn,

We saw no welcome day-star climb
The cold gray pathway of the morn!

O weary hours! O night of years!
What storms our darkling pathway swept, 10
Where, beating back our thronging fears,
By Faith alone our march we kept.

How jeered the scoffing crowd behind,
 How mocked before the tyrant train,
 As, one by one, the true and kind 15
 Fell fainting in our path of pain !

They died, their brave hearts breaking
 slow,
 But, self-forgotten to the last,
 In words of cheer and bugle blow
 Their breath upon the darkness passed.

A mighty host, on either hand, 21
 Stood waiting for the dawn of day
 To crush like reeds our feeble band ;
 The morn has come, and where are they ?

Troop after troop their line forsakes ; 25
 With peace-white banners waving free,
 And from our own the glad shout breaks,
 Of Freedom and Fraternity !

Like mist before the growing light,
 The hostile cohorts melt away ; 30
 Our frowning foemen of the night
 Are brothers at the dawn of day !

As unto these repentant ones
 We open wide our toil-worn ranks,
 Along our line a murmur runs 35
 Of song, and praise, and grateful thanks.

Sound for the onset ! Blast on blast !
 Till Slavery's minions cower and quail ;
 One charge of fire shall drive them fast
 Like chaff before our Northern gale ! 40

O prisoners in your house of pain,
 Dumb, toiling millions, bound and sold,
 Look ! stretched o'er Southern vale and
 plain,
 The Lord's delivering hand behold !

Above the tyrant's pride of power, 45
 His iron gates and guarded wall,
 The bolts which shattered Shinar's tower
 Hang, smoking, for a fiercer fall.

Awake ! awake ! my Fatherland !
 It is thy Northern light that shines ; 50
 This stirring march of Freedom's band
 The storm-song of thy mountain pines.

Wake, dwellers where the day expires !
 And hear, in winds that sweep your lakes
 And fan your prairies' roaring fires, 55
 The signal-call that Freedom makes !
 1848.

THE CRISIS.

Written on learning the terms of the treaty with Mexico.

ACROSS the Stony Mountains, o'er the
 desert's drouth and sand,
 The circles of our empire touch the western ocean's strand ;
 From slumberous Timpanogos, to Gila,
 wild and free,
 Flowing down from Nuevo-Leon to California's sea ;
 And from the mountains of the east, to 5
 Santa Rosa's shore,
 The eagles of Mexitli shall beat the air
 no more.

O Vale of Rio Bravo ! Let thy simple children weep ;
 Close watch about their holy fire let maids
 of Pecos keep ;
 Let Taos send her cry across Sierra
 Madre's pines,
 And Santa Barbara toll her bells amidst her corn and vines ; 10
 For lo ! the pale land-seekers come, with eager eyes of gain,
 Wide scattering, like the bison herds on broad Salada's plain.

Let Sacramento's herdsman heed what sound the winds bring down
 Of footsteps on the crisping snow, from cold Nevada's crown !
 Full hot and fast the Saxon rides, with rein of travel slack, 15
 And, bending o'er his saddle, leaves the sunrise at his back ;
 By many a lonely river, and gorge of fir
 and pine,
 On many a wintry hill-top, his nightly
 camp-fires shine.

O countrymen and brothers ! that land of lake and plain,
Of salt wastes alternating with valleys fat with grain ; 20
Of mountains white with winter, looking downward, cold, serene,
On their feet with spring-vines tangled and lapped in softest green ;
Swift through whose black volcanic gates,
o'er many a sunny vale,
Wind-like the Arapahoe sweeps the bison's dusty trail !

Great spaces yet untravelled, great lakes whose mystic shores 25
The Saxon rifle never heard, nor dip of Saxon oars ;
Great herds that wander all unwatched,
wild steeds that none have tamed,
Strange fish in unknown streams, and birds the Saxon never named ;
Deep mines, dark mountain crucibles,
where Nature's chemic powers
Work out the Great Designer's will ; all all these ye say are ours ! 30

Forever ours ! for good or ill, on us the burden lies :
(God's balance, watched by angels, is hung across the skies.
Shall Justice, Truth, and Freedom turn
the poised and trembling scale ?
Or shall the Evil triumph, and robber
Wrong prevail ?
Shall the broad land o'er which our flag in starry splendor waves, 35
Forego through us its freedom, and bear
the tread of slaves ?

The day is breaking in the East of which the prophets told,
And brightens up the sky of Time the Christian Age of Gold ;
Old Might to Right is yielding, battle blade to clerkly pen,
Earth's monarchs are her peoples, and her serfs stand up as men ; 40
The isles rejoice together, in a day are nations born,
And the slave walks free in Tunis, and by Stamboul's Golden Horn !

Is this, O countrymen of mine ! a day for us to sow
The soil of new-gained empire with slavery's seeds of woe ?
To feed with our fresh life-blood the Old
World's cast-off crime, 45
Dropped, like some monstrous early birth,
from the tired lap of Time ?
To run anew the evil race the old lost nations ran,
And die like them of unbelief of God, and wrong of man ?

Great Heaven ! Is this our mission ? End in this the prayers and tears,
The toil, the strife, the watchings of our younger, better years ? 50
Still as the Old World rolls in light, shall ours in shadow turn,
A beamless Chaos, cursed of God, through outer darkness borne ?
Where the far nations looked for light, a blackness in the air ?
Where for words of hope they listened,
the long wail of despair ?

The Crisis presses on us ; face to face with us it stands, 55
With solemn lips of question, like the Sphinx in Egypt's sands !
This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin ;
This day for all hereafter choose we holiness or sin ;
Even now from starry Gerizim, or Ebal's
cloudy crown,
We call the dews of blessing or the bolts
of cursing down ! 60

By all for which the martyrs bore their agony and shame ;
By all the warning words of truth with which the prophets came ;
By the Future which awaits us ; by all the hopes which cast
Their faint and trembling beams across the blackness of the Past ;
And by the blessed thought of Him who for Earth's freedom died, 65
O my people ! O my brothers ! let us choose the righteous side.

So shall the Northern pioneer go joyful on his way ;
 To wed Penobscot's waters to San Francisco's bay ;
 To make the rugged places smooth, and
 sow the vales with grain ;
 And bear, with Liberty and Law, the Bible in his train : 70
 The mighty West shall bless the East, and sea shall answer sea,
 And mountain unto mountain call, Praise
 God, for we are free !
 1848.

LINES ON THE PORTRAIT OF A CELEBRATED PUBLISHER.

The lines following were addressed to a magazine publisher, who, alarmed for his Southern circulation, not only dropped the name of Grace Greenwood from his list of contributors, but made an offensive parade of his action, with the view of strengthening his position among slaveholders and conservatives. By some coincidence his portrait was issued about the same time.

A MOONY breadth of virgin face,
 By thought unviolated ;
 A patient mouth, to take from scorn
 The hook with bank-notes baited !
 Its self-complacent sleekness shows 5
 How thrift goes with the fawner ;
 An unctuous unconcern of all
 Which nice folks call dishonor !
 A pleasant print to peddle out
 In lands of rice and cotton ; 10
 The model of that face in dough
 Would make the artist's fortune.
 For Fame to thee has come unsought,
 While others vainly woo her,
 In proof how mean a thing can make 15
 A great man of its doer.
 To whom shall men thyself compare,
 Since common models fail 'em,
 Save classic goose of ancient Rome,
 Or sacred ass of Balaam ? 20
 The gabble of that wakeful goose
 Saved Rome from sack of Brennus ;
 The braying of the prophet's ass
 Betrayed the angel's menace !

So when Guy Fawkes, in petticoats, 25
 And azure-tinted hose on,
 Was twisting from thy love-lorn sheets
 The slow-match of explosion—
 An earthquake blast that would have tossed
 The Union as a feather, 30
 Thy instinct saved a perilled land
 And perilled purse together.
 Just think of Carolina's sage
 Sent whirling like a Dervish,
 Of Quattlebum in middle air 35
 Performing strange drill-service !
 Doomed like Assyria's lord of old,
 Who fell before the Jewess,
 Or sad Abimelech, to sigh,
 'Alas ! a woman slew us !' 40

Thou saw'st beneath a fair disguise
 The danger darkly lurking,
 And maiden bodice dreaded more
 Than warrior's steel-wrought jerkin.
 How keen to scent the hidden plot ! 45
 How prompt wert thou to balk it,
 With patriot zeal and pedler thrift,
 For country and for pocket !
 Thy likeness here is doubtless well,
 But higher honor's due it ; 50
 On auction-block and negro-jail
 Admiring eyes should view it.
 Or, hung aloft, it well might grace
 The nation's senate-chamber—
 A greedy Northern bottle-fly 55
 Preserved in Slavery's amber !

DERNE.

The storming of the city of Derne, in 1805, by General Eaton, at the head of nine Americans, forty Greeks, and a motley array of Turks and Arabs, was one of those feats of hardihood and daring which have in all ages attracted the admiration of the multitude. The higher and hollower heroism of Christian self-denial and sacrifice, in the humble walks of private duty, is seldom so well appreciated.

NIGHT on the city of the Moor !
 On mosque and tomb, and white-walled
 shore,

On sea-waves, to whose ceaseless knock
 The narrow harbor-gates unlock,
 On corsair's galley, carack tall, 5
 And plundered Christian caravan !
 The sounds of Moslem life are still ;
 No mule-bell tinkles down the hill ;
 Stretched in the broad court of the khan,
 The dusty Bornou caravan 10
 Lies heaped in slumber, beast and man ;
 The Sheik is dreaming in his tent,
 His noisy Arab tongue o'erspent ;
 The kiosk's glimmering lights are gone,
 The merchant with his wares withdrawn ;
 Rough pillowed on some pirate breast, 16
 The dancing-girl has sunk to rest ;
 And, save where measured footsteps fall
 Along the Bashaw's guarded wall,
 Or where, like some bad dream, the Jew
 Creeps stealthily his quarter through, 21
 Or counts with fear his golden heaps,
 The City of the Corsair sleeps !

But where yon prison long and low
 Stands black against the pale star-glow, 25
 Chafed by the ceaseless wash of waves,
 There watch and pine the Christian
 slaves ;
 Rough-bearded men, whose far-off wives
 Wear out with grief their lonely lives ;
 And youth, still flashing from his eyes 30
 The clear blue of New England skies,
 A treasured lock of whose soft hair
 Now wakes some sorrowing mother's
 prayer ;
 Or, worn upon some maiden breast,
 Stirs with the loving heart's unrest ! 35

A bitter cup each life must drain,
 The groaning earth is cursed with pain,
 And, like the scroll the angel bore
 The shuddering Hebrew seer before,
 O'erwrit alike, without, within, 40
 With all the woes which follow sin ;
 But, bitterest of the ills beneath
 Whose load man totters down to death,
 Is that which plucks the regal crown
 Of Freedom from his forehead down, 45
 And snatches from his powerless hand
 The sceptred sign of self-command,
 Effacing with the chain and rod
 The image and the seal of God ;

Till from his nature, day by day, 50
 The manly virtues fall away,
 And leave him naked, blind and mute,
 The godlike merging in the brute !

Why mourn the quiet ones who die
 Beneath affection's tender eye, 55
 Unto their household and their kin
 Like ripened corn-sheaves gathered in ?
 O weeper, from that tranquil sod,
 That holy harvest-home of God,
 Turn to the quick and suffering, shed 60
 Thy tears upon the living dead !
 Thank God above thy dear ones' graves,
 They sleep with Him, they are not slaves.

What dark mass, down the mountain-sides
 Swift-pouring, like a stream divides ? 65
 A long, loose, straggling caravan,
 Camel and horse and armed man.
 The moon's low crescent, glimmering o'er
 Its grave of waters to the shore,
 Lights up that mountain cavalcade, 70
 And gleams from gun and spear and blade
 Near and more near ! now o'er them falls
 The shadow of the city walls.
 Hark to the sentry's challenge, drowned
 In the fierce trumpet's charging sound ! 75
 The rush of men, the musket's peal,
 The short, sharp clang of meeting steel !

Vain, Moslem, vain thy lifeblood poured
 So freely on thy foeman's sword !
 Not to the swift nor to the strong 80
 The battles of the right belong ;
 For he who strikes for Freedom wears
 The armor of the captive's prayers,
 And Nature proffers to his cause
 The strength of her eternal laws ; 85
 While he whose arm essays to bind
 And herd with common brutes his kind
 Strives evermore at fearful odds
 With Nature and the jealous gods,
 And dares the dread recoil which late 90
 Or soon their right shall vindicate.

'Tis done, the horned crescent falls !
 The star-flag flouts the broken walls !
 Joy to the captive husband ! joy
 To thy sick heart, O brown-locked boy ! 95
 In sullen wrath the conquered Moor
 Wide open flings your dungeoned-door,

And leaves ye free from cell and chain,
The owners of yourselves again.
Dark as his allies desert-born, 100
Soiled with the battle's stain, and worn
With the long marches of his band
Through hottest wastes of rock and sand,
Scorched by the sun and furnace-breath
Of the red desert's wind of death, 105
With welcome words and grasping hands,
The victor and deliverer stands !

The tale is one of distant skies ;
The dust of half a century lies
Upon it ; yet its hero's name 110
Still lingers on the lips of Fame.
Men speak the praise of him who gave Deliverance to the Moorman's slave,
Yet dare to brand with shame and crime
The heroes of our land and time, — 115
The self-forgotten ones, who stake
Home, name, and life for Freedom's sake.
God mend his heart who cannot feel
The impulse of a holy zeal,
And sees not, with his sordid eyes, 120
The beauty of self-sacrifice !
Though in the sacred place he stands,
Uplifting consecrated hands,
Unworthy are his lips to tell
Of Jesus' martyr-miracle, 125
Or name aright that dread embrace
Of suffering for a fallen race !
1850.

A SABBATH SCENE.

This poem finds its justification in the readiness with which, even in the North, clergymen urged the prompt execution of the Fugitive Slave Law as a Christian duty, and defended the system of slavery as a Bible institution.

SCARCE had the solemn Sabbath-bell
Ceased quivering in the steeple,
Scarce had the parson to his desk
Walked stately through his people,

When down the summer-shaded street 5
A wasted female figure,
With dusky brow and naked feet,
Came rushing wild and eager.

She saw the white spire through the trees,

She heard the sweet hymn swelling : 10
O pitying Christ ! a refuge give
That poor one in Thy dwelling !

Like a scared fawn before the hounds,
Right up the aisle she glided,
While close behind her, whip in hand, 15
A lank-haired hunter strided.

She raised a keen and bitter cry,
To Heaven and Earth appealing ;
Were manhood's generous pulses dead ?
Had woman's heart no feeling ? 20

A score of stout hands rose between
The hunter and the flying :
Age clenched his staff, and maiden eyes
Flashed tearful, yet defying.

'Who dares profane this house and day ?'
Cried out the angry pastor. 26
'Why, bless your soul, the wench's a
slave,
And I'm her lord and master !

'I've law and gospel on my side,
And who shall dare refuse me ?' 30
Down came the parson, bowing low,
'My good sir, pray excuse me !

'Of course I know your right divine
To own and work and whip her ;
Quick, deacon, throw that Polyglott 35
Before the wench, and trip her !'

Plump dropped the holy tome, and o'er
Its sacred pages stumbling,
Bound hand and foot, a slave once more,
The hapless wretch lay trembling. 40

I saw the parson tie the knots,
The while his flock addressing,
The Scriptural claims of slavery
With text on text impressing.

'Although,' said he, 'on Sabbath day 45
All secular occupations
Are deadly sins, we must fulfil
Our moral obligations :

'And this commends itself as one To every conscience tender; As Paul sent back Onesimus, My Christian friends, we send her!'	50	And freely from the cherry-bough Above the casement swinging, With golden bosom to the sun, The oriole was singing.	95
Shriek rose on shriek,—the Sabbath air Her wild cries tore asunder; I listened, with hushed breath, to hear God answering with His thunder!	55	As bird and flower made plain of old The lesson of the Teacher, So now I heard the written Word Interpreted by Nature!	100
All still! the very altar's cloth Had smothered down her shrieking, And, dumb, she turned from face to face, For human pity seeking!	60	For to my ear methought the breeze Bore Freedom's blessed word on; Thus saith the Lord: Break every yoke, Undo the heavy burden!	1850.
I saw her dragged along the aisle, Her shackles harshly clanking; I heard the parson, over all, The Lord devoutly thanking!		IN THE EVIL DAYS.
My brain took fire: 'Is this,' I cried, 'The end of prayer and preaching? Then down with pulpit, down with priest, And give us Nature's teaching!	65	This and the four following poems have special reference to that darkest hour in the aggression of slavery which preceded the dawn of a better day, when the conscience of the people was roused to action [Originally entitled Stanzas for the Times, 1850]
'Foul shame and scorn be on ye all Who turn the good to evil, And steal the Bible from the Lord, To give it to the Devil!	70	THE evil days have come, the poor Are made a prey; Bar up the hospitable door, Put out the fire-lights, point no more The wanderer's way.	5
'Than garbled text or parchment law I own a statute higher; And God is true, though every book And every man's a liar!'	75	For Pity now is crime; the chain Which binds our States Is melted at her hearth in twain, Is rusted by her tears' soft rain: Close up her gates.	10
Just then I felt the deacon's hand In wrath my coat-tail seize on; I heard the priest cry, 'Infidel!' The lawyer mutter, 'Treason!'	80	Our Union, like a glacier stirred By voice below, Or bell of kine, or wing of bird, A beggar's crust, a kindly word May overthrow!	15
I started up,—where now were church, Slave, master, priest, and people? I only heard the supper-bell, Instead of clanging steeple.		Poor, whispering tremblers! yet we boast Our blood and name; Bursting its century-bolted frost, Each gray cairn on the Northman's coast Cries out for shame!	20
But, on the open window's sill, O'er which the white blooms drifted, The pages of a good old Book The wind of summer lifted,	85	Oh for the open firmament, The prairie free, The desert hillside, cavern-rent, The Pawnee's lodge, the Arab's tent, The Bushman's tree!	25
And flower and vine, like angel wings Around the Holy Mother, Waved softly there, as if God's truth And Mercy kissed each other.	90

Than web of Persian loom most rare,
Or soft divan,
Better the rough rock, bleak and bare,
Or hollow tree, which man may share
With suffering man.

30

I hear a voice : 'Thus saith the Law,
Let Love be dumb ;
Clasping her liberal hands in awe,
Let sweet-lipped Charity withdraw
From hearth and home.'

35

I hear another voice : 'The poor
Are thine to feed ;
Turn not the outcast from thy door,
Nor give to bonds and wrong once more
Whom God hath freed.'

40

Dear Lord ! between that law and Thee
No choice remains ;
Yet not untrue to man's decree,
Though spurning its rewards, is he
Who bears its pains.

45

Not mine Sedition's trumpet-blast
And threatening word ;
I read the lesson of the Past,
That firm endurance wins at last
More than the sword.

50

O clear-eyed Faith, and Patience thou
So calm and strong !
Lend strength to weakness, teach us how
The sleepless eyes of God look through
This night of wrong !

MOLOCH IN STATE STREET.

In a foot-note of the Report of the Senate of Massachusetts on the case of the arrest and return to bondage of the fugitive slave Thomas Sims it is stated that—'It would have been impossible for the U. S. marshal thus successfully to have resisted the law of the State, without the assistance of the municipal authorities of Boston and the countenance and support of a numerous, wealthy, and powerful body of citizens. It was in evidence that 1600 of the most wealthy and respectable citizens—merchants, bankers, and others—volunteered their services to aid the marshal on this occasion. . . . No watch was kept upon the doings of the marshal, and while the State officers slept, after the moon had gone down, in the darkest hour before daybreak, the accused was taken out of our jurisdiction by the armed police of the city of Boston.'

THE moon has set : while yet the dawn
Breaks cold and gray,
Between the midnight and the morn
Bear off your prey !

On, swift and still ! the conscious street
Is panged and stirred ;
Tread light ! that fall of serried feet
The dead have heard !

The first drawn blood of Freedom's veins
Gushed where ye tread ;
Lo ! through the dusk the martyr-stains
Blush darkly red !

10

Beneath the slowly waning stars
And whitening day,
What stern and awful presence bars
That sacred way ?

15

What faces frown upon ye, dark
With shame and pain ?
Come these from Plymouth's Pilgrim
bark ?
Is that young Vane ?

20

Who, dimly beckoning, speed ye on
With mocking cheer ?
Lo ! spectral Andros, Hutchinson,
And Gage are here !

For ready mart or favoring blast
Through Moloch's fire,
Flesh of his flesh, unsparing, passed
The Tyrian sire.

25

Ye make that ancient sacrifice
Of Man to Gain,
Your traffic thrives, where Freedom dies,
Beneath the chain.

30

Ye sow to-day ; your harvest, scorn
And hate, is near ;
How think ye freemen, mountain-born, 35
The tale will hear ?

Thank God ! our mother State can yet
Her fame retrieve ;
To you and to your children let
The scandal cleave. 40

Chain Hall and Pulpit, Court and Press,
Make gods of gold ;
Let honor, truth, and manliness
Like wares be sold.

Your hoards are great, your walls are
strong, 45
But God is just ;
The gilded chambers built by wrong
Invite the rust.

What ! know ye not the gains of Crime
Are dust and dross ; 50
Its ventures on the waves of time
Foredoomed to loss !

And still the Pilgrim State remains
What she hath been ;
Her inland hills, her seaward plains, 55
Still nurture men !

Nor wholly lost the fallen mart ;
Her olden blood
Through many a free and generous
heart
Still pours its flood. 60

That brave old blood, quick-flowing
yet,
Shall know no check,
Till a free people's foot is set
On Slavery's neck.

Even now, the peal of bell and gun, 65
And hills aflame,
Tell of the first great triumph won
In Freedom's name.

The long night dies : the welcome gray
Of dawn we see ; 70
Speed up the heavens Thy perfect day,
God of the free !

OFFICIAL PIETY.

Suggested by reading a state paper, wherein the higher law is invoked to sustain the lower
one. [Originally entitled Lines]

A pious magistrate ! sound his praise throughout
The wondering churches. Who shall henceforth doubt
That the long-wished millennium
draweth nigh ?
Sin in high places has become devout,
Tithes mint, goes painful-faced, and prays its lie 5
Straight up to Heaven, and calls it piety !

The pirate, watching from his bloody deck
The weltering galleon, heavy with the
gold
Of Acapulco, holding death in check
While prayers are said, brows crossed,
and beads are told ; 10
The robber, kneeling where the wayside
cross
On dark Abruzzo tells of life's dread loss
From his own carbine, glancing still abroad
For some new victim, offering thanks to
God !

Rome, listening at her altars to the cry
Of midnight Murder, while her hounds of hell 16
Scour France, from baptized cannon and holy bell
And thousand-throated priesthood, loud
and high,
Pealing Te Deums to the shuddering
sky,
'Thanks to the Lord, who giveth victory !' 20

What prove these, but that crime was ne'er so black
As ghostly cheer and pious thanks to lack ?
Satan is modest. At Heaven's door he lays

His evil offspring, and, in Scriptural phrase
And saintly posture, gives to God the
praise 25
And honor of the monstrous progeny.
What marvel, then, in our own time to
see
His old devices, smoothly acted o'er,— Official piety, locking fast the door
Of Hope against three million souls of
men,— 30
Brothers, God's children, Christ's redeemed,—and then,
With uprolled eyeballs and on bended
knee,
Whining a prayer for help to hide the key!

1853.

THE RENDITION.

On the 2d of June, 1854, Anthony Burns, a fugitive slave from Virginia, after being under arrest for ten days in the Boston Court House, was remanded to slavery under the Fugitive Slave Act, and taken down State Street to a steamer chartered by the United States Government, under guard of United States troops and artillery, Massachusetts militia and Boston police. Public excitement ran high, a futile attempt to rescue Burns having been made during his confinement, and the streets were crowded with tens of thousands of people, of whom many came from other towns and cities of the State to witness the humiliating spectacle

I HEARD the train's shrill whistle call,
I saw an earnest look beseech,
And rather by that look than speech
My neighbor told me all.

And, as I thought of Liberty 5
Marched handcuffed down that sworded
street,

The solid earth beneath my feet
Reeled fluid as the sea.

I felt a sense of bitter loss,—
Shame, tearless grief, and stifling wrath,
And loathing fear, as if my path 11
A serpent stretched across.

All love of home, all pride of place,
All generous confidence and trust,
Sank smothering in that deep disgust 15
And anguish of disgrace.

Down on my native hills of June,
And home's green quiet, hiding all,
Fell sudden darkness like the fall
Of midnight upon noon! 20

And Law, an unloosed maniac, strong,
Blood-drunk, through the blackness
trod,
Hoarse-shouting in the ear of God
The blasphemy of wrong.

'O Mother, from thy memories proud, 25
Thy old renown, dear Commonwealth,
Lend this dead air a breeze of health,
And smite with stars this cloud.

'Mother of Freedom, wise and brave,
Rise awful in thy strength,' I said; 30
Ah me! I spake but to the dead;
I stood upon her grave!

ARISEN AT LAST.

On the passage of the bill to protect the rights and liberties of the people of the State against the Fugitive Slave Act. [Originally entitled simply Lines.]

I SAID I stood upon thy grave,
My Mother State, when last the moon
Of blossoms clomb the skies of June.

And, scattering ashes on my head,
I wore, undreaming of relief, 5
The sackcloth of thy shame and grief.

Again that moon of blossoms shines
On leaf and flower and folded wing,
And thou hast risen with the spring!

Once more thy strong maternal arms 10
Are round about thy children flung,—
A lioness that guards her young!

No threat is on thy closed lips,
But in thine eye a power to smite
The mad wolf backward from its light.

Southward the baffled robber's track 16
Henceforth runs only; hereaway,
The fell lycanthrope finds no prey.

Henceforth, within thy sacred gates,
His first low howl shall downward draw
The thunder of thy righteous law. 21

Not mindless of thy trade and gain,
But, acting on the wiser plan,
Thou'rt grown conservative of man.

So shalt thou clothe with life the hope, 25
Dream-painted on the sightless eyes
Of him who sang of Paradise,—

The vision of a Christian man,
In virtue, as in stature great
Embodied in a Christian State. 30

And thou, amidst thy sisterhood
Forbearing long, yet standing fast,
Shalt win their grateful thanks at last;

When North and South shall strive no
more,
And all their feuds and fears be lost 35
In Freedom's holy Pentecost.

THE HASCHISH.

Of all that Orient lands can vaunt
Of marvels with our own competing,
The strangest is the Haschish plant,
And what will follow on its eating.

What pictures to the taster rise, 5
Of Dervish or of Almeh dances!
Of Eblis, or of Paradise,
Set all aglow with Houri glances!

The poppy visions of Cathay,
The heavy beer-trance of the Suabian;
The wizard lights and demon play 11
Of nights Walpurgis and Arabian!

The Mollah and the Christian dog
Change place in mad metempsychosis;
The Muezzin climbs the synagogue, 15
The Rabbi shakes his beard at Moses!

The Arab by his desert well Sits choosing from some Caliph's
daughters,
And hears his single camel's bell
Sound welcome to his regal quarters. 20

The Koran's reader makes complaint
Of Shitan dancing on and off it;
The robber offers alms, the saint Drinks Tokay and blasphemes the Prophet.

Such scenes that Eastern plant awakes; 25
But we have one ordained to beat it,
The Haschish of the West, which makes
Or fools or knaves of all who eat it.

The preacher eats, and straight appears
His Bible in a new translation; 30
Its angels negro overseers,
And Heaven itself a snug plantation!

The man of peace, about whose dreams
The sweet millennial angels cluster,
Tastes the mad weed, and plots and
schemes, 35
A raving Cuban filibuster!

The noisiest Democrat, with ease,
It turns to Slavery's parish beadle;
The shrewdest statesman eats and sees
Due southward point the polar needle.

The Judge partakes, and sits erelong 41
Upon his bench a railing blackguard;
Decides off-hand that right is wrong,
And reads the ten commandments backward.

O potent plant! so rare a taste 45
Has never Turk or Gentoo gotten;
The hempen Haschish of the East
Is powerless to our Western Cotton!

THE KANSAS EMIGRANTS.

This poem and the three following were called out by the popular movement of Free State men to occupy the territory of Kansas, and by the use of the great democratic weapon—an overpowering majority—to settle the conflict on that ground between Freedom and Slavery. The opponents of the movement used another kind of weapon. [This song was sent to the first company of emigrants by the poet 'It is one of those prophecies,' says E E Hale, 'for which poets are born, uttered before the event and not after In absolute hard fact, the song was sung by parties of emigrants, sung when they started, sung as they rode, and sung in the new home.']

We cross the prairie as of old
The pilgrims crossed the sea,
To make the West, as they the East,
The homestead of the free !

We go to rear a wall of men
On Freedom's southern line,
And plant beside the cotton-tree
The rugged Northern pine !

We're flowing from our native hills
As our free rivers flow :
The blessing of our Mother-land
Is on us as we go.

We go to plant her common schools
On distant prairie swells,
And give the Sabbaths of the wild
The music of her bells.

Upbearing, like the Ark of old,
The Bible in our van,
We go to test the truth of God
Against the fraud of man.

No pause, nor rest, save where the streams
That feed the Kansas run,
Save where our Pilgrim gonfalon
Shall flout the setting sun !

We'll tread the prairie as of old
Our fathers sailed the sea,
And make the West, as they the East,
The homestead of the free !

FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS' SAKE.

Inscribed to friends under arrest for treason against the slave power. [Originally entitled Lines.]

THE age is dull and mean. Men creep,
Not walk; with blood too pale and tame
To pay the debt they owe to shame ;

Buy cheap, sell dear ; eat, drink, and sleep

Down-pillowed, deaf to moaning want ;
Pay tithes for soul-insurance ; keep 6
Six days to Mammon, one to Cant.

In such a time, give thanks to God,
That somewhat of the holy rage
With which the prophets in their age 10
On all its decent seemings trod,
Has set your feet upon the he,
That man and ox and soul and clod
Are market stock to sell and buy !

The hot words from your lips, my own, 15
To caution trained, might not repeat ;
But if some tares among the wheat
Of generous thought and deed were sown,
No common wrong provoked your zeal ;
The silken gauntlet that is thrown 20
In such a quarrel rings like steel.

The brave old strife the fathers saw
For Freedom calls for men again
Like those who battled not in vain
For England's Charter, Alfred's law ; 25
And right of speech and trial just Wage in your name their ancient war
With venal courts and perjured trust.

God's ways seem dark, but, soon or late,
They touch the shining hills of day ; 30
The evil cannot brook delay,
The good can well afford to wait.
Give ermined knaves their hour of crime ;

Ye have the future grand and great,
The safe appeal of Truth to Time ! 35

LETTER

FROM A MISSIONARY OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH, IN KANSAS, TO A DISTINGUISHED POLITICIAN.

DOUGLAS MISSION, August, 1854.

LAST week—the Lord be praised for all
His mercies
To His unworthy servant !—I arrived
Safe at the Mission, via Westport ; where

I tarried over night, to aid in forming
 A Vigilance Committee, to send back, 5
 In shirts of tar, and feather-doublers quilted
 With forty stripes save one, all Yankee corners,
 Uncircumcised and Gentile, aliens from
 The Commonwealth of Israel, who despise
 The prize of the high calling of the saints, 10
 Who plant amidst this heathen wilderness
 Pure gospel institutions, sanctified
 By patriarchal use. The meeting opened With prayer, as was most fitting. Half an hour,
 Or thereaway, I groaned, and strove, and wrestled, 15
 As Jacob did at Penue! till the power
 Fell on the people, and they cried 'Amen!'
 'Glory to God!' and stamped and clapped
 their hands;
 And the rough river boatmen wiped their
 eyes;
 'Go it, old hoss!' they cried, and cursed the niggers— 20
 Fulfilling thus the word of prophecy,
 'Curs'd be Canaan.' After prayer, the meeting
 Chose a committee—good and pious men—
 A Presbyterian Elder, Baptist deacon,
 A local preacher, three or four class-leaders, 25
 Anxious inquirers, and renewed backsliders,
 A score in all—to watch the river ferry,
 (As they of old did watch the fords of Jordan,)
 And cut off all whose Yankee tongues
 refuse
 The Shibboleth of the Nebraska bill. 30
 And then, in answer to repeated calls,
 I gave a brief account of what I saw
 In Washington; and truly many hearts Rejoiced to know the President, and
 you
 And all the Cabinet regularly hear 35
 The gospel message of a Sunday morning,
 Drinking with thirsty souls of the sincere Milk of the Word. Glory! Amen, and Selah!

Here, at the Mission, all things have gonè well:
 The brother who, throughout my absence,
 acted 40
 As overseer, assures me that the crops
 Never were better. I have lost one negro,
 A first-rate hand, but obstinate and sullen.
 He ran away some time last spring, and
 hid
 In the river timber. There my Indian converts 45
 Found him, and treed and shot him. For the rest,
 The heathens round about begin to feel
 The influence of our pious ministrations
 And works of love; and some of them already
 Have purchased negroes, and are settling
 down 50
 As sober Christians! Bless the Lord for this!
 I know it will rejoice you. You, I hear,
 Are on the eve of visiting Chicago,
 To fight with the wild beasts of Ephesus,
 Long John, and Dutch Free-Soilers. May your arm 55
 Be clothed with strength, and on your tongue be found
 The sweet oil of persuasion. So desires
 Your brother and co-laborer. Amen!

P.S. All's lost. Even while I write these lines,
 The Yankee abolitionists are coming 60
 Upon us like a flood—grim, stalwart
 men,
 Each face set like a flint of Plymouth
 ~ Rock
 Against our institutions—staking out
 Their farm lots on the wooded Wakarusa,
 Or squatting by the mellow-bottomed
 Kansas; 65
 The pioneers of mightier multitudes,
 The small rain-patter, ere the thunder
 shower
 Drowns the dry prairies. Hope from man is not.
 Oh, for a quiet berth at Washington,
 Snug naval chaplaincy, or clerkship, where
 These rumors of free labor and free soil 71
 Might never meet me more. Better to be

Door-keeper in the White House, than to dwell

Amidst these Yankee tents, that, whitening, show

On the green prairie like a fleet becalmed.
Methinks I hear a voice come up the river 76

From those far bayous, where the alligators

Mount guard around the camping filibusters:

'Shake off the dust of Kansas. Turn to Cuba—

(That golden orange just about to fall, 80 O'er-ripe, into the Democratic lap;)

Keep pace with Providence, or, as we say,
Manifest destiny. Go forth and follow

The message of our gospel, thither borne
Upon the point of Quitman's bowie-knife,
And the persuasive lips of Colt's revolvers. 86

There may'st thou, underneath thy vine
and fig-tree,

Watch thy increase of sugar cane and negroes,

Calm as a patriarch in his eastern tent!
Amen: So mote it be. So prays your friend. 90

BURIAL OF BARBER.

Thomas Barber was shot December 6, 1855, near Lawrence, Kansas.

BEAR him, comrades, to his grave;
Never over one more brave

Shall the prairie grasses weep,
In the ages yet to come,

When the millions in our room,
What we sow in tears, shall reap. 5

Bear him up the icy hill,
With the Kansas, frozen still

As his noble heart, below,
And the land he came to till 10

With a freeman's thews and will,
And his poor hut roofed with snow!

One more look of that dead face,
Of his murder's ghastly trace!

One more kiss, O widowed one 15

Lay your left hands on his brow,
Lift your right hands up, and vow
That his work shall yet be done.

Patience, friends! The eye of God
Every path by Murder trod 20

Watches, lidless, day and night;
And the dead man in his shroud,
And his widow weeping loud,
And our hearts, are in His sight.

Every deadly threat that swells 25
With the roar of gambling hells,
Every brutal jest and jeer,
Every wicked thought and plan

Of the cruel heart of man,
Though but whispered, He can hear! 30

We in suffering, they in crime,
Wait the just award of time,
Wait the vengeance that is due;
Not in vain a heart shall break,
Not a tear for Freedom's sake 35
Fall unheeded: God is true.

While the flag with stars bedecked
Threatens where it should protect,
And the Law shakes hands with Crime,
What is left us but to wait, 40
Match our patience to our fate,
And abide the better time?

Patience, friends! The human heart
Everywhere shall take our part,
Everywhere for us shall pray; 45
On our side are nature's laws,
And God's life is in the cause
That we suffer for to-day.

Well to suffer is divine;
Pass the watchword down the line, 50
Pass the countersign: 'Endure.'
Not to him who rashly dares,
But to him who nobly bears,
Is the victor's garland sure.

Frozen earth to frozen breast, 55
Lay our slain one down to rest;
Lay him down in hope and faith,
And above the broken sod,
Once again, to Freedom's God,
Pledge ourselves for life or death, 60

That the State whose walls we lay,
In our blood and tears, to-day,
Shall be free from bonds of shame,
And our goodly land untrod
By the feet of Slavery, shod
With cursing as with flame !

65

Plant the Buckeye on his grave,
For the hunter of the slave
In its shadow cannot rest ;
And let martyr mound and tree
Be our pledge and guaranty
Of the freedom of the West !
1856.

70

TO PENNSYLVANIA.

O STATE prayer-founded ! never hung
Such choice upon a people's tongue,
Such power to bless or ban,
As that which makes thy whisper Fate,
For which on thee the centuries wait,
And destinies of man !

5

Across thy Alleghanian chain,
With groanings from a land in pain,
The west-wind finds its way :
Wild-wailing from Missouri's flood
The crying of thy children's blood
Is in thy ears to-day !

10

And unto thee in Freedom's hour
Of sorest need God gives the power
To ruin or to save ;
To wound or heal, to blight or bless
With fertile field or wilderness,
A free home or a grave !

15

Then let thy virtue match the crime,
Rise to a level with the time ;
And, if a son of thine
Betray or tempt thee, Brutus-like
For Fatherland and Freedom strike
As Justice gives the sign.

20

Wake, sleeper, from thy dream of ease, 25
The great occasion's forelock seize ;
And let the north-wind strong,
And golden leaves of autumn, be Thy coronal of Victory
And thy triumphal song.

LE MARAIS DU CYGNE.

The massacre of unarmed and unoffending men, in Southern Kansas, in May, 1858, took place near the Marais du Cygne of the French voyageurs.

A BLUSH as of roses
Where rose never grew !
Great drops on the bunch-grass,
But not of the dew !
A taint in the sweet air
For wild bees to shun !
A stain that shall never
Bleach out in the sun !

5

Back, steed of the prairies !
Sweet song-bird, fly back !
Wheel hither, bald vulture !
Gray wolf, call thy pack !
The foul human vultures
Have feasted and fled ;
The wolves of the Border
Have crept from the dead.

10

From the hearths of their cabins,
The fields of their corn,
Unwarned and unweaponed,
The victims were torn,—
By the whirlwind of murder
Swooped up and swept on
To the low, reedy fen-lands,
The Marsh of the Swan.

20

With a vain plea for mercy
No stout knee was crooked ;
In the mouths of the rifles
Right manly they looked.
How paled the May sunshine,
O Marais du Cygne !
On death for the strong life,
On red grass for green !

25

30

In the homes of their rearing,
Yet warm with their lives,
Ye wait the dead only,
Poor children and wives !
Put out the red forge-fire,
The smith shall not come ;
Unyoke the brown oxen,
The ploughman lies dumb.

35

40

Wind slow from the Swan's Marsh,
 O dreary death-train,
 With pressed lips as bloodless
 As lips of the slain !
 Kiss down the young eyelids,
 Smooth down the gray hairs ;
 Let tears quench the curses
 That burn through your prayers.

Strong man of the prairies,
 Mourn bitter and wild !
 Wail, desolate woman !
 Weep, fatherless child !
 But the grain of God springs up
 From ashes beneath,
 And the crown of His harvest
 Is life out of death.

Not in vain on the dial
 The shade moves along,
 To point the great contrasts
 Of right and of wrong :
 Free homes and free altars,
 Free prairie and flood, —
 The reeds of the Swan's Marsh,
 Whose bloom is of blood !

On the lintels of Kansas
 That blood shall not dry ;
 Henceforth the Bad Angel
 Shall harmless go by ;
 Henceforth to the sunset,
 Unchecked on her way,
 Shall Liberty follow
 The march of the day.
 1858.

THE PASS OF THE SIERRA.

ALL night above their rocky bed
 They saw the stars march slow ;
 The wild Sierra overhead,
 The desert's death below.

The Indian from his lodge of bark,
 The gray bear from his den,
 Beyond their camp-fire's wall of dark,
 Glared on the mountain men.

Still upward turned, with anxious strain,
 Their leader's sleepless eye,
 Where splinters of the mountain chain
 Stood black against the sky.

The night waned slow : at last, a glow,
 A gleam of sudden fire,
 Shot up behind the walls of snow,
 And tipped each icy spire. 15

'Up, men !' he cried, 'yon rocky cone,
 To-day, please God, we'll pass,
 And look from Winter's frozen throne
 On Summer's flowers and grass !' 20

They set their faces to the blast,
 They trod the eternal snow,
 And faint, worn, bleeding, hailed at last
 The promised land below.

Behind, they saw the snow-cloud tossed 25
 By many an icy horn ;
 Before, warm valleys, wood-embossed,
 And green with vines and corn.

They left the Winter at their backs
 To flap his baffled wing, 30
 And downward, with the cataracts,
 Leaped to the lap of Spring.

Strong leader of that mountain band,
 Another task remains,
 To break from Slavery's desert land 35
 A path to Freedom's plains.

The winds are wild, the way is drear,
 Yet, flashing through the night,
 Lo ! icy ridge and rocky spear
 Blaze out in morning light ! 40

Rise up, Frémont ! and go before ;
 The Hour must have its Man ;
 Put on the hunting-shirt once more,
 And lead in Freedom's van !

8th mo., 1856.

A SONG FOR THE TIME.

Written in the summer of 1856, during the political campaign of the Free Soil party under the candidacy of John C. Frémont.

Up, laggards of Freedom !—our free flag is cast
 To the blaze of the sun and the wings of the blast ;

Will ye turn from a struggle so bravely
 begun,
 From a foe that is breaking, a field that's half won ?

Whoso loves not his kind, and who fears not the Lord, 5
Let him join that foe's service, accursed
and abhorred !
Let him do his base will, as the slave only
can,— Let him put on the bloodhound, and put off the Man !

Let him go where the cold blood that creeps in his veins
Shall stiffen the slave-whip, and rust on his chains ; 10
Where the black slave shall laugh in his bonds, to behold
The White Slave beside him, self-fettered and sold !

But ye, who still boast of hearts beating and warm,
Rise, from lake shore and ocean's, like waves in a storm,
Come, throng round our banner in Liberty's name, 15
Take winds from your mountains, like prairies aflame !

Our foe, hidden long in his ambush of
night,
Now, forced from his covert, stands black
in the light.
Oh, the cruel to Man, and the hateful to
God,
Smite him down to the earth, that is cursed where he trod ! 20

For deeper than thunder of summer's loud
shower,
On the dome of the sky God is striking the hour !
Shall we falter before what we've prayed for so long,
When the Wrong is so weak, and the Right is so strong ?

Come forth all together ! come old and come young, 25
Freedom's vote in each hand, and her song on each tongue ;
Truth naked is stronger than Falsehood
in mail ;
The Wrong cannot prosper, the Right cannot fail !

Like leaves of the summer once numbered
the foe,
But the hoar-frost is falling, the northern winds blow ; 30
Like leaves of November ere long shall they fall,
For earth wearies of them, and God's over all !

WHAT OF THE DAY ?

Written during the stirring weeks when the great political battle for Freedom under Frémont's leadership was permitting strong hope of success,—a hope overshadowed and solemnized
by a sense of the magnitude of the barbaric evil, and a forecast of the unscrupulous and desperate use of all its powers in the last and decisive struggle.

A SOUND of tumult troubles all the air,
Like the low thunders of a sultry sky
Far-rolling ere the downright lightnings
glare ;
The hills blaze red with warnings ; foes
draw nigh,
Treading the dark with challenge and reply. 5
Behold the burden of the prophet's
vision ;
The gathering hosts,—the Valley of Decision,
Dusk with the wings of eagles wheeling
o'er.
Day of the Lord, of darkness and not
light !
It breaks in thunder and the whirl-wind's roar ! 10
Even so, Father ! Let Thy will be
done ;
Turn and o'erturn, end what Thou hast
begun
In judgment or in mercy : as for me,
If but the least and frailest, let me be
Evermore numbered with the truly free 15
Who find Thy service perfect liberty !
I fain would thank Thee that my mortal
life
Has reached the hour (albeit through care and pain) ;
When Good and Evil, as for final strife,

Close dim and vast on Armageddon's
plain; 20
And Michael and his angels once again
Drive howling back the Spirits of the Night.
Oh for the faith to read the signs aright
And, from the angle of Thy perfect
sight,
See Truth's white banner floating on
before; 25
And the Good Cause, despite of venal
friends,
And base expedients, move to noble
ends;
See Peace with Freedom make to Time
amends,
And, through its cloud of dust, the threshing-floor,
Flailed by the thunder, heaped with chaffless grain! 30 1856.

A SONG

INSCRIBED TO THE FRÉMONT CLUBS.

Written after the election in 1856, which showed the immense gains of the Free Soil party, and insured its success in 1860.

BENEATH thy skies, November!
Thy skies of cloud and rain,
Around our blazing camp-fires
We close our ranks again.
Then sound again the bugles, 5
Call the muster-roll anew;
If months have well-nigh won the field,
What may not four years do?
For God be praised! New England
Takes once more her ancient place; 10
Again the Pilgrim's banner
Leads the vanguard of the race.
Then sound again the bugles, etc.
Along the lordly Hudson,
A shout of triumph breaks; 15
The Empire State is speaking,
From the ocean to the lakes.
Then sound again the bugles, etc.

The Northern hills are blazing,
The Northern skies are bright; 20
And the fair young West is turning
Her forehead to the light!
Then sound again the bugles, etc.
Push every outpost nearer,
Press hard the hostile towers! 25
Another Balaklava,
And the Malakoff is ours!
Then sound again the bugles,
Call the muster-roll anew;
If months have well-nigh won the field,
What may not four years do? 30

THE PANORAMA.

[Written with a view to political effect in the Presidential campaign of 1856. It was read by T. Starr King at the opening of a course of lectures on slavery delivered in Boston at that
time.]

'A! fredome is a nobill thing!
Fredome mayse man to half liking.
Fredome all solace to man giffs;
He levys at ese that frely levys!
A nobill hart may half nanc ese
Na ellys nocht that may him pleso

ARCHDEACON BARBOUR

THROUGH the long hall the shuttered windows shed
A dubious light on every upturned head;
On locks like those of Absalom the fair,
On the bald apex ringed with scanty hair,
On blank indifference and on curious stare; 5
On the pale Showman reading from his stage
The hieroglyphics of that facial page;
Half sad, half scornful, listening to the bruit
Of restless cane-tap and impatient foot,
And the shrill call, across the general
din, 10
'Roll up your curtain! Let the show begin!'
At length a murmur like the winds that break
Into green waves the prairie's grassy lake,

Deepened and swelled to music clear and
 loud,
 And, as the west-wind lifts a summer
 cloud, 15
 The curtain rose, disclosing wide and far
 A green land stretching to the evening
 star,
 Fair rivers, skirted by primeval trees
 And flowers hummed over by the desert
 bees,
 Marked by tall bluffs whose slopes of greenness show 20
 Fantastic outcrops of the rock below ;
 The slow result of patient Nature's pains,
 And plastic fingering of her sun and rains ;
 Arch, tower, and gate, grotesquely
 windowed hall,
 And long escarpment of half-crumbled
 wall, 25
 Huger than those which, from steep hills
 of vine,
 Stare through their loopholes on the travelled Rhine ;
 Suggesting vaguely to the gazer's mind
 A fancy, idle as the prairie wind,
 Of the land's dwellers in an age un-
 guessed ; 30
 The unsung Jotuns of the mystic West.

Beyond, the prairie's sea-like swells surpass
 The Tartar's marvels of his Land of Grass,
 Vast as the sky against whose sunset
 shores
 Wave after wave the billowy greenness pours ; 35
 And, onward still, like islands in that main
 Loom the rough peaks of many a mountain
 chain,
 Whence east and west a thousand waters
 run
 From winter lingering under summer's
 sun.
 And, still beyond, long lines of foam and
 sand 40
 Tell where Pacific rolls his waves a-land,
 From many a wide-lapped port and landlocked bay,

Opening with thunderous pomp the world's highway
 To Indian isles of spice, and marts of far Cathay.

'Such,' said the Showman, as the curtain fell, 45
 'Is the new Canaan of our Israel ;
 The land of promise to the swarming
 North,
 Which, hve-like, sends its annual surplus
 forth,
 To the poor Southron on his worn-out soil,
 Scathed by the curses of unnatural toil ; 50
 To Europe's exiles seeking home and
 rest,
 And the lank nomads of the wandering
 West,
 Who, asking neither, in their love of
 change
 And the free bison's amplitude of range,
 Rear the log-hut, for present shelter
 meant, 55
 Not future comfort, like an Arab's tent.'

Then spake a shrewd on-looker, 'Sir,'
 said he,
 'I like your picture, but I fain would see
 A sketch of what your promised land will be
 When, with electric nerve, and fiery-brained, 60
 With Nature's forces toits chariot chained,
 The future grasping, by the past obeyed,
 The twentieth century rounds a new decade.'

Then said the Showman, sadly : 'He who grieves
 Over the scattering of the sibyl's leaves 65 Unwisely mourns. Suffice it, that we
 know
 What needs must ripen from the seeds we sow ;
 That present time is but the mould wherein
 We cast the shapes of holiness and sin.
 A painful watcher of the passing hour, 70
 Its lust of gold, its strife for place and
 power ;

Its lack of manhood, honor, reverence,
truth,
Wise-thoughted age, and generous-hearted
youth;
Nor yet unmindful of each better sign,
The low, far lights, which on th' horizon
shine, 75
Like those which sometimes tremble on the rim
Of clouded skies when day is closing
dim,
Flashing athwart the purple spears of rain
The hope of sunshine on the hills again:
I need no prophet's word, nor shapes that pass 80
Like clouding shadows o'er a magic glass;
For now, as ever, passionless and cold,
Doth the dread angel of the future hold
Evil and good before us, with no voice
Or warning look to guide us in our choice; 85
With spectral hands outreaching through
the gloom
The shadowy contrasts of the coming
doom.
Transferred from these, it now remains to give
The sun and shade of Fate's alternative.'

Then, with a burst of music, touching
all 90
The keys of thrifty life,—the mill-stream's
fall,
The engine's pant along its quivering
rails,
The anvil's ring, the measured beat of flails,
The sweep of scythes, the reaper's
whistled tune,
Answering the summons of the bells of
noon, 95
The woodman's hail along the rivershores,
The steamboat's signal, and the dip of
oars:
Slowly the curtain rose from off a land
Fair as God's garden. Broad on either
hand
The golden wheat-fields glimmered in the
sun, 100
And the tall maize its yellow tassels spun.

Smooth highways set with hedge-rows living green,
With steepled towns through shaded vistas seen,
The school-house murmuring with its hive-like swarm,
The brook-bank whitening in the gristmill's storm, 105
The painted farm-house shining through the leaves
Of fruited orchards bending at its eaves,
Where live again, around the Western
hearth,
The homely old-time virtues of the North:
Where the blithe housewife rises with the
day, 110
And well-paid labor counts his task a play.
And, grateful tokens of a Bible free,
And the free Gospel of Humanity,
Of diverse sects and differing names the shrines,
One in their faith, whate'er their outward
signs, 115
Like varying strophes of the same sweet
hymn
From many a prairie's swell and river's brim,
A thousand church-spires sanctify the air
Of the calm Sabbath, with their sign of
prayer.

Like sudden nightfall over bloom and
green 120
The curtain dropped: and, momentarily,
between
The clank of fetter and the crack of thong,
Half sob, half laughter, music swept along;
A strange refrain, whose idle words and
low,
Like drunken mourners, kept the time of woe; 125
As if the revellers at a masquerade
Heard in the distance funeral marches played.
Such music, dashing all his smiles with
tears,
The thoughtful voyager on Pontchartrain
hears,
Where, through the noonday dusk of wooded shores 130
The negro boatman, singing to his oars,

With a wild pathos borrowed of his wrong
 Redeems the jargon of his senseless song.
 'Look,' said the Showman, sternly, as he
 rolled
 His curtain upward. 'Fate's reverse
 behold!' 135

A village straggling in loose disarray
 Of vulgar newness, premature decay;
 A tavern, crazy with its whiskey brawls,
 With 'Slaves at Auction!' garnishing its
 walls;
 Without, surrounded by a motley crowd,
 The shrewd-eyed salesman, garrulous and
 loud, 141
 A squire or colonel in his pride of place, Known at free fights, the caucus, and the
 race,
 Prompt to proclaim his honor without blot,
 And silence doubters with a ten-pace
 shot, 145
 Mingling the negro-driving bully's rant
 With pious phrase and democratic cant,
 Yet never scrupling, with a filthy jest,
 To sell the infant from its mother's breast,
 Break through all ties of wedlock, home,
 and kin, 150
 Yield shrinking girlhood up to graybeard
 sin;
 Sell all the virtues with his human stock,
 The Christian graces on his auction-
 block,
 And coolly count on shrewdest bargains
 driven
 In hearts regenerate, and in souls forgiven! 155

Look once again! The moving canvas shows
 A slave plantation's slovenly repose,
 Where, in rude cabins rotting midst their
 weeds,
 The human chattel eats, and sleeps, and breeds; 159
 And, held a brute, in practice, as in law,
 Becomes in fact the thing he's taken for.
 There, early summoned to the hemp and
 corn,
 The nursing mother leaves her child newborn;

There haggard sickness, weak and deathly
 faint,
 Crawls to his task, and fears to make complaint; 165
 And sad-eyed Rachels, childless in decay,
 Weep for their lost ones sold and torn
 away!
 Of ampler size the master's dwelling
 stands,
 In shabby keeping with his half-tilled
 lands;
 The gates unHINGED, the yard with weeds
 unclean, 170
 The cracked veranda with a tipsy lean.
 Without, loose-scattered like a wreck adrift,
 Signs of misrule and tokens of unthrift;
 Within, profusion to discomfort joined,
 The listless body and the vacant mind;
 The fear, the hate, the theft and falsehood,
 born 176
 In menial hearts of toil, and stripes, and
 scorn!
 There, all the vices, which, like birds
 obscene,
 Batten on slavery loathsome and unclean,
 From the foul kitchen to the parlor rise,
 Pollute the nursery where the child-her
 lies, 181
 Taint infant lips beyond all after cure,
 With the fell poison of a breast impure;
 Touch boyhood's passions with the breath
 of flame,
 From girlhood's instincts steal the blush of shame. 185
 So swells, from low to high, from weak to
 strong,
 The tragic chorus of the baleful wrong;
 Guilty or guiltless, all within its range
 Feel the blind justice of its sure revenge.

Still scenes like these the moving chart reveals. 190
 Up the long western steppes the blighting steals;
 Down the Pacific slope the evil Fate
 Glides like a shadow to the Golden
 Gate:
 From sea to sea the drear eclipse is
 thrown,

From sea to sea the *Mauvais*es Terres have grown, 195
A belt of curses on the New World's zone!

The curtain fell. All drew a freer
breath,
As men are wont to do when mournful
death
Is covered from their sight. The Showman stood
With drooping brow in sorrow's attitude
One moment, then with sudden gesture
shook 201
His loose hair back, and with the air and
look
Of one who felt, beyond the narrow stage
And listening group, the presence of the
age,
And heard the footsteps of the things
to be, 205
Poured out his soul in earnest words and
free.

'O friends!' he said, 'in this poor trick of paint
You see the semblance, incomplete and
faint,
Of the two-fronted Future, which, to-day,
Stands dim and silent, waiting in your
way. 210
To-day, your servant, subject to your
will;
To-morrow, master, or for good or ill.
If the dark face of Slavery on you turns,
If the mad curse its paper barrier spurns,
If the world granary of the West is
made 215
The last foul market of the slaver's trade, Why rail at fate? The mischief is your
own.
Why hate your neighbor? Blame yourselves alone!

'Men of the North! The South you charge with wrong
Is weak and poor, while you are rich and
strong. 220
If questions,—idle and absurd as those
The old-time monks and Paduan doctors chose,—

Mere ghosts of questions, tariffs, and dead
banks,
And scarecrow pontiffs, never broke your ranks,
Your thews united could, at once, roll
back 225
The jostled nation to its primal track.
Nay, were you simply steadfast, manly,
just,
True to the faith your fathers left in
trust,
If stainless honor outweighed in your scale
A codfish quintal or a factory bale, 230
Full many a noble heart, (and such remain
In all the South, like Lot in Siddim's
plain,
Who watch and wait, and from the wrong's control
Keep white and pure their chastity of
soul,)
Now sick to loathing of your weak complaints, 235
Your tricks as sinners, and your prayers
as saints,
Would half-way meet the frankness of your tone,
And feel their pulses beating with your
own.

'The North! the South! no geographic line
Can fix the boundary or the point define, 240
Since each with each so closely inter-blends,
Where Slavery rises, and where Freedom
ends.
Beneath your rocks the roots, far-reaching, hide
Of the fell Upas on the Southern side;
The tree whose branches in your north-winds wave 245
Dropped its young blossoms on Mount
Vernon's grave;
The nursling growth of Monticello's crest
Is now the glory of the free Northwest;
To the wise maxims of her olden school
Virginia listened from thy lips, Rantoul;

Seward's words of power, and Sumner's fresh renown, 251	And consecrates his baseness to the cause Of constitution, union, and the laws?
Flow from the pen that Jefferson laid down !	' Praise to the place-man who can hold aloof
And when, at length, her years of madness o'er,	His still unpurchased manhood, office- proof ; 284
Like the crowned grazer on Euphrates' shore,	Who on his round of duty walks erect, And leaves it only rich in self-respect ;
From her long lapse to savagery, her mouth 255	As More maintained his virtue's lofty port
Bitter with baneful herbage, turns the South,	In the Eighth Henry's base and bloody court.
Resumes her old attire, and seeks to smooth	But, if exceptions here and there are found,
Her unkempt tresses at the glass of truth, Her early faith shall find a tongue again, New Wythes and Pinckneys swell that old refrain, 260	Who tread thus safely on enchanted ground, 290
Her sons with yours renew the ancient pact,	The normal type, the fitting symbol still
The myth of Union prove at last a fact ! Then, if one murmur mars the wide con- tent,	Of those who fatten at the public mill, Is the chained dog beside his master's door,
Some Northern lip will drawl the last dissent,	Or Circe's victim, feeding on all four !
Some Union-saving patriot of your own Lament to find his occupation gone. 266	' Give me the heroes who, at tuck of drum, 295
' Grant that the North's insulted, scorned, betrayed,	Salute thy staff, immortal Quattlebum !
O'erreached in bargains with her neighbor made,	Or they who, doubly armed with vote and gun,
When selfish thrift and party held the scales	Following thy lead, illustrious Atchison, Their drunken franchise shift from scene to scene,
For peddling dicker, not for honest sales,— 270	As tile-beard Jourdan did his guillotine ! Rather than him who, born beneath our skies, 301
Whom shall we strike? Who most de- serves our blame?	To Slavery's hand its supplest tool sup- plies ;
The braggart Southron, open in his aim, And bold as wicked, crashing straight through all	The party felon whose unblushing face Looks from the pillory of his bribe of place,
That bars his purpose, like a cannon- ball?	And coolly makes a merit of disgrace, 305
Or the mean traitor, breathing northern air, 275	Points to the footmarks of indignant scorn,
With nasal speech and puritanic hair, Whose cant the loss of principle survives, As the mud-turtle e'en its head outlives ; Who, caught, chin-buried in some foul offence,	Shows the deep scars of satire's tossing horn ;
Puts on a look of injured innocence, 280	And passes to his credit side the sum Of all that makes a scoundrel's martyr- dom !
	' Bane of the North, its canker and its moth ! 310
	These modern Esaus, bartering rights for broth !

Taxing our justice, with their double claim,	As tropic monkeys, linking heads and tails,	340
As fools for pity, and as knaves for blame;	Bridge o'er some torrent of Ecuador's vales!
Who, urged by party, sect, or trade, within	'Such are the men who in your churches rave
The fell embrace of Slavery's sphere of sin,	To swearing-point, at mention of the slave!	315
Part at the outset with their moral sense,	When some poor parson, haply unawares, Stammers of freedom in his timid prayers;	345
The watchful angel set for Truth's defence;	Who, if some foot-sore negro through the town
Confound all contrasts, good and ill; reverse	Steals northward, volunteer to hunt him down.
The poles of life, its blessing and its curse;	Or, if some neighbor, flying from disease, Courts the mild balsam of the Southern breeze,
And lose thenceforth from their perverted sight	With hue and cry pursue him on his track,	350
The eternal difference 'twixt the wrong and right;	And write Free-soiler on the poor man's back.
To them the Law is but the iron span	Such are the men who leave the pedler's cart,
That girds the ankles of imbruted man;	While faring South, to learn the driver's art,
To them the Gospel has no higher aim	Or, in white neckcloth, soothe with pious aim
Than simple sanction of the master's claim,	The graceful sorrows of some languid dame,	355
Dragged in the slime of Slavery's loathsome trail,	Who, from the wreck of her bereavement, saves
Like Chaliar's Bible at his ass's tail!	The double charm of widowhood and slaves!
'Such are the men who, with instinctive dread,	Pliant and apt, they lose no chance to show
Whenever Freedom lifts her drooping head,	To what base depths apostasy can go;
Make prophet-tripods of their office-stools,	Outdo the natives in their readiness	360
And scare the nurseries and the village schools	To roast a negro, or to mob a press;
With dire presage of ruin grim and great,	Poise a tarred schoolmate on the lyncher's rail,
A broken Union and a foundered State!	Or make a bonfire of their birthplace mail!
Such are the patriots, self-bound to the stake	'So some poor wretch, whose lips no longer bear	364
Of office, martyrs for their country's sake:	The sacred burden of his mother's prayer,
Who fill themselves the hungry jaws of Fate,	By fear impelled, or lust of gold enticed,
And by their loss of manhood save the State,	Turns to the Crescent from the Cross of Christ,
In the wide gulf themselves like Curtius throw,
And test the virtues of cohesive dough;

And, over-acting in superfluous zeal,
Crawls prostrate where the faithful only
kneel,
Out-hows the Dervish, hugs his rags to
court 370
The squalid Santon's sanctity of dirt;
And, when beneath the city gateway's
span
Files slow and long the Meccan caravan,
And through its midst, pursued by Islam's
prayers,
The prophet's Word some favored camel
bears, 375
The marked apostate has his place assigned
The Koran-bearer's sacred rump behind,
With brush and pitcher following, grave
and mute,
In meek attendance on the holy brute!

'Moa of the North! beneath your very
eyes, 380
By hearth and home, your real danger
lies.
Still day by day some hold of freedom falls
Through home-bred traitors fed within its walls.
Men whom yourselves with vote and purse sustain,
At posts of honor, influence, and gain;
The right of Slavery to your sons to
teach, 386
And "South-side" Gospels in your pulpits preach,
Transfix the Law to ancient freedom dear
On the sharp point of her subverted
spear,
And imitate upon her cushion plump 390
The mad Missourian lynching from his stump;
Or, in your name, upon the Senate's floor
Yield up to Slavery all it asks, and more;
And, ere your dull eyes open to the cheat,
Sell your old homestead underneath your
feet! 395
While such as these your loftiest outlooks
hold,
While truth and conscience with your wares are sold,

While grave-browed merchants band themselves to aid
An annual man-hunt for their Southern
trade,
What moral power within your grasp remains 400
To stay the mischief on Nebraska's
plains?
High as the tides of generous impulse flow
As far rolls back the selfish undertow;
And all your brave resolves, though aimed as true
As the horse-pistol Balmawhapple drew,
To Slavery's bastions lend as slight a shock 406
As the poor trooper's shot to Stirling
rock!

'Yet, while the need of Freedom's cause demands
The earnest efforts of your hearts and
hands,
Urged by all motives that can prompt the
heart 410
To prayer and toil and manhood's man-liest part;
Though to the soul's deep tocsin Nature joins
The warning whisper of her Orphic pines,
The north-wind's anger, and the south-
wind's sigh,
The midnight sword-dance of the northern
sky, 415
And, to the ear that bends above the sod
Of the green grave-mounds in the Fields of God,
In low, deep murmurs of rebuke or cheer,
The land's dead fathers speak their hope or fear,
Yet let not Passion wrest from Reason's
hand 420
The guiding rein and symbol of command.
Blame not the caution proffering to your zeal
A well-meant drag upon its hurrying
wheel;
Nor chide the man whose honest doubt extends
To the means only, not the righteous
ends; 425

Nor fail to weigh the scruples and the fears
 Of milder natures and serener years.
 In the long strife with evil which began
 With the first lapse of new-created man,
 Wisely and well has Providence assigned
 To each his part,—some forward, some behind ; 431
 And they, too, serve who temper and restrain
 The o'erwarm heart that sets on fire the brain.
 True to yourselves, feed Freedom's altar-flame
 With what you have ; let others do the same. 435
 Spare timid doubters ; set like flint your face
 Against the self-sold knaves of gain and place :
 Pity the weak ; but with unsparing hand
 Cast out the traitors who infest the land ;
 From bar, press, pulpit, cast them every-where, 440
 By dint of fasting, if you fail by prayer.
 And in their place bring men of antique mould,
 Like the grave fathers of your Age of Gold ;
 Statesmen like those who sought the primal fount
 Of righteous law, the Sermon on the Mount ; 445
 Lawyers who prize, like Quincy, (to our day
 Still spared, Heaven bless him !) honor more than pay,
 And Christian jurists, starry-pure, like Jay ;
 Preachers like Woolman, or like them who bore
 The faith of Wesley to our Western shore, 450
 And held no convert genuine till he broke
 Alike his servants' and the Devil's yoke ;
 And priests like him who Newport's market trod,
 And o'er its slave-ships shook the bolts of God !

So shall your power, with a wise prudence used, 455
 Strong but forbearing, firm but not abused,
 In kindly keeping with the good of all,
 The nobler maxims of the past recall,
 Her natural home-born right to Freedom give,
 And leave her foe his robber-right,—to live. 460
 Live, as the snake does in his noisome fen !
 Live, as the wolf does in his bone-strewn den !
 Live, clothed with cursing like a robe of flame,
 The focal point of million-fingered shame !
 Live, till the Southron, who, with all his faults, 465
 Has manly instincts, in his pride revolts,
 Dashes from off him, midst the glad world's cheers,
 The hideous nightmare of his dream of years,
 And lifts, self-prompted, with his own right hand,
 The vile encumbrance from his glorious land ! 470
 'So, wheresoe'er our destiny sends forth
 Its widening circles to the South or North,
 Where'er our banner flaunts beneath the stars
 Its mimic splendors and its cloudlike bars,
 There shall Free Labor's hardy children stand 475
 The equal sovereigns of a slaveless land.
 And when at last the hunted bison tires,
 And dies o'ertaken by the squatter's fires ;
 And westward, wave on wave, the living flood
 Breaks on the snow-line of majestic Hood ; 480
 And lonely Shasta listening hears the tread
 Of Europe's fair-haired children, Hesper-led ;

And, gazing downward through his hoar-locks, sees
The tawny Asian climb his giant knees,
The Eastern sea shall hush his waves to hear 485
Pacific's surf-beat answer Freedom's cheer,
And one long rolling fire of triumph run
Between the sunrise and the sunset gun!'

My task is done. The Showman and his show,
Themselves but shadows, into shadows go; 490
And, if no song of idlesse I have sung,
Nor tints of beauty on the canvas flung;
If the harsh numbers grate on tender ears,
And the rough picture overwrought appears;
With deeper coloring, with a sterner blast, 495
Before my soul a voice and vision passed,
Such as might Milton's jarring trump require,
Or glooms of Dante fringed with lurid fire.
Oh, not of choice, for themes of public wrong
I leave the green and pleasant paths of song, 500
The mild, sweet words which soften and adorn,
For sharp rebuke and bitter laugh of scorn.
More dear to me some song of private worth,
Some homely idyl of my native North,
Some summer pastoral of her inland vales, 505
Or, grim and weird, her winter fireside tales
Haunted by ghosts of unreturning sails;
Lost barks at parting hung from stem to helm
With prayers of love like dreams on Virgil's elm.
Nor private grief nor malice holds my pen; 510
I owe but kindness to my fellow-men;

And, South or North, wherever hearts of prayer
Their woes and weakness to our Father bear,
Wherever fruits of Christian love are found
In holy lives, to me is holy ground. 515
But the time passes. It were vain to crave
A late indulgence. What I had I gave.
Forget the poet, but his warning heed,
And shame his poor word with your nobler deed.

ON A PRAYER-BOOK,

WITH ITS FRONTISPIECE, ARY SCHEFFER'S 'CHRISTUS CONSOLATOR,' AMERICANIZED BY THE OMISSION OF THE BLACK MAN.

It is hardly to be credited, yet is true, that in the anxiety of the Northern merchant to conciliate his Southern customer, a publisher was found ready thus to mutilate Scheffer's picture. He intended his edition for use in the Southern States undoubtedly, but copies fell into the hands of those who believed literally in a gospel which was to preach liberty to the captive.

O ARY SCHEFFER! when beneath thine eye,
Touched with the light that cometh from above,
Grew the sweet picture of the dear Lord's love,
No dream hadst thou that Christian hands would tear
Therefrom the token of His equal care, 5
And make thy symbol of His truth a lie!
The poor, dumb slave whose shackles fall away
In His compassionate gaze, grubbed smoothly out,
To mar no more the exercise devout
Of sleek oppression kneeling down to pray 10
Where the great oriel stains the Sabbath day!

Let whoso can before such praying-books
 Kneel on his velvet cushion; I, for one,
 Would sooner bow, a Parsee, to the sun,
 Or tend a prayer-wheel in Thibetar
 brooks, 15
 Or beat a drum on Yedo's temple-floor.
 No falsar idol man has bowed before,
 In Indian groves or islands of the sea,
 Than that which through the quaint-carved Gothic door
 Looks forth,—a Church without humanity! 20
 Patron of pride, and prejudice, and
 wrong,—
 The rich man's charm and fetich of the
 strong,
 The Eternal Fulness meted, clipped, and
 shorn,
 The seamless robe of equal mercy torn,
 The dear Christ hidden from His kindred flesh, 25
 And, in His poor ones, crucified afresh!
 Better the simple Lama scattering wide,
 Where sweeps the storm Alechan's steppes along,
 His paper horses for the lost to ride,
 And wearying Buddha with his prayers
 to make 30
 The figures living for the traveller's sake,
 Than he who hopes with cheap praise to
 beguile
 The ear of God, dishonoring man the
 while;
 Who dreams the pearl gate's hinges, rusty
 grown,
 Are moved by flattery's oil of tongue
 alone; 35
 That in the scale Eternal Justice bears
 The generous deed weighs less than selfish
 prayers,
 And words intoned with graceful unction
 move
 The Eternal Goodness more than lives of truth and love.
 Alas, the Church! The reverend head of
 Jay, 40
 Enhaloed with its saintly silvered hair,
 Adorns no more the places of her
 prayer;
 And brave young Tyng, too early called
 away,

Troubles the Haman of her courts no
 more
 Like the just Hebrew at the Assyrian's
 door; 45
 And her sweet ritual, beautiful but dead
 As the dry husk from which the grain is shed,
 And holy hymns from which the life
 devout
 Of saints and martyrs has wellnigh gone
 out,
 Like candles dying in exhausted air,
 For Sabbath use in measured grists are
 ground; 51
 And, ever while the spiritual mill goes
 round,
 Between the upper and the nether
 stones,
 Unseen, unheard, the wretched bondman
 groans,
 And urges his vain plea, prayer-smothered,
 anthem-drowned! 55
 O heart of mine, keep patience! Looking
 forth,
 As from the Mount of Vision, I behold,
 Pure, just, and free, the Church of Christ
 on earth;
 The martyr's dream, the golden age
 foretold!
 And found, at last, the mystic Graal I see, Brimmed with His blessing, pass from lip to lip 61
 In sacred pledge of human fellowship;
 And over all the songs of angels hear;
 Songs of the love that casteth out all
 fear;
 Songs of the Gospel of Humanity! 65
 Lo! in the midst, with the same look
 He wore,
 Healing and blessing on Gennesaret's
 shore,
 Folding together, with the all-tender
 might
 Of His great love, the dark hands and the
 white,
 Stands the Consoler, soothing every
 pain, 70
 Making all burdens light, and breaking every chain.

THE SUMMONS.

[After publishing this poem Whittier wrote to Lucy Larcom: 'I do not quite like the tone of The Summons now that it is published. It was, however, an expression of a state of mind which thee would regard as pardonable if thee knew all the circumstances. It is too complaining, and I hope I shall not be left to do such a thing again.']

My ear is full of summer sounds,

Of summer sights my languid eye ;
Beyond the dusty village bounds
I loiter in my daily rounds,

And in the noon-time shadows lie. 5

I hear the wild bee wind his horn,

The bird swings on the ripened wheat,
The long green lances of the corn
Are tilting in the winds of morn,

The locust shrills his song of heat. 10

Another sound my spirit hears,

A deeper sound that drowns them all ;
A voice of pleading choked with tears,
The call of human hopes and fears,

The Macedonian cry to Paul ! 15

The storm-bell rings, the trumpet blows ;

I know the word and countersign ;
Wherever Freedom's vanguard goes,
Where stand or fall her friends or foes,
I know the place that should be mine.

Shamed be the hands that idly fold, 21

And lips that woo the reed's accord,
When laggard Time the hour has tolled
For true with false and new with old
To fight the battles of the Lord ! 25

O brothers ! blest by partial Fate

With power to match the will and deed,
To him your summons comes too late
Who sinks beneath his armor's weight,
And has no answer but God-speed ! 30 1860.

TO WILLIAM H. SEWARD.*

On the 12th of January, 1861, Mr. Seward delivered in the Senate chamber a speech on The State of the Union, in which he urged the paramount duty of preserving the Union, and went as far as it was possible to go, without surrender of principles, in concessions to the Southern party, concluding his argument with these words: 'Having submitted my own opinions on this great crisis, it remains only to say, that I shall cheerfully lend to the government my best support in whatever prudent yet energetic efforts it shall make to preserve the public peace, and to maintain and preserve the Union; advising, only, that it practise, as far as possible, the utmost moderation, forbearance, and conciliation . . . This Union has not yet accomplished what good for mankind was manifestly designed by Him who appoints the seasons and prescribes the duties of states and empires. No; if it were cast down by faction to-day, it would rise again and reappear in all its majestic proportions to-morrow. It is the only government that can stand here. Woe! woe! to the man that madly lifts his hand against it. It shall continue and endure; and men, in after times, shall declare that this generation, which saved the Union from such sudden and unlooked-for dangers, surpassed in magnanimity even that one which laid its foundations in the eternal principles of liberty, justice, and humanity.'

STATESMAN, I thank thee! and, if yet dissent

Mingles, reluctant, with my large content,

I cannot censure what was nobly meant.

But, while constrained to hold even Union less

Than Liberty and Truth and Righteous-
ness, 5

I thank thee in the sweet and holy name
Of peace, for wise calm words that put to shame

Passion and party. Courage may be shown

Not in defiance of the wrong alone ;

He may be bravest who, unweaponed,
bears 10

The olive branch, and, strong in justice, spares

The rash wrong-doer, giving widest scope
To Christian charity and generous hope.
If, without damage to the sacred cause
Of Freedom and the safeguard of its laws— 15

If, without yielding that for which alone
We prize the Union, thou canst save it
now

From a baptism of blood, upon thy brow
A wreath whose flowers no earthly soil
have known,

Woven of the beatitudes, shall rest, 20
And the peacemaker be forever blest !

1861.

IN WAR TIME.

TO SAMUEL E. SEWALL AND HARRIET W. SEWALL,

OF MELROSE.

These lines to my old friends stood as dedication in the volume which contained a collection of pieces under the general title of In War Time.
The group belonging distinctly under that title
I have retained here, the other pieces in the volume are distributed among the appropriate divisions.

OLOR ISCANUS queries : 'Why should we
Vex at the land's ridiculous miserie ?'
So on his Usk banks, in the blood-red
dawn

Of England's civil strife, did careless Vaughan

Bemoek his times. O friends of many years ! 5

Though faith and trust are stronger than our fears,

And the signs promise peace with liberty,
Not thus we trifle with our country's
tears

And sweat of agony. The future's gain
Is certain as God's truth ; but, meanwhile, pain 10

Is bitter and tears are salt : our voices
take

A sober tone ; our very household songs
Are heavy with a nation's griefs and
wrongs ;

And innocent mirth is chastened for the sake

Of the brave hearts that nevermore shall beat, 15

The eyes that smile no more, the un-returning feet !

1863.

THY WILL BE DONE.

We see not, know not ; all our way
Is night,—with Thee alone is day :
From out the torrent's troubled drift,
Above the storm our prayers we lift,
Thy will be done ! 5

The flesh may fail, the heart may faint,
But who are we to make complaint,
Or dare to plead, in times like these,
The weakness of our love of ease ?
Thy will be done ! 10

We take with solemn thankfulness
Our burden up, nor ask it less,
And count it joy that even we
May suffer, serve, or wait for Thee,
Whose will be done ! 15

Though dim as yet in tint and line,
We trace Thy picture's wise design,
And thank Thee that our age supplies
Its dark relief of sacrifice.
Thy will be done ! 20

And if, in our unworthiness,
Thy sacrificial wine we press ;
If from Thy ordeal's heated bars
Our feet are seamed with crimson scars,
Thy will be done ! 25

If, for the age to come, this hour
Of trial hath vicarious power,
And, blest by Thee, our present pain,
Be Liberty's eternal gain,
Thy will be done ! 30

Strike, Thou the Master, we Thy keys,
The anthem of the destinies !
The minor of Thy loftier strain,
Our hearts shall breathe the old refrain,
Thy will be done ! 35
1861.

A WORD FOR THE HOUR.

THE firmament breaks up. In black eclipse
Light after light goes out. One evil
star,
Luridly glaring through the smoke of
war,
As in the dream of the Apocalypse,
Drags others down. Let us not weakly weep 5
Nor rashly threaten. Give us grace to keep
Our faith and patience; wherefore should we leap
On one hand into fratricidal fight,
Or, on the other, yield eternal right,
Frame lies of law, and good and ill con-
found? 10
What fear we? Safe on freedom's vantage-ground
Our feet are planted: let us there remain
In unrevenged calm, no means untried
Which truth can sanction, no just claim denied,
The sad spectators of a suicide! 15
They break the links of Union: shall we
light
The fires of hell to weld anew the chain
On that red anvil where each blow is
pain?
Draw we not even now a freer breath,
As from our shoulders falls a load of
death 20
Loathsome as that the Tuscan's victim
bore
When keen with life to a dead horror
bound?
Why take we up the accursed thing
again?
Pity, forgive, but urge them back no
more
Who, drunk with passion, flaunt disunion's rag 25
With its vile reptile-blazon. Let us press
The golden cluster on our brave old flag
In closer union, and, if numbering less,
Brighter shall shine the stars which still remain.

'EIN' FESTE BURG IST UNSER GOTT!

LUTHER'S HYMN.

WE wait beneath the furnace-blast
The pangs of transformation;
Not painlessly doth God recast
And mould anew the nation.
Hot burns the fire 5
Where wrongs expire;
Nor spares the hand
That from the land
Uproots the ancient evil.
The hand-breadth cloud the sages feared
Its bloody rain is dropping; 11
The poison plant the fathers spared
All else is overtopping.
East, West, South, North,
It curses the earth; 15
All justice dies,
And fraud and lies
Live only in its shadow.
What gives the wheat-field blades of steel?
What points the rebel cannon? 20
What sets the roaring rabble's heel
On the old star-spangled pennon?
What breaks the oath
Of the men o' the South?
What whets the knife 25
For the Union's life?—
Hark to the answer: Slavery!
Then waste no blows on lesser foes
In strife unworthy freemen.
God lifts to-day the veil, and shows 30
The features of the demon!
O North and South,
Its victims both,
Can ye not cry,
'Let slavery die!' 35
And union find in freedom?
What though the cast-out spirit tear
The nation in his going?
We who have shared the guilt must share
The pang of his o'erthrowing! 40

Whate'er the loss,
 Whate'er the cross,
 Shall they complain
 Of present pain
 Who trust in God's hereafter? 45

For who that leans on His right arm
 Was ever yet forsaken?
 What righteous cause can suffer harm
 If He its part has taken?
 Though wild and loud, 50
 And dark the cloud,
 Behind its folds
 His hand upholds
 The calm sky of to-morrow !

Above the maddening cry for blood, 55
 Above the wild war-drumming,
 Let Freedom's voice be heard, with
 good
 The evil overcoming.
 Give prayer and purse
 To stay the Curse 60
 Whose wrong we share,
 Whose shame we bear,
 Whose end shall gladden Heaven !

In vain the bells of war shall ring
 Of triumphs and revenges,
 While still is spared the evil thing 65
 That severs and estranges.
 But blest the ear
 That yet shall hear
 The jubilant bell
 That rings the knell
 Of Slavery forever !

Then let the selfish lip be dumb,
 And hushed the breath of sighing ;
 Before the joy of peace must come 75
 The pains of purifying.
 God give us grace
 Each in his place
 To bear his lot,
 And, murmuring not, 80
 Endure and wait and labor !

1861.

TO JOHN C. FRÉMONT.

On the 31st of August, 1861, General Frémont, then in charge of the Western Department, issued a proclamation which contained a clause, famous as the first announcement of emancipation: 'The property,' it declared, 'real and personal, of all persons in the State of Missouri, who shall take up arms against the United States, or who shall be directly proven to have taken active part with their enemies in the field, is declared to be confiscated to the public use, and their slaves, if any they have, are hereby declared free men.' Mr. Lincoln regarded the proclamation as premature and countermanded it, after vainly endeavoring to persuade Frémont of his own motion to revoke it.

Thy error, Frémont, simply was to act
 A brave man's part, without the statesman's tact,
 And, taking counsel but of common sense,
 To strike at cause as well as consequence.
 Oh, never yet since Roland wound his 5 horn
 At Roncesvalles, has a blast been blown Far-heard, wide-echoed, startling as thine
 own,
 Heard from the van of freedom's hope
 forlorn !
 It had been safer, doubtless, for the 65
 time,
 To flatter treason, and avoid offence 10
 To that Dark Power whose underlying crime
 Heaves upward its perpetual turbulence.
 But if thine be the fate of all who break
 The ground for truth's seed, or forerun their years
 Till lost in distance, or with stout hearts
 make 15
 A lane for freedom through the level
 spears,
 Still take thou courage ! God has spoken through thee,
 Irrevocable, the mighty words, Be free !
 The land shakes with them, and the 80
 slave's dull ear
 Turns from the rice-swamp stealthily to
 hear. 20

Who would recall them now must first arrest
The winds that blow down from the free
North-west,
Ruffling the Gulf; or like a scroll roll
back
The Mississippi to its upper springs.
Such words fulfil their prophecy, and
lack 25
But the full time to harden into things.
1861.

THE WATCHERS.

BESIDE a stricken field I stood;
On the torn turf, on grass and wood,
Hung heavily the dew of blood.

Still in their fresh mounds lay the slain,
But all the air was quick with pain 5
And gusty sighs and tearful rain.

Two angels, each with drooping head
And folded wings and noiseless tread,
Watched by that valley of the dead.

The one, with forehead saintly bland 10
And lips of blessing, not command,
Leaned, weeping, on her olive wand.

The other's brows were scarred and knit,
His restless eyes were watch-fires lit,
His hands for battle-gauntlets fit. 15

'How long!' — I knew the voice of Peace, —
'Is there no respite? no release?
When shall the hopeless quarrel cease?

'O Lord, how long! One human soul
Is more than any parchment scroll, 20
Or any flag thy winds unroll.

'What price was Ellsworth's, young and
brave?
How weigh the gift that Lyon gave,
Or count the cost of Winthrop's grave?

'O brother! if thine eye can see, 25
Tell how and when the end shall be,
What hope remains for thee and me.'

Then Freedom sternly said: 'I shun
No strife nor pang beneath the sun,
When human rights are staked and won.

'I knelt with Ziska's hunted flock, 31
I watched in Toussaint's cell of rock,
I walked with Sidney to the block.

'The moor of Marston felt my tread,
Through Jersey snows the march I led,
My voice Magenta's charges sped. 36

'But now, through weary day and night,
I watch a vague and aimless fight
For leave to strike one blow aright.

'On either side my foe they own: 40
One guards through love his ghastly
throne,
And one through fear to reverence grown.

'Why wait we longer, mocked, betrayed,
By open foes, or those afraid 45
To speed thy coming through my aid?

'Why watch to see who win or fall?
I shake the dust against them all,
I leave them to their senseless brawl.'

'Nay,' Peace implored: 'yet longer wait;
The doom is near, the stake is great: 50
God knoweth if it be too late.

'Still wait and watch; the way prepare
Where I with folded wings of prayer
May follow, weaponless and bare.' 15

'Too late!' the stern, sad voice replied, 55
'Too late!' its mournful echo sighed,
In low lament the answer died.

A rustling as of wings in flight,
An upward gleam of lessening white,
So passed the vision, sound and sight. 60

But round me, like a silver bell
Rung down the listening sky to tell
Of holy help, a sweet voice fell.

'Still hope and trust,' it sang; 'the rod
Must fall, the wine-press must be trod, 65
But all is possible with God!'

TO ENGLISHMEN.

Written when, in the stress of our terrible war,
the English ruling class, with few exceptions, were either coldly indifferent or hostile to the party of freedom. Their attitude was illustrated by caricatures of America, among which was one of a slaveholder and cowhide, with the motto,
'Haven't I a right to wallop my nigger?'

You flung your taunt across the wave;
We bore it as became us,
Well knowing that the fettered slave
Left friendly lips no option save
To pity or to blame us. 5

You scoffed our plea. 'Mere lack of will,
Not lack of power,' you told us:
We showed our free-state records; still
You mocked, confounding good and ill,
Slave-haters and slaveholders. 10

We struck at Slavery; to the verge
Of power and means we checked it;
Lo!—presto, change! its claims you urge,
Send greetings to it o'er the surge,
And comfort and protect it. 15

But yesterday you scarce could shake,
In slave-aborring rigor,
Our Northern palms for conscience' sake:
To-day you clasp the hands that ache
With 'walloping the nigger!' 20

O Englishmen!—in hope and creed,
In blood and tongue our brothers!
We too are heirs of Runnymede;
And Shakespeare's fame and Cromwell's
deed
Are not alone our mother's. 25

'Thicker than water,' in one rill
Through centuries of story
Our Saxon blood has flowed, and still
We share with you its good and ill,
The shadow and the glory. 30

Joint heirs and kinfolk, leagues of wave
Nor length of years can part us:
Your right is ours to shrine and grave,
The common freehold of the brave,
The gift of saints and martyrs. 35

Our very sins and follies teach
Our kindred frail and human:
We carp at faults with bitter speech,
The while, for one unshared by each,
We have a score in common. 40

We bowed the heart, if not the knee,
To England's Queen, God bless her!
We praised you when your slaves went
free:

We seek to unchain ours. Will ye
Join hands with the oppressor? 45

And is it Christian England cheers
The bruiser, not the bruised?
And must she run, despite the tears
And prayers of eighteen hundred years,
Amuck in Slavery's crusade? 50

Oh, black disgrace! Oh, shame and loss
Too deep for tongue to phrase on!
Tear from your flag its holy cross,
And in your van of battle toss
The pirate's skull-bone blazon! 55

MITHRIDATES AT CHIOS.

It is recorded that the Chians, when subjugated
by Mithridates of Cappadocia, were delivered up to their own slaves, to be carried away captive to Colchis. Athenæus considers this a just punishment for their wickedness in first introducing the slave-trade into Greece. From this ancient villainy of the Chians the proverb arose, 'The Chian hath bought himself a master.'

KNOW'ST thou, O slave-cursed land!
How, when the Chian's cup of guilt
Was full to overflow, there came
God's justice in the sword of flame
That, red with slaughter to its hilt, 5
Blazed in the Cappadocian victor's hand?

The heavens are still and far;
But, not unheard of awful Jove,
The sighing of the island slave
Was answered, when the Ægean
wave 10
The keels of Mithridates clove,
And the vines shrivelled in the breath of
war.

'Robbers of Chios ! hark,'
The victor cried, 'to Heaven's decree !
Pluck your last cluster from the vine,
Drain your last cup of Chian wine ; 16
Slaves of your slaves, your doom shall
be,
In Colchian mines by Phasis rolling dark.'

Then rose the long lament
From the hoar sea-god's dusky caves : 20
The priestess rent her hair and cried, 'Woe ! woe ! The gods are sleepless-eyed !'
And, chained and scourged, the slaves
of slaves,
The lords of Chios into exile went.

'The gods at last pay well,' 25
So Hellas sang her taunting song,
'The fisher in his net is caught,
The Chian hath his master bought ;'
And isle from isle, with laughter long,
Took up and sped the mocking parable. 30

Once more the slow, dumb years
Bring their avenging cycle round,
And, more than Hellas taught of old,
Our wiser lesson shall be told,
Of slaves uprising, freedom-crowned, 35
To break, not wield, the scourge wet with their blood and tears.

AT PORT ROYAL.

In November, 1861, a Union force under Commodore Dupont and General Sherman captured Port Royal, and from this point as a basis of operations the neighboring islands between Charleston and Savannah were taken possession of. The early occupation of this district, where the negro population was greatly in excess of the white, gave an opportunity which was at once seized upon, of practically emancipating the slaves and of beginning that work of civilization which was accepted as the grave responsibility of those who had labored for freedom.

THE tent-lights glimmer on the land,
The ship-lights on the sea ;
The night-wind smooths with drifting
sand
Our track on lone Tybee.

At last our grating keels outslide, 5
Our good boats forward swing ;
And while we ride the land-locked tide,
Our negroes row and sing.

For dear the bondman holds his gifts
Of music and of song : 10
The gold that kindly Nature sifts
Among his sands of wrong ;

The power to make his toiling days
And poor home-comforts please ;
The quaint relief of mirth that plays 15
With sorrow's minor keys.

Another glow than sunset's fire
Has filled the west with light,
Where field and garner, barn and byre,
Are blazing through the night. 20

The land is wild with fear and hate,
The rout runs mad and fast ;
From hand to hand, from gate to gate
The flaming brand is passed.

The lurid glow falls strong across 25
Dark faces broad with smiles :
Not theirs the terror, hate, and loss
That fire yon blazing piles.

With oar-strokes timing to their song,
They weave in simple lays 30
The pathos of remembered wrong,
The hope of better days,—

The triumph-note that Miriam sung,
The joy of uncaged birds :
Softening with Afric's mellow tongue 35
Their broken Saxon words.

SONG OF THE NEGRO BOATMEN.

Oh, praise an' tanks ! De Lord He come
To set de people free ;
An' massa tink it day ob doom,
An' we ob jubilee. 40
De Lord dat heap de Red Sea waves
He jus' as 'trong as den ;
He say de word : we las' night slaves ;
To-day, de Lord's free men.
De yam will grow, de cotton blow, 45
We 'll hab de rice an' corn ;
Oh nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
De driver blow his horn !

Ole massa on he trabbels gone ;
 He leaf de land behind : 50
 De Lord's breff blow him furdur on,
 Like corn-shuck in de wind.
 We own de hoe, we own de plough,
 We own de hands dat hold ;
 We sell de pig, we sell de cow, 55
 But nebber chile be sold.
 De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
 We 'll hab de rice an' corn ;
 Oh nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
 De driver blow his horn ! 60

We pray de Lord : He gib us signs
 Dat some day we be free ;
 De norf-wind tell it to de pines,
 De wild-duck to de sea ;
 We tink it when de church-bell ring, 65
 We dream it in de dream ;
 De rice-bird mean it when he sing,
 De eagle when he scream.
 De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
 We 'll hab de rice an' corn ; 70
 Oh nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
 De driver blow his horn !

We know de promise nebber fail,
 An' nebber lie de word ;
 So, like de 'postles in de jail, 75
 We waited for de Lord :
 An' now He open ebry door,
 An' trow away de key ;
 He tink we lub Him so before,
 We lub Him better free. 80
 De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
 He 'll gib de rice an' corn ;
 Oh nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
 De driver blow his horn !

So sing our dusky gondoliers ; 85
 And with a secret pain,
 And smiles that seem akin to tears,
 We hear the wild refrain.
 We dare not share the negro's trust,
 Nor yet his hope deny ; 90
 We only know that God is just,
 And every wrong shall die.
 Rude seems the song ; each swarthy face,
 Flame-lighted, ruder still :
 We start to think that hapless race 95
 Must shape our good or ill ;

That laws of changeless justice bind
 Oppressor with oppressed ;
 And, close as sin and suffering joined,
 We march to Fate abreast. 100

Sing on, poor hearts ! your chant shall be
 Our sign of blight or bloom,
 The Vala-song of Liberty,
 Or death-rune of our doom !
 1862.

ASTRÆA AT THE CAPITOL.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, 1862.

[The reference in the fourth stanza is to Dr Reuben Crandall of Washington, who, in 1834, was arrested and confined in the old city prison until his health was destroyed. His crime was in lending to a brother physician Whittier's pamphlet Justice and Expediency.]

When first I saw our banner wave
 Above the nation's council-hall,
 I heard beneath its marble wall
 The clanking fetters of the slave !
 In the foul market-place I stood, 5
 And saw the Christian mother sold,
 And childhood with its locks of gold,
 Blue-eyed and fair with Saxon blood.

I shut my eyes, I held my breath,
 And, smothering down the wrath and
 shame 10
 That set my Northern blood aflame,
 Stood silent,—where to speak was death.

Beside me gloomed the prison-cell
 Where wasted one in slow decline
 For uttering simple words of mine, 15
 And loving freedom all too well.

The flag that floated from the dome
 Flapped menace in the morning air ;
 I stood a perilled stranger where
 The human broker made his home. 20

For crime was virtue: Gown and Sword
 And Law their threefold sanction gave,
 And to the quarry of the slave
 Went hawking with our symbol-bird.

On the oppressor's side was power ; 25
And yet I knew that every wrong,
However old, however strong,
But waited God's avenging hour.

I knew that truth would crush the lie,—
Somehow, some time, the end would be ;
Yet scarcely dared I hope to see 31
The triumph with my mortal eye.

But now I see it ! In the sun
A free flag floats from yonder dome,
And at the nation's hearth and home 35
The justice long delayed is done.

Not as we hoped, in calm of prayer,
The message of deliverance comes,
But heralded by roll of drums
On waves of battle-troubled air ! 40

Midst sounds that madden and appall,
The song that Bethlehem's shepherds
knew !
The harp of David melting through
The demon-agonies of Saul !

Not as we hoped ; but what are we ? 45
Above our broken dreams and plans
God lays, with wiser hand than man's,
The corner-stones of liberty.

I cavil not with Him : the voice
That freedom's blessed gospel tells 50
Is sweet to me as silver bells,
Rejoicing ! yea, I will rejoice !

Dear friends still toiling in the sun ;
Ye dearer ones who, gone before,
Are watching from the eternal shore 55
The slow work by your hands begun,

Rejoice with me ! The chastening rod Blossoms with love ; the furnace heat
Grows cool beneath His blessed feet
Whose form is as the Son of God ! 60

Rejoice ! Our Marah's bitter springs
Are sweetened ; on our ground of grief
Rise day by day in strong relief
The prophecies of better things.

Rejoice in hope ! The day and night 65
Are one with God, and one with them
Who see by faith the cloudy hem
Of Judgment fringed with Mercy's light !
1862.

THE BATTLE AUTUMN OF 1862.

THE flags of war like storm-birds fly,
The charging trumpets blow ;
Yet rolls no thunder in the sky,
No earthquake strives below.

And, calm and patient, Nature keeps 5
Her ancient promise well,
Though o'er her bloom and greenness sweeps
The battle's breath of hell.

And still she walks in golden hours
Through harvest-happy farms, 10
And still she wears her fruits and flowers
Like jewels on her arms.

What mean the gladness of the plain,
This joy of eve and morn,
The mirth that shakes the beard of grain
And yellow locks of corn ? 16

Ah ! eyes may well be full of tears,
And hearts with hate are hot ;
But even-paced come round the years,
And Nature changes not. 20

She meets with smiles our bitter grief,
With songs our groans of pain ;
She mocks with tint of flower and leaf
The war-field's crimson stain.

Still, in the cannon's pause, we hear 25
Her sweet thanksgiving-psalm ;
Too near to God for doubt or fear,
She shares the eternal calm.

She knows the seed lies safe below
The fires that blast and burn ; 30
For all the tears of blood we sow
She waits the rich return.

She sees with clearer eye than ours
 The good of suffering born,—
 The hearts that blossom like her flowers,
 And ripen like her corn. 36

Oh, give to us, in times like these,
 The vision of her eyes;
 And make her fields and fruited trees
 Our golden prophecies! 40

Oh, give to us her finer ear!
 Above this stormy din,
 We too would hear the bells of cheer
 Ring peace and freedom in.
 1862.

HYMN,

SUNG AT CHRISTMAS BY THE SCHOLARS
 OF ST. HELENA'S ISLAND, S. C.

[Written at the request of the teacher, Miss Charlotte Forten, now Mrs. Grinné.]

OH, none in all the world before
 Were ever glad as we!
 We're free on Carolina's shore,
 We're all at home and free.

Thou Friend and Helper of the poor, 5
 Who suffered for our sake,
 To open every prison door,
 And every yoke to break!

Bend low Thy pitying face and mild,
 And help us sing and pray; 10
 The hand that blessed the little child,
 Upon our foreheads lay.

We hear no more the driver's horn,
 No more the whip we fear,
 This holy day that saw Thee born 15
 Was never half so dear.

The very oaks are greener clad,
 The waters brighter smile;
 Oh, never shone a day so glad
 On sweet St. Helen's Isle. 20

We praise Thee in our songs to-day,
 To Thee in prayer we call,
 Make swift the feet and straight the way
 Of freedom unto all.

Come once again, O blessed Lord! 25
 Come walking on the sea!
 And let the mainlands hear the word
 That sets the island free!
 1863.

THE PROCLAMATION.

President Lincoln's proclamation of emancipation was issued January 1, 1863.

SAINT PATRICK, slave to Milcho of the herds
 Of Ballymena, wakened with these words:
 'Arise, and flee
 Out from the land of bondage, and be
 free!'

Glad as a soul in pain, who hears from
 heaven 5
 The angels singing of his sins forgiven,
 And, wondering, sees
 His prison opening to their golden keys,

He rose a man who laid him down a slave,
 Shook from his locks the ashes of the grave, 10
 And outward trod
 Into the glorious liberty of God.

He cast the symbols of his shame away;
 And, passing where the sleeping Milcho
 lay,
 Though back and limb 15
 Smarted with wrong, he prayed, 'God
 pardon him!'

So went he forth; but in God's time he
 came
 To light on Uilline's hills a holy flame;
 And, dying, gave 19
 The land a saint that lost him as a slave.

O dark, sad millions, patiently and dumb Waiting for God, your hour at last has
 come,
 And freedom's song
 Breaks the long silence of your night of
 wrong!

Arise and flee ! shake off the vile restraint
Of ages ; but, like Ballymena's saint, 26
The oppressor spare,
Heap only on his head the coals of prayer.

Go forth, like him ! like him return again,
To bless the land whereon in bitter pain
Ye toiled at first, 31
And heal with freedom what your slavery cursed.

ANNIVERSARY POEM.

Read before the Alumni of the Friends' Yearly Meeting School, at the Annual Meeting at Newport, R I, 15th 6th mo, 1863

ONCE more, dear friends, you meet
beneath
A clouded sky :
Not yet the sword has found its sheath,
And on the sweet spring airs the breath
Of war floats by. 5

Yet trouble springs not from the ground,
Nor pain from chance ;
The Eternal order circles round,
And wave and storm find mete and
bound
In Providence. 10

Full long our feet the flowery ways
Of peace have trod,
Content with creed and garb and phrase :
A harder path in earlier days
Led up to God. 15

Too cheaply truths, once purchased dear,
Are made our own ;
Too long the world has smiled to hear
Our boast of full corn in the ear
By others sown ; 20

To see us stir the martyr fires
Of long ago,
And wrap our satisfied desires
In the singed mantles that our sires
Have dropped below. 25

But now the cross our worthies bore
On us is laid ;
Profession's quiet sleep is o'er,
And in the scale of truth once more
Our faith is weighed. 30

The cry of innocent blood at last
Is calling down
An answer in the whirlwind-blast,
The thunder and the shadow cast
From Heaven's dark frown. 35

The land is red with judgments. Who Stands guiltless forth ?
Have we been faithful as we knew,
To God and to our brother true,
To Heaven and Earth ? 40

How faint, through din of merchandise
And count of gain,
Have seemed to us the captive's cries !
How far away the tears and sighs
Of souls in pain ! 45

This day the fearful reckoning comes
To each and all ;
We hear amidst our peaceful homes
The summons of the conscript drums,
The bugle's call. 50

Our path is plain ; the war-net draws
Round us in vain,
While, faithful to the Higher Cause,
We keep our fealty to the laws
Through patient pain. 55

The levelled gun, the battle-brand,
We may not take :
But, calmly loyal, we can stand
And suffer with our suffering land
For conscience' sake. 60

Why ask for ease where all is pain ?
Shall we alone
Be left to add our gain to gain,
When over Armageddon's plain
The trump is blown ? 65

To suffer well is well to serve ;
Safe in our Lord
The rigid lines of law shall curve
To spare us ; from our heads shall swerve
Its smiting sword. 70

And light is mingled with the gloom,
 And joy with grief;
 Divinest compensations come,
 Through thorns of judgment mercies bloom
 In sweet relief.

75

Thanks for our privilege to bless,
 By word and deed,
 The widow in her keen distress,
 The childless and the fatherless,
 The hearts that bleed !

80

For fields of duty, opening wide,
 Where all our powers
 Are tasked the eager steps to guide
 Of millions on a path untried :
 The slave is ours !

85

Ours by traditions dear and old,
 Which make the race
 Our wards to cherish and uphold,
 And cast their freedom in the mould
 Of Christian grace.

90

And we may tread the sick-bed floors
 Where strong men pine,
 And, down the groaning corridors,
 Pour freely from our liberal stores
 The oil and wine.

95

Who murmurs that in these dark days
 His lot is cast ?
 God's hand within the shadow lays
 The stones whereon His gates of praise
 Shall rise at last.

100

Turn and o'erturn, O outstretched Hand !
 Nor stint, nor stay ;
 The years have never dropped their sand
 On mortal issue vast and grand
 As ours to-day.

105

Already, on the sable ground
 Of man's despair
 Is Freedom's glorious picture found,
 With all its dusky hands unbound
 Upraised in prayer.

110

Oh, small shall seem all sacrifice
 And pain and loss,
 When God shall wipe the weeping eyes,
 For suffering give the victor's prize,
 The crown for cross !

BARBARA FRIETCHIE.

This poem was written in strict conformity to the account of the incident as I had it from respectable and trustworthy sources. It has since been the subject of a good deal of conflicting testimony, and the story was probably incorrect in some of its details. It is admitted by all that Barbara Frietchie was no myth, but a worthy and highly esteemed gentlewoman, intensely loyal and a hater of the Slavery Rebellion, holding her Union flag sacred and keeping it with her Bible; that when the Confederates halted before her house, and entered her doorway, she denounced them in vigorous language, shook her cane in their faces, and drove them out; and when General Burnside's troops followed close upon Jackson's, she waved her flag and cheered them. It is stated that May Quantrell, a brave and loyal lady in another part of the city, did wave her flag in sight of the Confederates. It is possible that there has been a blending of the two incidents.

Up from the meadows rich with corn,
 Clear in the cool September morn,

The clustered spires of Frederick stand
 Green-walled by the hills of Maryland.

Round about them orchards sweep, 5
 Apple and peach tree fruited deep,

Fair as the garden of the Lord
 To the eyes of the famished rebel horde,

On that pleasant morn of the early fall
 When Lee marched over the mountain- 10
 wall ;

Over the mountains winding down,
 Horse and foot, into Frederick town.

Forty flags with their silver stars,
 Forty flags with their crimson bars,

Flapped in the morning wind : the sun 15
 Of noon looked down, and saw not one.

Up rose old Barbara Frietchie then,
 Bowed with her fourscore years and ten ;

Bravest of all in Frederick town,
 She took up the flag the men hauled 20
 down ;

In her attic window the staff she set,
To show that one heart was loyal yet.

Up the street came the rebel tread,
Stonewall Jackson riding ahead.

Under his slouched hat left and right 25
He glanced; the old flag met his sight.

'Halt!'—the dust-brown ranks stood fast.
'Fire!'—out blazed the rifle-blast.

It shivered the window, pane and sash;
It rent the banner with seam and gash. 30

Quick, as it fell, from the broken staff
Dame Barbara snatched the silken scarf.

She leaned far out on the window-sill,
And shook it forth with a royal will.

'Shoot, if you must, this old gray head, 35
But spare your country's flag,' she said.

A shade of sadness, a blush of shame,
Over the face of the leader came;

The nobler nature within him stirred
To life at that woman's deed and word;

'Who touches a hair of yon gray head 41
Dies like a dog! March on!' he said.

All day long through Frederick street
Sounded the tread of marching feet:

All day long that free flag tost 45
Over the heads of the rebel host.

Ever its torn folds rose and fell
On the loyal winds that loved it well;

And through the hill-gaps sunset light
Shone over it with a warm good-night. 50

Barbara Frietchie's work is o'er,
And the Rebel rides on his raids no
more.

Honor to her! and let a tear
Fall, for her sake, on Stonewall's bier.

Over Barbara Frietchie's grave, 55
Flag of Freedom and Union, wave!

Peace and order and beauty draw
Round thy symbol of light and law;

And ever the stars above look down
On thy stars below in Frederick town! 60

WHAT THE BIRDS SAID.

THE birds against the April wind
Flew northward, singing as they flew;
They sang, 'The land we leave behind
Has swords for corn-blades, blood for
dew.'

'O wild-birds, flying from the South, 5
What saw and heard ye, gazing down?'
'We saw the mortar's upturned mouth,
The sickened camp, the blazing town!

'Beneath the bivouac's starry lamps, 9
We saw your march-worn children die;
In shrouds of moss, in cypress swamps,
We saw your dead uncoffined lie.

'We heard the starving prisoner's sighs,
And saw, from line and trench, your
sons
Follow our flight with home-sick eyes 15
Beyond the battery's smoking guns.'

'And heard and saw ye only wrong
And pain,' I cried, 'O wing-worn flocks?'

'We heard,' they sang, 'the freedman's
song,
The crash of Slavery's broken locks! 20

'We saw from new, uprising States
The treason-nursing mischief spurned,
As, crowding Freedom's ample gates,
The long-estranged and lost returned.

'O'er dusky faces, seamed and old, 25
And hands horn-hard with unpaid toil,
With hope in every rustling fold,
We saw your star-dropt flag uncoil.

'And struggling up through sounds ac-
cursed,
A grateful murmur clomb the air; 30
A whisper scarcely heard at first,
It filled the listening heavens with
prayer.

'And sweet and far, as from a star,
Replied a voice which shall not cease,
Till, drowning all the noise of war, 35
It sings the blessed song of peace !'

So to me, in a doubtful day
Of chill and slowly greening spring,
Low stooping from the cloudy gray,
The wild-birds sang or seemed to sing.

They vanished in the misty air, 41
The song went with them in their
flight;
But lo ! they left the sunset fair,
And in the evening there was light.

THE MANTLE OF ST. JOHN DE MATHA.

A LEGEND OF 'THE RED, WHITE, AND
BLUE,' A. D. 1154-1864.

A STRONG and mighty Angel,
Calm, terrible, and bright,
The cross in blended red and blue
Upon his mantle white !

Two captives by him kneeling, 5
Each on his broken chain,
Sang praise to God who raiseth
The dead to life again !

Dropping his cross-wrought mantle,
'Wear this,' the Angel said ; 10
'Take thou, O Freedom's priest, its sign,—
The white, the blue, and red.'

Then rose up John de Matha
In the strength the Lord Christ gave,
And begged through all the land of 15
France
The ransom of the slave.

The gates of tower and castle
Before him open flew,
The drawbridge at his coming fell,
The door-bolt backward drew. 20

For all men owned his errand,
And paid his righteous tax ;
And the hearts of lord and peasant
Were in his hands as wax.

At last, outbound from Tunis, 25
His bark her anchor weighed,
Freighted with seven-score Christian souls
Whose ransom he had paid.

But, torn by Paynim hatred,
Her sails in tatters hung ; 30
And on the wild waves, rudderless,
A shattered hulk she swung.

'God save us !' cried the captain,
'For naught can man avail ;
Oh, woe betide the ship that lacks 35
Her rudder and her sail !

'Behind us are the Moormen ;
At sea we sink or strand :
There's death upon the water,
There's death upon the land !' 40

Then up spake John de Matha :
'God's errands never fail !
Take thou the mantle which I wear,
And make of it a sail'

They raised the cross-wrought mantle, 45
The blue, the white, the red ;
And straight before the wind off-shore
The ship of Freedom sped.

'God help us !' cried the seamen,
'For vain is mortal skill : 50
The good ship on a stormy sea
Is drifting at its will.'

Then up spake John de Matha :
'My mariners, never fear !
The Lord whose breath has filled her 55
sail
May well our vessel steer !'

So on through storm and darkness
They drove for weary hours ;
And lo ! the third gray morning-shone
On Ostia's friendly towers. 60

And on the walls the watchers
The ship of mercy knew,—
They knew far off its holy cross,
The red, the white, and blue.

And the bells in all the steeples
Rang out in glad accord,
To welcome home to Christian soil
The ransomed of the Lord.

So runs the ancient legend
By bard and painter told;
And lo! the cycle rounds again,
The new is as the old!

With rudder foully broken,
And sails by traitors torn,
Our country on a midnight sea
Is waiting for the morn.

Before her, nameless terror;
Behind, the pirate foe;
The clouds are black above her,
The sea is white below.

The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong,
She drifts in darkness and in storm,
How long, O Lord! how long?

But courage, O my mariners!
Ye shall not suffer wreck,
While up to God the freedman's prayers
Are rising from your deck.

Is not your sail the banner
Which God hath blest anew,
The mantle that De Matha wore,
The red, the white, the blue?

Its hues are all of heaven,—
The red of sunset's dye,
The whiteness of the moon-lit cloud,
The blue of morning's sky.

Wait cheerily, then, O mariners,
For daylight and for land;
The breath of God is in your sail,
Your rudder is His hand.

Sail on, sail on, deep-freighted
With blessings and with hopes;
The saints of old with shadowy hands
Are pulling at your ropes.

Behind ye holy martyrs
Uplift the palm and crown;
Before ye unborn ages send
Their benedictions down.

Take heart from John de Matha!—
God's errands never fail!
Sweep on through storm and darkness,
The thunder and the hail!

Sail on! The morning cometh,
The port ye yet shall win;
And all the bells of God shall ring
The good ship bravely in!
1865.

LAUS DEO!

On hearing the bells ring on the passage of the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery The resolution was adopted by Congress, January 31, 1865 The ratification by the requisite number of States was announced December 18, 1865. [The suggestion came to the poet as he sat in the Friends' Meeting-house in Amesbury, where he was present at the regular Fifth-day meeting. All sat in silence, but on his return to his home, he recited a portion of the poem, not yet committed to paper, to his house-mates in the garden room. 'It wrote itself, or rather sang itself, while the bells rang,' he wrote to Lucy Larcom.]

It is done!
Clang of bell and roar of gun
Send the tidings up and down.
How the belfries rock and reel!
How the great guns, peal on peal,
Fling the joy from town to town!

Ring, O bells!
Every stroke exulting tells
Of the burial hour of crime.
Loud and long, that all may hear,
Ring for every listening ear
Of Eternity and Time!

Let us kneel;
God's own voice is in that peal,
And this spot is holy ground.
Lord, forgive us! What are we,
That our eyes this glory see,
That our ears have heard the sound!

For the Lord
On the whirlwind is abroad ; 20
In the earthquake He has spoken ;
He has smitten with His thunder
The iron walls asunder,
And the gates of brass are broken !

Loud and long 25
Lift the old exulting song ,
Sing with Miriam by the sea,
He has cast the mighty down ;
Horse and rider sink and drown ;
'He hath triumphed gloriously !' 30

Did we dare,
In our agony of prayer,
Ask for more than He has done ?
When was ever His right hand
Over any time or land
Stretched as now beneath the sun ? 35

How they pale,
Ancient myth and song and tale,
In this wonder of our days,
When the cruel rod of war 40
Blossoms white with righteous law,
And the wrath of man is praise !

Blotted out !
All within and all about
Shall a fresher life begin ;
Freer breathe the universe
As it rolls its heavy curse
On the dead and buried sin ! 45

It is done !
In the circuit of the sun
Shall the sound thereof go forth.
It shall bid the sad rejoice,
It shall give the dumb a voice,
It shall belt with joy the earth !

Ring and swing, 55
Bells of joy ! On morning's wing
Send the song of praise abroad !
With a sound of broken chains
Tell the nations that He reigns,
Who alone is Lord and God ! 60

HYMN

FOR THE CELEBRATION OF EMANCIPATION AT NEWBURYPORT.

NOT unto us who did but seek
The word that burned within to speak,
Not unto us this day belong
The triumph and exultant song.

Upon us fell in early youth 5
The burden of unwelcome truth,
And left us, weak and frail and few,
The censor's painful work to do.

Thenceforth our life a fight became, 9
The air we breathed was hot with blame ;
For not with gauged and softened tone
We made the bondman's cause our own. 35

We bore, as Freedom's hope forlorn,
The private hate, the public scorn ;
Yet held through all the paths we trod 15
Our faith in man and trust in God.

We prayed and hoped ; but still, with awe,
The coming of the sword we saw ;
We heard the nearing steps of doom,
We saw the shade of things to come. 20

In grief which they alone can feel
Who from a mother's wrong appeal,
With blended lines of fear and hope
We cast our country's horoscope. 45

For still within her house of life 25
We marked the lurid sign of strife,
And, poisoning and imbittering all,
We saw the star of Wormwood fall.

Deep as our love for her became
Our hate of all that wrought her shame, 30
And if, thereby, with tongue and pen
We erred,—we were but mortal men.

We hoped for peace ; our eyes survey
The blood-red dawn of Freedom's day :
We prayed for love to loose the chain ; 35
'T is shorn by battle's axe in twain !

Nor skill nor strength nor zeal of ours
Has mined and heaved the hostile towers;
Not by our hands is turned the key
That sets the sighing captives free. 40

A redder sea than Egypt's wave
Is piled and parted for the slave;
A darker cloud moves on in light;
A fiercer fire is guide by night!

The praise, O Lord! is Thine alone, 45
In Thy own way Thy work is done!
Our poor gifts at Thy feet we cast,
To whom be glory, first and last!
1865.

AFTER THE WAR.

THE PEACE AUTUMN.

Written for the Essex County Agricultural Festival, 1865.

THANK God for rest, where none molest,
And none can make afraid;
For Peace that sits as Plenty's guest
Beneath the homestead shade!

Bring pike and gun, the sword's red scurge, 5
The negro's broken chains,
And beat them at the blacksmith's forge
To ploughshares for our plains.

Alike henceforth our hills of snow,
And vales where cotton flowers; 10
All streams that flow, all winds that blow,
Are Freedom's motive-powers.

Henceforth to Labor's chivalry
Be knightly honors paid;
For nobler than the sword's shall be 15
The sickle's accolade.

Build up an altar to the Lord,
O grateful hearts of ours!
And shape it of the greenest sward
That ever drank the showers. 20

Lay all the bloom of gardens there,
And there the orchard fruits;
Bring golden grain from sun and air,
From earth her goodly roots.

There let our banners droop and flow, 25
The stars uprise and fall;
Our roll of martyrs, sad and slow,
Let sighing breezes call.

Their names let hands of horn and tan
And rough-shod feet applaud, 30
Who died to make the slave a man,
And link with toil reward.

There let the common heart keep time
To such an anthem sung
As never swelled on poet's rhyme, 35
Or thrilled on singer's tongue.

Song of our burden and relief,
Of peace and long annoy;
The passion of our mighty grief
And our exceeding joy! 40

A song of praise to Him who filled
The harvests sown in tears,
And gave each field a double yield
To feed our battle-years!

A song of faith that trusts the end 45
To match the good begun,
Nor doubts the power of Love to blend
The hearts of men as one!

TO THE THIRTY-NINTH CONGRESS.

The thirty-ninth congress was that which met in 1865, after the close of the war, when it was charged with the great question of reconstruction; the uppermost subject in men's minds was the standing of those who had recently been in arms against the Union and their relations to the freedmen.

O PEOPLE-CHOSEN! are ye not
Likewise the chosen of the Lord,
To do His will and speak His word?

From the loud thunder-storm of war
Not man alone hath called ye forth, 5
But He, the God of all the earth!

The torch of vengeance in your hands
He quenches; unto Him belongs
The solemn recompense of wrongs.

Enough of blood the land has seen, 10
And not by cell or gallows-stair
Shall ye the way of God prepare.

Say to the pardon-seekers : Keep
Your manhood, bend no suppliant knees,
Nor palter with unworthy pleas. 15

Above your voices sounds the wail
Of starving men ; we shut in vain
Our eyes to Pillow's ghastly stain.

What words can drown that bitter cry ? 19
What tears wash out the stain of death ?
What oaths confirm your broken faith ?

From you alone the guaranty
Of union, freedom, peace, we claim ;
We urge no conqueror's terms of shame.

Alas ! no victor's pride is ours ; 25
We bend above our triumphs won
Like David o'er his rebel son.

Be men, not beggars. Cancel all
By one brave, generous action ; trust
Your better instincts, and be just ! 30

Make all men peers before the law,
Take hands from off the negro's throat,
Give black and white an equal vote.

Keep all your forfeit lives and lands,
But give the common law's redress 35
To labor's utter nakedness.

Revive the old heroic will ;
Be in the right as brave and strong
As ye have proved yourselves in wrong.

Defeat shall then be victory, 40
Your loss the wealth of full amends,
And hate be love, and foes be friends.

Then buried be the dreadful past,
Its common slain be mourned, and let
All memories soften to regret. 45

Then shall the Union's mother-heart
Her lost and wandering ones recall,
Forgiving and restoring all,—

And Freedom break her marble trance
Above the Capitolian dome, 50
Stretch hands, and bid ye welcome home !

November, 1865.

THE HIVE AT GETTYSBURG.

IN the old Hebrew myth the lion's frame,
So terrible alive,
Bleached by the desert's sun and wind,
became

The wandering wild bees' hive ;
And he who, lone and naked-handed, tore
Those jaws of death apart, 6
In after time drew forth their honeyed
store
To strengthen his strong heart.

Dead seemed the legend : but it only slept
To wake beneath our sky ; 10
Just on the spot whence ravening Treason crept

Back to its lair to die,
Bleeding and torn from Freedom's mountain bounds,
A stained and shattered drum
Is now the hive where, on their flowery rounds, 15
The wild bees go and come.

Unchallenged by a ghostly sentinel,
They wander wide and far,
Along green hillsides, sown with shot and
shell,

Through vales once choked with war. 20
The low reveille of their battle-drum
Disturbs no morning prayer :
With deeper peace in summer noons their hum
Fills all the drowsy air.

And Samson's riddle is our own to-day, 25
Of sweetness from the strong,
Of union, peace, and freedom plucked
away

From the rent jaws of wrong.
From Treason's death we draw a purer
life,

As, from the beast he slew, 30
A sweetness sweeter for his bitter strife
The old-time athlete drew !

1868.

HOWARD AT ATLANTA.

RIGHT in the track where Sherman
Ploughed his red furrow,
Out of the narrow cabin,
Up from the cellar's burrow,
Gathered the little black people, 5
With freedom newly dowered,
Where, beside their Northern teacher,
Stood the soldier, Howard.

He listened and heard the children
Of the poor and long enslaved 10
Reading the words of Jesus,
Singing the songs of David.
Behold!—the dumb lips speaking,
The blind eyes seeing!
Bones of the Prophet's vision 15
Warmed into being!

Transformed he saw them passing
Their new life's portal!
Almost it seemed the mortal
Put on the immortal. 20
No more with the beasts of burden,
No more with stone and clod,
But crowned with glory and honor
In the image of God!

There was the human chattel 25
Its manhood taking;
There, in each dark, bronze statue,
A soul was waking!
The man of many battles,
With tears his eyelids pressing, 30
Stretched over those dusky foreheads
His one-armed blessing.

And he said: 'Who hears can never Fear for or doubt you;
What shall I tell the children 35
Up North about you?'
Then ran round a whisper, a murmur,
Some answer devising;
And a little boy stood up: 'General,
Tell 'em we're rising!' 40

O black boy of Atlanta!
But half was spoken:
The slave's chain and the master's Alike are broken.

The one curse of the races 45
Held both in tether:
They are rising,—all are rising,
The black and white together!

O brave men and fair women!
Ill comes of hate and scorning: 50
Shall the dark faces only
Be turned to morning?—
Make Time your sole avenger,
All-healing, all-redressing;
Meet Fate half-way, and make it 55
A joy and blessing!
1869.

THE EMANCIPATION GROUP.

Moses Kimball, a citizen of Boston, presented to the city a duplicate of the Freedman's Memorial statue erected in Lincoln Square, Washington. The group, which stands in Park Square, represents the figure of a slave, from whose limbs the broken fetters have fallen, kneeling in gratitude at the feet of Lincoln. The group was designed by Thomas Ball, and was unveiled December 9, 1879. These verses were written for the occasion.

AMIDST thy sacred effigies
Of old renown give place,
O city, Freedom-loved! to his
Whose hand unchained a race.

Take the worn frame, that rested not 5
Save in a martyr's grave;
The care-lined face, that none forgot,
Bent to the kneeling slave.

Let man be free! The mighty word
He spake was not his own; 10
An impulse from the Highest stirred
These chiselled lips alone.

The cloudy sign, the fiery guide,
Along his pathway ran,
And Nature, through his voice, denied 15
The ownership of man.

We rest in peace where these sad eyes
Saw peril, strife, and pain;
His was the nation's sacrifice,
And ours the priceless gain. 20

O symbol of God's will on earth
As it is done above !
Bear witness to the cost and worth
Of justice and of love.

Stand in thy place and testify 25
To coming ages long,
That truth is stronger than a lie,
And righteousness than wrong.

THE JUBILEE SINGERS.

A number of students of Fisk University, under the direction of one of the officers, gave a series of concerts in the Northern States, for the purpose of establishing the college on a firmer financial foundation. Their hymns and songs, mostly in a minor key, touched the hearts of the people, and were received as peculiarly expressive of a race delivered from bondage.

VOICE of a people suffering long,
The pathos of their mournful song,
The sorrow of their night of wrong !

Their cry like that which Israel gave,
A prayer for one to guide and save, 5
Like Moses by the Red Sea's wave !

The stern accord her timbrel lent
To Miriam's note of triumph sent O'er Egypt's sunken armament !

The tramp that startled camp and town,
And shook the walls of slavery down, 11
The spectral march of old John Brown !

The storm that swept through battle-days,
The triumph after long delays,
The bondmen giving God the praise ! 15

Voice of a ransomed race, sing on Till Freedom's every right is won,
And slavery's every wrong undone !

1880.

GARRISON.

The earliest poem in this division was my youthful tribute to the great reformer when himself a young man he was first sounding his trumpet in Essex County. I close with the verses inscribed to him at the end of his earthly career, May 24, 1879. My poetical service in the cause of freedom is thus almost synchronous with his life of devotion to the same cause.⁶⁰

THE storm and peril overpast,
The hounding hatred shamed and still,
Go, soul of freedom ! take at last
The place which thou alone canst fill.

Confirm the lesson taught of old— 5
Life saved for self is lost, while they
Who lose it in His service hold
The lease of God's eternal day.

Not for thyself, but for the slave
Thy words of thunder shook the world ;
No selfish griefs or hatred gave 11
The strength wherewith thy bolts were hurled.

From lips that Sinai's trumpet blew
We heard a tender under song ;
Thy very wrath from pity grew, 15
From love of man thy hate of wrong.

Now past and present are as one ;
The life below is life above ;
Thy mortal years have but begun 20
Thy immortality of love.

With some-what of thy lofty faith
We lay thy outworn garment by,
Give death but what belongs to death,
And life the life that cannot die !

Not for a soul like thine the calm 25
Of selfish ease and joys of sense ;
But duty, more than crown or palm,
Its own exceeding recompense.

Go up and on ! thy day well done,
Its morning promise well fulfilled, 30
Arise to triumphs yet unwon,
To holier tasks that God has willed.

Go, leave behind thee all that mars
The work below of man for man ;
With the white legions of the stars 35
Do service such as angels can.

Wherever wrong shall right deny
Or suffering spirits urge their plea,
Be thine a voice to smite the lie,
A hand to set the captive free ! 40

Songs of Labor and Reform

THE QUAKER OF THE OLDEN TIME.

THE Quaker of the olden time !
 How calm and firm and true,
 Unspotted by its wrong and crime,
 He walked the dark earth through.
 The lust of power, the love of gain,
 The thousand lures of sin
 Around him, had no power to stain
 The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
 All great things in the small,
 And knows how each man's life affects
 The spiritual life of all,
 He walked by faith and not by sight,
 By love and not by law ;
 The presence of the wrong or right
 He rather felt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes,
 That nothing stands alone,
 That whoso gives the motive, makes
 His brother's sin his own.
 And, pausing not for doubtful choice
 Of evils great or small,
 He listened to that inward voice
 Which called away from all.

O Spirit of that early day,
 So pure and strong and true,
 Be with us in the narrow way
 Our faithful fathers knew.
 Give strength the evil to forsake,
 The cross of Truth to bear,
 And love and reverent fear to make
 Our daily lives a prayer !

1838.

DEMOCRACY.

All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them—
Matthew vii 12

BEARER of Freedom's holy light,
 Breaker of Slavery's chain and rod,
 The foe of all which pains the sight,
 Or wounds the generous ear of God !

Beautiful yet thy temples rise,
 Though there profaning gifts are thrown;
 And fires unkindled of the skies
 Are glaring round thy altar-stone.

Still sacred, though thy name be breathed
 By those whose hearts thy truth deride;
 And garlands, plucked from thee, are wreathed
 Around the haughty brows of Pride.

Oh, ideal of my boyhood's time !
 The faith in which my father stood,
 Even when the sons of Lust and Crime
 Had stained thy peaceful courts with blood !

Still to those courts my footsteps turn,
 For through the mists which darken
 there,
 I see the flame of Freedom burn,—
 The Kebla of the patriot's prayer !

The generous feeling, pure and warm,
 Which owns the right of all divine;
 The pitying heart, the helping arm,
 The prompt self-sacrifice, are thine.

Beneath thy broad, impartial eye, 25
How fade the lines of caste and birth !
How equal in their suffering lie
The groaning multitudes of earth !

Still to a stricken brother true,
Whatever clime hath nurtured him ; 30
As stooped to heal the wounded Jew
The worshipper of Gerizim.

By misery unrepelled, unawed
By pomp or power, thou seest a Man
In prince or peasant, slave or lord, 35
Pale priest, or swarthy artisan.

Through all disguise, form, place, or name,
Beneath the flaunting robes of sin,
Through poverty and squalid shame,
Thou lookest on the man within. 40

On man, as man, retaining yet,
Howe'er debased, and soiled, and dim,
The crown upon his forehead set,
The immortal gift of God to him.

And there is reverence in thy look ; 45
For that frail form which mortals wear
The Spirit of the Holiest took,
And veiled His perfect brightness there.

Not from the shallow babbling fount
Of vain philosophy thou art ; 50
He who of old on Syria's Mount
Thrilled, warned, by turns, the listener's heart,

In holy words which cannot die,
In thoughts which angels leaned to know,
Proclaimed thy message from on high, 55
Thy mission to a world of woe.

That voice's echo hath not died !
From the blue lake of Galilee,
And Tabor's lonely mountain-side,
It calls a struggling world to thee. 60

Thy name and watchword o'er this land
I hear in every breeze that stirs,
And round a thousand altars stand
Thy banded party worshippers.

Not to these altars of a day, 65
At party's call, my gift I bring ;
But on thy olden shrine I lay
A freeman's dearest offering :

The voiceless utterance of his will,—
His pledge to Freedom and to Truth, 70
That manhood's heart remembers still
The homage of his generous youth.

Election Day, 1841.

THE GALLOWS.

Written on reading pamphlets published by clergymen against the abolition of the gallows.
[Originally entitled Lines]

I.

THE suns of eighteen centuries have shone
Since the Redeemer walked with man,
and made
The fisher's boat, the cavern's floor of
stone,
And mountain moss, a pillow for His
head ;
And He, who wandered with the peasant Jew, 5
And broke with publicans the bread of
shame,
And drank with blessings, in His Father's name,
The water which Samaria's outcast drew,
Hath now His temples upon every shore,
Altar and shrine and priest ; and incense dim 10
Evermore rising, with low prayer and
hymn,
From lips which press the temple's marble
floor,
Or kiss the gilded sign of the dread cross
He bore.

II.

Yet as of old, when, meekly 'doing good,'
He fed a blind and selfish multitude, 15
And even the poor companions of His lot
With their dim earthly vision knew Him
not,

How ill are His high teachings understood !
 Where He hath spoken Liberty, the priest
 At His own altar binds the chain anew ;
 Where He hath bidden to Life's equal feast, 21
 The starving many wait upon the few ;
 Where He hath spoken Peace, His name hath been
 The loudest war-cry of contending men ;
 Priests, pale with vigils, in His name have blessed 25
 The unsheathed sword, and laid the spear
 in rest,
 Wet the war-banner with their sacred
 wine,
 And crossed its blazon with the holy sign ;
 Yea, in His name who bade the erring live,
 And daily taught His lesson, to forgive !
 Twisted the cord and edged the murderous steel ; 31
 And, with His words of mercy on their
 lips,
 Hung gloating o'er the pincers' burning grips,
 And the grim horror of the straining
 wheel ;
 Fed the slow flame which gnawed the victim's limb, 35
 Who saw before his searing eyeballs swim
 The image of their Christ in cruel zeal,
 Through the black torment-smoke, held mocking to him !

III.

The blood which mingled with the desert
 sand,
 And beaded with its red and ghastly
 dew 40
 The vines and olives of the Holy Land ;
 The shrieking curses of the hunted
 Jew ;
 The white-sown bones of heretics, where'er
 They sank beneath the Crusade's holy
 spear ;
 Goa's dark dungeons, Malta's sea-washed cell, 45
 Where with the hymns the ghostly fathers sung
 Mingled the groans by subtle torture
 wrung,

Heaven's anthem blending with the shriek
 of hell !
 The midnight of Bartholomew, the stake
 Of Smithfield, and that thrice-accursed
 flame 50
 Which Calvin kindled by Geneva's lake ;
 New England's scaffold, and the priestly sneer
 Which mocked its victims in that hour of
 fear,
 When guilt itself a human tear might claim,—
 Bear witness, O Thou wronged and merciful One ! 55
 That Earth's most hateful crimes have in Thy name been done !

IV.

Thank God ! that I have lived to see the
 time
 When the great truth begins at last to find
 An utterance from the deep heart of mankind,
 Earnest and clear, that all Revenge is
 Crime, 60
 That man is holier than a creed, that all Restraint upon him must consult his
 good,
 Hope's sunshine linger on his prison
 wall,
 And Love look in upon his solitude.
 The beautiful lesson which our Saviour
 taught 65
 Through long, dark centuries its way hath wrought
 Into the common mind and popular
 thought ;
 And words, to which by Galilee's lake
 shore
 The humble fishers listened with hushed oar,
 Have found an echo in the general heart,
 And of the public faith become a living
 part. 71

V.

Who shall arrest this tendency ? Bring back
 The cells of Venice and the bigot's rack ?

Harden the softening human heart again
To cold indifference to a brother's pain?

Ye most unhappy men! who, turned
away 76

From the mild sunshine of the Gospel
day,

Grope in the shadows of Man's twilight
time,

What mean ye, that with ghoul-like zest
ye brood,

O'er those foul altars streaming with warm blood, 80

Permitted in another age and clime?

Why cite that law with which the bigot
Jew

Rebuked the Pagan's mercy, when he
knew

No evil in the Just One? Wherefore
turn

To the dark, cruel past? Can ye not learn 85

From the pure Teacher's life how mildly
free

Is the great Gospel of Humanity?

The Flamen's knife is bloodless, and no
more

Mexitli's altars soak with human gore,
No more the ghastly sacrifices smoke 90

Through the green arches of the Druid's oak;

And ye of milder faith, with your high
claim

Of prophet-utterance in the Holiest name,
Will ye become the Druids of our time!

Set up your scaffold-altars in our land, 95
And, consecrators of Law's darkest crime,

Urge to its loathsome work the hangman's hand?

Beware, lest human nature, roused at
last,

From its peeled shoulder your encumbrance cast,

And, sick to loathing of your cry for
blood, 100

Rank ye with those who led their victims
round

The Celt's red altar and the Indian's mound,

Abhorred of Earth and Heaven, a pagan brotherhood!

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST.

As o'er his furrowed fields which lie
Beneath a coldly dropping sky,

Yet chill with winter's melted snow,
The husbandman goes forth to sow,

Thus, Freedom, on the bitter blast 5
The ventures of thy seed we cast,

And trust to warmer sun and rain
To swell the germs and fill the grain.

Who calls thy glorious service hard?
Who deems it not its own reward? 10

Who, for its trials, counts it less
A cause of praise and thankfulness?

It may not be our lot to wield
The sickle in the ripened field;

Nor ours to hear, on summer eves, 15
The reaper's song among the sheaves.

Yet where our duty's task is wrought
In unison with God's great thought,

The near and future blend in one,
And whatsoever is willed, is done! 20

And ours the grateful service whence
Comes day by day the recompense;

The hope, the trust, the purpose stayed,
The fountain and the noonday shade.

And were this life the utmost span, 25
The only end and aim of man,

Better the toil of fields like these
Than waking dream and slothful ease.

But life, though falling like our grain,
Like that revives and springs again;

And, early called, how blest are they 30
Who wait in heaven their harvest-day!

1843.

TO THE REFORMERS OF ENGLAND.

This poem was addressed to those who like Richard Cobden and John Bright were seeking the reform of political evils in Great Britain by peaceful and Christian means. It will be remembered that the Anti-Corn-Law League was in the midst of its labors at this time.

God bless ye, brothers! in the fight

Ye're waging now, ye cannot fail,
For better is your sense of right

Than king-craft's triple mail.

Than tyrant's law, or bigot's ban,
More mighty is your simplest word;
The free heart of an honest man
Than crosier or the sword.

Go, let your blinded Church rehearse
The lesson it has learned so well;
It moves not with its prayer or curse
The gates of heaven or hell.

Let the State scaffold rise again;
Did Freedom die when Russell died?
Forget ye how the blood of Vane
From earth's green bosom cried?

The great hearts of your olden time
Are beating with you, full and strong;
All holy memories and sublime
And glorious round ye throng.

The bluff, bold men of Runnymede
Are with ye still in times like these;
The shades of England's mighty dead,
Your cloud of witnesses!

The truths ye urge are borne abroad
By every wind and every tide;
The voice of Nature and of God
Speaks out upon your side.

The weapons which your hands have found
Are those which Heaven itself has
wrought,
Light, Truth, and Love; your battle-
ground
The free, broad field of Thought.

No partial, selfish purpose breaks
The simple beauty of your plan,
Nor he from throne or altar shakes
Your steady faith in man.

The languid pulse of England starts
And bounds beneath your words of
power,
The beating of her million hearts
Is with you at this hour!

O ye who, with undoubting eyes,
Through present cloud and gathering
storm,
Behold the span of Freedom's skies,
And sunshine soft and warm;

Press bravely onward! not in vain
Your generous trust in human-kind;
The good which bloodshed could not gain
Your peaceful zeal shall find.

Press on! the triumph shall be won
Of common rights and equal laws,
The glorious dream of Harrington,
And Sidney's good old cause.

Blessing the cotter and the crown,
Sweetening worn Labor's bitter cup;
And, plucking not the highest down,
Lifting the lowest up.

Press on! and we who may not share
The toil or glory of your fight
May ask, at least, in earnest prayer,
God's blessing on the right!

THE HUMAN SACRIFICE.

Some leading sectarian papers had lately published the letter of a clergyman, giving an account of his attendance upon a criminal (who had committed murder during a fit of intoxication), at the time of his execution, in western New York. The writer describes the agony of the wretched being, his abortive attempts at prayer, his appeal for life, his fear of a violent death, and, after declaring his belief that the poor victim died without hope of salvation, concludes with a warm eulogy upon the gallows, being more than ever convinced of its utility by the awful dread and horror which it inspired.

I.

FAR from his close and noisome cell,
By grassy lane and sunny stream,
Blown clover field and strawberry dell,
And green and meadow freshness, fell
The footsteps of his dream.
Again from careless feet the dew
Of summer's misty morn he shook;
Again with merry heart he threw
His light line in the rippling brook.

Back crowded all his school-day joys ; 10
 He urged the ball and quoit again,
 And heard the shout of laughing boys
 Come ringing down the walnut glen.
 Again he felt the western breeze,
 With scent of flowers and crisping
 hay ; 15
 And down again through wind-stirred
 trees
 He saw the quivering sunlight play.
 An angel in home's vine-hung door,
 He saw his sister smile once more ;
 Once more the truant's brown-locked
 head 20
 Upon his mother's knees was laid,
 And sweetly lulled to slumber there,
 With evening's holy hymn and prayer !

II.

He woke. At once on heart and brain
 The present Terror rushed again ; 25
 Clanked on his limbs the felon's chain !
 He woke, to hear the church-tower tell
 Time's footfall on the conscious bell,
 And, shuddering, feel that clanging din
 His life's last hour had ushered in ; 30
 To see within his prison-yard,
 Through the small window, iron barred,
 The gallows shadow rising dim
 Between the sunrise heaven and him ;
 A horror in God's blessed air ; 35
 A blackness in His morning light ;
 Like some foul devil-altar there
 Built up by demon hands at night.
 And, maddened by that evil sight,
 Dark, horrible, confused, and strange, 40
 A chaos of wild, weltering change,
 All power of check and guidance gone,
 Dizzy and blind, his mind swept on,
 In vain he strove to breathe a prayer,
 In vain he turned the Holy Book, 45
 He only heard the gallows-stair
 Creak as the wind its timbers shook.
 No dream for him of sin forgiven,
 While still that baleful spectre stood,
 With its hoarse murmur, 'Blood for
Blood !' 50
 Between him and the pitying Heaven !

III.

Low on his dungeon floor he knelt,
 And smote his breast, and on his chain,
 Whose iron clasp he always felt,
 His hot tears fell like rain ; 55
 And near him, with the cold, calm look
 And tone of one whose formal part,
 Unwarmed, unsoftened of the heart,
 Is measured out by rule and book,
 With placid lip and tranquil blood, 60
 The hangman's ghostly ally stood,
 Blessing with solemn text and word
 The gallows-drop and strangling cord ;
 Lending the sacred Gospel's awe
 And sanction to the crime of Law. 65

IV.

He saw the victim's tortured brow,
 The sweat of anguish starting there,
 The record of a nameless woe
 In the dim eye's imploring stare,
 Seen hideous through the long, damp
 hair,— 70
 Fingers of ghastly skin and bone
 Working and writhing on the stone !
 And heard, by mortal terror wrung
 From heaving breast and stiffened tongue,
 The choking sob and low hoarse prayer ;
 As o'er his half-crazed fancy came 76
 A vision of the eternal flame,
 Its smoking cloud of agonies,
 Its demon-worm that never dies,
 The everlasting rise and fall 80
 Of fire-waves round the infernal wall ;
 While high above that dark red flood,
 Black, giant-like, the gallows stood ;
 Two busy fiends attending there :
 One with cold mocking rite and prayer,
 The other with impatient grasp, 86
 Tightening the death-rope's strangling clasp.

V.

The unfelt rite at length was done,
 The prayer unheard at length was said,
 An hour had passed : the noonday sun 90
 Smote on the features of the dead !

And he who stood the doomed beside,
Calm gauger of the swelling tide
Of mortal agony and fear,
Heeding with curious eye and ear 95
Whate'er revealed the keen excess
Of man's extremest wretchedness :
And who in that dark anguish saw
An earnest of the victim's fate,
The vengeful terrors of God's law, 100
The kindlings of Eternal hate,
The first drops of that fiery rain
Which beats the dark red realm of pain,
Did he uplift his earnest cries
Against the crime of Law, which
gave 105
His brother to that fearful grave,
Whereon Hope's moonlight never lies,
And Faith's white blossoms never
wave
To the soft breath of Memory's sighs ;
Which sent a spirit marred and stained,
By fiends of sin possessed, profaned, 111
In madness and in blindness stark,
Into the silent, unknown dark ?
No, from the wild and shrinking dread,
With which he saw the victim led 115
Beneath the dark veil which divides
Ever the living from the dead,
And Nature's solemn secret hides,
The man of prayer can only draw
New reasons for his bloody law ; 120
New faith in staying Murder's hand
By murder at that Law's command ;
New reverence for the gallows-rope,
As human nature's latest hope ;
Last relic of the good old time, 125
When Power found license for its crime,
And held a writhing world in check
By that fell cord about its neck ;
Stifled Sedition's rising shout,
Choked the young breath of Freedom
out, 130
And timely checked the words which sprung
From Heresy's forbidden tongue ;
While in its noose of terror bound,
The Church its cherished union found,
Conforming, on the Moslem plan, 135
The motley-colored mind of man,
Not by the Koran and the Sword,
But by the Bible and the Cord !

VI.

O Thou ! at whose rebuke the grave
Back to warm life its sleeper gave, 140
Beneath whose sad and tearful glance
The cold and changed countenance
Broke the still horror of its trance,
And, waking, saw with joy above,
A brother's face of tenderest love ; 145
Thou, unto whom the blind and lame,
The sorrowing and the sin-sick came,
And from Thy very garment's hem
Drew life and healing unto them,
The burden of Thy holy faith 150
Was love and life, not hate and death ;
Man's demon ministers of pain,
The fiends of his revenge, were sent
From Thy pure Gospel's element
To their dark home again. 155
Thy name is Love ! What, then, is he,
Who in that name the gallows rears,
An awful altar built to Thee,
With sacrifice of blood and tears ?
Oh, once again Thy healing lay 160
On the blind eyes which knew Thee
not,
And let the light of Thy pure day
Melt in upon his darkened thought.
Softened his hard, cold heart, and show
The power which in forbearance lies,
And let him feel that mercy now 166
Is better than old sacrifice !

VII.

As on the White Sea's charmed shore,
The Parsee sees his holy hill
With dunnest smoke-clouds curtained
o'er, 170
Yet knows beneath them, evermore,
The low, pale fire is quivering still ;
So, underneath its clouds of sin,
The heart of man retaineth yet
Gleams of its holy origin ; 175
And half-quenched stars that never set,
Dim colors of its faded bow,
And early beauty, linger there,
And o'er its wasted desert blow
Faint breathings of its morning air. 180

Oh, never yet upon the scroll
 Of the sin-stained, but priceless soul,
 Hath Heaven inscribed 'Despair !'
 Cast not the clouded gem away,
 Quench not the dim but living ray,— 185
 My brother man, Beware !
 With that deep voice which from the
 skies
 Forbade the Patriarch's sacrifice,
 God's angel cries, Forbear !

SONGS OF LABOR.

DEDICATION

Prefixed to the volume of which the group of six poems following this prelude constituted the first portion

I WOULD the gift I offer here
 Might grace from thy favor take,
 And, seen through Friendship's atmosphere,
 On softened lines and coloring, wear
 The unaccustomed light of beauty, for thy sake. 5

Few leaves of Fancy's spring remain :
 But what I have I give to thee,
 The o'er-sunned bloom of summer's
 plain,
 And paler flowers, the latter rain
 Calls from the westering slope of life's autumnal lea. 10

Above the fallen groves of green,
 Where youth's enchanted forest stood,
 Dry root and mossed trunk between,
 A sober after-growth is seen,
 As springs the pine where falls the gay-leafed maple wood ! 15

Yet birds will sing, and breezes play
 Their leaf-harps in the sombre tree ;
 And through the bleak and wintry day
 It keeps its steady green alway,—
 So, even my after-thoughts may have a charm for thee. 20

Art's perfect forms no moral need,
 And beauty is its own excuse ;⁶¹
 But for the dull and flowerless weed
 Some healing virtue still must plead,

And the rough ore must find its honors in its use. 25

So haply these, my simple lays
 Of homely toil, may serve to show
 The orchard bloom and tasselled maize
 That skirt and gladden duty's ways,
 The unsung beauty hid life's common things below. 30

Haply from them the toiler, bent
 Above his forge or plough, may gain
 A manlier spirit of content,
 And feel that life is wisest spent
 Where the strong working hand makes strong the working brain. 35

The doom which to the guilty pair
 Without the walls of Eden came,
 Transforming sinless ease to care
 And rugged toil, no more shall bear
 The burden of old crime, or mark of primal shame. 40

A blessing now, a curse no more ;
 Since He, whose name we breathe
 with awe,
 The coarse mechanic vesture wore,
 A poor man toiling with the poor,
 In labor, as in prayer, fulfilling the same
 law. 45

THE SHOEMAKERS.

Ho ! workers of the old time styled
 The Gentle Craft of Leather !
 Young brothers of the ancient guild,
 Stand forth once more together !
 Call out again your long array, 5
 In the olden merry manner !
 Once more, on gay St. Crispin's day,
 Fling out your blazoned banner !

Rap, rap ! upon the well-worn stone
 How falls the polished hammer ! 10
 Rap, rap ! the measured sound has grown

A quick and merry clamor.
 Now shape the sole ! now deftly curl
 The glossy vamp around it,
 And bless the while the bright-eyed girl
 Whose gentle fingers bound it ! 16

For you, along the Spanish main
A hundred keels are ploughing ;
For you, the Indian on the plain
His lasso-coil is throwing ; 20
For you, deep glens with hemlock dark
The woodman's fire is lighting ;
For you, upon the oak's gray bark,
The woodman's axe is smiting.

For you, from Carolina's pine 25
The rosin-gum is stealing ;
For you, the dark-eyed Florentine
Her silken skein is reeling ;
For you, the dizzy goatherd roams
His rugged Alpine ledges ; 30
For you, round all her shepherd homes,
Bloom England's thorny hedges.

The foremost still, by day or night,
On moated mound or heather,
Where'er the need of trampled right 35
Brought toiling men together ;
Where the free burghers from the wall
Defied the mail-clad master,
Than yours, at Freedom's trumpet-call,
No craftsmen rallied faster. 40

Let foplings sneer, let fools deride,
Ye heed no idle scorner ;
Free hands and hearts are still your
pride,
And duty done, your honor.
Ye dare to trust, for honest fame, 45
The jury Time empanels,
And leave to truth each noble name
Which glorifies your annals.

Thy songs, Hans Sachs, are living yet,
In strong and hearty German ; 50
And Bloomfield's lay, and Gifford's wit,
And patriot fame of Sherman ;
Still from his book, a mystic seer,
The soul of Behmen teaches,
And England's priestcraft shakes to hear
Of Fox's leathern breeches. 56

The foot is yours ; where'er it falls,
It treads your well-wrought leather,
On earthen floor, in marble halls,
On carpet, or on heather. 60

Still there the sweetest charm is found
Of matron grace or vestal's,
As Hebe's foot bore nectar round
Among the old celestials !

Rap, rap !—your stout and bluff brogan,
With footsteps slow and weary, 66
May wander where the sky's blue span
Shuts down upon the prairie.
On Beauty's foot your slippers glance,
By Saratoga's fountains, 70
Or twinkle down the summer dance
Beneath the Crystal Mountains !

The red brick to the mason's hand,
The brown earth to the tiller's,
The shoe in yours shall wealth command,
Like fairy Cinderella's ! 76
As they whoshunned the household maid
Beheld the crown upon her,
So all shall see your toil repaid
With hearth and home and honor. 80

Then let the toast be freely quaffed,
In water cool and brimming, --
'All honor to the good old Craft,
Its merry men and women !'
Call out again your long array, 85
In the old time's pleasant manner :
Once more, on gay St. Crispin's day,
Fling out his blazoned banner !
1845.

THE FISHERMEN.

HURRAH ! the seaward breezes
Sweep down the bay amain ;
Heave up, my lads, the anchor !
Run up the sail again !
Leave to the lubber landsmen 5
The rail-car and the steed ;
The stars of heaven shall guide us,
The breath of heaven shall speed.

From the hill-top looks the steeple,
And the lighthouse from the sand ; 10
And the scattered pines are waving
Their farewell from the land.
One glance, my lads, behind us,
For the homes we leave one sigh,
Ere we take the change and chances 15
Of the ocean and the sky.

Now, brothers, for the icebergs Of frozen Labrador, Floating spectral in the moonshine, Along the low, black shore ! Where like snow the gannet's feathers On Brador's rocks are shed, And the noisy murr are flying, Like black scuds, overhead ;	20	In the darkness as in daylight, On the water as on land, God's eye is looking on us, And beneath us is His hand ! Death will find us soon or later, On the deck or in the cot ; And we cannot meet him better Than in working out our lot.	65 70
Where in mist the rock is hiding, And the sharp reef lurks below, And the white squall smites in summer, And the autumn tempests blow ; Where, through gray and rolling vapor, From evening unto morn, A thousand boats are hailing, Horn answering unto horn.	25 30	Hurrah ! hurrah ! the west-wind Comes freshening down the bay, The rising sails are filling ; Give way, my lads, give way ! Leave the coward landsman clinging To the dull earth, like a weed ; The stars of heaven shall guide us, The breath of heaven shall speed !	75 80
Hurrah ! for the Red Island, With the white cross on its crown ! Hurrah ! for Meccatina, And its mountains bare and brown ! Where the Caribou's tall antlers O'er the dwarf-wood freely toss, And the footstep of the Mickmack Has no sound upon the moss.	35 40	1845.
There we'll drop our lines, and gather Old Ocean's treasures in, Where'er the mottled mackerel Turns up a steel-dark fin. The sea's our field of harvest, Its scaly tribes our grain ; We'll reap the teeming waters As at home they reap the plain !	45	THE LUMBERMEN.
Our wet hands spread the carpet, And light the hearth of home ; From our fish, as in the old time, The silver coin shall come. As the demon fled the chamber Where the fish of Tobit lay, So ours from all our dwellings Shall frighten Want away.	50	WILDLY round our woodland quarters Sad-voiced Autumn grieves ; Thickly down these swelling waters Float his fallen leaves. Through the tall and naked timber, Column-like and old, Gleam the sunsets of November, From their skies of gold.
Though the mist upon our jackets In the bitter air congeals, And our lines wind stiff and slowly From off the frozen reels ; Though the fog be dark around us, And the storm blow high and loud, We will whistle down the wild wind, And laugh beneath the cloud !	55 60	O'er us, to the southland heading, Screams the gray wild-goose ; On the night-frost sounds the treading Of the brindled moose. Noiseless creeping, while we're sleeping, Frost his task-work plies ; Soon, his icy bridges heaping, Shall our log-piles rise.	10 15
		When, with sounds of smothered thunder, On some night of rain, Lake and river break asunder Winter's weakened chain, Down the wild March flood shall bear them To the saw-mill's wheel, Or where Steam, the slave, shall tear them With his teeth of steel.	20

Be it starlight, be it moonlight, In these vales below, When the earliest beams of sunlight Streak the mountain's snow, Crisps the hoar-frost, keen and early, To our hurrying feet, And the forest echoes clearly All our blows repeat.	25 30	When, like seamen from the waters, From the woods we come, Greeting sisters, wives, and daughters, Angels of our home!	70
Where the crystal Ambijejis Stretches broad and clear, And Millnoket's pine-black ridges Hide the browsing deer: Where, through lakes and wide morasses, Or through rocky walls, Swift and strong, Penobscot passes White with foamy falls;	35 40	Not for us the measured ringing From the village spire, Not for us the Sabbath singing Of the sweet-voiced choir: Ours the old, majestic temple, Where God's brightness shines Down the dome so grand and ample, Propped by lofty pines!	75 80
Where, through clouds, are glimpses given Of Katahdin's sides,— Rock and forest piled to heaven, Torn and ploughed by slides! Far below, the Indian trapping, In the sunshine warm; Far above, the snow-cloud wrapping Half the peak in storm!	45	Through each branch-enwoven skylight, Speaks He in the breeze, As of old beneath the twilight Of lost Eden's trees! For His ear, the inward feeling Needs no outward tongue; He can see the spirit kneeling While the axe is swung.	85
Where are mossy carpets better Than the Persian weaves, And than Eastern perfumes sweeter Seem the fading leaves; And a music wild and solemn, From the pine-tree's height, Rolls its vast and sea-like volume On the wind of night;	50	Heeding truth alone, and turning From the false and dim, Lamp of toil or altar burning Are alike to Him. Strike then, comrades! Trade is waiting On our rugged toil; Far ships waiting for the freighting Of our woodland spoil!	90 95
Make we here our camp of winter; And, through sleet and snow, Pitchy knot and beechen splinter On our hearth shall glow. Here, with mirth to lighten duty, We shall lack alone Woman's smile and girlhood's beauty, Childhood's lisping tone.	55 60	Ships whose traffic links these highlands, Bleak and cold, of ours, With the citron-planted islands Of a clime of flowers; To our frosts the tribute bringing Of eternal heats; In our lap of winter flinging Tropic fruits and sweets.	100
But their hearth is brighter burning For our toil to-day; And the welcome of returning Shall our loss repay,	65	Cheerly, on the axe of labor, Let the sunbeams dance, Better than the flash of sabre Or the gleam of lance! Strike! With every blow is given Freer sun and sky, And the long-hid earth to heaven Looks, with wondering eye!	105 110

Loud behind us grow the murmurs
Of the age to come ;
Clang of smiths, and tread of farmers, 115
Bearing harvest home !
Here her virgin lap with treasures
Shall the green earth fill ;
Waving wheat and golden maize-ears
Crown each beechen hill. 120

Keep who will the city's alleys,
Take the smooth-shorn plain ;
Give to us the cedarn valleys,
Rocks and hills of Maine !
In our North-land, wild and woody, 125
Let us still have part :
Rugged nurse and mother sturdy,
Hold us to thy heart !

Oh, our free hearts beat the warmer
For thy breath of snow ; 130
And our tread is all the firmer
For thy rocks below.
Freedom, hand in hand with labor,
Walketh strong and brave ;
On the forehead of his neighbor 135
No man writeth Slave !

Lo, the day breaks ! old Katahdin's
Pine-trees show its fires,
While from these dim forest gardens
Rise their blackened spires. 140
Up, my comrades ! up and doing !
Manhood's rugged play
Still renewing, bravely hewing
Through the world our way !
1845.

THE SHIP-BUILDERS.

THE sky is ruddy in the east,
The earth is gray below,
And, spectral in the river-mist,
The ship's white timbers show.
Then let the sounds of measured stroke 5
And grating saw begin ;
The broad-axe to the gnarled oak,
The mallet to the pin !

Hark ! roars the bellows, blast on blast,
The sooty smithy jars, 10
And fire-sparks, rising far and fast,
Are fading with the stars.
All day for us the smith shall stand
Beside that flashing forge ;
All day for us his heavy hand 15
The groaning anvil scourge.

From far-off hills, the panting team
For us is toiling near ;
For us the raftsmen down the stream
Their island barges steer. 20
Rings out for us the axe-man's stroke
In forests old and still ;
For us the century-circled oak
Falls crashing down his hill.

Up ! up ! in nobler toil than ours 25
No craftsmen bear a part :
We make of Nature's giant powers
The slaves of human Art.
Lay rib to rib and beam to beam,
And drive the treenails free ; 30
Nor faithless joint nor yawning seam
Shall tempt the searching sea !

Where'er the keel of our good ship
The sea's rough field shall plough ;
Where'er her tossing spars shall drip 35
With salt-spray caught below ;
That ship must heed her master's beck,
Her helm obey his hand,
And seamen tread her reeling deck
As if they trod the land. 40

Her oaken ribs the vulture-beak
Of Northern ice may peel ;
The sunken rock and coral peak
May grate along her keel ;
And know we well the painted shell 45
We give to wind and wave,
Must float, the sailor's citadel,
Or sink, the sailor's grave !

Ho ! strike away the bars and blocks,
And set the good ship free ! 50
Why lingers on these dusty rocks
The young bride of the sea ?
Look ! how she moves adown the grooves,
In graceful beauty now !
How lowly on the breast she loves 55
Sinks down her virgin prow !

God bless her ! wheresoe'er the breeze
Her snowy wing shall fan,
Aside the frozen Hebrides,
Or sultry Hindostan !
Where'er, in mart or on the main,
With peaceful flag unfurled,
She helps to wind the silken chain
Of commerce round the world !

Speed on the ship ! But let her bear 65
No merchandise of sin,
No groaning cargo of despair
Her roomy hold within ;
No Lethean drug for Eastern lands,
Nor poison-draught for ours ;
But honest fruits of toiling hands 70
And Nature's sun and showers.

Be hers the Prairie's golden grain,
The Desert's golden sand,
The clustered fruits of sunny Spain, 75
The spice of Morning-land !
Her pathway on the open main
May blessings follow free,
And glad hearts welcome back again
Her white sails from the sea !
1846. 80

THE DROVERS.

THROUGH heat and cold, and shower and
sun,
Still onward cheerly driving !
There's life alone in duty done,
And rest alone in striving.
But see ! the day is closing cool,
The woods are dim before us ;
The white fog of the wayside pool
Is creeping slowly o'er us.

The night is falling, comrades mine,
Our footsore beasts are weary,
And through yon elms the tavern sign
Looks out upon us cheery.
The landlord beckons from his door,
His beechen fire is glowing ;
These ample barns, with feed in store, 15
Are filled to overflowing.

From many a valley frowned across
By brows of rugged mountains ;
From hillsides where, through spongy
moss,
Gush out the river fountains ;
From quiet farm-fields, green and low,
And bright with blooming clover ;
From vales of corn the wandering crow
No richer hovers over,—

Day after day our way has been 25
O'er many a hill and hollow ;
By lake and stream, by wood and glen,
Our stately drove we follow.
Through dust-clouds rising thick and dun,
As smoke of battle o'er us, 30
Their white horns glisten in the sun,
Like plumes and crests before us.

We see them slowly climb the hull,
As slow behind it sinking ;
Or, thronging close, from roadside rill, 35
Or sunny lakelet, drinking.
Now crowding in the narrow road,
In thick and struggling masses,
They glare upon the teamster's load,
Or rattling coach that passes. 40

Anon, with toss of horn and tail,
And paw of hoof, and bellow,
They leap some farmer's broken pale,
O'er meadow-close or fallow.
Forth comes the startled goodman ; forth
Wife, children, house-dog, sally, 45
Till once more on their dusty path
The baffled truants rally.

We drive no starvelings, scraggy grown,
Loose-legged, and ribbed and bony, 50
Like those who grind their noses down
On pastures bare and stony,— Lank oxen, rough as Indian dogs,
And cows too lean for shadows,
Disputing feebly with the frogs 55
The crop of saw-grass meadows !

In our good drove, so sleek and fair,
No bones of leanness rattle ;
No tottering hide-bound ghosts are there,
Or Pharaoh's evil cattle. 60

Each stately beeve bespeaks the hand
That fed him unrepining;
The fatness of a goodly land
In each dun hide is shining.

We've sought them where, in warmest
nooks, 65

The freshest feed is growing,
By sweetest springs and clearest brooks
Through honeysuckle flowing;
Wherever hillsides, sloping south,
Are bright with early grasses, 70
Or, tracking green the lowland's drouth,
The mountain streamlet passes.

But now the day is closing cool,
The woods are dim before us,
The white fog of the wayside pool 75
Is creeping slowly o'er us.
The cricket to the frog's bassoon
His shrillest time is keeping;
The sickle of yon setting moon
The meadow-mist is reaping. 80

The night is falling, comrades mune,
Our footsore beasts are weary,
And through yon elms the tavern sign
Looks out upon us cheery.
To-morrow, eastward with our charge 85
We'll go to meet the dawning,
Ere yet the pines of Kearsarge
Have seen the sun of morning.

When snow-flakes o'er the frozen earth,
Instead of birds, are flitting; 90
When children throng the glowing hearth,
And quiet wives are knitting;
While in the fire-light strong and clear
Young eyes of pleasure glisten,
To tales of all we see and hear 95
The ears of home shall listen.

By many a Northern lake and hill,
From many a mountain pasture,
Shall Fancy play the Drover still,
And speed the long night faster. 100
Then let us on, through shower and sun,
And heat and cold, be driving;
There's life alone in duty done,
And rest alone in striving.

1847.

THE HUSKERS.

It was late in mild October, and the lopg
autumnal rain
Had left the summer harvest-fields all green with grass again;
The first sharp frosts had fallen, leaving all the woodlands gay
With the hues of summer's rainbow, or the meadow-flowers of May.

Through a thin, dry mist, that morning,
the sun rose broad and red, 5
At first a rayless disk of fire, he brightened
as he sped;
Yet even his noontide glory fell chastened
and subdued,
On the cornfields and the orchards and softly pictured wood.

And all that quiet afternoon, slow sloping to the night,
He wove with golden shuttle the haze with yellow light; 10
Slanting through the painted beeches, he glorified the hill;
And, beneath it, pond and meadow lay brighter, greener still.

And shouting boys in woodland haunts caught glimpses of that sky, Flecked by the many-tinted leaves, and laughed, they knew not why;
And school-girls, gay with aster-flowers,
beside the meadow brooks, 15
Mingled the glow of autumn with the sunshine of sweet looks.

From spire and barn looked westerly the patient weatherrocks;
But even the birches on the hill stood motionless as rocks.
No sound was in the woodlands, save the squirrel's dropping shell,
And the yellow leaves among the boughs,
low rustling as they fell. 20

The summer grains were harvested ; the stubble-fields lay dry,
Where June winds rolled, in light and shade, the pale green waves of rye ;
But still, on gentle hill-slopes, in valleys
fringed with wood,
Ungathered, bleaching in the sun, the heavy corn crop stood.

Bent low, by autumn's wind and rain,
through husks that, dry and sere, 25
Unfolded from their ripened charge, shone
out the yellow ear ;
Beneath, the turnip lay concealed, in many a verdant fold,
And glistened in the slanting light the pumpkin's sphere of gold.

There wrought the busy harvesters ; and many a creaking wain
Bore slowly to the long barn-floor its load of husk and grain ; 30
Till broad and red, as when he rose, the sun sank down, at last,
And like a merry guest's farewell, the day in brightness passed.

And lo ! as through the western pines ; on meadow, stream, and pond,
Flamed the red radiance of a sky, set all afire beyond,
Slowly o'er the eastern sea-bluffs a milder glory shone, 35
And the sunset and the moonrise were mingled into one !

As thus into the quiet night the twilight
lapsed away,
And deeper in the brightening moon the tranquil shadows lay ;
From many a brown old farm-house, and
hamlet without name,
Their milking and their home-tasks done,
the merry huskers came. 40

Swung o'er the heaped-up harvest, from pitchforks in the mow, Shone dimly down the lanterns on the pleasant scene below ;
The growing pile of husks behind, the golden ears before,
And laughing eyes and busy hands and brown cheeks glimmering o'er.

Half hidden, in a quiet nook, serene of look and heart, 45
Talking their old times over, the old men
sat apart ;
While up and down the unhusked pile, or nestling in its shade,
At hide-and-seek, with laugh and shout,
the happy children played.

Urged by the good host's daughter, a maiden young and fair,
Lifting to light her sweet blue eyes and pride of soft brown hair, 50
The master of the village school, sleek of hair and smooth of tongue,
To the quaint tune of some old psalm,
a husking-ballad sung.

THE CORN-SONG.

Heap high the farmer's wintry hoard !
Heap high the golden corn !
No richer gift has Autumn poured 55
From out her lavish horn !

Let other lands, exulting, glean
The apple from the pine,
The orange from its glossy green,
The cluster from the vine ; 60

We better love the hardy gift
Our rugged vales bestow,
To cheer us when the storm shall drift
Our harvest-fields with snow.

Through vales of grass and meads of
flowers 65
Our ploughs their furrows made,
While on the hills the sun and showers
Of changeful April played.

We dropped the seed o'er hill and plain
Beneath the sun of May, 70
And frightened from our sprouting grain
The robber crows away.

All through the long, bright days of June
Its leaves grew green and fair,
And waved in hot midsummer's noon 75
Its soft and yellow hair.

And now, with autumn's moonlit eves,
Its harvest-time has come,
We pluck away the frosted leaves,
And bear the treasure home.

80

There, when the snows about us drift,
And winter winds are cold,
Fair hands the broken grain shall sift,
And knead its meal of gold.

Let rapid idlers loll in silk
Around their costly board ;
Give us the bowl of samp and milk,
By homespun beauty poured !

85

Where'er the wide old kitchen hearth
Sends up its smoky curls,
Who will not thank the kindly earth,
And bless our farmer girls !

90

Then shame on all the proud and vain,
Whoso folly laughs to scorn
The blessing of our hardy grain,
Our wealth of golden corn !

95

Let earth withhold her goodly root,
Let mildew blight the rye,
Give to the worm the orchard's fruit,
The wheat-field to the fly :

100

But let the good old crop adorn
The hills our fathers trod ;
Still let us, for His golden corn,
Send up our thanks to God !

1847.

THE REFORMER.

ALL grim and soiled and brown with tan,
I saw a Strong One, in his wrath,
Smiting the godless shrines of man
Along his path.

The Church, beneath her trembling dome,
Essayed in vain her ghostly charm :
Wealth shook within his gilded home
With strange alarm.

10

Fraud from his secret chambers fled
Before the sunlight bursting in :
Sloth drew her pillow o'er her head
To drown the din.

'Spare,' Art implored, 'yon holy pile ;
That grand, old, time-worn turrets-
Meek Reverence, kneeling in the aisle, 15
Cried out, 'Forbear !'

Gray-bearded Use, who, deaf and blind,
Groped for his old accustomed stone,
Leaned on his staff, and wept to find
His seat o'erthrown.

20

Young Romance raised his dreamy eyes,
O'erhung with paly locks of gold, --
'Why smite,' he asked in sad surprise,
'The fair, the old ?'

Yet louder rang the Strong One's stroke,
Yet nearer flashed his axe's gleam ;
Shuddering and sick of heart I woke,
As from a dream.

25

I looked ; aside the dust-cloud rolled,
The Waster seemed the Builder too ;
Upspringing from the ruined Old
I saw the New.

30

'T was but the ruin of the bad,
The wasting of the wrong and ill ;
Whate'er of good the old time had
Was living still.

35

Calm grew the brows of him I feared ;
The frown which awed me passed away,
And left behind a smile which cheered
Like breaking day.

40

The grain grew green on battle-plains,
O'er swarded war-mounds grazed the cow ;
The slave stood forging from his chains
The spade and plough.

Where frowned the fort, pavilions gay 45
And cottage windows, flower-entwined,
Looked out upon the peaceful bay
And hills behind.

45

Through vine-wreathed cups with wine
once red,
The lights on brimming crystal fell, 50
Drawn, sparkling, from the rivulet head
And mossy well.

50

Through prison walls, like Heaven-sent
hope,
Fresh breezes blew, and sunbeams
strayed,
And with the idle gallows-rope 55
The young child played.

Where the doomed victim in his cell
Had counted o'er the weary hours,
Glad school-girls, answering to the bell,
Came crowned with flowers. 60

Grown wiser for the lesson given,
I fear no longer, for I know
That, where the share is deepest driven,
The best fruits grow.

The outworn rite, the old abuse, 65
The pious fraud transparent grown,
The good held captive in the use
Of wrong alone,—

These wait their doom, from that great
law
Which makes the past time serve to-
day ; 70
And fresher life the world shall draw
From their decay.

Oh, backward-looking son of time !
The new is old, the old is new,
The cycle of a change sublime 75
Still sweeping through.

So wisely taught the Indian seer ;
Destroying Seva, forming Brahm,
Who wake by turns Earth's love and fear,
Are one, the same. 80

Idly as thou, in that old day
Thou mournest, did thy sire repine ;
So, in his time, thy child grown gray
Shall sigh for thine.

But life shall on and upward go ; 85
Th' eternal step of Progress beats
To that great anthem, calm and slow,
Which God repeats.

Take heart ! the Waster builds again,—
A charmed life old Goodness hath ; 90
The tares may perish, but the grain
Is not for death.

God works in all things ; all obey
His first propulsion from the night .
Wake thou and watch ! the world is gray
With morning light ! 96

THE PEACE CONVENTION AT BRUSSELS.

STILL in thy streets, O Paris ! doth the stain
Of blood defy the cleansing autumn rain ;
Still breaks the smoke Messina's ruins
through,
And Naples mourns that new Bartholomew,
When squalid beggary, for a dole of
bread, 5
At a crowned murderer's beck of license, fed
The yawning trenches with her noble
dead ;
Still, doomed Vienna, through thy stately
halls
The shell goes crashing and the red shot
falls,
And, leagued to crush thee, on the Danube's side, 10
The bearded Croat and Bosniak spearman
ride ;
Still in that vale where Himalaya's snow
Melts round the cornfields and the vines
below,
The Sikh's hot cannon, answering ball
for ball,
Flames in the breach of Moulton's
shattered wall ; 15
On Chenab's side the vulture seeks the slain,
And Sutlej paints with blood its banks
again.

'What folly, then,' the faithless critic
cries,
With sneering lip, and wise world-knowing eyes,
'While fort to fort, and post to post,
repeat 20
The ceaseless challenge of the war-drum's
beat,

And round the green earth, to the church- bell's chime, The morning drum-roll of the camp keeps time, To dream of peace amidst a world in arms, Of swords to ploughshares changed by Scriptural charms, 25 Of nations, drunken with the wine of blood, Staggering to take the Pledge of Brother- hood, Like tipplers answering Father Mathew's call ; The sullen Spaniard, and the mad-cap Gaul, The bull-dog Briton, yielding but with life, 30 The Yankee swaggering with his bowie- knife, The Russ, from banquets with the vulture shared, The blood still dripping from his amber beard, Quitting their mad Berserker dance to hear The dull, meek droning of a drab-coat seer ; 35 Leaving the sport of Presidents and Kings, Where men for dice each titled gambler flings, To meet alternate on the Seine and Thames, For tea and gossip, like old country dames ! No ! let the cravens plead the weakling's cant, 40 Let Cobden cipher, and let Vincent rant, Let Sturge preach peace to democratic throngs, And Burritt, stammering through his hundred tongues, Repeat, in all, his ghostly lessons o'er, Timed to the pauses of the battery's roar ; 45 Check Ban or Kaiser with the barricade Of "Olive-leaves" and Resolutions made, Spike guns with pointed Scripture-texts, and hope To capsize navies with a windy trope :	Still shall the glory and the pomp of War Along their train the shouting millions draw ; 51 Still dusty Labor to the passing Brave His cap shall doff, and Beauty's kerchief wave ; Still shall the bard to Valor tune his song, Still Hero-worship kneel before the Strong ; 55 Rosy and sleek, the sable-gowned divine, O'er his third bottle of suggestive wine, To plumed and sworded auditors, shall prove Their trade accordant with the Law of Love ; And Church for State, and State for Church, shall fight, 60 And both agree, that ' Might alone is Right !' Despite of sneers like these, O faithful few, Who dare to hold God's word and witness true, Whose clear-eyed faith transcends our evil time, And o'er the present wilderness of crime 65 Sees the calm future, with its robes of green, Its fleece-flecked mountains, and soft streams between,— Still keep the path which duty bids ye tread, Though worldly wisdom shake the cau- tious head ; No truth from Heaven descends upon our sphere, 70 Without the greeting of the skeptic's sneer ; Denied and mocked at, till its blessings fall, Common as dew and sunshine, over all. Then, o'er Earth's war-field, till the strife shall cease, Like Morven's harpers, sing your song of peace ; 75 As in old fable rang the Thracian's lyre, Midst howl of fiends and roar of penal fire, Till the fierce din to pleasing murmurs fell, And love subdued the maddened heart of hell.
---	---

Lend, once again, that holy song a
tongue, 80
Which the glad angels of the Advent
sung,
Their cradle-anthem for the Saviour's
birth,
Glory to God, and peace unto the earth !
Through the mad discord send that calming word
Which wind and wave on wild Gennesareth
heard, 85
Lift in Christ's name His Cross against the Sword !
Not vain the vision which the prophets
saw,
Skirting with green the fiery waste of war,
Through the hot sand-gleam, looming soft and calm
On the sky's rim, the fountain-shading
palm. 90
Still lives for Earth, which fiends so long
have trod,
The great hope resting on the truth of
God,—
Evil shall cease and Violence pass away,
And the tired world breathe free through a long Sabbath day.

11th mo., 1848.

THE PRISONER FOR DEBT.

Before the law authorizing imprisonment for debt had been abolished in Massachusetts, a revolutionary pensioner was confined in Charlestown jail for a debt of fourteen dollars, and on the 4th of July was seen waving a handkerchief from the bars of his cell in honor of the day.

Look on him ! through his dungeon grate,
Feebly and cold, the morning light
Comes stealing round him, dim and late,
As if it loathed the sight.
Reclining on his strawy bed, 5
His hand upholds his drooping head ;
His bloodless cheek is seamed and hard,
Unshorn his gray, neglected beard ;
And o'er his bony fingers flow
His long, dishevelled locks of snow. 10
No grateful fire before him glows,
And yet the winter's breath is chill ;

And o'er his half-clad person goes
The frequent ague thrill !
Silent, save ever and anon, 15
A sound, half murmur and half groan,
Forces apart the painful grip
Of the old sufferer's bearded lip ;
Oh, sad and crushing is the fate
Of old age chained and desolate ! 20
Just God ! why lies that old man there ?
A murderer shares his prison bed,
Whose eyeballs, through his horrid hair,
Gleam on him, fierce and red ;
And the rude oath and heartless jeer 25
Fall ever on his loathing ear,
And, or in wakefulness or sleep,
Nerve, flesh, and pulses thrill and creep
Whene'er that ruffian's tossing limb,
Crimson with murder, touches him ! 30
What has the gray-haired prisoner done ?
Has murder stained his hands with gore ?
Not so ; his crime's a fouler one ;
God made the old man poor !
For this he shares a felon's cell, 35
The fittest earthly type of hell !
For this, the boon for which he poured
His young blood on the invader's sword,
And counted light the fearful cost,
His blood-gained liberty is lost ! 40

And so, for such a place of rest,
Old prisoner, dropped thy blood as rain
On Concord's field, and Bunker's crest,
And Saratoga's plain ?
Look forth, thou man of many scars, 45
Through thy dim dungeon's iron bars ;
It must be joy, in sooth, to see
Yon monument upreared to thee ;
Piled granite and a prison cell,—
The land repays thy service well ! 50
Go, ring the bells and fire the guns,
And fling the starry banner out ;
Shout 'Freedom !' till your hisping ones
Give back their cradle-shout ;
Let boastful eloquence declaim 55
Of honor, liberty, and fame ;
Still let the poet's strain be heard,
With glory for each second word,
And everything with breath agree
To praise 'our glorious liberty' ! 60

But when the patron cannon jars
That prison's cold and gloomy wall,
And through its grates the stripes and
stars

Rise on the wind, and fall,
Think ye that prisoner's aged ear 65
Rejoices in the general cheer?
Think ye his dim and failing eye
Is kindled at your pageantry?
Sorrowing of soul, and chained of lumb,
What is your carnival to him? 70

Down with the law that binds him thus!
Unworthy freemen, let it find
No refuge from the withering curse
Of God and human-kind!
Open the prison's living tomb, 75
And usher from its brooding gloom
The victims of your savage code
To the free sun and air of God;
No longer dare as crime to brand
The chastening of the Almighty's hand. 80

THE CHRISTIAN TOURISTS.

The reader of the biography of William Allen, the philanthropic associate of Clarkson and Romilly, cannot fail to admire his simple and beautiful record of a tour through Europe, in the years 1818 and 1819, in the company of his American friend, Stephen Grellett

No aimless wanderers, by the fiend Unrest
Goaded from shore to shore;
No schoolmen, turning, in their classic
quest,
The leaves of empire o'er.
Simple of faith, and bearing in their hearts 5
The love of man and God,
Isles of old song, the Moslem's ancient marts,
And Scythia's steppes, they trod.

Where the long shadows of the fir and pine
In the night sun are cast, 10
And the deep heart of many a Norland
mine
Quakes at each riving blast;

Where, in barbaric grandeur, Moskwa
stands,
A baptized Scythian queen,
With Europe's arts and Asia's jewelled
hands, 15
The North and East between!

Where still, through vales of Grecian fable, stray
The classic forms of yore,
And beauty smiles, new risen from the
spray,
And Dian weeps once more; 20
Where every tongue in Smyrna's mart resounds;
And Stamboul from the sea
Lifts her tall minarets over burial-grounds
Black with the cypress-tree!

From Malta's temples to the gates of
Rome, 25
Following the track of Paul,
And where the Alps gird round the Switzer's home
Their vast, eternal wall;
They paused not by the ruins of old time,
They scanned no pictures rare, 30
Nor lingered where the snow-locked mountains climb
The cold abyss of air!

But unto prisons, where men lay in chains,
To haunts where Hunger pined,
To kings and courts forgetful of the pains
And wants of human-kind, 36
Scattering sweet words, and quiet deeds of good,
Along their way, like flowers,
Or pleading, as Christ's freemen only could,
With princes and with powers; 40

Their single aim the purpose to fulfil
Of Truth, from day to day,
Simply obedient to its guiding will,
They held their pilgrim way.
Yet dream not, hence, the beautiful and
old 45
Were wasted on their sight,
Who in the school of Christ had learned to hold
All outward things aright.

Not less to them the breath of vineyards
 blown
 From off the Cyprian shore, 50
 Not less for them the Alps in sunset shone,
 That man they valued more.
 A life of beauty lends to all it sees
 The beauty of its thought ;
 And fairest forms and sweetest harmonies
 Make glad its way, unsought. 56
 In sweet accordancy of praise and love,
 The singing waters run ;
 And sunset mountains wear in light above
 The smile of duty done ; 60
 Sure stands the promise,—ever to the meek
 A heritage is given ;
 Nor lose they Earth who, single-hearted, seek
 The righteousness of Heaven !
 1849.

THE MEN OF OLD.

WELL speed thy mission, bold Iconoclast !
 Yet all unworthy of its trust thou art,
 If, with dry eye, and cold, unloving
 heart,
 Thou tread'st the solemn Pantheon of the Past,
 By the great Future's dazzling hope made blind 5
 To all the beauty, power, and truth
 behind.
 Not without reverent awe shouldst thou put by
 The cypress branches and the amaranth blooms,
 Where, with clasped hands of prayer,
 upon their tombs
 The effigies of old confessors lie, 10
 God's witnesses ; the voices of His will,
 Heard in the slow march of the centuries
 still !
 Such were the men at whose rebuking
 frown,
 Dark with God's wrath, the tyrant's knee
 went down ;
 Such from the terrors of the guilty drew
 The vassal's freedom and the poor man's
 due. 16

St. Anselm (may he rest forevermore In Heaven's sweet peace !) forbade, of old, the sale
 Of men as slaves, and from the sacred
 pale
 Hurled the Northumbrian buyers of the pool 20
 To ransom souls from bonds and evil fate
 St. Ambrose melted down the sacred plate,—
 Image of saint, the chalice, and the pix,
 Crosses of gold, and silver candlesticks.
 'Man is worth more than temples !' he replied 25
 To such as came his holy work to chide.
 And brave Cesarius, stripping altars
 bare,
 And coming from the Abbey's golden hoard
 The captive's freedom, answered to the
 prayer
 Or threat of those whose fierce zeal for
 the Lord 30
 Stifled their love of man,—'An earthen dish
 The last sad supper of the Master bore—
 Most miserable sinners ! do ye wish More than your Lord, and grudge His dying poor
 What your own pride and not His need requires? 35
 Souls, than these shining gauds, He values more :
 Mercy, not sacrifice, His heart desires !'
 O faithful worthies ! resting far behind
 In your dark ages, since ye fell asleep,
 Much has been done for truth and humankind ; 40
 Shadows are scattered wherein ye groped
 blind ;
 Man claims his birthright, freer pulses leap
 Through peoples driven in your day like sheep ;
 Yet, like your own, our age's sphere of
 light,
 Though widening still, is walled around by night ; 45
 With slow, reluctant eye, the Church has
 read,
 Skeptic at heart, the lessons of its Head ;

Counting, too oft, its living members less Than the wall's garnish and the pulpit's
 dress;
 World-moving zeal, with power to bless and feed 50
 Life's fainting pilgrims, to their utter
 need,
 Instead of bread, holds out the stone of
 creed;
 Sect builds and worships where its wealth
 and pride
 And vanity stand shrined and deified,
 Careless that in the shadow of its walls 55
 God's living temple into ruin falls.
 We need, methinks, the prophet-hero still,
 Saints true of life, and martyrs strong of
 will,
 To tread the land, even now, as Xavier
 trod
 The streets of Goa, barefoot, with his bell, 60
 Proclaiming freedom in the name of God,
 And startling tyrants with the fear of
 hell!
 Soft words, smooth prophecies, are doubtless well;
 But to rebuke the age's popular crime,
 We need the souls of fire, the hearts of that old time! 65

TO PIUS IX.

The writer of these lines is no enemy of Catholics. He has, on more than one occasion, exposed himself to the censures of his Protestant brethren, by his strenuous endeavors to procure indemnification for the owners of the convent destroyed near Boston. He defended the cause of the Irish patriots long before it had become popular in this country; and he was one of the first to urge the most liberal aid to the suffering and starving population of the Catholic island. The severity of his language finds its ample apology in the reluctant confession of one of the most eminent Romish priests, the eloquent and devoted Father Ventura.

The cannon's brazen lips are cold;
 No red shell blazes down the air;
 And street and tower, and temple old,
 Are silent as despair.

The Lombard stands no more at bay, 5
 Rome's fresh young life has bled in vain;
 The ravens scattered by the day
 Come back with night again.

Now, while the fratricides of France
 Are treading on the neck of Rome, 10
 Hider at Gaeta, seize thy chance!
 Coward and cruel, come!

Creep now from Naples' bloody skirt;
 Thy mummer's part was acted well,
 While Rome, with steel and fire begirt, 15
 Before thy crusade fell!

Her death-groans answered to thy prayer;
 Thy chant, the drum and bugle-call;
 Thy lights, the burning villa's glare;
 Thy beads, the shell and ball! 20

Let Austria clear thy way, with hands
 Foul from Ancona's cruel sack,
 And Naples, with his dastard bands
 Of murderers, lead thee back!

Rome's lips are dumb; the orphan's wail, 25
 The mother's shriek, thou mayst not
 hear
 Above the faithless Frenchman's hail,
 The unsexed shaveling's cheer!

Go, bind on Rome her cast-off weight,
 The double curse of crook and crown, 30
 Though woman's scorn and manhood's
 hate
 From wall and roof flash down!

Nor heed those blood-stains on the wall,
 Not Tiber's flood can wash away,
 Where, in thy stately Quirinal, 35
 Thy mangled victims lay!

Let the world murmur; let its cry
 Of horror and disgust be heard;
 Truth stands alone; thy coward lie
 Is backed by lance and sword! 40

The cannon of St. Angelo,
 And chanting priest and clanging bell,
 And beat of drum and bugle blow,
 Shall greet thy coming well!

Let lips of iron and tongues of slaves 45 Fit welcome give thee; for her part, Rome, frowning o'er her new-made graves, Shall curse thee from her heart!	Spake the simple tradesman then, 'God be judge 'twixt thee and me; 10 All thou knowest of truth hath been Once a lie to men like thee.
No wreaths of sad Campagna's flowers Shall childhood in thy pathway fling; 50 No garlands from their ravaged bowers Shall Terni's maidens bring;	'Falsehoods which we spurn to-day Were the truths of long ago; Let the dead boughs fall away, 15 Fresher shall the living grow.
But, hateful as that tyrant old, The mocking witness of his crime, In thee shall loathing eyes behold 55 The Nero of our time!	'God is good and God is light, In this faith I rest secure; Evil can but serve the right, Over all shall love endure. 20
Stand where Rome's blood was freest shed, Mock Heaven with impious thanks, and call Its curses on the patriot dead, Its blessings on the Gaul! 60	'Of your spectral puppet play I have traced the cunning wires; Come what will, I needs must say, God is true, and ye are liars.'
Or sit upon thy throne of lies, A poor, mean idol, blood-besmeared, Whom even its worshippers despise, Unhonored, unrevered!	When the thought of man is free, 25 Error fears its lightest tones; So the priest cried, 'Sadducee!' And the people took up stones.
Yet, Scandal of the World! from thee 65 One needful truth mankind shall learn: That kings and priests to Liberty And God are false in turn.	In the ancient burying-ground, Side by side the twain now lie; 30 One with humble grassy mound, One with marbles pale and high.
Earth wearies of them; and the long Meek sufferance of the Heavens doth fail: 70	But the Lord hath blest the seed Which that tradesman scattered then, And the preacher's spectral creed 35 Chills no more the blood of men.
Woe for weak tyrants, when the strong Wake, struggle, and prevail!
Not vainly Roman hearts have bled To feed the Crosier and the Crown, If, roused thereby, the world shall tread The twin-born vampires down! 76 1849.	Let us trust, to one is known Perfect love which casts out fear, While the other's joys atone For the wrong he suffered here. 40 1849.

CALEF IN BOSTON.

1692.

In the solemn days of old,
Two men met in Boston town,
One a tradesman frank and bold,
One a preacher of renown.

Cried the last, in bitter tone: 5
'Poisoner of the wells of truth!
Satan's hireling, thou hast sown
With his tares the heart of youth!'

OUR STATE.

[Originally entitled Dedication of a School-house. It was written for the dedication services of a new school building in Newbury, Mass.]

THE South-land boasts its teeming cane,
The prairied West its heavy grain,
And sunset's radiant gates unfold
On rising marts and sands of gold!

Rough, bleak, and hard, our little State 5
Is scant of soil, of limits strait;
Her yellow sands are sands alone,
Her only mines are ice and stone!

From Autumn frost to April rain,
Too long her winter woods complain; 10
From budding flower to falling leaf,
Her summer time is all too brief.

Yet, on her rocks, and on her sands,
And wintry hills, the school-house stands,
And what her rugged soil denies, 15
The harvest of the mind supplies.

The riches of the Commonwealth
Are free, strong minds, and hearts of 5
health;
And more to her than gold or grain,
The cunning hand and cultured brain. 20

For well she keeps her ancient stock,
The stubborn strength of Pilgrim Rock;
And still maintains, with milder laws,
And clearer light, the Good Old Cause!

Nor heeds the skeptic's puny hands, 25
While near her school the church-spire
stands;

Nor fears the blinded bigot's rule,
While near her church-spire stands the
school.

THE PRISONERS OF NAPLES.

I HAVE been thinking of the victims
bound

In Naples, dying for the lack of air
And sunshine, in their close, damp cells
of pain,

Where hope is not, and innocence in vain Appeals against the torture and the
chain! 5

Unfortunates! whose crime it was to
share

Our common love of freedom, and to dare,
In its behalf, Rome's harlot triple-
crowned,

And her base pander, the most hateful
thing 9

Who upon Christian or on Pagan ground
Makes vile the old heroic name of king.
O God most merciful! Father just and
kind!

Whom man hath bound let Thy right hand unbind.

Or, if Thy purposes of good behind
Their ills lie hidden, let the sufferers find Strong consolations; leave them not to doubt 16

Thy providential care, nor yet without
The hope which all Thy attributes inspire,
That not in vain the martyr's robe of fire
Is worn, nor the sad prisoner's fretting
chain; 20

Since all who suffer for Thy truth send
forth,

Electrical, with every throb of pain,
Unquenchable sparks, Thy own baptismal
rain

Of fire and spirit over all the earth,
Making the dead in slavery live again. 25
Let this great hope be with them, as they lie

Shut from the light, the greenness, and
the sky;

From the cool waters and the pleasant
breeze,

The smell of flowers, and shade of summer
trees;

Bound with the felon lepers, whom disease 30

And sins abhorred make loathsome; let them share

Pellico's faith, Foresti's strength to bear
Years of unutterable torment, stern and
still,

As the chained Titan victor through his
will!

Comfort them with Thy future; let them
see 35

The day-dawn of Italian liberty;
For that, with all good things, is hid with
Thee,

And, perfect in Thy thought, awaits its time to be!

I, who have spoken for freedom at the cost

Of some weak friendships, or some paltry prize 40

Of name or place, and more than I have lost
Have gained in wider reach of sympathies,
And free communion with the good and
wise ;
May God forbid that I should ever boast
Such easy self-denial, or repine 45
That the strong pulse of health no more is mine ;
That, overworn at noonday, I must yield
To other hands the gleanings of the field ;
A tired on-looker through the day's decline.
For blest beyond deserving still, and
knowing 50
That kindly Providence its care is showing
In the withdrawal as in the bestowing, Scarcely I dare for more or less to
pray.
Beautiful yet for me this autumn day 54
Melts on its sunset hills ; and, far away,
For me the Ocean lifts its solemn psalm,
To me the pine-woods whisper ; and for
me
Yon river, winding through its vales of calm,
By greenest banks, with asters purple-
starred,
And gentian bloom and golden-rod made
gay, 60
Flows down in silent gladness to the
sea,
Like a pure spirit to its great reward !
Nor lack I friends, long-tried and near and dear,
Whose love is round me like this atmosphere,
Warm, soft, and golden. For such gifts
to me 65
What shall I render, O my God, to Thee ?
Let me not dwell upon my lighter share
Of pain and ill that human life must bear ;
Save me from selfish pining ; let my
heart,
Drawn from itself in sympathy, forget 70
The bitter longings of a vain regret,
The anguish of its own peculiar smart.
Remembering others, as I have to-day,

In their great sorrows, let me live alway
Not for myself alone, but have a part, 75
Such as a frail and erring spirit may,
In love which is of Thee, and which indeed Thou art !

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

'GREAT peace in Europe ! Order reigns
From Tiber's hills to Danube's plains !'
So say her kings and priests ; so say
The lying prophets of our day.

Go lay to earth a hastening ear ; 5
The tramp of measured marches hear ;
The rolling of the cannon's wheel,
The shotted musket's murderous peal,
The night alarm, the sentry's call,
The quick-eared spy in hut and hall ! 10
From Polar sea and tropic fen
The dying-groans of exiled men !
The bolted cell, the galley's chains,
The scaffold smoking with its stains !
Order, the hush of brooding slaves ! 15
Peace, in the dungeon-vaults and graves !

O Fisher ! of the world-wide net,
With meshes in all waters set,
Whose fabled keys of heaven and hell
Bolt hard the patriot's prison-cell, 20
And open wide the banquet-hall,
Where kings and priests hold carnival !
Weak vassal tricked in royal guise,
Boy Kaiser with thy lip of lies ;
Base gambler for Napoleon's crown, 25
Barnacle on his dead renown !
Thou, Bourbon Neapolitan, Crowned scandal, loathed of God and
man ;
And thou, fell Spider of the North !
Stretching thy giant feelers forth, 30
Within whose web the freedom dies
Of nations eaten up like flies !
Speak, Prince and Kaiser, Priest and Czar !
If this be Peace, pray what is War ?
White Angel of the Lord ! unmeet 35
That soil accursed for thy pure feet.

Never in Slavery's desert flows
 The fountain of thy charmed repose;
 No tyrant's hand thy chaplet weaves
 Of lilies and of olive-leaves; 40
 Not with the wicked shalt thou dwell,
 Thus saith the Eternal Oracle;
 Thy home is with the pure and free!
 Stern herald of thy better day,
 Before thee, to prepare thy way, 45
 The Baptist Shade of Liberty,
 Gray, scarred and hairy-robed, must
 press

With bleeding feet the wilderness!
 Oh that its voice might pierce the ear
 Of princes, trembling while they hear 50
 A cry as of the Hebrew seer:
 Repent & God's kingdom draweth near!

ASTRÆA.

'Jove means to settle
 Astræa in her seat again,
 And let down from his golden chain
 An age of better metal'
 BEN JONSON, 1615.

O POET rare and old!
 Thy words are prophecies;
 Forward the age of gold,
 The new Saturnian lies.

The universal prayer 5
 And hope are not in vain;
 Rise, brothers! and prepare
 The way for Saturn's reign.

Perish shall all which takes
 From labor's board and can; 10
 Perish shall all which makes
 A spaniel of the man!

Free from its bonds the mind,
 The body from the rod;
 Broken all chains that bind 15
 The image of our God.

Just men no longer pine
 Behind their prison-bars;
 Through the rent dungeon shine
 The free sun and the stars. 20

Earth own, at last, untrod
 By sect, or caste, or clan,
 The fatherhood of God,
 The brotherhood of man!

Fraud fail, craft perish, forth 25
 The money-changers driven,
 And God's will done on earth,
 As now in heaven!

THE DISENTHRALLED.

HE had bowed down to drunkenness,
 An abject worshipper:
 The pride of manhood's pulse had grown
 Too faint and cold to stir;
 And he had given his spirit up 5
 To the unblest thrall,
 And bowing to the poison cup,
 He gloried in his fall!

There came a change—the cloud rolled off,
 And light fell on his brain 10
 And like the passing of a dream
 That cometh not again,
 The shadow of the spirit fled
 He saw the gulf before,
 He shuddered at the waste behind, 15
 And was a man once more.

He shook the serpent folds away,
 That gathered round his heart,
 As shakes the swaying forest-oak
 Its poison vine apart; 20
 He stood erect; returning pride
 Grew terrible within,
 And conscience sat in judgment, on
 His most familiar sin.

The light of Intellect again 25
 Along his pathway shone;
 And Reason like a monarch sat
 Upon his olden throne.
 The honored and the wise once more
 Within his presence came; 30
 And lingered oft on lovely lips
 His once forbidden name.

There may be glory in the might,
That treadeth nations down ;
Wreaths for the crimson conqueror 35
Pride for the kingly crown ;
But nobler is that triumph hour,
The disenthralled shall find,
When evil passion boweth down
Unto the Godlike mind ! 40

THE POOR VOTER ON ELECTION
DAY.

THE proudest now is but my peer,
The highest not more high ;
To-day, of all the weary year,
A king of men am I.
To-day alike are great and small, 5
The nameless and the known ;
My palace is the people's hall,
The ballot-box my throne !

Who serves to-day upon the list
Beside the served shall stand ; 10
Alike the brown and wrinkled fist,
The gloved and dainty hand !
The rich is level with the poor,
The weak is strong to-day ;
And sleekest broadcloth counts no more
Than homespun frock of gray. 16

To-day let pomp and vain pretence
My stubborn right abide ;
I set a plain man's common sense
Against the pedant's pride. 20
To-day shall simple manhood try
The strength of gold and land ;
The wide world has not wealth to buy
The power in my right hand !

While there's a grief to seek redress, 25
Or balance to adjust,
Where weighs our living manhood less
Than Mammon's vilest dust,—
While there's a right to need my vote,
A wrong to sweep away, 30
Up ! clouted knee and ragged coat !
A man's a man to-day !

THE DREAM OF PIO NONO.

It chanced that while the pious troops of France
Fought in the crusade Pio Nono preached,
What time the holy Bourbons stayed his
hands
(The Hur and Aaron meet for such a Moses),
Stretched forth from Naples towards rebellious Rome 5
To bless the ministry of Oudinot,
And sanctify his iron homilies
And sharp persuasions of the bayonet,
That the great pontiff fell asleep, and dreamed.

He stood by Lake Tiberias, in the sun
Of the bright Orient ; and beheld the lame, 11
The sick, and blind, kneel at the Master's
feet,
And rise up whole. And, sweetly over
all,
Dropping the ladder of their hymn of
praise
From heaven to earth, in silver rounds of
song, 15
He heard the blessed angels sing of peace,
Good-will to man, and glory to the Lord.

Then one, with feet unshod, and leathern face
Hardened and darkened by fierce summer
suns 20
And hot winds of the desert, closer drew His fisher's haick, and girded up his loins, 21
And spake, as one who had authority :
'Come thou with me.'

Lakeside and eastern sky
And the sweet song of angels passed
away,
And, with a dream's alacrity of change,
The priest, and the swart fisher by his
side, 26
Beheld the Eternal City lift its domes
And solemn fanes and monumental pomp

Above the waste Campagna. On the hills
The blaze of burning villas rose and
fell, 30
And momentarily the mortar's iron throat
Roared from the trenches; and, within the walls,
Sharp crash of shells, low groans of human pain,
Shout, drum beat, and the clanging
larum-bell,
And tramp of hosts, sent up a mingled
sound, 35
Half wail and half defiance. As they passed
The gate of San Pancrazio, human blood
Flowed ankle-high about them, and dead
men
Choked the long street with gashed and gory piles,—
A ghastly barricade of mangled flesh, 40
From which, at times, quivered a living
hand,
And white lips moved and moaned.
A father tore
His gray hairs, by the body of his son,
In frenzy; and his fair young daughter
wept
On his old bosom. Suddenly a flash 45
Clove the thick sulphurous air, and man
and maid
Sank, crushed and mangled by the shattering shell.

Then spake the Galilean: 'Thou hast
seen
The blessed Master and His works of
love;
Look now on thine! Hear'st thou the angels sing 50
Above this open hell? Thou God's high-priest!
Thou the Vicegerent of the Prince of Peace!
Thou the successor of His chosen ones!
I, Peter, fisherman of Galilee,
In the dear Master's name, and for the
love 55
Of His true Church, proclaim thee Anti-
christ,
Alien and separate from His holy faith,

Wide as the difference between death and
life,
The hate of man and the great love of
God!
Hence, and repent!'

Thereat the pontiff woke, 60
Trembling, and muttering o'er his fearful
dream.
'What means he?' cried the Bourbon.
'Nothing more
Than that your majesty hath all too well Catered for your poor guests, and that, in sooth,
The Holy Father's supper troubleth him,'
Said Cardinal Antonelli, with a smile. 66 1853.

THE VOICES.

'WHY urge the long, unequal fight,
Since Truth has fallen in the street,
Or lift anew the trampled light,
Quenched by the heedless million's
feet?

'Give o'er the thankless task; forsake 5
The fools who know not ill from good:
Eat, drink, enjoy thy own, and take
Thine ease among the multitude.

'Live out thyself; with others share
Thy proper life no more; assume 10
The unconcern of sun and air,
For life or death, or blight or bloom.

'The mountain pine looks calmly on
The fires that scourge the plains below,
Nor heeds the eagle in the sun 15
The small birds piping in the snow!

'The world is God's, not thine; let Him
Work out a change, if change must be:
The hand that planted best can trim
And nurse the old unfruitful tree.' 20

So spake the Tempter, when the light
Of sun and stars had left the sky;
I listened, through the cloud and night,
And heard, methought, a voice reply:

'Thy task may well seem over-hard, 25
Who scatterest in a thankless soil
Thy life as seed, with no reward
Save that which Duty gives to Toil.

'Not wholly is thy heart resigned
To Heaven's benign and just decree, 30
Which, linking thee with all thy kind,
Transmits their joys and griefs to thee.

'Break off that sacred chain, and turn Back on thyself thy love and care;
Be thou thine own mean idol, burn 35
Faith, Hope, and Trust, thy children,
there.

'Released from that fraternal law
Which shares the common bale and
bliss,
No sadder lot could Folly draw,
Or Sin provoke from Fate, than thus. 40

'The meal unshared is food unblest :
Thou hoard'st in vain what love should
spend ;
Self-ease is pain ; thy only rest
Is labor for a worthy end ;

'A toil that gains with what it yields, 45
And scatters to its own increase,
And hears, while sowing outward fields,
The harvest-song of inward peace.

'Free-lipped the liberal streamlets run,
Free shines for all the healthful ray ; 50
The still pool stagnates in the sun,
The lurid earth-fire haunts decay !

'What is it that the crowd requite
Thy love with hate, thy truth with lies ?
And but to faith, and not to sight, 55
The walls of Freedom's temple rise ?

'Yet do thy work ; it shall succeed
In thine or in another's day ;
And, if denied the victor's meed,
Thou shalt not lack the toiler's pay. 60

'Faith shares the future's promise ; Love's
Self-offering is a triumph won ;
And each good thought or action moves
The dark world nearer to the sun.

'Then faint not, falter not, nor plead 65
Thy weakness ; truth itself is strong ;
The lion's strength, the eagle's speed,
Are not alone vouchsafed to wrong.

'Thy nature, which, through fire and
flood,
To place or gain finds out its way, 70
Hath power to seek the highest good,
And duty's holiest call obey !

'Strivest thou in darkness?—foes without
In league with traitor thoughts within :
Thy night-watch kept with trembling
Doubt 75
And pale Remorse the ghost of Sin ?

'Hast thou not, on some week of storm,
Seen the sweet Sabbath breaking fair,
And cloud and shadow, sunlit, form
The curtains of its tent of prayer? 80

'So, haply, when thy task shall end,
The wrong shall lose itself in right,
And all thy week-day darkness blend
With the long Sabbath of the light !' 1854.

THE NEW EXODUS.

Written upon hearing that slavery had been formally abolished in Egypt. Unhappily, the professions and pledges of the vacillating government of Egypt proved unreliable.

By fire and cloud, across the desert sand,
And through the parted waves,
From their long bondage, with an outstretched hand,
God led the Hebrew slaves !

Dead as the letter of the Pentateuch, 5
As Egypt's statues cold,
In the adytum of the sacred book
Now stands that marvel old.

'Lo, God is great !' the simple Moslem says.
We seek the ancient date, 10
Turn the dry scroll, and make that living phrase
A dead one : 'God was great !'

And, like the Coptic monks by Mousa's
wells,

We dream of wonders past,
Vague as the tales the wandering Arab tells, 15

Each drowsier than the last.

O fools and blind ! Above the Pyramids
Stretches once more that hand,
And trancœd Egypt, from her stony lids,
Flings back her veil of sand. 20

And morning-smitten Memnon, singing, wakes ;

And, listening by his Nile,
O'er Ammon's grave and awful visage
breaks

A sweet and human smile.

Not, as before, with hail and fire, and
call 25

Of death for midnight graves,
But in the stillness of the noonday, fall
The fetters of the slaves.

No longer through the Red Sea, as of old,
The bondmen walk dry shod ; 30
Through human hearts, by love of Him controlled,

Runs now that path of God !

1856.

THE CONQUEST OF FINLAND.

'Joseph Sturge, with a companion, Thomas Harvey, has been visiting the shores of Finland, to ascertain the amount of mischief and loss to poor and peaceable sufferers, occasioned by the gun-boats of the allied squadrons in the late war, with a view to obtaining relief for them.'—Friends' Review.

ACROSS the frozen marshes
The winds of autumn blow,
And the fen-lands of the Wetter
Are white with early snow.

But where the low, gray headlands 5
Look o'er the Baltic brine,
A bark is sailing in the track
Of England's battle-line.

No wares hath she to barter
For Bothnia's fish and grain ; 10
She saileth not for pleasure,
She saileth not for gain.

But still by isle or mainland
She drops her anchor down,
Where'er the British cannon 15
Rained fire on tower and town.

Outspake the ancient Amtman,
At the gate of Helsingfors :
'Why comes this ship a-spying
In the track of England's wars?' 20

'God bless her,' said the coast-guard,—
'God bless the ship, I say.
The holy angels trim the sails
That speed her on her way !

'Where'er she drops her anchor, 25
The peasant's heart is glad ;
Where'er she spreads her parting sail,
The peasant's heart is sad.

'Each wasted town and hamlet
She visits to restore ; 30
To roof the shattered cabin,
And feed the starving poor.

'The sunken boats of fishers,
The foraged beeves and grain,
The spoil of flake and storehouse, 35
The good ship brings again.

'And so to Finland's sorrow
The sweet amend is made,
As if the healing hand of Christ
Upon her wounds were laid !' 40

Then said the gray old Amtman,
'The will of God be done !
The battle lost by England's hate,
By England's love is won !

'We braved the iron tempest 45
That thundered on our shore ;
But when did kindness fail to find
The key to Finland's door ?

'No more from Aland's ramparts
Shall warning signal come, 50
Nor startled Sweaborg hear again
The roll of midnight drum.

'Beside our fierce Black Eagle
The Dove of Peace shall rest ;
And in the mouths of cannon
The sea-bird make her nest. 55

'For Finland, looking seaward,
No coming foe shall scan ;
And the holy bells of Abo
Shall ring, 'Good-will to man !' 60

'Then row thy boat, O fisher !
In peace on lake and bay ;
And thou, young maiden, dance again
Around the poles of May !

'Sit down, old men, together, 65
Old wives, in quiet spin ;
Henceforth the Anglo-Saxon
Is the brother of the Finn !'
1856.

THE EVE OF ELECTION.

FROM gold to gray
Our mild sweet day
Of Indian Summer fades too soon ;
But tenderly
Above the sea 5
Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

In its pale fire,
The village spire
Shows like the zodiac's spectral lance ;
The painted walls 10
Whereon it falls
Transfigured stand in marble trance !

O'er fallen leaves
The west-wind grieves,
Yet comes a seed-time round again ; 15
And morn shall see
The State sown free
With baleful tares or healthful grain.

Along the street
The shadows meet 20
Of Destiny, whose hands conceal
The moulds of fate
That shape the State,
And make or mar the common weal.

Around I see 25
The powers that be ;
I stand by Empire's primal springs ;
And princes meet,
In every street,
And hear the tread of uncrowned kings !

Hark ! through the crowd 31
The laugh runs loud,
Beneath the sad, rebuking moon.
God save the land
A careless hand 35
May shake or swerve ere morrow's
noon !

No jest is this ;
One cast amiss
May blast the hope of Freedom's year.
Oh, take me where 40
Are hearts of prayer,
And foreheads bowed in reverent fear !

Not lightly fall
Beyond recall
The written scrolls a breath can float ; 45
The crowning fact
The kingliest act
Of Freedom is the freeman's vote !

For pearls that gem
A diadem 50
The diver in the deep sea dies ;
The regal right
We boast to-night
Is ours through costlier sacrifice ;

The blood of Vane, 55
His prison pain
Who traced the path the Pilgrim trod,
And hers whose faith
Drew strength from death,
And prayed her Russell up to God ! 60

Our hearts grow cold,
We lightly hold
A right which brave men died to gain ;
The stake, the cord,
The axe, the sword, 65
Grim nurses at its birth of pain.

The shadow rend,
And o'er us bend,
O martyrs, with your crowns and palms ;
Breathe through these throngs 70
Your battle songs,
Your scaffold prayers, and dungeon
psalms !

Look from the sky,
Like God's great eye,
Thou solemn moon, with searching beam,
Till in the sight 76
Of thy pure light
Our mean self-seekings meaner seem.

Shame from our hearts
Unworthy arts, 80
The fraud designed, the purpose dark ;
And smite away
The hands we lay
Profanely on the sacred ark.

To party claims 85
And private aims,
Reveal that august face of Truth,
• Where to are given
The age of heaven,
The beauty of immortal youth. 90

So shall our voice
Of sovereign choice
Swell the deep bass of duty done,
And strike the key
Of time to be, 95
When God and man shall speak as one !

FROM PERUGIA.

'The thing which has the most dissevered the people from the Pope,—the unforgivable thing,—the breaking point between him and them,—has been the encouragement and promotion he gave to the officer under whom were executed the slaughters of Perugia. That made the breaking point in many honest hearts that had clung to him before.'—HARRIET BEECHER STOWE's Letters from Italy.

THE tall, sallow guardsmen their horse-tails have spread,
Flaming out in their violet, yellow, and
red ;

And behind go the lackeys in crimson and buff,
And the chamberlains gorgeous in velvet
and ruff ;
Next, in red-legged pomp, come the cardinals forth, 5
Each a lord of the church and a prince of the earth.

What 's this squeak of the fife, and this batter of drum ?
Lo ! the Swiss of the Church from Perugia
come ;
The militant angels, whose sabres drive
home
To the hearts of the malcontents, cursed
and abhorred, 10
The good Father's missives, and 'Thus saith the Lord !'
And lend to his logic the point of the
sword !

O maids of Etruria, gazing forlorn O'er dark Thrasymenus, dishevelled and torn !
O fathers, who pluck at your gray beards
for shame ! 15
O mothers, struck dumb by a woe without name !
Well ye know how the Holy Church
hureling behaves,
And his tender compassion of prisons and
graves !

There they stand, the hired stabbers, the bloodstains yet fresh,
That splashed like red wine from the vintage of flesh ; 20
Grim instruments, careless as pincers and rack
How the joints tear apart, and the strained
sinews crack ;
But the hate that glares on them is sharp
as their swords,
And the sneer and the scowl print the air with fierce words !

Off with hats, down with knees, shout
your vivas like mad ! 25
Here 's the Pope in his holiday righteousness clad,

From shorn crown to toe-nail, kiss-worn to the quick,
Of sainthood in purple the pattern and pick,
Who the rôle of the priest and the soldier
unites,
And, praying like Aaron, like Joshua fights! 30

Is this Pio Nono the gracious, for whom
We sang our hosannas and lighted all
Rome;
With whose advent we dreamed the new era began
When the priest should be human, the monk be a man?
Ah, the wolf's with the sheep, and the fox with the fowl, 35
When freedom we trust to the crosier and cowl!

Stand aside, men of Rome! Here's a hangman-faced Swiss -
(A blessing for him surely can't go amiss)—
Would kneel down the sanctified slipper to kiss.
Short shrift will suffice him,—he's blest beyond doubt; 40
But there's blood on his hands which would scarcely wash out.
Though Peter himself held the baptismal spout!

Make way for the next! Here's another sweet son!
What's this mastiff-jawed rascal in epaulets done?
He did, whispers rumor, (its truth God forbid!) 45
At Perugia what Herod at Bethlehem
did.
And the mothers? Don't name them!
these humors of war
They who keep him in service must pardon him for.

Hist! here's the arch-knave in a cardinal's
hat,
With the heart of a wolf, and the stealth of a cat 50

(As if Judas and Herod together were rolled),
Who keeps, all as one, the Pope's conscience and gold,
Mounts guard on the altar, and pilfers
from thence,
And flatters St. Peter while stealing his pence!

Who doubts Antonelli? Have miracles ceased 55
When robbers say mass, and Barabbas is priest?
When the Church eats and drinks, at its mystical board,
The true flesh and blood carved and shed
by its sword,
When its martyr, unsinged, claps the crown on his head,
And roasts, as his proxy, his neighbor
instead! 60

There! the bells jow and jangle the same blessed way
That they did when they rang for Bartholomew's day.
Hark! the tallow-faced monsters, nor women nor boys,
Vex the air with a shrill, sexless horror of noise.
Te Deum laudamus! All round without stint 65
The incense-pot swings with a taunt of blood in 't!

And now for the blessing! Of little account,
You know, is the old one they heard on the Mount.
Its giver was landless, His raiment was
poor,
No jewelled tiara His fishermen wore; 70
No incense, no lackeys, no riches, no home,
No Swiss guards! We order things better at Rome.

So bless us the strong hand, and curse us
the weak;
Let Austria's vulture have food for her beak;

Let the wolf-whelp of Naples play Bomba
again, 75
With his death-cap of silence, and halter,
and chain ;
Put reason, and justice, and truth under
ban ;
For the sin unforgiven is freedom for man !
1858.

ITALY.

ACROSS the sea I heard the groans
Of nations in the intervals
Of wind and wave. Their blood and bones
Cried out in torture, crushed by thrones,
And sucked by priestly cannibals. 5

I dreamed of Freedom slowly gained
By martyr meekness, patience, faith,
And lo ! an athlete grimly stained,
With corded muscles battle-strained,
Shouting it from the fields of death ! 10

I turn me, awe-struck, from the sight,
Among the clamoring thousands mute,
I only know that God is right,
And that the children of the light
Shall tread the darkness under foot. 15

I know the pent fire heaves its crust,
That sultry skies the bolt will form
To smite them clear ; that Nature must
The balance of her powers adjust,
Though with the earthquake and the
storm. 20

God reigns, and let the earth rejoice !
I bow before His sterner plan.
Dumb are the organs of my choice ;
He speaks in battle's stormy voice,
His praise is in the wrath of man ! 25

Yet, surely as He lives, the day
Of peace He promised shall be ours,
To fold the flags of war, and lay
Its sword and spear to rust away, 29
And sow its ghastly fields with flowers !

1860.

FREEDOM IN BRAZIL.

WITH clearer light, Cross of the South, shine forth
In blue Brazilian skies ;
And thou, O river, cleaving half the earth
From sunset to sunrise,
From the great mountains to the Atlantic
waves 5

Thy joy's long anthem pour.
Yet a few years (God make them less !) and slaves
Shall shame thy pride no more.
Nofettered feet thy shaded margins press ;
But all men shall walk free 10
Where thou, the high-priest of the wilderness,
Hast wedded sea to sea.

And thou, great-hearted ruler, through whose mouth
The word of God is said,
Once more, ' Let there be light ! '—Son of the South, 15
Lift up thy honored head,
Wear unashamed a crown by thy desert
More than by birth thy own,
Careless of watch and ward ; thou art
begirt
By grateful hearts alone. 20
The moated wall and battle-ship may fail,
But safe shall justice prove ;
Stronger than greaves of brass or iron
mail
The panoply of love.

Crowned doubly by man's blessing and God's grace, 25
Thy future is secure ;
Who frees a people makes his statue's
place
In Time's Valhalla sure.
Lo ! from his Neva's banks the Scythian
Czar
Stretches to thee his hand, 30
Who, with the pencil of the Northern star,
Wrote freedom on his land.

And he whose grave is holy by our calm
And prairied Sangamon,
From his gaunt hand shall drop the martyr's palm 35
To greet thee with 'Well done!'

And thou, O Earth, with smiles thy face make sweet,
And let thy wail be stilled,
To hear the Muse of prophecy repeat
Her promise half fulfilled. 40
The Voice that spake at Nazareth speaks
still,
No sound thereof hath died;
Alike thy hope and Heaven's eternal will Shall yet be satisfied.

The years are slow, the vision tarrieth
long, 45
And far the end may be;
But, one by one, the fiends of ancient
wrong
Go out and leave thee free.
1867.

AFTER ELECTION.

THE day's sharp strife is ended now,
Our work is done, God knoweth how!
As on the thronged, unrestful town
The patience of the moon looks down,
I wait to hear, beside the wire, 5
The voices of its tongues of fire.

Slow, doubtful, faint, they seem at first:
Be strong, my heart, to know the worst!
Hark! there the Alleghanies spoke;
That sound from lake and prairie broke,
That sunset-gun of triumph rent 11
The silence of a continent!

That signal from Nebraska sprung,
This from Nevada's mountain tongue!
Is that thy answer, strong and free, 15
O loyal heart of Tennessee?
What strange, glad voice is that which calls
From Wagner's grave and Sumter's walls?

From Mississippi's fountain-head
A sound as of the bison's tread! 20
There rustled freedom's Charter Oak!
In that wild burst the Ozarks spoke!
Cheer answers cheer from rise to set
Of sun. We have a country yet!

The praise, O God, be Thine alone! 25
Thou givest not for bread a stone;
Thou hast not led us through the night
To blind us with returning light;
Not through the furnace have we passed,
To perish at its mouth at last. 30

O night of peace, thy flight restrain!
November's moon, be slow to wane!
Shine on the freedman's cabin floor,
On brows of prayer a blessing pour;
And give, with full assurance blest, 35
The weary heart of Freedom rest!
1868.

DISARMAMENT.

'Put up the sword!' The voice of Christ
once more
Speaks, in the pauses of the cannon's roar,
O'er fields of corn by fiery sickles reaped
And left dry ashes; over trenches heaped
With nameless dead; o'er cities starving
slow 5
Under a rain of fire; through wards of woe
Down which a groaning diapason runs
From tortured brothers, husbands, lovers,
sons
Of desolate women in their far-off homes, Waiting to hear the step that never comes! 10
O men and brothers! let that voice be
heard.
War fails, try peace; put up the useless
sword!

Fear not the end. There is a story told
In Eastern tents, when autumn nights grow cold,
And round the fire the Mongol shepherds
sit 15
With grave responses listening unto it:
Once, on the errands of his mercy bent,
Buddha, the holy and benevolent,
Met a fell monster, huge and fierce of look,
Whose awful voice the hills and forests
shook. 20
'O son of peace!' the giant cried, 'thy
fate
Is sealed at last, and love shall yield to hate.'

The unarmed Buddha looking, with no trace
 Of fear or anger, in the monster's face,
 In pity said: 'Poor fiend, even thee
 I love.' 25
 Lo! as he spake the sky-tall terror sank
 To hand-breadth size; the huge abhorrence shrank
 Into the form and fashion of a dove;
 And where the thunder of its rage was
 heard,
 Circling above him sweetly sang the bird:
 'Hate hath no harm for love,' so ran the
 song; 31
 'And peace unweaponed conquers every
 wrong!'
 1871.

THE PROBLEM.

I.

NOT without envy Wealth at times must
 look
 On their brown strength who wield the
 • reaping-hook
 And scythe, or at the forge-fire shape
 the plough
 Or the steel harness of the steeds of steam;
 All who, by skill and patience, anyhow 5
 Make service noble, and the earth redeem
 From savageness. By kingly accolade
 Than theirs was never worthier knighthood made.
 Well for them, if, while demagogues their
 vain
 And evil counsels proffer, they maintain Their honest manhood unseduced, and wage 11
 No war with Labor's right to Labor's gain
 Of sweet home-comfort, rest of hand and
 brain,
 And softer pillow for the head of Age.

II.

And well for Gain if it ungrudging yields Labor its just demand; and well for
 Ease 16
 If in the uses of its own, it sees
 No wrong to him who tills its pleasant fields

And spreads the table of its luxuries.
 The interests of the rich man and the
 poor 20
 Are one and same, inseparable evermore;
 And, when scant wage or labor fail to give Food, shelter, raiment, wherewithal to
 live,
 Need has its rights, necessity its claim.
 Yea, even self-wrought misery and shame Test well the charity suffering long and
 kind. 26
 The home-pressed question of the age can find
 No answer in the catch-words of the blind
 Leaders of blind. Solution there is none
 Save in the Golden Rule of Christ alone. 30

OUR COUNTRY.

Read at Woodstock, Conn., July 4, 1888.

WE give thy natal day to hope,
 O Country of our love and prayer!
 Thy way is down no fatal slope,
 But up to freer sun and air.
 Tried as by furnace-fires, and yet 5
 By God's grace only stronger made,
 In future tasks before thee set
 Thou shalt not lack the old-time aid.
 The fathers sleep, but men remain
 As wise, as true, and brave as they; 10
 Why count the loss and not the gain?
 The best is that we have to-day.
 Whate'er of folly, shame, or crime,
 Within thy mighty bounds transpires,
 With speed defying space and time 15
 Comes to us on the accusing wires;
 While of thy wealth of noble deeds,
 Thy homes of peace, thy votes unsold,
 The love that pleads for human needs,
 The wrong redressed, but half is told!
 We read each felon's chronicle, 21
 His acts, his words, his gallows-mood;
 We know the single sinner well
 And not the nine and ninety good.

Yet if, on daily scandals fed, 25
We seem at times to doubt thy worth,
We know thee still, when all is said,
The best and dearest spot on earth.

From the warm Mexic Gulf, or where Belted with flowers Los Angeles 30
Basks in the semi-tropic air,
To where Katahdin's cedar trees

Are dwarfed and bent by Northern winds,
Thy plenty's horn is yearly filled ;
Alone, the rounding century finds 35
Thy liberal soil by free hands tilled.

A refuge for the wronged and poor,
Thy generous heart has borne the blame
That, with them, through thy open door,
The old world's evil outcasts came. 40

But, with thy just and equal rule,
And labor's need and breadth of lands,
Free press and rostrum, church and
school,
Thy sure, if slow, transforming hands

Shall mould even them to thy design, 45
Making a blessing of the ban ;
And Freedom's chemistry combine
The alien elements of man.

The power that broke their prison bar
And set the dusky millions free, 50
And welded in the flame of war
The Union fast to Liberty,

Shall it not deal with other ills,
Redress the red man's grievance, break
The Circean cup which shames and kills,
And Labor full requital make ? 56

Alone to such as fitly bear
Thy civic honors bid them fall ?
And call thy daughters forth to share
The rights and duties pledged to all ? 60

Give every child his right of school,
Merge private greed in public good,
And spare a treasury overfull
The tax upon a poor man's food ?

No lack was in thy primal stock, 65
No weakling founders builded here ;
Thine were the men of Plymouth Rock,
The Huguenot and Cavalier ;

And they whose firm endurance gained
The freedom of the souls of men, 70
Whose hands, unstained with blood, maintained
The swordless commonwealth of Penn.

And thine shall be the power of all
To do the work which duty bids,
And make the people's council hall 75
As lasting as the Pyramids !

Well have thy later years made good
Thy brave-said word a century back,
The pledge of human brotherhood,
The equal claim of white and black. 80

That word still echoes round the world,
And all who hear it turn to thee,
And read upon thy flag unfurled
The prophecies of destiny.

Thy great world-lesson all shall learn, 85
The nations in thy school shall sit,
Earth's farthest mountain-tops shall burn
With watch-fires from thy own uplift.

Great without seeking to be great
By fraud or conquest, rich in gold, 90
But richer in the large estate
Of virtue which thy children hold,

With peace that comes of purity
And strength to simple justice due,
So runs our loyal dream of thee ; 95
God of our fathers ! make it true.

O Land of lands ! to thee we give
Our prayers, our hopes, our service free ;
For thee thy sons shall nobly live,
And at thy need shall die for thee ! 100

ON THE BIG HORN.

In the disastrous battle on the Big Horn River, in which General Custer and his entire force were slain, the chief Rain-in-the-Face was one of the fiercest leaders of the Indians.

In Longfellow's poem on the massacre, these lines will be remembered :—

'Revenge!' cried Rain-in-the-Face,
'Revenge upon all the race
Of the White Chief with yellow hair !'
And the mountains dark and high
From their crags reechoed the cry
Of his anger and despair.

He is now a man of peace; and the agent at Standing Rock, Dakota, writes, September 28, 1886: 'Rain-in-the-Face is very anxious to go to Hampton. I fear he is too old, but he desires very much to go.' The Southern Workman, the organ of General Armstrong's Industrial School at Hampton, Va., says in a late number :—

'Rain-in-the-Face has applied before to come to Hampton, but his age would exclude him from the school as an ordinary student. He has shown himself very much in earnest about it, and is anxious, all say, to learn the better ways of life. It is as unusual as it is striking to see a man of his age, and one who has had such an experience, willing to give up the old way, and put himself in the position of a boy and a student.'

THE years are but half a score,
And the war-whoop sounds no more
With the blast of bugles, where Straight into a slaughter pen,
With his doomed three hundred men,
Rode the chief with the yellow hair.

O Hampton, down by the sea !
What voice is beseeching thee
For the scholar's lowliest place ?
Can this be the voice of him
Who fought on the Big Horn's rim ?
Can this be Rain-in-the-Face ?

His war-paint is washed away,
His hands have forgotten to slay ;
He seeks for himself and his race
The arts of peace and the lore
That give to the skilled hand more
Than the spoils of war and chase.

O chief of the Christ-like school !
Can the zeal of thy heart grow cool
When the victor scarred with fight
Like a child for thy guidance craves,
And the faces of hunters and braves
Are turning to thee for light ?

The hatchet lies overgrown
With grass by the Yellowstone,
Wind River and Paw of Bear ;
And, in sign that foes are friends,
Each lodge like a peace-pipe sends
Its smoke in the quiet air.

The hands that have done the wrong
To right the wronged are strong,
And the voice of a nation saith :
'Enough of the war of swords,
Enough of the lying words
And shame of a broken faith !'

The hills that have watched afar
The valleys ablaze with war
Shall look on the tasselled corn ;
And the dust of the grinded grain,
Instead of the blood of the slain,
Shall sprinkle thy banks, Big Horn !

The Ute and the wandering Crow
Shall know as the white men know,
And fare as the white men fare ;
The pale and the red shall be brothers,
One's rights shall be as another's,
Home, School, and House of Prayer !

O mountains that climb to snow,
O river winding below,
Through meadows by war once trod,
O wild, waste lands that await
The harvest exceeding great,
Break forth into praise of God !

Poems Subjective and Reminiscent

MEMORIES.

['It was not without thought and deliberation,' Whittier's biographer writes, 'that in 1888 he directed this poem to be placed at the head of his Poems Subjective and Reminiscent. He had never before publicly acknowledged how much of his heart was wrapped up in this delightful play of poetic fancy. The poem was written in 1841, and although the romance it embodies lies far back of this date, possibly there is a heart still beating which fully understands its meaning. The biographer can do no more than make this suggestion, which has the sanction of the poet's explicit word. To a friend who told him that Memories was her favorite poem, he said, "I love it too; but I hardly knew whether to publish it, it was so personal and near my heart."']

A BEAUTIFUL and happy girl,

With step as light as summer air,
Eyes glad with smiles, and brow of pearl,

Shadowed by many a careless curl
Of unconfined and flowing hair; 5

A seeming child in everything,
Save thoughtful brow and ripening
charms,

As Nature wears the smile of Spring
When sinking into Summer's arms.

A mind rejoicing in the light 10
Which melted through its graceful bower,

Leaf after leaf, dew-moist and bright,
And stainless in its holy white,

Unfolding like a morning flower:
A heart, which, like a fine-toned lute, 15

With every breath of feeling woke,
And, even when the tongue was mute,
From eye and lip in music spoke.

How thrills once more the lengthening
chain

Of memory, at the thought of thee! 20
Old hopes which long in dust have lain
Old dreams, come thronging back again,
And boyhood lives again in me;

I feel its glow upon my cheek,
Its fulness of the heart is mine, 25
As when I leaned to hear thee speak,
Or raised my doubtful eye to thine.

I hear again thy low replies,
I feel thy arm within my own,
And timidly again uprise 30
The fringed lids of hazel eyes,

With soft brown tresses overblown.
Ah! memories of sweet summer even,
Of moonlit wave and willow way,
Of stars and flowers, and dewy leaves, 35
And smiles and tones more dear than
they!

Ere this, thy quiet eye hath smiled
My picture of thy youth to see,
When, half a woman, half a child,

Thy very artlessness beguiled, 40
And folly's self seemed wise in thee;

I too can smile, when o'er that hour
The lights of memory backward stream,
Yet feel the while that manhood's power
Is vainer than my boyhood's dream. 45

Years have passed on, and left their trace,
Of graver care and deeper thought;
And unto me the calm, cold face
Of manhood, and to thee the grace
Of woman's pensive beauty brought. 50
More wide, perchance, for blame than
praise,

Theschool-boy's humble name has flown:
Thine, in the green and quiet ways
Of unobtrusive goodness known.

And wider yet in thought and deed 55
 Diverge our pathways, one in youth ;
 Thine the Genevan's sternest creed,
 While answers to my spirit's need
 The Derby dalesman's simple truth.
 For thee, the priestly rite and prayer, 60
 And holy day, and solemn psalm ;
 For me, the silent reverence where
 My brethren gather, slow and calm.

Yet hath thy spirit left on me
 An impress Time has worn not out, 65
 And something of myself in thee,
 A shadow from the past, I see,
 Lingered, even yet, thy way about ;
 Not wholly can the heart unlearn
 That lesson of its better hours, 70
 Not yet has Time's dull footstep worn
 To common dust that path of flowers.

Thus, while at times before our eyes
 The shadows melt, and fall apart,
 And, smiling through them, round us
 lies 75
 The warm light of our morning skies,—
 The Indian Summer of the heart !
 In secret sympathies of mind,
 In founts of feeling which retain
 Their pure, fresh flow, we yet may find 80
 Our early dreams not wholly vain !
 1841.

RAPHAEL.

Suggested by the portrait of Raphael, at the age of fifteen.

I SHALL not soon forget that sight :
 The glow of Autumn's westering day,
 A hazy warmth, a dreamy light,
 On Raphael's picture lay.

It was a simple print I saw, 5
 The fair face of a musing boy ;
 Yet, while I gazed, a sense of awe
 Seemed blending with my joy.

A simple print,—the graceful flow
 Of boyhood's soft and wavy hair, 10
 And fresh young lip and cheek, and brow
 Unmarked and clear, were there.

Yet through its sweet and calm repose
 I saw the inward spirit shine ;
 It was as if before me rose 15
 The white veil of a shrine.

As if, as Gothland's sage has told,
 The hidden life, the man within,
 Dissevered from its frame and mould,
 By mortal eye were seen. 20

Was it the lifting of that eye,
 The waving of that pictured hand ?
 Loose as a cloud-wreath on the sky,
 I saw the walls expand.

The narrow room had vanished,—space, 25
 Broad, luminous, remained alone,
 Through which all hues and shapes of grace
 And beauty looked or shone.

Around the mighty master came
 The marvels which his pencil wrought,
 Those miracles of power whose fame 31
 Is wide as human thought.

There drooped thy more than mortal face,
 O Mother, beautiful and mild !
 Enfolding in one dear embrace 35
 Thy Saviour and thy Child !

The rapt brow of the Desert John ;
 The awful glory of that day
 When all the Father's brightness shone
 Through manhood's veil of clay. 40

And, midst gray prophet forms, and wild
 Dark visions of the days of old,
 How sweetly woman's beauty smiled
 Through locks of brown and gold !

There Fornarina's fair young face 45
 Once more upon her lover shone,
 Whose model of an angel's grace
 He borrowed from her own.

Slow passed that vision from my view,
 But not the lesson which it taught ; 50
 The soft, calm shadows which it threw
 Still rested on my thought :

The truth, that painter, bard, and sage,
 Even in Earth's cold and changeable clime,
 Plant for their deathless heritage 55
 The fruits and flowers of time.

We shape ourselves the joy or fear
Of which the coming life is made,
And fill our Future's atmosphere
With sunshine or with shade.

60

The tissue of the Life to be
We weave with colors all our own,
And in the field of Destiny
We reap as we have sown.

Still shall the soul around it call
The shadows which it gathered here,
And, painted on the eternal wall,
The Past shall reappear.

65

Think ye the notes of holy song
On Milton's tuneful ear have died?
Think ye that Raphael's angel throng
Has vanished from his side?

70

Oh no!—We live our life again;
Or warmly touched, or coldly dim,
The pictures of the Past remain,—
Man's works shall follow him!

EGO.

WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF A FRIEND.

[Originally entitled Lines Written in the Book of a Friend.]

On page of thine I cannot trace
The cold and heartless commonplace,
A statue's fixed and marble grace.

For ever as these lines I penned,
Still with the thought of thee will blend
That of some loved and common friend,

5

Who in life's desert track has made
His pilgrim tent with mine, or strayed
Beneath the same remembered shade.

And hence my pen unfettered moves
In freedom which the heart approves,
The negligence which friendship loves.

10

And wilt thou prize my poor gift less
For simple air and rustic dress,
And sign of haste and carelessness?

15

Oh, more than specious counterfeit
Of sentiment or studied wit,
A heart like thine should value it.

Yet half I fear my gift will be
Unto thy book, if not to thee,
Of more than doubtful courtesy.

20

A banished name from Fashion's sphere,
A lay unheard of Beauty's ear,
Forbid, disowned,—what do they here?

Upon my ear not all in vain
Came the sad captive's clanking chain,
The groaning from his bed of pain.

25

And sadder still, I saw the woe
Which only wounded spirits know
When Pride's strong footsteps o'er them go.

30

Spurned not alone in walks abroad,
But from the temples of the Lord
Thrust out apart, like things abhorred.

Deep as I felt, and stern and strong,
In words which Prudence smothered long,
My soul spoke out against the wrong;

36

Not mine alone the task to speak
Of comfort to the poor and weak,
And dry the tear on Sorrow's cheek;

But, mingled in the conflict warm,
To pour the fiery breath of storm
Through the harsh trumpet of Reform;

40

To brave Opinion's settled frown,
From ermined robe and saintly gown,
While wrestling revered Error down.

Founts gushed beside my pilgrim way,
Cool shadows on the greensward lay,
Flowers swung upon the bending spray.

And, broad and bright, on either hand,
Stretched the green slopes of Fairy-land,
With Hope's eternal sunbow spanned;

51

Whence voices called me like the flow,
Which on the listener's ear will grow,
Of forest streamlets soft and low.

And gentle eyes, which still retain
Their picture on the heart and brain,
Smiled, beckoning from that path of pain.

55

In vain ! nor dream, nor rest, nor pause
Remain for him who round him draws
The battered mail of Freedom's cause. 60

From youthful hopes, from each green
spot
Of young Romance, and gentle Thought,
Where storm and tumult enter not ;

From each fair altar, where belong
The offerings Love requires of Song 65
In homage to her bright-eyed throng ;

With soul and strength, with heart and
hand,
I turned to Freedom's struggling band,
To the sad Helots of our land.

What marvel then that Fame should turn
Her notes of praise to those of scorn ; 71
Her gifts reclaimed, her smiles withdrawn ?

What matters it ? a few years more,
Life's surge so restless heretofore
Shall break upon the unknown shore ! 75

In that far land shall disappear
The shadows which we follow here,
The mist-wreaths of our atmosphere !

Before no work of mortal hand,
Of human will or strength expand 80
The pearl gates of the Better Land ;

Alone in that great love which gave
Life to the sleeper of the grave,
Resteth the power to seek and save.

Yet, if the spirit gazing through 85
The vista of the past can view
One deed to Heaven and virtue true ;

If through the wreck of wasted powers,
Of garlands wreathed from Folly's bowers,
Of idle aims and misspent hours, 90

The eye can note one sacred spot
By Pride and Self profaned not,
A green place in the waste of thought,

Where deed or word hath rendered less
The sum of human wretchedness, 95
And Gratitude looks forth to bless ;

The simple burst of tenderest feeling
From sad hearts worn by evil-dealing,
For blessing on the hand of healing ;

Better than Glory's pomp will be 100
That green and blessed spot to me,
A palm-shade in Eternity !

Something of Time which may invite
The purified and spiritual sight
To rest on with a calm delight. 105

And when the summer winds shall sweep
With their light wings my place of
sleep,
And mosses round my headstone creep ;

If still, as Freedom's rallying sign,
Upon the young heart's altars shine 110
The very fires they caught from mine ;

If words my lips once uttered still,
In the calm faith and steadfast will
Of other hearts, their work fulfil ;

Perchance with joy the soul may learn
These tokens, and its eye discern 116
The fires which on those altars burn ;

A marvellous joy that even then,
The spirit hath its life again,
In the strong hearts of mortal men. 120

Take, lady, then, the gift I bring,
No gay and graceful offering,
No flower-smile of the laughing spring.

Midst the green buds of Youth's fresh
May, 125
With Fancy's leaf-enwoven bay,
My sad and sombre gift I lay.

And if it deepens in thy mind
A sense of suffering human-kind,—
The outcast and the spirit-blind ;

Oppressed and spoiled on every side, 130
By Prejudice, and Scorn, and Pride,
Life's common courtesies denied ;

Sad mothers mourning o'er their trust,
Children by want and misery nursed,
Tasting life's bitter cup at first ; 135

If to their strong appeals which come
From fireless hearth, and crowded room,
And the close alley's noisome gloom,—

Though dark the hands upraised to thee
In mute beseeching agony, 140
Thou lend'st thy woman's sympathy ;

Not vainly on thy gentle shrine,
Where Love, and Mirth, and Friendship twine

Their varied gifts, I offer mine.

THE PUMPKIN.

Oh, greenly and fair in the lands of the
sun,
The vines of the gourd and the rich melon
run,
And the rock and the tree and the cottage
enfold,
With broad leaves all greenness and blossoms all gold,
Like that which o'er Nineveh's prophet once grew, 5
While he waited to know that his warning
was true,
And longed for the storm-cloud, and listened in vain
For the rush of the whirlwind and red fire-rain.

On the banks of the Xenil the dark
Spanish maiden
Comes up with the fruit of the tangled vine laden ; 10
And the Creole of Cuba laughs out to behold
Through orange-leaves shining the broad spheres of gold ;
Yet with dearer delight from his home in the North,
On the fields of his harvest the Yankee looks forth,
Where crook-necks are coiling and yellow fruit shines, 15
And the sun of September melts down on his vines.

Ah ! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,

From North and from South come the pilgrim and guest,

When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board

The old broken links of affection restored, 20

When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,

And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before,

What moistens the lip and what brightens
the eye ?

What calls back the past, like the rich
Pumpkin pie ?

Oh, fruit loved of boyhood ! the old days
recalling, 25

When wood-grapes were purpling and brown nuts were falling !

When wild, ugly faces we carved in its
skin,

Glaring out through the dark with a candle within !

When we laughed round the corn-heap,
with hearts all in tune,

Our chair a broad pumpkin,—our lantern
the moon, 30

Telling tales of the fairy who travelled like steam,

In a pumpkin-shell coach, with two rats
for her team !

Then thanks for thy present ! none sweeter or better

E'er smoked from an oven or circled a platter !

Fairer hands never wrought at a pastry
more fine, 35

Brighter eyes never watched o'er its baking, than thine !

And the prayer, which my mouth is too
full to express,

Swells my heart that thy shadow may never be less,

That the days of thy lot may be lengthened
below,

And the fame of thy worth like a pumpkin-vine grow, 40

And thy life be as sweet, and its last
sunset sky
Golden-tinted and fair as thy own Pumpkin pie!

FORGIVENESS.

My heart was heavy, for its trust had been Abused, its kindness answered with foul wrong;
So, turning gloomily from my fellow-men.
One summer Sabbath day I strolled among
The green mounds of the village burial-
place;
Where, pondering how all human love
and hate
Find one sad level; and how, soon or late,
Wronged and wrongdoer, each with meek-
ened face,
And cold hands folded over a still heart,
Pass the green threshold of our common
grave,
Whither all footsteps tend, whence none
depart,
Awed for myself, and pitying my race,
Our common sorrow, like a mighty wave,
Swept all my pride away, and trembling
I forgave!

TO MY SISTER,

WITH A COPY OF 'THE SUPERNATU-RALISM OF NEW ENGLAND.'

The work referred to was a series of papers under this title, contributed to the Democratic Review and afterward collected into a volume, in which I noted some of the superstitions and folklore prevalent in New England. The volume has not been kept in print, but most of its contents are distributed in my Literary Recreations and Miscellanies [now scattered in volumes v.
and vi. of the Riverside edition].

DEAR Sister! while the wise and sage
Turn coldly from my playful page,
And count it strange that ripened age
Should stoop to boyhood's folly;
I know that thou wilt judge aright
Of all which makes the heart more light,
Or lends one star-gleam to the night
Of clouded Melancholy.

Away with weary cares and themes!
Swing wide the moonlit gate of dreams!
Leave free once more the land which teems

With wonders and romances!
Where thou, with clear discerning eyes,
Shalt rightly read the truth which lies
Beneath the quaintly masking guise
Of wild and wizard fancies.

Lo! once again our feet we set
On still green wood-paths, twilight wet,
By lonely brooks, whose waters fret
The roots of spectral beeches;
Again the hearth-fire glimmers o'er Home's whitewashed wall and painted
floor,
And young eyes widening to the lore
Of faery-folks and witches.

Dear heart! the legend is not vain
Which lights that holy hearth again,
And calling back from care and pain,
And death's funeral sadness,
Draws round its old familiar blaze
The clustering groups of happier days,
And lends to sober manhood's gaze
A glimpse of childish gladness.

And, knowing how my life hath been
A weary work of tongue and pen,
A long, harsh strife with strong-willed
men,

Thou wilt not chide my turning
To con, at times, an idle rhyme,
To pluck a flower from childhood's clime,
Or listen, at Life's noonday chime,
For the sweet bells of Morning!
1847.

MY THANKS,

ACCOMPANYING MANUSCRIPTS PRE-SENTED TO A FRIEND.

[Formerly entitled Lines.]

'T IS said that in the Holy Land
The angels of the place have blessed
The pilgrim's bed of desert sand,
Like Jacob's stone of rest.

That down the hush of Syrian skies 5
Some sweet-voiced saint at twilight
sings

The song whose holy symphonies
Are beat by unseen wings :

Till starting from his sandy bed,
The wayworn wanderer looks to see 10
The halo of an angel's head
Shine through the tamarisk-tree.

So through the shadows of my way
Thy smile hath fallen soft and clear,
So at the weary close of day
Hath seemed thy voice of cheer. 15

That pilgrim pressing to his goal
May pause not for the vision's sake,
Yet all fair things within his soul
The thought of it shall wake : 20

The graceful palm-tree by the well,
Seen on the far horizon's rim ;
The dark eyes of the fleet gazelle,
Bent timidly on him ;

Each pictured saint, whose golden hair 25
Streams sunlike through the convent's
gloom ;

Pale shrines of martyrs young and fair,
And loving Mary's tomb :

And thus each tint or shade which falls,
From sunset cloud or waving tree, 30
Along my pilgrim path, recalls
The pleasant thought of thee.

Of one in sun and shade the same,
In weal and woe my steady friend,
Whatever by that holy name
The angels comprehend. 35

Not blind to faults and follies, thou
Hast never failed the good to see,
Nor judged by one unseemly bough
The upward-struggling tree. 40

These light leaves at thy feet I lay,— Poor common thoughts on common
 things,
 Which Time is shaking, day by day,
 Like feathers from his wings :

Chance shootings from a frail life-tree, 45
To nurturing care but little known,
Their good was partly learned of thee,
Their folly is my own.

That tree still clasps the kindly mould,
Its leaves still drink the twilight dew,
And weaving its pale green with gold, 51
Still shines the sunlight through.

There still the morning zephyrs play,
And there at times the spring bird sings,
And mossy trunk and fading spray 55
Are flowered with glossy wings.

Yet, even in genial sun and rain,
Root, branch, and leaflet fail and fade;
The wanderer on its lonely plain
Erelong shall miss its shade. 60

O friend beloved, whose curious skill Keeps bright the last year's leaves and
flowers.

With warm, glad, summer thoughts to fill
The cold, dark, winter hours !

Pressed on thy heart, the leaves I bring 65
May well defy the wintry cold,
Until, in Heaven's eternal spring,
Life's fairer ones unfold.

REMEMBRANCE.

WITH COPIES OF THE AUTHOR'S WRITINGS.

FRIEND of mine ! whose lot was cast
With me in the distant past ;
Where, like shadows flitting fast,

Fact and fancy, thought and theme,
Word and work, begin to seem
Like a half-remembered dream ! 5

Touched by change have all things been,
Yet I think of thee as when
We had speech of lip and pen.

For the calm thy kindness lent 10
To a path of discontent,
Rough with trial and dissent ;

Gentle words where such were few,
Softening blame where blame was true,
Praising where small praise was due; 15

For a waking dream made good,
For an ideal understood,
For thy Christian womanhood;

For thy marvellous gift to cull
From our common life and dull 20
Whatsoe'er is beautiful;

Thoughts and fancies, Hybla's bees
Dropping sweetness; true heart's-ease
Of congenial sympathies;—

Still for these I own my debt;
Memory, with her eyelids wet, 25
Fain would thank thee even yet!

And as one who scatters flowers
Where the Queen of May's sweet hours
Sits o'ertwined with blossomed bowers, 30

In superfluous zeal bestowing
Gifts where gifts are overflowing,
So I pay the debt I'm owing.

To thy full thoughts, gay or sad,
Sunny-hued or sober clad, 35
Something of my own I add;

Well assured that thou wilt take
Even the offering which I make Kindly for the giver's sake.

1851.

MY NAMESAKE.

Addressed to Francis Greenleaf Allison of Burlington, N. J.

You scarcely need my tardy thanks,
Who, self-rewarded, nurse and tend—
A green leaf on your own Green Banks—
The memory of your friend.

For me, no wreath, bloom-woven, hides 5
The sobered brow and lessening hair:
For aught I know, the myrtled sides
Of Helicon are bare.

Their scallop-shells so many bring
The fabled founts of song to try, 10
They've drained, for aught I know, the
spring
Of Aganippe dry.

Ah well!—The wreath the Muses braid
Proves often Folly's cap and bell;
Methinks, my ample beaver's shade 15
May serve my turn as well.

Let Love's and Friendship's tender debt
Be paid by those I love in life.
Why should the unborn critic whet
For me his scalping-knife? 20

Why should the stranger peer and pry
One's vacant house of life about,
And drag for curious ear and eye
His faults and follies out?—

Why stuff, for fools to gaze upon, 25
With chaff of words, the garb he wore,
As corn-husks when the ear is gone
Are rustled all the more?

Let kindly Silence close again,
The picture vanish from the eye, 30
And on the dim and misty main
Let the small ripple die.

Yet not the less I own your claim
To grateful thanks, dear friends of mine.
Hang, if it please you so, my name 35
Upon your household line.

Let Fame from brazen lips blow wide
Her chosen names, I envy none:
A mother's love, a father's pride,
Shall keep alive my own! 40

Still shall that name as now recall
The young leaf wet with morning dew,
The glory where the sunbeams fall
The breezy woodlands through.

That name shall be a household word, 45
A spell to waken smile or sigh;
In many an evening prayer be heard
And cradle lullaby.

And thou, dear child, in riper days When asked the reason of thy name, 50 Shalt answer: 'One't were vain to praise Or censure bore the same.	'Yet Heaven was kind, and here a bird And there a flower beguiled his way; 90 And, cool, in summer noons, he heard The fountains plash and play.
'Some blamed him, some believed him good, The truth lay doubtless 'twixt the two; He reconciled as best he could 55 Old faith and fancies new.	'On all his sad or restless moods The patient peace of Nature stole; The quiet of the fields and woods 95 Sank deep into his soul.
'In him the grave and playful mixed, And wisdom held with folly truce, And Nature compromised betwixt 60 Good fellow and recluse.	'He worshipped as his fathers did, And kept the faith of childish days, And, howsoever he strayed or slid, He loved the good old ways. 100
'He loved his friends, forgave his foes; And, if his words were harsh at times, He spared his fellow-men,—his blows Fell only on their crimes.	'The simple tastes, the kindly traits, The tranquil air, and gentle speech, The silence of the soul that waits For more than man to teach.
'He loved the good and wise, but found 65 His human heart to all akin Who met him on the common ground Of suffering and of sin.	'The cant of party, school, and sect, 105 Provoked at times his honest scorn, And Folly, in its gray respect, He tossed on satire's horn.
'Whate'er his neighbors might endure Of pain or grief his own became; 70 For all the ills he could not cure He held himself to blame.	'But still his heart was full of awe And reverence for all sacred things; 110 And, brooding over form and law, He saw the Spirit's wings!
'His good was mainly an intent, His evil not of forethought done; The work he wrought was rarely meant Or finished as begun. 76	'Life's mystery wrapt him like a cloud; He heard far voices mock his own, The sweep of wings unseen, the loud, 115 Long roll of waves unknown.
'Ill served his tides of feeling strong To turn the common mills of use; And, over restless wings of song, His birthright garb hung loose! 80	'The arrows of his straining sight Fell quenched in darkness; priest and sage, Like lost guides calling left and right, Perplexed his doubtful age. 120
'His eye was beauty's powerless slave, And his the ear which discord pains; Few guessed beneath his aspect grave What passions strove in chains.	'Like childhood, listening for the sound Of its dropped pebbles in the well, All vainly down the dark profound His brief-lined plummet fell.
'He had his share of care and pain, 85 No holiday was life to him; Still in the heirloom cup we drain The bitter drop will swim.	'So, scattering flowers with pious pains On old beliefs, of later creeds, 126 Which claimed a place in Truth's domains, He asked the title-deeds.

'He saw the old-time's groves and shrines
In the long distance fair and dim ; 130
And heard, like sound of far-off pines,
The century-mellowed hymn !

'He dared not mock the Dervish whirl,
The Brahmin's rite, the Lama's spell ;
God knew the heart ; Devotion's pearl 135
Might sanctify the shell.

'While others trod the altar stairs
He faltered like the publican ;
And, while they praised as saints, his 140
prayers
Were those of sinful man.

'For, awed by Sinai's Mount of Law,
The trembling faith alone sufficed,
That, through its cloud and flame, he saw
The sweet, sad face of Christ !

And listening, with his forehead bowed,
Heard the Divine compassion fill 146
The pauses of the trump and cloud
With whispers small and still.

'The words he spake, the thoughts he
penned,
Are mortal as his hand and brain, 150
But, if they served the Master's end,
He has not lived in vain !

Heaven make thee better than thy name,
Child of my friends !—For thee I crave
What riches never bought, nor fame 155
To mortal longing gave.

I pray the prayer of Plato old :
God make thee beautiful within,
And let thine eyes the good behold
In everything save sin ! 160

Imagination held in check
To serve, not rule, thy poised mind ;
Thy Reason, at the frown or beck
Of Conscience, loose or bind.

No dreamer thou, but real all,— 165
Strong manhood crowning vigorous
youth ;
Life made by duty epical
And rhythmic with the truth.

So shall that life the fruitage yield
Which trees of healing only give, 170
And green-leaved in the Eternal field
Of God, forever live !

1853.

A MEMORY.

[The singer in this poem was a daughter of Whittier's early friend, N. P. Rogers.]

HERE, while the loom of Winter weaves
The shroud of flowers and fountains,
I think of thee and summer eves
Among the Northern mountains.

When thunder tolled the twilight's close, 5
And winds the lake were rude on,
And thou wert singing, Ca' the Yowes,
The bonny yowes of Cluden !

When, close and closer, hushing breath,
Our circle narrowed round thee, 10
And smiles and tears made up the wreath
Wherewith our silence crowned thee ;

And, strangers all, we felt the ties
Of sisters and of brothers ;
Ah ! whose of all those kindly eyes 15
Now smile upon another's ?

The sport of Time, who still apart
The waifs of life is flinging ;
Oh, nevermore shall heart to heart
Draw nearer for that singing ! 20

Yet when the panes are frosty-starred,
And twilight's fire is gleaming,
I hear the songs of Scotland's bard
Sound softly through my dreaming !

A song that lends to winter snows 25
The glow of summer weather,—
Again I hear thee ca' the yowes
To Cluden's hills of heather !

1854.

MY DREAM.

In my dream, methought I trod,
Yesternight, a mountain road ;
Narrow as Al Sirat's span,
High as eagle's flight, it ran.

Overhead, a roof of cloud
With its weight of thunder bowed ;
Underneath, to left and right,
Blankness and abysmal night.

Here and there a wild-flower blushed ;
Now and then a bird-song gushed ;
Now and then, through rifts of shade,
Stars shone out, and sunbeams played.

But the goodly company,
Walking in that path with me,
One by one the brink o'erslid,
One by one the darkness hid.

Some with wailing and lament,
Some with cheerful courage went ;
But, of all who smiled or mourned,
Never one to us returned.

Anxiously, with eye and ear,
Questioning that shadow drear,
Never hand in token stirred,
Never answering voice I heard !

Steeper, darker !—lo ! I felt
From my feet the pathway melt,
Swallowed by the black despair,
And the hungry jaws of air,

Past the stony-throated caves,
Strangled by the wash of waves,
Past the splintered crags, I sank
On a green and flowery bank,—

Soft as fall of thistle-down,
Lightly as a cloud is blown,
Soothingly as childhood pressed
To the bosom of its rest.

Of the sharp-horned rocks instead,
Green the grassy meadows spread,
Bright with waters singing by
Trees that propped a golden sky.

Painless, trustful, sorrow-free,
Old lost faces welcomed me,
With whose sweetness of content
Still expectant hope was blent.

Waking while the dawning gray
Slowly brightened into day,
Pondering that vision fled,
Thus unto myself I said :—

'Steep and hung with clouds of strife
Is our narrow path of life ;
And our death the dreaded fall
Through the dark, awaiting all.

'So, with painful steps we climb
Up the dizzy ways of time,
Ever in the shadow shed
By the forecast of our dread.

'Dread of mystery solved alone,
Of the untried and unknown ;
Yet the end thereof may seem Like the falling of my dream.

'And this heart-consuming care,
All our fears of here or there,
Change and absence, loss and death,
Prove but simple lack of faith.'

Thou, O Most Compassionate !
Who didst stoop to our estate,
Drinking of the cup we drain,
Treading in our path of pain,—

Through the doubt and mystery,
Grant to us Thy steps to see,
And the grace to draw from thence Larger hope and confidence.

Show Thy vacant tomb, and let,
As of old, the angels sit,
Whispering, by its open door :
'Fear not ! He hath gone before !'

1855.

THE BAREFOOT BOY.

BLESSINGS on thee, little man,
Barefoot boy, with cheek of tan !
With thy turned-up pantaloons,
And thy merry whistled tunes ;
With thy red lip, redder still
Kissed by strawberries on the hill ;

With the sunshine on thy face,
Through thy torn brim's jaunty grace ;
From my heart I give thee joy,—
I was once a barefoot boy !
Prince thou art,—the grown-up man
Only is republican.
Let the million-dollared ride !
Barefoot, trudging at his side,
Thou hast more than he can buy
In the reach of ear and eye,—
Outward sunshine, inward joy :
Blessings on thee, barefoot boy !

Oh for boyhood's painless play,
Sleep that wakes in laughing day,
Health that mocks the doctor's rules,
Knowledge never learned of schools,
Of the wild bee's morning chase,
Of the wild-flower's time and place,
Flight of fowl and habitude
Of the tenants of the wood ;
How the tortoise bears his shell,
How the woodchuck digs his cell,
And the ground-mole sinks his well ;
How the robin feeds her young,
How the oriole's nest is hung ;
Where the whitest lilies blow,
Where the freshest berries grow,
Where the ground-nut trails its vine,
Where the wood-grape's clusters shine ;
Of the black wasp's cunning way,
Mason of his walls of clay,
And the architectural plans
Of gray hornet artisans !
For, eschewing books and tasks,
Nature answers all he asks ;
Hand in hand with her he walks,
Face to face with her he talks,
Part and parcel of her joy.—
Blessings on the barefoot boy !

Oh for boyhood's time of June,
Crowding years in one brief moon,
When all things I heard or saw,
Me, their master, waited for.
I was rich in flowers and trees,
Humming-birds and honey-bees ;
For my sport the squirrel played,
Plied the snouted mole his spade ;
For my taste the blackberry cone
Purpled over hedge and stone ;

Laughed the brook for my delight
Through the day and through the night,
Whispering at the garden wall,
Talked with me from fall to fall ;
Mine the sand-rimmed pickerel pond, 60
Mine the walnut slopes beyond,
Mine, on bending orchard trees,
Apples of Hesperides !
Still as my horizon grew,
Larger grew my riches too ; 65
All the world I saw or knew
Seemed a complex Chinese toy,
Fashioned for a barefoot boy !

Oh for festal dainties spread,
Like my bowl of milk and bread ; 70
Pewter spoon and bowl of wood,
On the door-stone, gray and rude !
O'er me, like a regal tent,
Cloudy-ribbed, the sunset bent,
Purple-curtained, fringed with gold, 75
Looped in many a wind-swung fold ;
While for music came the play
Of the pied frogs' orchestra ;
And, to light the noisy choir, 80
Lit the fly his lamp of fire.
I was monarch : pomp and joy
Waited on the barefoot boy !

Cheerily, then, my little man,
Live and laugh, as boyhood can !
Though the flinty slopes be hard, 85
Stubble-speared the new-mown sward,
Every morn shall lead thee through
Fresh baptisms of the dew ;
Every evening from thy feet
Shall the cool wind kiss the heat : 90
All too soon these feet must hide
In the prison cells of pride,
Lose the freedom of the sod,
Like a colt's for work be shod,
Made to tread the mills of toil, 95
Up and down in ceaseless moil :
Happy if their track be found
Never on forbidden ground ;
Happy if they sink not in
Quick and treacherous sands of sin. 100
Ah ! that thou couldst know thy joy,
Ere it passes, barefoot boy !

MY PSALM.

I MOURN no more my vanished years:
 Beneath a tender rain,
 An April rain of smiles and tears,
 My heart is young again.

The west-winds blow, and, singing low, 5
 I hear the glad streams run ;
 The windows of my soul I throw
 Wide open to the sun.

No longer forward nor behind
 I look in hope or fear ; 10
 But, grateful, take the good I find,
 The best of now and here.

I plough no more a desert land,
 To harvest weed and tare ;
 The manna dropping from God's hand 15
 Rebukes my painful care.

I break my pilgrim staff, I lay
 Aside the toiling oar ;
 The angel sought so far away
 I welcome at my door. 20

The airs of spring may never play
 Among the ripening corn,
 Nor freshness of the flowers of May
 Blow through the autumn morn ;

Yet shall the blue-eyed gentian look 25
 Through fringed lids to heaven,
 And the pale aster in the brook
 Shall see its image given ;—

The woods shall wear their robes of praise,
 The south-wind softly sigh, 30
 And sweet, calm days in golden haze
 Melt down the amber sky.

Not less shall manly deed and word
 Rebuke an age of wrong ;
 The graven flowers that wreath the sword
 Make not the blade less strong. 35

But smiting hands shall learn to heal,—
 To build as to destroy ;
 Nor less my heart for others feel
 That I the more enjoy. 40

All as God wills, who wisely heeds
 To give or to withhold,
 And knoweth more of all my needs
 Than all my prayers have told !

Enough that blessings undeserved 45
 Have marked my erring track ;
 That wheresoe'er my feet have swerved,
 His chastening turned me back ;

That more and more a Providence
 Of love is understood, 50
 Making the springs of time and sense
 Sweet with eternal good ;—

That death seems but a covered way
 Which opens into light,
 Wherem no blinded child can stray 55
 Beyond the Father's sight ;

That care and trial seem at last,
 Through Memory's sunset air,
 Like mountain-ranges overpast,
 In purple distance fair ; 60

That all the jarring notes of life
 Seem blending in a psalm,
 And all the angles of its strife
 Slow rounding into calm.

And so the shadows fall apart, 65
 And so the west-winds play ;
 And all the windows of my heart
 I open to the day.

THE WAITING.

I WAIT and watch : before my eyes
 Methinks the night grows thin and gray ;
 I wait and watch the eastern skies
 To see the golden spears arise
 Beneath the oriflamme of day ! 5

Like one whose limbs are bound in trance
 I hear the day-sounds swell and grow,
 And see across the twilight glance,
 Troop after troop, in swift advance, 9
 The shining ones with plumes of snow !

I know the errand of their feet,
 I know what mighty work is theirs ;
 I can but lift up hands unmeet,
 The threshing-floors of God to beat, 14
 And speed them with unworthy prayers.

I will not dream in vain despair
 The steps of progress wait for me :
 The puny leverage of a hair
 The planet's impulse well may spare,
 A drop of dew the tided sea. 20

The loss, if loss there be, is mine,
 And yet not mine if understood ;
 For one shall grasp and one resign,
 One drink life's rue, and one its wine, 24
 And God shall make the balance good.

Oh power to do ! Oh baffled will !
 Oh prayer and action ! ye are one.
 Who may not strive, may yet fulfil
 The harder task of standing still, 29
 And good but wished with God is done !

SNOW-BOUND,

A WINTER IDYL.

TO THE MEMORY OF THE HOUSEHOLD IT DESCRIBES

THIS POEM IS DEDICATED BY THE AUTHOR.

The inmates of the family at the Whittier homestead who are referred to in the poem were my father, mother, my brother and two sisters, and my uncle and aunt, both unmarried. In addition, there was the district schoolmaster, who boarded with us. The 'not unfear'd, half-welcome guest' was Harriet Livermore, daughter of Judge Livermore, of New Hampshire, a young woman of fine natural ability, enthusiastic, eccentric, with slight control over her violent temper, which sometimes made her religious profession doubtful. She was equally ready to exhort in school-house prayer-meetings and dance in a Washington ball-room, while her father was a member of Congress. She early embraced the doctrine of the Second Advent, and felt it her duty to proclaim the Lord's speedy coming. With this message she crossed the Atlantic and spent the greater part of a long life in travelling over Europe and Asia. She lived some time with Lady Hester Stanhope, a woman as fantastic and mentally strained as herself, on the slope of Mt. Lebanon, but finally quarrelled with her in regard to two white horses with red marks on their backs which suggested the idea of saddles, on which her titled hostess expected to ride into Jerusalem with the Lord.

A friend of mine found her, when quite an old woman, wandering in Syria with a tribe of Arabs, who with the Oriental notion that madness is inspiration, accepted her as their prophetess and leader. At the time referred to in Snow-Bound she was boarding at the Rocks Village, about two miles from us.

In my boyhood, in our lonely farm-house, we had scanty sources of information ; few books and only a small weekly newspaper. Our only annual was the Almanac. Under such circumstances story-telling was a necessary resource in the long winter evenings. My father when a young man had traversed the wilderness to Canada, and could tell us of his adventures with Indians and wild beasts, and of his sojourn in the French villages. My uncle was ready with his record of hunting and fishing, and, it must be confessed, with stories which he at least half believed, of witchcraft and apparitions. My mother, who was born in the Indian-haunted region of Somersworth, New Hampshire, between Dover and Portsmouth, told us of the inroads of the savages, and the narrow escape of her ancestors. She described strange people who lived on the Piscataqua and Cochecho, among whom was Bantam the sorcerer. I have in my possession the wizard's 'conjuring book,' which he solemnly opened when consulted. It is a copy of Cornelius Agrippa's Magie, printed in 1661, dedicated to Dr. Robert Child, who, like Michael Scott, had learned

'the art of glammorie
In Padua beyond the sea,'

and who is famous in the annals of Massachusetts, where he was at one time a resident, as the first man who dared petition the General Court for liberty of conscience. The full title of the book is Three Books of Occult Philosophy, by Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Knight, Doctor of both Laws, Counsellor to Caesar's Sacred Majesty and Judge of the Prerogative Court.

'As the Spirits of Darkness be stronger in the dark, so Good Spirits, which be Angels of Light, are augmented not only by the Divine light of the Sun, but also by our common Wood Fire: and as the Celestial Fire drives away dark spirits, so also this our fire of Wood doth the same.'—COR. AGRIPPA, Occult Philosophy, Book I ch. v.

'Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and, driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river and the heaven,
And veils the farm-house at the garden's end.
The sled and traveller stopped, the courier's feet
Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit Around the radiant fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm.'

EMERSON. The Snow Storm.

THE sun that brief December day
Rose cheerless over hills of gray,
And, darkly circled, gave at noon
A sadder light than waning moon.
Slow tracing down the thickening sky 5
Its mute and ominous prophecy,
A portent seeming less than threat,
It sank from sight before it set.
A chill no coat, however stout,
Of homespun stuff could quite shut out, 10
A hard, dull bitterness of cold,
That checked, mid-vein, the circling race
Of life-blood in the sharpened face,
The coming of the snow-storm told.
The wind blew east; we heard the roar 15
Of Ocean on his wintry shore,
And felt the strong pulse throbbing there
Beat with low rhythm our inland air.

Meanwhile we did our nightly chores,--
Brought in the wood from out of doors, 20
Littered the stalls, and from the mows
Raked down the herd's-grass for the cows;
Heard the horse whinnying for his corn;
And, sharply clashing horn on horn,
Impatient down the stanchion rows 25
The cattle shake their walnut bows;
While, peering from his early perch
Upon the scaffold's pole of birch,
The cock his crested helmet bent
And down his querulous challenge sent. 30

Unwarned by any sunset light
The gray day darkened into night,
A night made hoary with the swarm
And whirl-dance of the blinding storm,
As zigzag, wavering to and fro, 35
Crossed and recrossed the winged snow:
And ere the early bedtime came
The white drift piled the window-frame,
And through the glass the clothes-line posts
Looked in like tall and sheeted ghosts. 40

So all night long the storm roared on:
The morning broke without a sun;
In tiny spherule traced with lines
Of Nature's geometric signs,
In starry flake, and pellicle, 45
All day the hoary meteor fell;
And, when the second morning shone,
We looked upon a world unknown,
On nothing we could call our own.
Around the glistening wonder bent 50
The blue walls of the firmament,
No cloud above, no earth below,—
A universe of sky and snow!
The old familiar sights of ours
Took marvellous shapes; strange domes 55
and towers
Rose up where sty or corn-crib stood,
Or garden-wall, or belt of wood;
A smooth white mound the brush-pile
showed,
A fenceless drift what once was road;
The bride-post an old man sat 60
With loose-flung coat and high cocked
hat;
The well-curb had a Chinese roof;
And even the long sweep, high aloof,

In its slant splendor, seemed to tell
Of Pisa's leaning miracle.

65

A prompt, decisive man, no breath
Our father wasted: 'Boys, a path !'
Well pleased, (for when did farmer boy Count such a summons less than joy?)
Our buskins on our feet we drew ; 70
With mittened hands, and caps drawn low,
To guard our necks and ears from snow,
We cut the solid whiteness through.
And, where the drift was deepest, made
A tunnel walled and overlaid 75
With dazzling crystal : we had read
Of rare Aladdin's wondrous cave,
And to our own his name we gave,
With many a wish the luck were ours
To test his lamp's supernal powers. 80
We reached the barn with merry din,
And roused the prisoned brutes within.
The old horse thrust his long head out,
And grave with wonder gazed about ;
The cock his lusty greeting said, 85
And forth his speckled harem led ;
The oxen lashed their tails, and hooked,
And mild reproach of hunger looked ;
The horned patriarch of the sheep,
Like Egypt's Amun roused from sleep, 90
Shook his sage head with gesture mute,
And emphasized with stamp of foot.

All day the gusty north-wind bore
The loosening drift its breath before ;
Low circling round its southern zone, 95
The sun through dazzling snow-mist
shone.

No church-bell lent its Christian tone
To the savage air, no social smoke 92
Curled over woods of snow-hung oak.
A solitude made more intense 100
By dreary-voiced elements,
The shrieking of the mindless wind,
The moaning tree-boughs swaying blind,
And on the glass the unmeaning beat
Of ghostly finger-tips of sleet. 105
Beyond the circle of our hearth
No welcome sound of toil or mirth
Unbound the spell, and testified
Of human life and thought outside.
We minded that the sharpest ear 110
The buried brooklet could not hear,

The music of whose liquid lip
Had been to us companionship,
And, in our lonely life, had grown
To have an almost human tone. 115

As night drew on, and, from the crest
Of wooded knolls that ridged the west,
The sun, a snow-blown traveller, sank
From sight beneath the smothering bank,
We piled, with care, our nightly stack 120
Of wood against the chimney-back,—
The oaken log, green, huge, and thick,
And on its top the stout back-stick ;
The knotty forestick laid apart,
And filled between with curious art 125
The ragged brush ; then, hovering near,
We watched the first red blaze appear,
Heard the sharp crackle, caught the gleam
On whitewashed wall and sagging beam,
Until the old, rude-furnished room 130
Burst, flower-like, into rosy bloom ;
While radiant with a mimic flame
Outside the sparkling drift became,
And through the bare-boughed lilac-tree
Our own warm hearth seemed blazing free.
The crane and pendent trammels showed,
The Turks' heads on the andirons glowed ;
While childish fancy, prompt to tell
The meaning of the miracle,
Whispered the old rhyme: '*Under the tree,
When fire outdoors burns merrily, 141
There the witches are making tea.*'

The moon above the eastern wood
Shone at its full ; the hill-range stood
Transfigured in the silver flood, 145
Its blown snows flashing cold and keen,
Dead white, save where some sharp ravine
Took shadow, or the sombre green
Of hemlocks turned to pitchy black
Against the whiteness at their back. 150
For such a world and such a night
Most fitting that unwarming light,
Which only seemed where'er it fell
To make the coldness visible.

Shut in from all the world without, 155
We sat the clean-winged hearth about,
Content to let the north-wind roar
In baffled rage at pane and door,
While the red logs before us beat
The frost-line back with tropic heat ; 160

And ever, when a louder blast
Shook beam and rafter as it passed,
The merrier up its roaring draught
The great throat of the chimney laughed ;
The house-dog on his paws outspread 165
Laid to the fire his drowsy head,
The cat's dark silhouette on the wall
A couchant tiger's seemed to fall ;
And, for the winter fireside meet,
Between the andirons' straddling feet, 170
The mug of cider simmered slow,
The apples sputtered in a row,
And, close at hand, the basket stood
With nuts from brown October's wood.

What matter how the night behaved ? 175
What matter how the north-wind raved ?
Blow high, blow low, not all its snow
Could quench our hearth-fire's ruddy glow.
O Time and Change !— with hair as
gray

As was my sire's that winter day, 180
How strange it seems, with so much gone
Of life and love, to still live on !
Ah, brother ! only I and thou 63
Are left of all that circle now,—
The dear home faces whereupon 185
That fitful firelight paled and shone.
Henceforward, listen as we will,
The voices of that hearth are still ;
Look where we may, the wide earth o'er
Those lighted faces smile no more. 190
We tread the paths their feet have worn,

We sit beneath their orchard trees,

We hear, like them, the hum of bees
And rustle of the bladed corn ;
We turn the pages that they read, 195
Their written words we linger o'er,
But in the sun they cast no shade,
No voice is heard, no sign is made,

No step is on the conscious floor ! 199
Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust, (Since He who knows our need is just,)
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.
Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress-trees !
Who, hopeless, lays his dead away, 205
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play !

Who hath not learned, in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,

That Life is ever lord of Death, 210
And Love can never lose its own !

We sped the time with stories old,
Wrought puzzles out, and riddles told,
Or stammered from our school-book lore
'The Chief of Gambia's golden shore.' 64
How often since, when all the land 216
Was clay in Slavery's shaping hand,
As if a far-blown trumpet stirred
The languorous sin-sick air, I heard :
'Does not the voice of reason cry, 220
Claim the first right which Nature gave,
From the red scourge of bondage fly,
Nor deign to live a burdened slave !'

Our father rode again his ride
On Memphremagog's wooded side ; 225
Sat down again to moose and sump
In trapper's hut and Indian camp ;
Lived o'er the old idyllic ease
Beneath St. François' hemlock-trees ;
Again for him the moonlight shone 230
On Norman cap and bodiced zone ;
Again he heard the violin play
Which led the village dance away.
And mingled in its merry whirl
The grandam and the laughing girl. 235
Or, nearer home, our steps he led
Where Salisbury's level marshes spread
Mile-wide as flies the laden bee ;
Where merry mowers, hale and strong,
Swept, scythe on scythe, their swaths
along 240

The low green prairies of the sea.
We shared the fishing off Boar's Head,
And round the rocky Isles of Shoals
The hake-broil on the drift-wood coals ;
The chowder on the sand-beach made, 245
Dipped by the hungry, steaming hot,
With spoons of clam-shell from the pot.
We heard the tales of witchcraft old,
And dream and sign and marvel told
To sleepy listeners as they lay 250
Stretched idly on the salted hay,
Adrift along the winding shores,
When favoring breezes deigned to blow
The square sail of the gundelow
And idle lay the useless oars. 255

Our mother, while she turned her wheel
Or run the new-knit stocking-heel,

Told how the Indian hordes came down
At midnight on Coheco town,
And how her own great-uncle bore 260
His cruel scalp-mark to fourscore.

Recalling, in her fitting phrase,
So rich and picturesque and free,
(The common unrhymed poetry
Of simple life and country ways,) 265

The story of her early days,—
She made us welcome to her home ;
Old hearths grew wide to give us room ;
We stole with her a frightened look
At the gray wizard's conjuring-book, 270
The fame whereof went far and wide
Through all the simple country side ;
We heard the hawks at twilight play,
The boat-horn on Piscataqua,
The loon's weird laughter far away ; 275
We fished her little trout-brook, knew
What flowers in wood and meadow grew,
What sunny hillsides autumn-brown
She climbed to shake the ripe nuts down,
Saw where in sheltered cove and bay 280
The ducks' black squadron anchored lay,
And heard the wild-geese calling loud
Beneath the gray November cloud.

Then, haply, with a look more grave,
And soberer tone, some tale she gave 285
From painful Sewell's ancient tome,
Beloved in every Quaker home,
Of faith fire-winged by martyrdom,
Or Chalkley's Journal, old and quaint,⁶⁵—

Gentlest of skippers, rare sea-saint !— 290
Who, when the dreary calms prevailed,
And water-butt and bread-cask failed,
And cruel, hungry eyes pursued
His portly presence mad for food,
With dark hints muttered under breath
Of casting lots for life or death, 296
Offered, if Heaven withheld supplies,
To be himself the sacrifice.

Then, suddenly, as if to save
The good man from his living grave, 300
A ripple on the water grew,
A school of porpoise flashed in view.
'Take, eat,' he said, 'and be content ;
These fishes in my stead are sent
By Him who gave the tangled ram 305
To spare the child of Abraham.'

Our uncle, innocent of books,⁶⁶

Was rich in lore of fields and brooks,
The ancient teachers never dumb
Of Nature's unhouse'd lyceum. 310

In moons and tides and weather wise,
He read the clouds as prophecies,
And foul or fair could well divine,
By many an occult hint and sign,
Holding the cunning-warded keys 315

To all the woodcraft mysteries ;
Himself to Nature's heart so near
That all her voices in his ear
Of beast or bird had meanings clear,
Like Apollonius of old, 320

Who knew the tales the sparrows told,
Or Hermes who interpreted
What the sage cranes of Nilus said ;
Content to live where life began ;
A simple, guileless, childlike man, 325

Strong only on his native grounds,
The little world of sights and sounds
Whose girdle was the parish bounds,
Whereof his fondly partial pride
The common features magnified, 330

As Surrey hills to mountains grew
In White of Selborne's loving view,—
He told how teal and loon he shot,
And how the eagle's eggs he got,
The feats on pond and river done, 335

The prodigies of rod and gun ;
Till, warning with the tales he told,
Forgotten was the outside cold,
The bitter wind unheeded blew,
From ripening corn the pigeons flew, 340
The partridge drummed i' the wood, the mink

Went fishing down the river-brink.
In fields with bean or clover gay,
The woodchuck, like a hermit gray,

Peered from the doorway of his cell ; 345
The muskrat plied the mason's trade,
And tier by tier his mud-walls laid ;
And from the shagbark overhead
The grizzled squirrel dropped his shell.

Next, the dear aunt, whose smile of cheer
And voice in dreams I see and hear,— 351
The sweetest woman ever Fate
Perverse denied a household mate,
Who, lonely, homeless, not the less

Found peace in love's unselfishness, 355
And welcome wheresoe'er she went,
A calm and gracious element,

Whose presence seemed the sweet income
 And womanly atmosphere of home,—
 Called up her girlhood memories, 360
 The huskings and the apple-bees,
 The sleigh-rides and the summer sails,
 Weaving through all the poor details
 And homespun warp of circumstance
 A golden woof-thread of romance. 365
 For well she kept her genial mood
 And simple faith of maidenhood;
 Before her still a cloud-land lay,
 The mirage loomed across her way;
 The morning dew, that dries so soon 370
 With others, glistened at her noon;
 Through years of toil and soil and care,
 From glossy tress to thin gray hair,
 All unprofaned she held apart
 The virgin fancies of the heart. 375
 Be shame to him of woman born
 Who hath for such but thought of scorn.

There, too, our elder sister plied⁶⁷
 Her evening task the stand beside;
 A full, rich nature, free to trust, 380
 Truthful and almost sternly just,
 Impulsive, earnest, prompt to act,
 And make her generous thought a fact,
 Keeping with many a light disguise
 The secret of self-sacrifice. 385
 O heart sore-tried! thou hast the best
 That Heaven itself could give thee,—rest,
 Rest from all bitter thoughts and things!
 How many a poor one's blessing went
 With thee beneath the low green tent
 Whose curtain never outward swings!

As one who held herself a part
 Of all she saw, and let her heart
 Against the household bosom lean,
 Upon the motley-braided mat 395
 Our youngest and our dearest sat,⁶⁸
 Lifting her large, sweet, asking eyes,
 Now bathed in the unfading green
 And holy peace of Paradise.
 Oh, looking from some heavenly hill, 400
 Or from the shade of saintly palms,
 Or silver reach of river calms,
 Do those large eyes behold me still?
 With me one little year ago:—
 The chill weight of the winter snow 405
 For months upon her grave has lain;

And now, when summer south-winds blow
 And brier and harebell bloom again,
 I tread the pleasant paths we trod,
 I see the violet-sprinkled sod 410
 Whereon she leaned, too frail and weak
 The hillside flowers she loved to seek,
 Yet following me where'er I went
 With dark eyes full of love's content.
 The birds are glad; the brier-rose fills 415
 The air with sweetness; all the hills
 Stretch green to June's unclouded sky;
 But still I wait with ear and eye
 For something gone which should be nigh,
 A loss in all familiar things, 420
 In flower that blooms, and bird that sings.
 And yet, dear heart! remembering thee,
 Am I not richer than of old?
 Safe in thy immortality,
 What change can reach the wealth I
 hold? 425
 What chance can mar the pearl and
 gold
 Thy love hath left in trust with me?
 And while in life's late afternoon,
 Where cool and long the shadows grow,
 I walk to meet the night that soon 430
 Shall shape and shadow overflow,
 I cannot feel that thou art far,
 Since near at need the angels are;
 And when the sunset gates unbar,
 Shall I not see thee waiting stand, 435
 And, white against the evening star,
 The welcome of thy beckoning hand!

Brisk wielder of the birch and rule,
 The master of the district school⁶⁹
 Held at the fire his favored place, 440
 Its warm glow lit a laughing face
 Fresh-hued and fair, where scarce appeared
 The uncertain prophecy of beard.
 He teased the mitten-blinded cat,
 Played cross-pins on my uncle's hat, 445
 Sang songs, and told us what befalls
 In classic Dartmouth's college halls.
 Born the wild Northern hills among,
 From whence his yeoman father wrung
 By patient toil subsistence scant, 450
 Not competence and yet not want,
 He early gained the power to pay
 His cheerful, self-reliant way;

Could doff at ease his scholar's gown
 To peddle wares from town to town ; 455
 Or through the long vacation's reach
 In lonely lowland districts teach,
 Where all the droll experience found
 At stranger hearths in boarding round.
 The moonlit skater's keen delight, 460
 The sleigh-drive through the frosty night,
 The rustic party, with its rough
 Accompaniment of blind-man's-buff,
 And whirling-plate, and forfeits paid,
 His winter task a pastime made. 465
 Happy the snow-locked homes wherein
 He tuned his merry violin,
 Or played the athlete in the barn,
 Or held the good dame's winding-yarn,
 Or mirth-provoking versions told 470
 Of classic legends rare and old,
 Wherein the scenes of Greece and Rome
 Had all the commonplace of home,
 And little seemed at best the odds
 'Twixt Yankee peddlers and old gods ; 475
 Where Pindus-born Arachthus took
 The guise of any grist-mill brook,
 And dread Olympus at his will
 Became a huckleberry hill.

A careless boy that night he seemed ; 480
 But at his desk he had the look
 And air of one who wisely schemed,
 And hostage from the future took
 In trained thought and lore of book.
 Large-brained, clear-eyed, of such as he Shall Freedom's young apostles be, 486
 Who, following in War's bloody trail,
 Shall every lingering wrong assail ;
 All chains from limb and spirit strike,
 Uplift the black and white alike ; 490
 Scatter before their swift advance
 The darkness and the ignorance,
 The pride, the lust, the squalid sloth,
 Which nurtured Treason's monstrous growth,
 Made murder pastime, and the hell 495
 Of prison-torture possible ;
 The cruel lie of caste refute,
 Old forms remould, and substitute
 For Slavery's lash the freeman's will,
 For blind routine, wise-handed skill ; 500
 A school-house plant on every hill,

Stretching in radiate nerve-lines thence
 The quick wires of intelligence ;
 Till North and South together brought
 Shall own the same electric thought, 505
 In peace a common flag salute,
 And, side by side in labor's free
 And unresentful rivalry,
 Harvest the fields wherein they fought.

Another guest that winter night⁷⁰ 510
 Flashed back from lustrous eyes the light.
 Unmarked by time, and yet not young,
 The honeyed music of her tongue
 And words of meekness scarcely told
 A nature passionate and bold, 515
 Strong, self-concentred, spurning guide,
 Its milder features dwarfed beside
 Her unbent will's majestic pride.
 She sat among us, at the best,
 A not unfear'd, half-welcome guest, 520
 Rebuking with her cultured phrase
 Our homeliness of words and ways.
 A certain pard-like, treacherous grace Swayed the lithe limbs and dropped the lash,
 Lent the white teeth their dazzling
 flash ; 525

And under low brows, black with night,
 Rayed out at times a dangerous light ;
 The sharp heat-lightnings of her face
 Presaging ill to him whom Fate
 Condemned to share her love or hate. 530
 A woman tropical, intense
 In thought and act, in soul and sense,
 She blended in a like degree
 The vixen and the devotee,
 Revealing with each freak or feint 535
 The temper of Petruchio's Kate,
 The raptures of Siena's saint.
 Her tapering hand and rounded wrist
 Had facile power to form a fist ;
 The warm, dark languish of her eyes 540
 Was never safe from wrath's surprise.
 Brows saintly calm and lips devout
 Knew every change of scowl and pout ;
 And the sweet voice had notes more high
 And shrill for social battle-cry. 545

Since then what old cathedral town
 Has missed her pilgrim staff and gown,
 What convent-gate has held its lock
 Against the challenge of her knock ?

Through Smyrna's plague-lushed thoroughfares, 550
Up sea-set Malta's rocky stairs,
Gray olive slopes of hills that hem
The tombs and shrines, Jerusalem,
Or startling on her desert throne
The crazy Queen of Lebanon ⁷¹ 555
With claims fantastic as her own,
Her tireless feet have held their way;
And still, unrestful, bowed, and gray,
She watches under Eastern skies, 559
With hope each day renewed and fresh,
The Lord's quick coming in the flesh,
Whereof she dreams and prophecies!

Where'er her troubled path may be,
The Lord's sweet pity with her go!
The outward wayward life we see, 565
The hidden springs we may not know.
Nor is it given us to discern
What threads the fatal sisters spun,
Through what ancestral years has run
The sorrow with the woman born, 570
What forged her cruel chain of moods,
What set her feet in solitudes,
And held the love within her mute,
What mingled madness in the blood,
A life-long discord and annoy, 575
Water of tears with oil of joy,
And hid within the folded bud
Perversities of flower and fruit.
It is not ours to separate
The tangled skein of will and fate, 580
To show what metes and bounds should stand
Upon the soul's debatable land,
And between choice and Providence
Divide the circle of events;
But He who knows our frame is just, 585
Merciful and compassionate,
And full of sweet assurances
And hope for all the language is,
That He remembereth we are dust!

At last the great logs, crumbling low, 590
Sent out a dull and duller glow,
The bull's-eye watch that hung in view,
Ticking its weary circuit through,
Pointed with mutely warning sign
Its black hand to the hour of nine, 595
That sign the pleasant circle broke:
My uncle ceased his pipe to smoke,

Knocked from its bowl the refuse gray,
And laid it tenderly away;
Then roused himself to safely cover 600
The dull red brands with ashes over.
And while, with care, our mother laid
The work aside, her steps she stayed
One moment, seeking to express
Her grateful sense of happiness 605
For food and shelter, warmth and health,
And love's contentment more than wealth,
With simple wishes (not the weak,
Vain prayers which no fulfilment seek,
But such as warm the generous heart, 610
O'er-prompt to do with Heaven its part)
That none might lack, that bitter night,
For bread and clothing, warmth and light.

Within our beds awhile we heard
The wind that round the gables roared,
With now and then a ruder shock, 616
Which made our very bedsteads rock.
We heard the loosened clapboards tost,
The board-nails snapping in the frost;
And on us, through the unplastered wall,
Felt the light sifted snow-flakes fall. 621
But sleep stole on, as sleep will do
When hearts are light and life is new;
Faint and more faint the murmurs grew,
Till in the summer-land of dreams 625
They softened to the sound of streams,
Low stir of leaves, and dip of oars,
And lapsing waves on quiet shores.

Next morn we wakened with the shout
Of merry voices high and clear; 630
And saw the teamsters drawing near
To break the drifted highways out.
Down the long hillside treading slow
We saw the half-buried oxen go,
Shaking the snow from heads uptost, 635
Their straining nostrils white with frost.
Before our door the straggling train
Drew up, an added team to gain.
The elders threshed their hands a-cold,
Passed, with the cider-mug, their jokes
From lip to lip; the younger folks 641
Down the loose snow-banks, wrestling,
rolled,
Then toiled again the cavalcade
O'er windy hill, through clogged ravine,
And woodland paths that wound
between 645

Low drooping pine-boughs winter-weighed.

From every barn a team afoot,
At every house a new recruit,
Where, drawn by Nature's subtlest law,
Haply the watchful young men saw 650
Sweet doorway pictures of the curls
And curious eyes of merry girls,
Lifting their hands in mock defence
Against the snow-ball's compliments,
And reading in each missive tost 655
The charm with Eden never lost.

We heard once more the sleigh-bells' sound;

And, following where the teamsters led,

The wise old Doctor went his round,
Just pausing at our door to say, 660
In the brief autocratic way
Of one who, prompt at Duty's call,
Was free to urge her claim on all,

That some poor neighbor sick abed
At night our mother's aid would need. 665
For, one in generous thought and deed,

What mattered in the sufferer's sight

The Quaker matron's inward light,
The Doctor's mail of Calvin's creed? 670
All hearts confess the saints elect

Who, twain in faith, in love agree,
And melt not in an acid sect
The Christian pearl of charity!

So days went on: a week had passed
Since the great world was heard from last. 675

The Almanac we studied o'er,
Read and re-read our little store
Of books and pamphlets, scarce a score;
One harmless novel, mostly hid
From younger eyes, a book forbid, 680
And poetry, (or good or bad,
A single book was all we had,)

Where Ellwood's meek, drab-skirted Muse,

A stranger to the heathen Nine,
Sang, with a somewhat nasal whine, 685

The wars of David and the Jews.
At last the floundering carrier bore
The village paper to our door.

Lo! broadening outward as we read,
To warmer zones the horizon spread; 690

In panoramic length unrolled
We saw the marvels that it told.
Before us passed the painted Creeks,
And daft McGregor on his raids
In Costa Rica's everglades. 695

And up Taygetos winding slow
Rode Ypsilanti's Mainote Greeks,
A Turk's head at each saddle-bow!
Welcome to us its week-old news,
Its corner for the rustic Muse, 700

Its monthly gauge of snow and rain,
Its record, mingling in a breath
The wedding bell and dirge of death:
Jest, anecdote, and love-lorn tale,
The latest culprit sent to jail; 705
Its hue and cry of stolen and lost,
Its vendue sales and goods at cost,

And traffic calling loud for gain.
We felt the stir of hall and street,
The pulse of life that round us beat; 710
The chill embargo of the snow
Was melted in the genial glow;
Wide swung again our ice-locked door,
And all the world was ours once more!

Clasp, Angel of the backward look 715
And folded wings of ashen gray
And voice of echoes far away,
The brazen covers of thy book;

The weird palimpsest old and vast,
Wherein thou hid'st the spectral past; 720
Where, closely mingling, pale and glow

The characters of joy and woe;
The monographs of outlived years,
Or smile-illumed or dim with tears, 724

Green hills of life that slope to death,
And haunts of home, whose vistaed trees
Shade off to mournful cypresses

With the white amaranths underneath.
Even while I look, I can but heed
The restless sands' incessant fall, 730

Importunate hours that hours succeed,
Each clamorous with its own sharp need,

And duty keeping pace with all.
Shut down and clasp the heavy lids;
I hear again the voice that bids 735

The dreamer leave his dream midway
For larger hopes and graver fears:
Life greatens in these later years,
The century's aloe flowers to-day!

Yet, haply, in some lull of life, 740
 Some Truce of God which breaks its strife,
 The worldling's eyes shall gather dew,
 Dreaming in throngful city ways
 Of winter joys his boyhood knew ;
 And dear and early friends—the few 745
 Who yet remain—shall pause to view
 These Flemish pictures of old days ;⁷²
 Sit with me by the homestead hearth,
 And stretch the hands of memory forth
 To warm them at the wood-fire's blaze !
 And thanks untraced to lips unknown 751
 Shall greet me like the odors blown
 From unseen meadows newly mown,
 Or lilies floating in some pond,
 Wood-fringed, the wayside gaze beyond ;
 The traveller owns the grateful sense 756
 Of sweetness near, he knows not whence,
 And, pausing, takes with forehead bare
 The benediction of the air.

MY TRIUMPH.

THE autumn-time has come ;
 On woods that dream of bloom,
 And over purpling vines,
 The low sun fainter shines.

The aster-flower is failing, 5
 The hazel's gold is paling ;
 Yet overhead more near
 The eternal stars appear ! 4

And present gratitude 10
 Insures the future's good,
 And for the things I see
 I trust the things to be ;

That in the paths untrod,
 And the long days of God,
 My feet shall still be led, 15
 My heart be comforted.

O living friends who love me !
 O dear ones gone above me !
 Careless of other fame,
 I leave to you my name. 20

Hide it from idle praises,
 Save it from evil phrases :
 Why, when dear lips that spake it
 Are dumb, should strangers wake it ?

Let the thick curtain fall ; 25
 I better know than all
 How little I have gained,
 How vast the unattained.

Not by the page word-painted
 Let life be banned or sainted : 30
 Deeper than written scroll
 The colors of the soul.

Sweeter than any sung
 My songs that found no tongue ;
 Nobler than any fact 35
 My wish that failed of act.

Others shall sing the song,
 Others shall right the wrong,—
 Finish what I begin,
 And all I fail of win. 40

What matter, I or they ?
 Mine or another's day,
 So the right word be said
 And life the sweeter made ?

Hail to the coming singers ! 45
 Hail to the brave light-bringers !
 Forward I reach and share
 All that they sing and dare.

The airs of heaven blow o'er me ;
 A glory shines before me 50
 Of what mankind shall be,—
 Pure, generous, brave, and free.

A dream of man and woman
 Diviner but still human,
 Solving the riddle old, 55
 Shaping the Age of Gold !

The love of God and neighbor ;
 An equal-handed labor ;
 The richer life, where beauty
 Walks hand in hand with duty. 60

Ring, bells in unrequited steeples,
 The joy of unborn peoples !
 Sound, trumpets far off blown,
 Your triumph is my own !

Parcel and part of all,
I keep the festival,
Fore-reach the good to be,
And share the victory.

I feel the earth move sunward,
I join the great march onward,
And take, by faith, while living,
My freehold of thanksgiving.

IN SCHOOL-DAYS.

STILL sits the school-house by the road,
A ragged beggar sleeping ;
Around it still the sumachs grow,
And blackberry-vines are creeping.

Within, the master's desk is seen,
Deep scarred by raps official ;
The warping floor, the battered seats,
The jack-knife's carved initial ;

The charcoal frescos on its wall ;
Its door's worn sill, betraying
The feet that, creeping slow to school,
Went storming out to playing !

Long years ago a winter sun
Shone over it at setting ;
Lit up its western window-panes,
And low eaves' icy fretting.

It touched the tangled golden curls,
And brown eyes full of grieving,
Of one who still her steps delayed
When all the school were leaving.

For near her stood the little boy
Her childish favor singled :
His cap pulled low upon a face
Where pride and shame were mingled.

Pushing with restless feet the snow
To right and left, he lingered ;—
As restlessly her tiny hands
The blue-checked apron fingered.

He saw her lift her eyes ; he felt
The soft hand's light caressing,
And heard the tremble of her voice,
As if a fault confessing.

65 'I'm sorry that I spelt the word :
I hate to go above you,
Because,'—the brown eyes lower fell,— 35
'Because, you see, I love you !'

70 Still memory to a gray-haired man
That sweet child-face is showing.
Dear girl ! the grasses on her grave
Have forty years been growing ! 40

He lives to learn, in life's hard school,
How few who pass above him
Lament their triumph and his loss,
Like her,— because they love him.

1870.

MY BIRTHDAY.

5 BENEATH the moonlight and the snow
Lies dead my latest year ;
The winter winds are wailing low
Its dirges in my ear.

I grieve not with the moaning wind 5
As if a loss befell ;
Before me, even as behind,
God is, and all is well !

His light shines on me from above,
His low voice speaks within, — 10
The patience of immortal love
Outwearying mortal sin.

Not mindless of the growing years
Of care and loss and pain,
My eyes are wet with thankful tears 15
For blessings which remain.

If dim the gold of life has grown,
I will not count it dross,
Nor turn from treasures still my own
To sigh for lack and loss. 20

25 The years no charm from Nature take ;
As sweet her voices call,
As beautiful her mornings break,
As fair her evenings fall.

30 Love watches o'er my quiet ways, 25
Kind voices speak my name,
And lips that find it hard to praise
Are slow, at least, to blame.

How softly ebb the tides of will !
How fields, once lost or won,
Now lie behind me green and still
Beneath a level sun !

How hushed the hiss of party hate,
The clamor of the throng !
How old, harsh voices of debate
Flow into rhythmic song !

Methinks the spirit's temper grows
Too soft in this still air ;
Somewhat the restful heart foregoes
Of needed watch and prayer.

The bark by tempest vainly tossed
May founder in the calm,
And he who braved the polar frost
Faint by the isles of balm.

Better than self-indulgent years
The outflung heart of youth,
Than pleasant songs in idle ears
The tumult of the truth.

Rest for the weary hands is good,
And love for hearts that pine,
But let the manly habitude
Of upright souls be mine.

Let winds that blow from heaven refresh,
Dear Lord, the languid air ;
And let the weakness of the flesh
Thy strength of spirit share.

And, if the eye must fail of light,
The ear forget to hear,
Make clearer still the spirit's sight,
More fine the inward ear !

Be near me in mine hours of need
To soothe, or cheer, or warn,
And down these slopes of sunset lead
As up the hills of morn !

1871.

RED RIDING-HOOD.

ON the wide lawn the snow lay deep,
Ridged o'er with many a drifted heap ;
The wind that through the pine-trees sung
The naked elm-boughs tossed and swung ;
While, through the window, frosty-
starred,

Against the sunset purple barred,
We saw the sombre crow flap by,
The hawk's gray fleck along the sky,
The crested blue-jay flitting swift,
The squirrel poisoning on the drift,
Erect, alert, his broad gray tail
Set to the north wind like a sail.

It came to pass, our little lass,
With flattened face against the glass,
And eyes in which the tender dew
Of pity shone, stood gazing through
The narrow space her rosy lips
Had melted from the frost's eclipse :
'Oh, see,' she cried, 'the poor bluejays !

What is it that the black crow says ?
The squirrel lifts his little legs
Because he has no hands, and begs ;
He's asking for my nuts, I know :
May I not feed them on the snow ?'

Half lost within her boots, her head
Warm-sheltered in her hood of red,
Her plaid skirt close about her drawn,
She floundered down the wintry lawn ;
Now struggling through the misty veil
Blown round her by the shrieking gale ;
Now sinking in a drift so low
Her scarlet hood could scarcely show
Its dash of color on the snow.

She dropped for bird and beast forlorn
Her little store of nuts and corn,
And thus her timid guests bespoke :
'Come, squirrel, from your hollow oak,— Come, black old crow,—come, poor blue-
jay,

Before your supper's blown away !
Don't be afraid, we all are good ;
And I'm mamma's Red Riding-Hood !'

O Thou whose care is over all,
Who heedest even the sparrow's fall,
Keep in the little maiden's breast
The pity which is now its guest !
Let not her cultured years make less
The childhood charm of tenderness,
But let her feel as well as know,
Nor harder with her polish grow !
Unmoved by sentimental grief
That wails along some printed leaf,

But, prompt with kindly word and deed
To own the claims of all who need,
Let the grown woman's self make good
The promise of Red Riding-Hood ! 55

RESPONSE.

On the occasion of my seventieth birthday, in 1877, I was the recipient of many tokens of esteem. The publishers of the Atlantic Monthly gave a dinner in my name, and the editor of The Literary World gathered in his paper many affectionate messages from my associates in literature and the cause of human progress. The lines which follow were written in acknowledgment.

BESIDE that milestone where the level sun,
Nigh unto setting, sheds his last, low rays

On word and work irrevocably done,
Life's blending threads of good and ill
outspun,

I hear, O friends ! your words of cheer and praise, 5
Half doubtful if myself or otherwise.

Like him who, in the old Arabian joke,
A beggar slept and crown'd Caliph woke.

Thanks not the less. With not unglad
surprise

I see my life-work through your partial
eyes ; 10

Assured, in giving to my home-taught songs

A higher value than of right belongs,
You do but read between the written
lines

The finer grace of unfulfilled designs.

AT EVENTIDE.

POOR and inadequate the shadow-play
Of gain and loss, of waking and of
dream,

Against life's solemn background needs must seem

At this late hour. Yet, not unthankfully,

I call to mind the fountains by the
way, 5

The breath of flowers, the bird-song on
the spray,

Dear friends, sweet human loves, the joy of giving

And of receiving, the great boon of living

In grand historic years when Liberty
Had need of word and work, quick sympathies 10

For all who fail and suffer, song's
relief,

Nature's uncloying loveliness ; and chief,
The kind restraining hand of Providence,

The inward witness, the assuring sense
Of an Eternal Good which overlies 15

The sorrow of the world, Love which outlives

All sin and wrong, Compassion which
forgives

To the uttermost, and Justice whose clear
eyes

Through lapse and failure look to the intent,

And judge our frailty by the life we meant. 20

VOYAGE OF THE JETTIE.

The picturesquely situated Wayside Inn at West Ossipee, N. H., is now in ashes ; and to its former guests these somewhat careless rhymes may be a not unwelcome reminder of pleasant summers and autumns on the banks of the Bearcamp and Chocoma. To the author himself they have a special interest from the fact that they were written, or improvised, under the eye and for the amusement of a beloved invalid friend, whose last earthly sunsets faded from the mountain ranges of Ossipee and Sandwich.

A SHALLOW stream, from fountains
Deep in the Sandwich mountains,
Ran lakeward Bearcamp River ;
And between its flood-torn shores,
Sped by sail or urged by oars, 5
No keel had vexed it ever.

Alone the dead trees yielding
To the dull axe Time is wielding,
The shy mink and the otter,
And golden leaves and red, 10
By countless autumns shed,
Had floated down its water.

From the gray rocks of Cape Ann,
Came a skilled seafaring man,
With his dory, to the right place ; 15
Over hill and plain he brought her,
Where the boatless Bearcamp water
Comes winding down from White-Face.

Quoth the skipper : ' Ere she floats forth,
I'm sure my pretty boat's worth, 20
At least, a name as pretty.'
On her painted side he wrote it,
And the flag that o'er her floated
Bore aloft the name of Jettie.

On a radiant morn of summer, 25
Elder guest and latest comer
Saw her wed the Bearcamp water ;
Heard the name the skipper gave her,
And the answer to the favor
From the Bay State's graceful daughter.⁷³

Then a singer, richly gifted, 31
Her charmed voice uplifted ;
And the wood-thrush and song-sparrow
Listened, dumb with envious pain,
To the clear and sweet refrain 35
Whose notes they could not borrow.

Then the skipper plied his oar,
And from off the shelving shore,
Glided out the strange explorer ;
Floating on, she knew not whither, — 40
The tawny sands beneath her,
The great hills watching o'er her.

On, where the stream flows quiet
As the meadows' margins by it,
Or widens out to borrow a 45
New life from that wild water,
The mountain giant's daughter,
The pine-besung Chocorua.

Or, mid the tangling cumber
And pack of mountain lumber 50
That spring floods downward force,

Over sunken snag, and bar
Where the grating shallows are,
The good boat held her course.

Under the pine-dark highlands, 55
Around the vine-hung islands,
She ploughed her crooked furrow ;
And her rippling and her lurches
Scared the river eels and perches, 60
And the musk-rat in his burrow.

Every sober clam below her,
Every sage and grave pearl-grower,
Shut his rusty valves the tighter ;
Crow called to crow complaining, 65
And old tortoises sat craning
Their leathern necks to sight her.

So, to where the still lake glasses
The misty mountain masses
Rising dim and distant northward,
And, with faint-drawn shadow pictures,
Low shores, and dead pine spectres, 71
Blends the skyward and the earthward,

On she glided, overladen,
With merry man and maiden
Sending back their song and laughter, —
While, perchance, a phantom crew, 76
In a ghostly birch canoe,
Paddled dumb and swiftly after !

And the bear on Ossipee
Climbed the topmost crag to see 80
The strange thing drifting under ;
And, through the haze of August,
Passaconaway and Paugus
Looked down in sleepy wonder.

All the pines that o'er her hung 85
In mimic sea-tones sung
The song familiar to her ;
And the maples leaned to screen her,
And the meadow-grass seemed greener,
And the breeze more soft to woo her. 90

The lone stream mystery-haunted
To her the freedom granted
To scan its every feature,
Till new and old were blended,
And round them both extended 95
The loving arms of Nature.

Of these hills the little vessel
Henceforth is part and parcel ;
And on Bearcamp shall her log
Be kept, as if by George's 100
Or Grand Menan, the surges
Tossed her skipper through the fog.

And I, who, half in sadness,
Recall the morning gladness
Of life, at evening time,
By chance, onlooking idly,
Apart from all so widely,
Have set her voyage to rhyme.

Dies now the gay persistence
Of song and laugh, in distance ;
Alone with me remaining
The stream, the quiet meadow,
The hills in shine and shadow,
The sombre pines complaining.

And, musing here, I dream
Of voyagers on a stream
From whence is no returning,
Under sealed orders going,
Looking forward little knowing,
Looking back with idle yearning. 120

And I pray that every venture
The port of peace may enter,
That, safe from snag and fall
And siren-haunted islet,
And rock, the Unseen Pilot
May guide us one and all.

MY TRUST.

A PICTURE memory brings to me :
I look across the years and see
Myself beside my mother's knee.

I feel her gentle hand restrain
My selfish moods, and know again 5
A child's blind sense of wrong and pain.

But wiser now, a man gray grown,
My childhood's needs are better known,
My mother's chastening love I own.

Gray grown, but in our Father's sight 10
A child still groping for the light
To read His works and ways aright.

I wait, in His good time to see
That as my mother dealt with me
So with His children dealeth He. 15

I bow myself beneath His hand :
That pain itself was wisely planned
I feel, and partly understand.

The joy that comes in sorrow's guise,
The sweet pains of self-sacrifice, 20
I would not have them otherwise.

And what were life and death if sin
Knew not the dread rebuke within,
The pang of merciful discipline ?

Not with thy proud despair of old, 25
Crowned stoic of Rome's noblest mould !
Pleasure and pain alike I hold.

I suffer with no vain pretence
Of triumph over flesh and sense,
Yet trust the grievous providence, 30

How dark soe'er it seems, may tend,
By ways I cannot comprehend,
To some unguessed benignant end ;

That every loss and lapse may gain
The clear-ared heights by steps of pain,
And never cross is borne in vain. 35

A NAME.

Addressed to my grand-nephew, Greenleaf
Whittier Pickard. Jonathan Greenleaf, in A Genealogy of the Greenleaf Family, says briefly :
'From all that can be gathered, it is believed that the ancestors of the Greenleaf family were Huguenots, who left France on account of their religious principles some time in the course of the sixteenth century, and settled in England.
The name was probably translated from the French Feuillevert.'

THE name the Gallic exile bore,
St. Malo ! from thy ancient mart,
Became upon our Western shore
Greenleaf for Feuillevert.

A name to hear in soft accord 5
Of leaves by light winds overrun,
Or read, upon the greening sward
Of May, in shade and sun.

The name my infant ear first heard
Breathed softly with a mother's kiss ; 10
His mother's own, no tenderer word
My father spake than this.

No child have I to bear it on ;
Be thou its keeper ; let it take
From gifts well used and duty done 15
New beauty for thy sake.

The fair ideals that outran
My halting footsteps seek and find—
The flawless symmetry of man,
The poise of heart and mind. 20

Stand firmly where I felt the sway
Of every wing that fancy flew,
See clearly where I groped my way,
Nor real from seeming knew.

And wisely choose, and bravely hold 25
Thy faith unswerved by cross or crown,
Like the stout Huguenot of old
Whose name to thee comes down.

As Marot's songs made glad the heart
Of that lone exile, haply mine 30
May in life's heavy hours impart
Some strength and hope to thine.

Yet when did Age transfer to Youth
The hard-gained lessons of its day ?
Each lip must learn the taste of truth, 35
Each foot must feel its way.

We cannot hold the hands of choice
That touch or shun life's fateful keys ;
The whisper of the inward voice
Is more than homilies. 40

Dear boy ! for whom the flowers are born,
Stars shine, and happy song-birds sing,
What can my evening give to morn,
My winter to thy spring !

A life not void of pure intent, 45
With small desert of praise or blame,
The love I felt, the good I meant,
I leave thee with my name.
1880.

GREETING.

Originally prefixed to the volume, The King's Missive and other Poems. [Entitled there, The Prelude.]

I SPREAD a scanty board too late ;
The old-time guests for whom I wait
Come few and slow, methinks, to-day.
Ah ! who could hear my messages
Across the dim unsounded seas 5
On which so many have sailed away !

Come, then, old friends, who linger yet,
And let us meet, as we have met,
Once more beneath this low sunshine ;
And grateful for the good we've known,
The riddles solved, the ills outgrown, 11
Shake hands upon the border line.

The favor, asked too oft before,
From your indulgent ears, once more
I crave, and, if belated lays 15
To slower, feeblér measures move,
The silent sympathy of love
To me is dearer now than praise.

And ye, O younger friends, for whom
My hearth and heart keep open room, 20
Come smiling through the shadows long,
Be with me while the sun goes down,
And with your cheerful voices drown
The minor of my even-song,

For, equal through the day and night, 25
The wise Eternal oversight
And love and power and righteous will Remain : the law of destiny
The best for each and all must be,
And life its promise shall fulfil. 30

AN AUTOGRAPH.

I WRITE my name as one,
On sands by waves o'errun
Or winter's frosted pane,
Traces a record vain.

Oblivion's blankness claims 5
Wiser and better names,
And well my own may pass
As from the strand or glass.

Wash on, O waves of time ! Melt, noons, the frosty rime ! Welcome the shadow vast, The silence that shall last !	10	'To all who dumbly suffered, His tongue and pen he offered ; His life was not his own, Nor lived for self alone.	55
When I and all who know And love me vanish so, What harm to them or me Will the lost memory be ?	15	'Hater of din and riot He lived in days unquiet ; And, lover of all beauty, Trode the hard ways of duty.	60
If any words of mine, Through right of life divine, Remain, what matters it Whose hand the message writ ?	20	'He meant no wrong to any He sought the good of many, Yet knew both sin and folly, May God forgive him wholly !' 1882.
Why should the 'crown's quest' Sit on my worst or best ? Why should the showman claim The poor ghost of my name ?		ABRAM MORRISON.
Yet, as when dies a sound Its spectre lingers round, Haply my spent life will Leave some faint echo still.	25	'MIDST the men and things which will Haunt an old man's memory still, Drollest, quaintest of them all, With a boy's laugh I recall Good old Abram Morrison.	5
A whisper giving breath Of praise or blame to death, Soothing or saddening such As loved the living much.	30	When the Grist and Rolling Mill Ground and rumbled by Po Hill, And the old red school-house stood Midway in the Powow's flood, Here dwelt Abram Morrison.	10
Therefore with yearnings vain And fond I still would fain A kindly judgment seek, A tender thought bespeak.	35	From the Beach to far beyond Bear-Hill, Lion's Mouth and Pond, Marvellous to our tough old stock, Chips o' the Anglo-Saxon block, Seemed the Celtic Morrison.	15
And, while my words are read, Let this at least be said : 'Whate'er his life's defeatures, He loved his fellow-creatures.	40	Mudknock, Balmawhistle, all Only knew the Yankee drawl, Never brogue was heard till when, Foremost of his countrymen, Hither came Friend Morrison ;	20
'If, of the Law's stone table, To hold he scarce was able The first great precept fast, He kept for man the last.		Yankee born, of alien blood, Kin of his had well withstood Pope and King with pike and ball Under Derry's leaguered wall, As became the Morrisons.	25
'Through mortal lapse and dulness What lacks the Eternal Fulness, If still our weakness can Love Him in loving man ?	45	Wandering down from Nutfield woods With his household and his goods, Never was it clearly told How within our quiet fold Came to be a Morrison.	30
'Age brought him no despairing Of the world's future faring ; In human nature still He found more good than ill.	50

Once a soldier, blame him not That the Quaker he forgot, When, to think of battles won, And the red-coats on the run, Laughed aloud Friend Morrison.	35	When, on calm and fair First Days, Rattled down our one-horse chaise, Through the blossomed apple-boughs To the old brown meeting-house, There was Abram Morrison.	80
From gray Lewis over sea Bore his sires their family tree, On the rugged boughs of it Grafting Irish mirth and wit, And the brogue of Morrison.	40	Underneath his hat's broad brim Peered the queer old face of him ; And with Irish jauntiness Swung the coat-tails of the dress Worn by Abram Morrison.	85
Half a genius, quick to plan, Blundering like an Irishman, But with canny shrewdness lent By his far-off Scotch descent, Such was Abram Morrison.	45	Still, in memory, on his feet, Leaning o'er the elders' seat, Mingling with a solemn drone, Celtic accents all his own, Rises Abram Morrison.	90
Back and forth to daily meals, Rode his cherished pig on wheels, And to all who came to see : 'Aisier for the pig an' me, Sure it is,' said Morrison.	50	'Don't,' he's pleading, 'don't ye go, Dear young friends, to sight and show ; Don't run after elephants, Learned pigs and presidents And the likes !' said Morrison.	95
Simple-hearted, boy o'er-grown, With a humor quite his own, Of our sober-stepping ways, Speech and look and cautious phrase, Slow to learn was Morrison.	55	On his well-worn theme intent, Simple, child-like, innocent, Heaven forgive the half-checked smile Of our careless boyhood, while Listening to Friend Morrison !	100
Much we loved his stories told Of a country strange and old, Where the fairies danced till dawn, And the goblin Leprecaun Looked, we thought, like Morrison.	60	We have learned in later days Truth may speak in simplest phrase ; That the man is not the less For quaint ways and home-spun dress, Thanks to Abram Morrison !	105
Or wild tales of feud and fight, Witch and troll and second sight Whispered still where Stornoway Looks across its stormy bay, Once the home of Morrissons.	65	Not to pander nor to please Come the needed homilies, With no lofty argument Is the fitting message sent, Through such lips as Morrison's.	110
First was he to sing the praise Of the Powow's winding ways ; And our straggling village took City grandeur to the look Of its poet Morrison.	70	Dead and gone ! But while its track Powow keeps to Merrimac, While Po Hill is still on guard, Looking land and ocean ward, They shall tell of Morrison !	115
All his words have perished. Shame On the saddle-bags of Fame, That they bring not to our time One poor couplet of the rhyme Made by Abram Morrison !	75	After half a century's lapse, We are wiser now, perhaps, But we miss our streets amid Something which the past has hid, Lost with Abram Morrison.	120

Gone forever with the queer
 Characters of that old year !
 Now the many are as one ;
 Broken is the mould that run
 Men like Abram Morrison. 125

A LEGACY.

FRIEND of my many years !
 When the great silence falls, at last, on me,
 Let me not leave, to pain and sadden thee,
 A memory of tears,
 But pleasant thoughts alone 5
 Of one who was thy friendship's honored guest
 And drank the wine of consolation pressed
 From sorrows of thy own.

I leave with thee a sense
 Of hands upheld and trials rendered
 less— 10
 The unselfish joy which is to helpfulness
 Its own great recompense ;

The knowledge that from thine,
 As from the garments of the Master,
 stole
 Calmness and strength, the virtue which makes whole 15
 And heals without a sign ;

Yea more, the assurance strong
 That love, which fails of perfect utterance
 here,
 Lives on to fill the heavenly atmosphere
 With its immortal song. 20

Religious Poems

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

WHERE Time the measure of his hours
By changeful bud and blossom keeps,
And, like a young bride crowned with
flowers,

Fair Shiraz in her garden sleeps ;

Where, to her poet's turban stone, 5
The Spring her gift of flowers imparts, Less sweet than those his thoughts have
sown

In the warm soil of Persian hearts :

There sat the stranger, where the shade
Of scattered date-trees thinly lay, 10
While in the hot clear heaven delayed
The long and still and weary day.

Strange trees and fruits above him hung,
Strange odors filled the sultry air,
Strange birds upon the branches swung, 15
Strange insect voices murmured there.

And strange bright blossoms shone
around,

Turned sunward from the shadowy
bowers,

As if the Gheber's soul had found
A fitting home in Iran's flowers. 20

Whate'er he saw, whate'er he heard,
Awakened feelings new and sad,—
No Christian garb, nor Christian word,
Nor church with Sabbath-bell chimes glad,

But Moslem graves, with turban stones, 25
And mosque-spires gleaming white, in
view,

And graybeard Mollahs in low tones
Chanting their Koran service through.

The flowers which smiled on either hand,
Like tempting fiends, were such as
they 30

Which once, o'er all that Eastern land,
As gifts on demon altars lay.

As if the burning eye of Baal
The servant of his Conqueror knew,
From skies which knew no cloudy veil, 35
The Sun's hot glances smote him
through.

'Ah me !' the lonely stranger said,
'The hope which led my footsteps on,
And light from heaven around them shed,
O'er weary wave and waste, is gone ! 40

'Where are the harvest fields all white,
For Truth to thrust her sickle in ?
Where flock the souls, like doves in flight,
From the dark hiding-place of sin ?

'A silent horror broods o'er all,— 45
The burden of a hateful spell,—
The very flowers around recall
The hoary magi's rites of hell !

'And what am I, o'er such a land
The banner of the Cross to bear ? 50
Dear Lord, uphold me with Thy hand,
Thy strength with human weakness
share !'

He ceased ; for at his very feet
 In mild rebuke a floweret smiled ;
 How thrilled his sinking heart to greet 55
 The Star-flower of the Virgin's child !

Sown by some wandering Frank, it drew
 Its life from alien air and earth,
 And told to Paynim sun and dew
 The story of the Saviour's birth. 60

From scorching beams, in kindly mood,
 The Persian plants its beauty screened,
 And on its pagan sisterhood,
 In love, the Christian floweret leaned.

With tears of joy the wanderer felt 65
 The darkness of his long despair
 Before that hallowed symbol melt,
 Which God's dear love had nurtured
 there.

From Nature's face, that simple flower
 The lines of sin and sadness swept ; 70
 And Magian pile and Paynim bower
 In peace like that of Eden slept.

Each Moslem tomb, and cypress old,
 Looked holy through the sunset air ;
 And, angel-like, the Muezzin told 75
 From tower and mosque the hour of
 prayer.

With cheerful steps, the morrow's dawn
 From Shiraz saw the stranger part ;
 The Star-flower of the Virgin-Born
 Still blooming in his hopeful heart ! 80

THE CITIES OF THE PLAIN.

'GET ye up from the wrath of God's terrible day !
 Ungirded, unsandalled, arise and away !
 'Tis the vintage of blood, 'tis the fulness
 of time,
 And vengeance shall gather the harvest of crime !'

The warning was spoken—the righteous had gone, 5
 And the proud ones of Sodom were feasting alone ;
 All gay was the banquet—the revel was
 long,
 With the pouring of wine and the breathing of song.

'T was an evening of beauty ; the air was
 perfume,

The earth was all greenness, the trees were all bloom ; 10
 And softly the delicate viol was heard,
 Like the murmur of love or the notes of
 a bird.

And beautiful maidens moved down in the dance,
 With the magic of motion and sunshine
 of glance ;
 And white arms wreathed lightly, and tresses fell free 15
 As the plumage of birds in some tropical
 tree.

Where the shrines of foul idols were lighted on high,
 And wantonness tempted the lust of the
 eye ;
 Midst rites of obscenity, strange, loath-
 some, abhorred,
 The blasphemer scoffed at the name of the
 Lord. 20

Hark ! the growl of the thunder,—the quaking of earth !
 Woe, woe to the worship, and woe to the
 mirth !
 The black sky has opened ; there's flame
 in the air :
 The red arm of vengeance is lifted and
 bare !

Then the shriek of the dying rose wild where the song 25
 And the low tone of love had been whispered along ;
 For the fierce flames went lightly o'er palace and bower,
 Like the red tongues of demons, to blast and devour !

Down, down on the fallen the red ruin
 rained,
 And the reveller sank with his wine-cup
 undrained ; 30
 The foot of the dancer, the music's loved
 thrill,
 And the shout and the laughter grew suddenly still.

The last throb of anguish was fearfully
given ;
The last eye glared forth in its madness
on Heaven !
The last groan of horror rose wildly and
vain, 35
And death brooded over the pride of the Plain !

THE CALL OF THE CHRISTIAN.

Nor always as the whirlwind's rush
On Horeb's mount of fear,
Nor always as the burning bush
To Midian's shepherd seer,
Nor as the awful voice which came 5
To Israel's prophet bards,
Nor as the tongues of cloven flame,
Nor gift of fearful words, -

Not always thus, with outward sign
Of fire or voice from Heaven,
The message of a truth divine,
'The call of God is given !
Awaking in the human heart
Love for the true and right,—
Zeal for the Christian's better part, 15
Strength for the Christian's fight.

Nor unto manhood's heart alone
The holy influence steals :
Warm with a rapture not its own,
The heart of woman feels ! 20
As she who by Samaria's wall
The Saviour's errand sought,—
As those who with the fervent Paul
And meek Aquila wrought :

Or those meek ones whose martyrdom 25
Rome's gathered grandeur saw :
Or those who in their Alpine home
Braved the Crusader's war,
When the green Vaudois, trembling,
heard,
Through all its vales of death, 30
The martyr's song of triumph poured
From woman's failing breath.

And gently, by a thousand things
Which o'er our spirits pass,
Like breezes o'er the harp's fine strings, 35
Or vapors o'er a glass,
Leaving their token strange and new
Of music or of shade,
The summons to the right and true
And merciful is made. 40

Oh, then, if gleams of truth and light
Flash o'er thy waiting mind,
Unfolding to thy mental sight
The wants of human-kind ;
If, brooding over human grief, 45
The earnest wish is known
To soothe and gladden with relief
An anguish not thine own ;

Though heralded with naught of fear,
Or outward sign or show ; 50
Though only to the inward ear
It whispers soft and low ;
Though dropping, as the manna fell,
Unseen, yet from above,
Noiseless as dew-fall, heed it well,— 55
Thy Father's call of love !
1833.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

SUNLIGHT upon Judæa's hills !
And on the waves of Galilee ;
On Jordan's stream, and on the rills
That feed the dead and sleeping sea !
Most freshly from the green wood springs
The light breeze on its scented wings ; 6
And gayly quiver in the sun
The cedar tops of Lebanon !

A few more hours,— a change hath
come !
The sky is dark without a cloud ! 10
The shouts of wrath and joy are dumb,
And proud knees unto earth are bowed.
A change is on the hill of Death,
The helm'd watchers pant for breath,
And turn with wild and maniac eyes 15
From the dark scene of sacrifice !

That Sacrifice!—the death of Him,—
 The Christ of God, the holy One!
 Well may the conscious Heaven grow
 dim,
 And blacken the beholding Sun. 20
 The wonted light hath fled away,
 Night settles on the middle day,
 And earthquake from his caverned bed
 Is waking with a thrill of dread!

The dead are waking underneath! 25
 Their prison door is rent away!
 And, ghastly with the seal of death,
 They wander in the eye of day!
 The temple of the Cherubim,
 The House of God is cold and dim; 30
 A curse is on its trembling walls,
 Its mighty veil asunder falls!

Well may the cavern-depths of Earth
 Be shaken, and her mountains nod;
 Well may the sheeted dead come forth 35
 To see the suffering Son of God!
 Well may the temple-shrine grow dim,
 And shadows veil the Cherubim,
 When He, the chosen one of Heaven,
 A sacrifice for guilt is given! 40

And shall the sinful heart, alone,
 Behold unmoved the fearful hour,
 When Nature trembled on her throne,
 And Death resigned his iron power?
 Oh, shall the heart—whose sinfulness 45
 Gave keenness to His sore distress,
 And added to His tears of blood—
 Refuse its trembling gratitude!

PALESTINE.

BLEST land of Judæa! thrice hallowed of
 song,
 Where the holiest of memories pilgrim-like
 throng;
 In the shade of thy palms, by the shores
 of thy sea,
 On the hills of thy beauty, my heart is
 with thee.

With the eye of a spirit I look on that
 shore 5
 Where pilgrim and prophet have lingered
 before;
 With the glide of a spirit I traverse the sod
 Made bright by the steps of the angels of
 God.

Blue sea of the hills! in my spirit I hear Thy waters, Gennesaret, chime on my
 ear; 10
 Where the Lowly and Just with the people sat down,
 And thy spray on the dust of His sandals
 was thrown.

Beyond are Bethulia's mountains of
 green,
 And the desolate hills of the wild
 Gadarene;
 And I pause on the goat-crag of Tabor
 to see 15
 The gleam of thy waters, O dark Galilee!

Hark, a sound in the valley! where,
 swollen and strong,
 Thy river, O Kishon, is sweeping along;
 Where the Canaanite strove with Jehovah
 in vain,
 And thy torrent grew dark with the blood of the slain. 20

There down from his mountains stern
 Zebulon came,
 And Naphthali's stag, with his eyeballs
 of flame,
 And the chariots of Jabin rolled harm-
 lessly on,
 For the arm of the Lord was Abinoam's
 son!

There sleep the still rocks and the caverns which rang 25
 To the song which the beautiful prophetess sang,
 When the princes of Issachar stood by her side,
 And the shout of a host in its triumph
 replied.

Lo, Bethlehem's hill-site before me is seen, With the mountains around, and the valleys between; 30 There rested the shepherds of Judah, and there The song of the angels rose sweet on the air.	Not in clouds and in terrors, but gentle as when, In love and in meekness, He moved among men : And the voice which breathed peace to the waves of the sea 55 In the hush of my spirit would whisper to me !
And Bethany's palm-trees in beauty still throw Their shadows at noon on the ruins below ; But where are the sisters who hastened to greet 35 The lowly Redeemer, and sit at His feet ?	And what if my feet may not tread where He stood, Nor my ears hear the dashing of Galilee's flood, Nor my eyes see the cross which He bowed Him to bear, Nor my knees press Gethsemane's garden of prayer. 60
I tread where the twelve in their wayfar- ing trod ; I stand where they stood with the chosen of God— Where His blessing was heard and His lessons were taught, Where the blind were restored and the healing was wrought. 40	Yet, Loved of the Father, Thy Spirit is near To the meek, and the lowly, and penitent here ; And the voice of Thy love is the same even now As at Bethany's tomb or on Olivet's brow.
Oh, here with His flock the sad Wanderer came ; These hills He toiled over in grief are the same ; The founts where He drank by the way- side still flow, And the same airs are blowing which breathed on His brow !	Oh, the outward hath gone ! but in glory and power, 65 The spirit surviveth the things of an hour ; Unchanged, undecaying, its Pentecost flame On the heart's secret altar is burning the same !
And throned on her hill sits Jerusalem yet, But with dust on her forehead, and chains on her feet ; 46 For the crown of her pride to the mocker hath gone, And the holy Shechinah is dark where it shone.	1837.
But wherefore this dream of the earthly abode Of Humanity clothed in the brightness of God ? 50 Were my spirit but turned from the out- ward and dim, It could gaze, even now, on the presence of Him !	HYMNS. FROM THE FRENCH OF LAMARTINE. I. 'Encore un hymne, O ma lyre ! Un hymne pour le Seigneur, Un hymne dans mon délire, Un hymne dans mon bonheur.' One hymn more, O my lyre ! Praise to the God above, Of joy and life and love, Sweeping its strings of fire !

Oh, who the speed of bird and wind
 And sunbeam's glance will lend to me,
 That, soaring upward, I may find
 My resting-place and home in Thee?
 Thou, whom my soul, midst doubt and
 gloom, 5
 Adoreth with a fervent flame,— Mysterious spirit! unto whom
 Pertain nor sign nor name!

Swiftly my lyre's soft murmurs go
 Up from the cold and joyless earth, 10
 Back to the God who bade them flow,
 Whose moving spirit sent them forth.
 But as for me, O God! for me,
 The lowly creature of Thy will,
 Lingering and sad, I sigh to Thee, 15
 An earth-bound pilgrim still!

Was not my spirit born to shine
 Where yonder stars and suns are glowing?

To breathe with them the light divine
 From God's own holy altar flowing? 20
 To be, indeed, whate'er the soul
 In dreams hath thirsted for so long,—
 A portion of heaven's glorious whole
 Of loveliness and song?

Oh, watchers of the stars at night, 25
 Who breathe their fire, as we the air,—
 Suns, thunders, stars, and rays of light,
 Oh, say, is He, the Eternal, there?
 Bend there around His awful throne
 The seraph's glance, the angel's knee?
 Or are thy inmost depths His own, 31
 O wild and mighty sea?

Thoughts of my soul, how swift ye go!
 Swift as the eagle's glance of fire,
 Or arrows from the archer's bow, 35
 To the far aim of your desire!
 Thought after thought, ye thronging rise,
 Like spring-doves from the startled
 wood,
 Bearing like them your sacrifice
 Of music unto God! 40

And shall these thoughts of joy and love
 Come back again no more to me?
 Returning like the patriarch's dove
 Wing-weary from the eternal sea,

To bear within my longing arms 45
 The promise-bough of kindlier skies,
 Plucked from the green, immortal palms
 Which shadow Paradise?

All-moving spirit! freely forth
 At Thy command the strong wind goes:
 Its errand to the passive earth, 51
 Nor art can stay, nor strength oppose,
 Until it folds its weary wing
 Once more within the hand divine;
 So, weary from its wandering, 55
 My spirit turns to Thine!

Child of the sea, the mountain stream,
 From its dark caverns, hurries on,
 Ceaseless, by night and morning's beam,
 By evening's star and noontide's sun,
 Until at last it sinks to rest, 61
 O'erwearied, in the waiting sea,
 And moans upon its mother's breast,—
 So turns my soul to Thee!

O Thou who bidst the torrent flow, 65
 Who lendest wings unto the wind,—
 Mover of all things! where art Thou?
 Oh, whither shall I go to find
 The secret of Thy resting-place?
 Is there no holy wing for me, 70
 That, soaring, I may search the space
 Of highest heaven for Thee?

Oh, would I were as free to rise
 As leaves on autumn's whirlwind
 borne,—
 The arrowy light of sunset skies, 75
 Or sound, or ray, or star of morn,
 Which melts in heaven at twilight's close,
 Or aught which soars unchecked and free
 Through earth and heaven; that I might lose Myself in finding Thee! 80

II.

LE CRI DE L'ÂME.

'Quand le souffle divin qui flotte sur le monde.'

WHEN the breath divine is flowing,
 Zephyr-like o'er all things going,
 And, as the touch of viewless fingers,
 Softly on my soul it lingers,

Open to a breath the lightest,
 Conscious of a touch the slightest,—
 As some calm, still lake, whereon
 Sinks the snowy-bosomed swan,
 And the glistening water-rings
 Circle round her moving wings :
 When my upward gaze is turning
 Where the stars of heaven are burning
 Through the deep and dark abyss, - -
 Flowers of midnight's wilderness,
 Blowing with the evening's breath
 Sweetly in their Maker's path :
 When the breaking day is flushing
 All the east, and light is gushing
 Upward through the horizon's haze,
 Sheaf-like, with its thousand rays,
 Spreading, until all above
 Overflows with joy and love,
 And below, on earth's green bosom,
 All is changed to light and blossom .

When my waking fancies over
 Forms of brightness flit and hover
 Holy as the seraphs are,
 Who by Zion's fountains wear
 On their foreheads, white and broad,
 ' Holiness unto the Lord !'
 When, inspired with rapture high,
 It would seem a single sigh
 Could a world of love create ;
 That my life could know no date,
 And my eager thoughts could fill
 Heaven and Earth, o'erflowing still !

Then, O Father ! Thou alone,
 From the shadow of Thy throne,
 To the sighing of my breast
 And its rapture answerest .
 All my thoughts, which, upward winging,
 Bathe where Thy own light is springing, —
 All my yearnings to be free
 Are as echoes answering Thee !

Seldom upon lips of mine,
 Father ! rests that name of Thine ;
 Deep within my inmost breast,
 In the secret place of mind,
 Like an awful presence shrined,
 Doth the dread idea rest !
 Hushed and holy dwells it there,
 Prompter of the silent prayer,

5 Lifting up my spirit's eye
 And its faint, but earnest cry,
 From its dark and cold abode, 55
 Unto Thee, my Guide and God !
 1837.

THE FAMILIST'S HYMN.

The Puritans of New England, even in their wilderness home, were not exempted from the sectarian contentions which agitated the mother country after the downfall of Charles the First, and of the established Episcopacy. The Quakers, Baptists, and Catholics were banished, on pain of death, from the Massachusetts Colony. One Samuel Gorton, a bold and eloquent declaimer, after preaching for a time in Boston against the doctrines of the Puritans, and declaring that their churches were mere human devices, and their sacrament and baptism an abomination, was driven out of the jurisdiction of the colony, and compelled to seek a residence among the savages. He gathered round him a considerable number of converts, who, like the primitive Christians, shared all things in common. His opinions, however, were so troublesome to the leading clergy of the colony, that they instigated an attack upon his ' Family ' by an armed force, which seized upon the principal men in it, and brought them into Massachusetts, where they were sentenced to be kept at hard labor in several towns (one only in each town), during the pleasure of the General Court, they being forbidden, under severe penalties, to utter any of their religious sentiments, except to such ministers as might labor for their conversion. They were unquestionably sincere in their opinions, and, whatever may have been their errors, deserve to be ranked among those who have in all ages suffered for the freedom of conscience.

FATHER ! to Thy suffering poor
 Strength and grace and faith impart,
 And with Thy own love restore
 Comfort to the broken heart !
 Oh, the failing ones confirm 5
 With a holier strength of zeal !
 Give Thou not the feeble worm
 Helpless to the spoiler's heel !

Father ! for Thy holy sake
 We are spoiled and hunted thus ; 10
 Joyful, for Thy truth we take
 Bonds and burthens unto us :

Poor, and weak, and robbed of all,
 Weary with our daily task,
 That Thy truth may never fall 15
 Through our weakness, Lord, we ask.

Round our fired and wasted homes
 Flits the forest-bird unscared,
 And at noon the wild beast comes
 Where our frugal meal was shared ; 20
 For the song of praises there
 Shrieks the crow the livelong day ;
 For the sound of evening prayer
 Howls the evil beast of prey.

Sweet the songs we loved to sing 25
 Underneath Thy holy sky ;
 Words and tones that used to bring
 Tears of joy in every eye ;
 Dear the wrestling hours of prayer,
 When we gathered knee to knee, 30
 Blameless youth and hoary hair,
 Bowed, O God, alone to Thee.

As Thine early children, Lord,
 Shared their wealth and daily bread,
 Even so, with one accord, 35
 We, in love, each other fed.
 Not with us the miser's hoard,
 Not with us his grasping hand ;
 Equal round a common board,
 Drew our meek and brother band ! 40

Safe our quiet Eden lay
 When the war-whoop stirred the land
 And the Indian turned away
 From our home his bloody hand.
 Well that forest-ranger saw, 45
 That the burthen and the curse
 Of the white man's cruel law
 Rested also upon us.

Torn apart, and driven forth
 To our toiling hard and long, 50
 Father ! from the dust of earth
 Lift we still our grateful song !
 Grateful, that in bonds we share
 In Thy love which maketh free ;
 Joyful, that the wrongs we bear, 55
 Draw us nearer, Lord, to Thee !

Grateful ! that where'er we toil,—
 By Wachuset's wooded side,
 On Nantucket's sea-worn isle,
 Or by wild Neponset's tide,— 60
 Still, in spirit, we are near,
 And our evening hymns, which rise
 Separate and discordant here,
 Meet and mingle in the skies !

Let the scoffer scorn and mock, 65
 Let the proud and evil priest
 Rob the needy of his flock,
 For his wine-cup and his feast,—
 Redden not Thy bolts in store
 Through the blackness of Thy skies ? 70
 For the sighing of the poor
 Wilt Thou not, at length, arise ?

Worn and wasted, oh ! how long
 Shall Thy trodden poor complain ?
 In Thy name they bear the wrong, 75
 In Thy cause the bonds of pain !
 Melt oppression's heart of steel,
 Let the haughty priesthood see,
 And their blinded followers feel,
 That in us they mock at Thee ! 80

In Thy time, O Lord of hosts,
 Stretch abroad that hand to save
 Which of old, on Egypt's coasts,
 Smote apart the Red Sea's wave !
 Lead us from this evil land, 85
 From the spoiler set us free,
 And once more our gathered band,
 Heart to heart, shall worship Thee !
 1838.

EZEKIEL.

Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come,
 I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the Lord. And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them : for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness. And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for they hear thy words, but they do them not. And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.—EZEKIEL, xxxiii 30-33

THEY hear Thee not, O God! nor see;
Beneath Thy rod they mock at Thee;
The princes of our ancient line
Lie drunken with Assyrian wine;
The priests around Thy altar speak 5
The false words which their hearers seek;
And hymns which Chaldea's wanton maids

Have sung in Dura's idol-shades
Are with the Levites' chant ascending,
With Zion's holiest anthems blending! 10

On Israel's bleeding bosom set,
The heathen heel is crushing yet;
The towers upon our holy hill
Echo Chaldean footsteps still.
Our wasted shrines,—who weeps for them?
Who mourneth for Jerusalem? 16
Who turneth from his gains away?
Whose knee with mine is bowed to
pray?
Who, leaving feast and purpling cup,
Takes Zion's lamentation up? 20

A sad and thoughtful youth, I went
With Israel's early banishment;
And where the sullen Chebar crept,
The ritual of my fathers kept.
The water for the trench I drew, 25
The firstling of the flock I slew,
And, standing at the altar's side,
I shared the Levites' lingering pride,
That still, amidst her mocking foes,
The smoke of Zion's offering rose. 30

In sudden whirlwind, cloud and flame,
The Spirit of the Highest came!
Before mine eyes a vision passed,
A glory terrible and vast;
With dreadful eyes of living things, 35
And sounding sweep of angel wings,
With circling light and sapphire throne,
And flame-like form of One thereon,
And voice of that dread Likeness sent Down from the crystal firmament! 40

The burden of a prophet's power
Fell on me in that fearful hour;
From off unutterable woes
The curtain of the future rose;
I saw far down the coming time 45
The fiery chastisement of crime;
With noise of mingling hosts, and jar
Of falling towers and shouts of war,
I saw the nations rise and fall,
Like fire-gleams on my tent's white wall.

In dream and trance, I saw the slain 51
Of Egypt heaped like harvest grain.
I saw the walls of sea-born Tyre
Swept over by the spoiler's fire;
And heard the low, expiring moan 55
Of Edom on his rocky throne;
And, woe is me! the wild lament
From Zion's desolation sent;
And felt within my heart each blow
Which laid her holy places low. 60

In bonds and sorrow, day by day,
Before the pictured tile I lay;
And there, as in a mirror, saw
The coming of Assyria's war;
Her swarthy lines of spearmen pass 65
Like locusts through Bethhoron's grass;
I saw them draw their stormy hem
Of battle round Jerusalem;
And, listening, heard the Hebrew wail
Blend with the victor-trump of Baal! 70

Who trembled at my warning word?
Who owned the prophet of the Lord?
How mocked the rude, how scoffed the vile,
How stung the Levites' scornful smile,
As o'er my spirit, dark and slow, 75
The shadow crept of Israel's woe
As if the angel's mournful roll
Had left its record on my soul,
And traced in lines of darkness there
The picture of its great despair! 80

Yet ever at the hour I feel
My lips in prophecy unseal.
Prince, priest, and Levite gather near,
And Salem's daughters haste to hear,
On Chebar's waste and alien shore, 85
The harp of Judah swept once more.

They listen, as in Babel's throng
The Chaldeans to the dancer's song,
Or wild sabbeka's nightly play,
As careless and as vain as they. 90

And thus, O Prophet-bard of old,
Hast thou thy tale of sorrow told !
The same which earth's unwelcome seers
Have felt in all succeeding years.
Sport of the changeful multitude, 95
Nor calmly heard nor understood,
Their song has seemed a trick of art,
Their warnings but the actor's part.
With bonds, and scorn, and evil will,
The world requites its prophets still. 100

So was it when the Holy One
The garments of the flesh put on !
Men followed where the Highest led
For common gifts of daily bread,
And gross of ear, of vision dim, 105
Owned not the Godlike power of Him.
Vain as a dreamer's words to them
His wail above Jerusalem,
And meaningless the watch He kept
Through which His weak disciples slept.

Yet shrink not thou, whoe'er thou art, 111
For God's great purpose set apart,
Before whose far-discerning eyes,
The Future as the Present lies !
Beyond a narrow-bounded age 115
Stretches thy prophet-heritage,
Through Heaven's vast spaces angel-trod,
And through the eternal years of God !
Thy audience, worlds !—all things to be
The witness of the Truth in thee ! 120

WHAT THE VOICE SAID.

MADDENED by Earth's wrong and evil,
'Lord !' I cried in sudden ire,
'From Thy right hand, clothed with thunder,
Shake the bolted fire !
'Love is lost, and Faith is dying ; 5
With the brute the man is sold ;
And the dropping blood of labor
Hardens into gold,

'Here the dying wail of Famine,
There the battle's groan of pain ; 10
And, in silence, smooth-faced Mammon
Reaping men like grain.

"Where is God, that we should fear
Him ?"
Thus the earth-born Titans say ;
"God ! if Thou art living, hear us !" 15
Thus the weak ones pray.'

'Thou, the patient Heaven upbraiding,' Spake a solemn Voice within ;
'Weary of our Lord's forbearance,
Art thou free from sin ? 20

'Fearless brow to Him uplifting,
Canst thou for His thunders call,
Knowing that to guilt's attraction
Evermore they fall ?

'Know'st thou not all germs of evil 25
In thy heart await their time ?
Not thyself, but God's restraining,
Stays their growth of crime.

'Couldst thou boast, O child of weakness !
O'er the sons of wrong and strife, 30
Were their strong temptations planted
In thy path of life ?

'Thou hast seen two streamlets gushing
From one fountain, clear and free,
But by widely varying channels 35
Searching for the sea.

'Glideth one through greenest valleys,
Kissing them with lips still sweet ;
One, mad roaring down the mountains,
Stagnates at their feet. 40

'Is it choice whereby the Parsee
Kneels before his mother's fire ?
In his black tent did the Tartar
Choose his wandering sire ?

'He alone, whose hand is bounding 45
Human power and human will,
Looking through each soul's surrounding,
Knows its good or ill.

'For thyself, while wrong and sorrow 5
Make to thee their strong appeal, 50
Coward wert thou not to utter
What the heart must feel,

' Earnest words must needs be spoken
When the warm heart bleeds or burns
With its scorn of wrong, or pity 55
For the wronged, by turns.

' But, by all thy nature's weakness,
Hidden faults and follies known,
Be thou, in rebuking evil,
Conscious of thine own. 60

' Not the less shall stern-eyed Duty
To thy lips her trumpet set,
But with harsher blasts shall mingle
Wailings of regret.'

Cease not, Voice of holy speaking, 65
Teacher sent of God, be near,
Whispering through the day's cool silence,
Let my spirit hear !

So, when thoughts of evil-doers
Waken scorn, or hatred move, 70
Shall a mournful fellow-feeling
Temper all with love.

THE ANGEL OF PATIENCE.

A FREE PARAPHRASE OF THE GERMAN.

To weary hearts, to mourning homes,
God's meekest Angel gently comes :
No power has he to banish pain,
Or give us back our lost again ;
And yet in tenderest love, our dear 5
And Heavenly Father sends him here.

There's quiet in that Angel's glance,
There's rest in his still countenance !
He mocks no grief with idle cheer,
Nor wounds with words the mourner's ear ;
But ills and woes he may not cure 11
He kindly trains us to endure.

Angel of Patience ! sent to calm
Our feverish brows with cooling palm ;
To lay the storms of hope and fear, 15
And reconcile life's smile and tear ;
The throbs of wounded pride to still,
And make our own our Father's will !

O thou who mournest on thy way,
With longings for the close of day ; 20
He walks with thee, that Angel kind,
And gently whispers, ' Be resigned :
Bear up, bear on, the end shall tell
The dear Lord ordereth all things well !'

THE WIFE OF MANOAHA TO HER HUSBAND.

AGAINST the sunset's glowing wall
The city towers rise black and tall,
Where Zorah, on its rocky height,
Stands like an armed man in the light.

Down Eshtaol's vales of ripened grain 5
Falls like a cloud the night amain,
And up the hillsides climbing slow
The barley reapers homeward go.

Look, dearest ! how our fair child's head
The sunset light hath hallow'd, 10
Where at this olive's foot he lies,
Uplooking to the tranquil skies.

Oh, while beneath the fervent heat
Thy sickle swept the bearded wheat,
I've watched, with mingled joy and dread,
Our child upon his grassy bed. 16

Joy, which the mother feels alone
Whose morning hope like mine had flown,
When to her bosom, over-blessed,
A dearer life than hers is pressed. 20

Dread, for the future dark and still,
Which shapes our dear one to its will ;
Forever in his large calm eyes,
I read a tale of sacrifice.

The same foreboding awe I felt 25
When at the altar's side we knelt,
And he, who as a pilgrim came,
Rose, winged and glorious, through the
flame.

I slept not, though the wild bees made
A dreamlike murmuring in the shade, 30
And on me the warm-fingered hours
Pressed with the drowsy smell of flowers.

Before me, in a vision, rose
The hosts of Israel's scornful foes,—
Rank over rank, helm, shield, and spear,
Glittered in noon's hot atmosphere. 36

I heard their boast, and bitter word,
Their mockery of the Hebrew's Lord,
I saw their hands His ark assail,
Their feet profane His holy veil. 40

No angel down the blue space spoke,
No thunder from the still sky broke;
But in their midst, in power and awe,
Like God's waked wrath, our child I saw!

A child no more!—harsh-browed and strong, 45
He towered a giant in the throng,
And down his shoulders, broad and bare,
Swept the black terror of his hair.

He raised his arm—he smote amain;
As round the reaper falls the grain, 50
So the dark host around him fell,
So sank the foes of Israel!

Again I looked. In sunlight shone
The towers and domes of Askelon;
Priest, warrior, slave, a mighty crowd 55
Within her idol temple bowed.

Yet one knelt not; stark, gaunt, and blind,
His arms the massive pillars twined,—
An eyeless captive, strong with hate
He stood there like an evil Fate. 60

The red shrines smoked,—the trumpets
pealed:
He stooped,—the giant columns reeled;
Reeled tower and fane, sank arch and wall,
And the thick dust-cloud closed o'er all!

Above the shriek, the crash, the groan 65
Of the fallen pride of Askelon,
I heard, sheer down the echoing sky,
A voice as of an angel cry,—

The voice of him, who at our side
Sat through the golden eventide; 70
Of him who, on thy altar's blaze,
Rose fire-winged, with his song of praise.

'Rejoice o'er Israel's broken chain,
Gray mother of the mighty slain!
Rejoice!' it cried, 'he vanquisheth! 75
The strong in life is strong in death!

'To him shall Zorah's daughters raise Through coming years their hymns of
praise,
And gray old men at evening tell
Of all he wrought for Israel. 80

'And they who sing and they who hear
Alike shall hold thy memory dear,
And pour their blessings on thy head.
O mother of the mighty dead!'

It ceased; and though a sound I heard 85
As if great wings the still air stirred,
I only saw the barley sheaves
And hills half hid by olive leaves.

I bowed my face, in awe and fear,
On the dear child who slumbered near; 90
'With me, as with my only son,
O God,' I said, 'Thy will be done!' 1847.

MY SOUL AND I.

STAND still, my soul, in the silent dark
I would question thee,
Alone in the shadow drear and stark
With God and me!

What, my soul, was thy errand here? 5
Was it mirth or ease,
Or heaping up dust from year to year?
'Nay, none of these!'

Speak, soul, aright in His holy sight
Whose eye looks still 10
And steadily on thee through the night:
'To do His will!'

What hast thou done, O soul of mine,
That thou tremblest so?
Hast thou wrought His task, and kept the line 15
He bade thee go?

What, silent all! art sad of cheer?
Art fearful now?
When God seemed far and men were near,
How brave wert thou! 20

Aha ! thou tremblest !—well I see
Thou'rt craven grown.
Is it so hard with God and me
To stand alone ?

Summon thy sunshine bravery back, 25
O wretched sprite !
Let me hear thy voice through this deep and black
Abysmal night.

What hast thou wrought for Right and
Truth,
For God and Man, 30
From the golden hours of bright-eyed
youth
To life's mid span ?

Ah, soul of mine, thy tones I hear,
But weak and low,
Like far sad murmurs on my ear 35
They come and go.

'I have wrestled stoutly with the Wrong,
And borne the Right
From beneath the footfall of the throng
To life and light. 40

'Wherever Freedom shivered a chain,
God speed, quoth I ;
To Error amidst her shouting train
I gave the lie.'

Ah, soul of mine ! ah, soul of mine ! 45
Thy deeds are well :
Were they wrought for Truth's sake or for
thine ?
My soul, pray tell.

'Of all the work my hand hath wrought
Beneath the sky, 50
Save a place in kindly human thought,
No gain have I.'

Go to, go to ! for thy very self
Thy deeds were done :
Thou for fame, the miser for pelf, 55
Your end is one !

And where art thou going, soul of mine ?
Canst see the end ?
And whither this troubled life of thine
Evermore doth tend ? 60

What daunts thee now ? what shakes thee so ?

My sad soul, say.
'I see a cloud like a curtain low
Hang o'er my way.

'Whither I go I cannot tell : 65
That cloud hangs black,
High as the heaven and deep as hell
Across my track.

'I see its shadow coldly enwrap
The souls before. 70
Sadly they enter it, step by step,
To return no more.

'They shrink, they shudder, dear God !
they kneel
To Thee in prayer.
They shut their eyes on the cloud, but feel
That it still is there. 76

'In vain they turn from the dread Before
To the Known and Gone ;
For while gazing behind them evermore
Their feet glide on. 80

'Yet, at times, I see upon sweet pale faces
A light begin
To tremble, as if from holy places
And shrines within.

'And at times methinks their cold lips
move 85
With hymn and prayer,
As if somewhat of awe, but more of love
And hope were there.

'I call on the souls who have left the light
To reveal their lot ; 90
I bend mine ear to that wall of night,
And they answer not.

'But I hear around me sighs of pain
And the cry of fear,
And a sound like the slow sad dropping
of rain, 95
Each drop a tear !

'Ah, the cloud is dark, and day by day
I am moving thither :
I must pass beneath it on my way—
God pity me !—whither ?' 100

Ah, soul of mine ! so brave and wise
In the life-storm loud,
Fronting so calmly all human eyes
In the sunlit crowd !

Now standing apart with God and me 105
Thou art weakness all,
Gazing vainly after the things to be
Through Death's dread wall.

But never for this, never for this
Was thy being lent ; 110
For the craven's fear is but selfishness,
Like his merriment.

Folly and Fear are sisters twain :
One closing her eyes,
The other peopling the dark inane 115
With spectral lies.

Know well, my soul, God's hand controls
Whate'er thou fearest ;
Round Him in calmest music rolls
Whate'er thou hearest. 120

What to thee is shadow, to Him is day,
And the end He knoweth,
And not on a blind and aimless way
The spirit goeth.

Man sees no future,—a phantom show 125
Is alone before him ;
Past Time is dead, and the grasses grow,
And flowers bloom o'er him.

Nothing before, nothing behind ;
The steps of Faith 130
Fall on the seeming void, and find
The rock beneath.

The Present, the Present is all thou hast
For thy sure possessing ;
Like the patriarch's angel hold it fast 135
Till it gives its blessing.

Why fear the night? why shrink from
Death,
That phantom wan?
There is nothing in heaven or earth
beneath
Save God and man. 140

Peopling the shadows we turn from
Him
And from one another ;
All is spectral and vague and dim
Save God and our brother !

Like warp and woof all destinies 145
Are woven fast,
Linked in sympathy like the keys
Of an organ vast.

Pluck one thread, and the web ye mar ;
Break but one 150
Of a thousand keys, and the paining jar
Through all will run.

O'restless spirit ! wherefore strain
Beyond thy sphere?
Heaven and hell, with their joy and pain,
Are now and here. 156

Back to thyself is measured well
All thou hast given ;
Thy neighbor's wrong is thy present
hell,
His bliss, thy heaven. 160

And in life, in death, in dark and light,
All are in God's care :
Sound the black abyss, pierce the deep of
night,
And He is there !

All which is real now remaineth, 165
And fadeth never :
The hand which upholds it now sustaineth
The soul forever.

Leaning on Him, make with reverent meekness
His own thy will, 170
And with strength from Him shall thy utter weakness
Life's task fulfil ;

And that cloud itself, which now before
thee
Lies dark in view,
Shall with beams of light from the inner glory 175
Be stricken through.

And like meadow mist through autumn's
dawn

Uprolling thin,
Its thickest folds when about thee drawn
Let sunlight in. 180

Then of what is to be, and of what is
done,

Why quierest thou?
The past and the time to be are one,
And both are now !
1847.

WORSHIP.

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world — JAMES I 27.

THE Pagan's myths through marble lips
are spoken,

And ghosts of old Beliefs still flit and
moan

Round fane and altar overthrown and broken,

O'er tree-grown barrow and gray ring
of stone.

Blind Faith had martyrs in those old high places, 5

The Syrian hill grove and the Druid's
wood,

With mothers offering, to the Fiend's embraces,

Bone of their bone, and blood of their own blood.

Red altars, kindling through that night
of error,

Smoked with warm blood beneath the cruel eye 10

Of lawless Power and sanguinary Terror,
Throned on the circle of a pitiless sky ;

Beneath whose baleful shadow, over-casting

All heaven above, and blighting earth
below,

The scourge grew red, the lip grew pale with fasting, 15

And man's oblation was his fear and
woe !

Then through great temples swelled the dismal moaning

Of dirge-like music and sepulchral
prayer ;

Pale wizard priests, o'er occult symbols
droning,

Swung their white censers in the burdened air : 20

As if the pomp of rituals, and the savor

Of gums and spices could the Unseen
One please ;

As if His ear could bend, with childish favor,

To the poor flattery of the organ keys !

Feet red from war-fields trod the church
aisles holy, 25

With trembling reverence : and the oppressor there,

Kneeling before his priest, abased and
lowly,

Crushed human hearts beneath his knee
of prayer.

Not such the service the benignant
Father

Requireth at His earthly children's
hands : 30

Not the poor offering of vain rites, but rather

The simple duty man from man demands.

For Earth He asks it : the full joy of
heaven

Knoweth no change of waning or increase ;

The great heart of the Infinite beats
even, 35

Untroubled flows the river of His peace.

He asks no taper lights, on high surrounding

The priestly altar and the saintly
grave,

No dolorous chant nor organ music sound-
ing,

Nor incense clouding up the twilight
nave. 40

For he whom Jesus loved hath truly
spoken :

The holier worship which he deigns to bless

Restores the lost, and binds the spirit
broken,

And feeds the widow and the father-
less !

Types of our human weakness and our sorrow ! 45

Who lives unhaunted by his loved ones
dead ?

Who, with vain longing, seeketh not to borrow

From stranger eyes the home lights which have fled ?

O brother man ! fold to thy heart thy
brother ;

Where pity dwells, the peace of God is
there ; 50

To worship rightly is to love each other,
Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed
a prayer.

Follow with reverent steps the great example

Of Him whose holy work was 'doing
good ;'

So shall the wide earth seem our Father's temple, 55

Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.

Then shall all shackles fall ; the stormy clangor

Of wild war music o'er the earth shall
cease ;

Love shall tread out the baleful fire of anger,

And in its ashes plant the tree of peace ! 60

1848.

THE HOLY LAND.

Paraphrased from the lines in Lamartine's
Adieu to Marseilles, beginning

'Je n'ai pas navigué sur l'océan de sable.'

I HAVE not felt, o'er seas of sand,
The rocking of the desert bark ;

Nor laved at Hebron's fount my hand,
By Hebron's palm-trees cool and dark ;

Nor pitched my tent at even-fall, 5
On dust where Job of old has lain,
Nor dreamed beneath its canvas wall,
The dream of Jacob o'er again.

One vast world-page remains unread ;
How shine the stars in Chaldea's sky, 10
How sounds the reverent pilgrim's tread,
How beats the heart with God so
nigh !

How round gray arch and column lone
The spirit of the old time broods,
And sighs in all the winds that moan 15
Along the sandy solitudes !

In thy tall cedars, Lebanon,
I have not heard the nations' cries,
Nor seen thy eagles stooping down
Where buried Tyre in ruin lies. 20
The Christian's prayer I have not said
In Tadmor's temples of decay,
Nor startled, with my dreary tread,
The waste where Memnon's empire lay.

Nor have I, from thy hallowed tide, 25
O Jordan ! heard the low lament,
Like that sad wail along thy side
Which Israel's mournful prophet sent !
Nor thrilled within that grotto lone
Where, deep in night, the Bard of
Kings 30
Felt hands of fire direct his own,
And sweep for God the conscious strings.

I have not climbed to Olivet,
Nor laid me where my Saviour lay,
And left His trace of tears as yet 35
By angel eyes unwept away ;
Nor watched, at midnight's solemn
time,
The garden where His prayer and
groan,

Wrung by His sorrow and our crime,
Rose to One listening ear alone. 40

I have not kissed the rock-hewn grot
Where in His mother's arms He lay,
Nor knelt upon the sacred spot
Where last His footsteps pressed the clay ;

Nor looked on that sad mountain head, 45
Nor smote my sinful breast, where wide
His arms to fold the world He spread,
And bowed His head to bless—and died!
1848.

THE REWARD.

WHO, looking backward from his man-hood's prime,
Sees not the spectre of his misspent time?
And, through the shade
Of funeral cypress planted thick behind, Hears no reproachful whisper on the
wind 5
From his loved dead?

Who bears no trace of passion's evil force?
Who shuns thy sting, O terrible Remorse?
Who does not cast
On the thronged pages of his memory's
book, 10
At times, a sad and half-reluctant look,
Regretful of the past?

Alas! the evil which we fain would shun
We do, and leave the wished-for good
undone:
Our strength to-day 15
Is but to-morrow's weakness, prone to
fall;
Poor, blind, unprofitable servants all
Are we alway.

Yet who, thus looking backward o'er his
years,
Feels not his eyelids wet with grateful
tears, 20
If he hath been Permitted, weak and sinful as he was,
To cheer and aid, in some ennobling cause,
His fellow-men?

If he hath hidden the outcast, or let in 25
A ray of sunshine to the cell of sin;
If he hath lent
Strength to the weak, and, in an hour of
need,
Over the suffering, mindless of his creed
Or home, hath bent; 30

He has not lived in vain, and while he gives
The praise to Him, in whom he moves and
lives,
With thankful heart;
He gazes backward, and with hope before,
Knowing that from his workshenevermore
Can henceforth part. 36 1848.

THE WISH OF TO-DAY.

I ASK not now for gold to gild
With mocking shine a weary frame;
The yearning of the mind is stilled,
I ask not now for Fame.

A rose-cloud, dimly seen above, 5
Melting in heaven's blue depths away;
Oh, sweet, fond dream of human Love!
For thee I may not pray.

But, bowed in lowliness of mind,
I make my humble wishes known; 10
I only ask a will resigned,
O Father, to Thine own!

To-day, beneath Thy chastening eye
I crave alone for peace and rest,
Submissive in Thy hand to be, 15
And feel that it is best.

A marvel seems the Universe,
A miracle our Life and Death;
A mystery which I cannot pierce,
Around, above, beneath. 20

In vain I task my aching brain,
In vain the sage's thought I scan,
I only feel how weak and vain,
How poor and blind, is man.

And now my spirit sighs for home, 25
And longs for light whereby to see,
And, like a weary child, would come,
O Father, unto Thee!

Though oft, like letters traced on sand,
My weak resolves have passed away, 30
In mercy lend Thy helping hand
Unto my prayer to-day!
1848.

ALL 'S WELL.

THE clouds, which rise with thunder, slake
 Our thirsty souls with rain ;
 The blow most dreaded falls to break
 From off our limbs a chain ;
 And wrongs of man to man but make 5
 The love of God more plain.
 As through the shadowy lens of even
 The eye looks farthest into heaven
 On gleams of star and depths of blue
 The glaring sunshine never knew ! 10 1850.

INVOCATION.

THROUGH Thy clear spaces, Lord, of old,
 Formless and void the dead earth rolled ;
 Deaf to Thy heaven's sweet music, blind
 To the great lights which o'er it shined ;
 No sound, no ray, no warmth, no breath,—
 A dumb despair, a wandering death. 6

To that dark, weltering horror came
 Thy spirit, like a subtle flame,—
 A breath of life electrical,
 Awakening and transforming all, 10
 Till beat and thrilled in every part
 The pulses of a living heart.

Then knew their bounds the land and sea ;
 Then smiled the bloom of mead and tree ;
 From flower to moth, from beast to man,
 The quick creative impulse ran ; 16
 And earth, with life from Thee renewed,
 Was in Thy holy eyesight good.

As lost and void, as dark and cold
 And formless as that earth of old ; 20
 A wandering waste of storm and night,
 Midst spheres of song and realms of light ;
 A blot upon Thy holy sky,
 Untouched, unwarned of Thee, am I.

O Thou who movest on the deep 25
 Of spirits, wake my own from sleep !
 Its darkness melt, its coldness warm,
 The lost restore, the ill transform,
 That flower and fruit henceforth may be
 Its grateful offering, worthy Thee. 30

QUESTIONS OF LIFE.

And the angel that was sent unto me, whose name was Uriel, gave me an answer,

And said, Thy heart hath gone too far in this world, and thinkest thou to comprehend the way of the Most High ?

Then said I, Yea, my Lord. . .

Then said he unto me, Go thy way, weigh me the weight of the fire or measure me the blast of the wind, or call me again the hour that is past.

2 ESDRAS, ch. iv.

A BENDING staff I would not break,
 A feeble faith I would not shake,
 Nor even rashly pluck away
 The error which some truth may stay,
 Whose loss might leave the soul without
 A shield against the shafts of doubt. 6

And yet, at times, when over all
 A darker mystery seems to fall,
 (May God forgive the child of dust,
 Who seeks to know, where Faith should trust !) 10

I raise the questions, old and dark,
 Of Uzdum's tempted patriarch,
 And, speech-confounded, build again
 The baffled tower of Shinar's plain.

I am : how little more I know ! 15
 Whence came I ? Whither do I go ?
 A centred self, which feels and is ;
 A cry between the silences ;
 A shadow-birth of clouds at strife
 With sunshine on the hills of life ; 20
 A shaft from Nature's quiver cast
 Into the Future from the Past ;
 Between the cradle and the shroud,
 A meteor's flight from cloud to cloud.

Thorough the vastness, arching all, 25
 I see the great stars rise and fall,
 The rounding seasons come and go,
 The tided oceans ebb and flow ;
 The tokens of a central force,
 Whose circles, in their widening course,
 O'erlap and move the universe ; 31
 The workings of the law whence springs
 The rhythmic harmony of things,
 Which shapes in earth the darkling spar,
 And orbs in heaven the morning star. 35

Of all I see, in earth and sky,— Star, flower, beast, bird,—what part have I?

This conscious life,—is it the same
Which thrills the universal frame,
Whereby the caverned crystal shoots, 40
And mounts the sap from forest roots,
Whereby the exiled wood-bird tells When Spring makes green her native dells?

How feels the stone the pang of birth,
Which brings its sparkling prism forth?
The forest-tree the throb which gives 46
The life-blood to its new-born leaves?
Do bird and blossom feel, like me,
Life's many-folded mystery,—
The wonder which it is to be? 50
Or stand I severed and distinct,
From Nature's chain of life unlinked?
Allied to all, yet not the less
Prisoned in separate consciousness,
Alone o'erburdened with a sense 55
Of life, and cause, and consequence?

In vain to me the Sphinx propounds
The riddle of her sights and sounds;
Back still the vaulted mystery gives
The echoed question it receives. 60
What sings the brook? What oracle
Is in the pine-tree's organ swell?
What may the wind's low burden be?
The meaning of the moaning sea?
The hieroglyphics of the stars? 65
Or clouded sunset's crimson bars?
I vainly ask, for mocks my skill
The trick of Nature's cipher still.

I turn from Nature unto men,
I ask the stylus and the pen; 70
What sang the bards of old? What meant
The prophets of the Orient?
The rolls of buried Egypt, hid
In painted tomb and pyramid?
What mean Idumea's arrowy lines, 75
Or dusk Elora's monstrous signs?
How speaks the primal thought of man
From the grim carvings of Copan?
Where rests the secret? Where the keys
Of the old death-bolted mysteries? 80
Alas! the dead retain their trust;
Dust hath no answer from the dust.

The great enigma still unguessed,
Unanswered the eternal quest;
I gather up the scattered rays 85
Of wisdom in the early days,
Faint gleams and broken, like the light
Of meteors in a northern night,
Betraying to the darkling earth
The unseen sun which gave them birth;
I listen to the sibyl's chant, 91
The voice of priest and hierophant;
I know what Indian Kreeslna saith,
And what of life and what of death
The demon taught to Socrates; 95
And what, beneath his garden-trees
Slow pacing, with a dream-like tread,
The solemn-thoughted Plato said;
Nor lack I tokens, great or small,
Of God's clear light in each and all, 100
While holding with more dear regard
The scroll of Hebrew seer and bard,
The starry pages promise-hit
With Christ's Evangel over-writ,
Thy miracle of life and death, 105
O Holy One of Nazareth!

On Aztec ruins, gray and lone,
The circling serpent coils in stone,—
Type of the endless and unknown;
Whereof we seek the clue to find, 110
With groping fingers of the blind!
Forever sought, and never found,
We trace that serpent-symbol round
Our resting-place, our starting bound!
Oh, thriftlessness of dream and guess! 115
Oh, wisdom which is foolishness!
Why idly seek from outward things
The answer inward silence brings?
Why stretch beyond our proper sphere
And age, for that which lies so near? 120
Why climb the far-off hills with pain,
A nearer view of heaven to gain?
In lowliest depths of bosky dells
The hermit Contemplation dwells.
A fountain's pine-hung slope his seat, 125
And lotus-twined his silent feet,
Whence, piercing heaven, with screened
sight,
He sees at noon the stars, whose light
Shall glorify the coming night.

Here let me pause, my quest forego; 130

Enough for me to feel and know
 That He in whom the cause and end,
 The past and future, meet and blend,—
 Who, girt with His Immensities,
 Our vast and star-hung system sees, 135
 Small as the clustered Pleiades,—
 Moves not alone the heavenly quires,
 But waves the spring-time's grassy spires,
 Guards not archangel feet alone,
 But deigns to guide and keep my own;
 Speaks not alone the words of fate 141
 Which worlds destroy, and worlds create,
 But whispers in my spirit's ear,
 In tones of love, or warning fear,
 A language none beside may hear. 145

To Him, from wanderings long and wild,

I come, an over-wearied child,
 In cool and shade His peace to find,
 Like dew-fall settling on my mind.
 Assured that all I know is best, 150
 And humbly trusting for the rest,
 I turn from Fancy's cloud-built scheme,
 Dark greed, and mournful eastern dream
 Of power, impersonal and cold,
 Controlling all, itself controlled, 155
 Maker and slave of iron laws,
 Alike the subject and the cause;
 From vain philosophies, that try
 The sevenfold gates of mystery,
 And, baffled ever, babble still, 160
 Word-prodigious of fate and will;
 From Nature, and her mockery, Art,
 And book and speech of men apart,
 To the still witness in my heart;
 With reverence waiting to behold 165
 His Avatár of love untold,
 The Eternal Beauty new and old!

FIRST-DAY THOUGHTS.

In calm and cool and silence, once again
 I find my old accustomed place among My brethren, where, perchance, no human tongue
 Shall utter words; where never hymn
 is sung,
 Nor deep-toned organ blown, nor censer
 swung, 5

Nor dim light falling through the pictured pane!

There, syllabled by silence, let me hear
 The still small voice which reached the prophet's ear;

Read in my heart a still diviner law
 Than Israel's leader on his tables saw! 10
 There let me strive with each besetting sin,

Recall my wandering fancies, and restrain

The sore disquiet of a restless brain;
 And, as the path of duty is made plain,
 May grace be given that I may walk therein, 15

Not like the hireling, for his selfish gain,
 With backward glances and reluctant tread,

Making a merit of his coward dread,
 But, cheerful, in the light around me thrown, 19

Walking as one to pleasant service led;
 Doing God's will as if it were my own,
 Yet trusting not in mine, but in His strength alone!

1852.

TRUST.

THE same old baffling questions! O my friend,

I cannot answer them. In vain I send
 My soul into the dark, where never burn
 The lamps of science, nor the natural light

Of Reason's sun and stars! I cannot learn 5
 Their great and solemn meanings, nor discern

The awful secrets of the eyes which turn
 Evermore on us through the day and night

With silent challenge and a dumb demand,

Proffering the riddles of the dread unknown, 10

Like the calm Sphinxes, with their eyes of stone,

Questioning the centuries' from their veils of sand!

I have no answer for myself or thee,
Save that I learned beside my mother's
knee;

'All is of God that is, and is to be; 15
And God is good.' Let this suffice us
still,

Resting in childlike trust upon His
will

Who moves to His great ends unthwarted
by the ill.

TRINITAS.

At morn I prayed, 'I fain would see
How Three are One, and One is Three;
Read the dark riddle unto me.'

I wandered forth, the sun and air
I saw bestowed with equal care
On good and evil, foul and fair.

No partial favor dropped the rain;
Alike the righteous and profane
Rejoiced above their heading grain.

And my heart murmured, 'Is it meet 10
That blindfold Nature thus should treat
With equal hand the tares and wheat?'

A presence melted through my mood,—
A warmth, a light, a sense of good,
Like sunshine through a winter wood. 15

I saw that presence, mailed complete
In her white innocence, pause to greet
A fallen sister of the street.

Upon her bosom snowy pure
The lost one clung, as if secure 20
From inward guilt or outward lure.

'Beware!' I said; 'in this I see
No gain to her, but loss to thee:
Who touches pitch defiled must be.'

I passed the haunts of shame and sin, 25
And a voice whispered, 'Who therein Shall these lost souls to Heaven's peace
win?'

'Who there shall hope and health dispense,
And lift the ladder up from thence
Whose rounds are prayers of penitence?'

I said, 'No higher life they know; 31
These earth-worms love to have it so.
Who stoops to raise them sinks as low.'

That night with painful care I read
What Hippo's saint and Calvin said; 35
The living seeking to the dead!

In vain I turned, in weary quest,
Old pages, where (God give them rest!)
The poor creed-mongers dreamed and guessed.

And still I prayed, 'Lord, let me see 40
How Three are One, and One is Three;
Read the dark riddle unto me!'

5 Then something whispered, 'Dost thou
pray
For what thou hast? This very day
The Holy Three have crossed thy way. 45

'Did not the gifts of sun and air
To good and ill alike declare
The all-compassionate Father's care?

'In the white soul that stooped to raise
The lost one from her evil ways, 50
Thou saw'st the Christ, whom angels
praise!

'A bodiless Divinity,
The still small Voice that spake to thee
Was the Holy Spirit's mystery!

'O blind of sight, of faith how small! 55
Father, and Son, and Holy Call;
This day thou hast denied them all!

'Revealed in love and sacrifice,
The Holiest passed before thine eyes,
One and the same, in threefold guise. 60

'The equal Father in rain and sun,
His Christ in the good to evil done,
His Voice in thy soul;—and the Three are
One!'

I shut my grave Aquinas fast;
The monkish gloss of ages past,
The schoolman's creed aside I cast.

And my heart answered, 'Lord, I see
How Three are One, and One is Three;
Thy riddle hath been read to me!'

1858.

THE SISTERS.

A PICTURE BY BARRY.

THE shade for me, but over thee
The lingering sunshine still;
As, smiling, to the silent stream
Comes down the singing rill.

So come to me, my little one,—
My years with thee I share,
And mingle with a sister's love
A mother's tender care.

But keep the smile upon thy lip,
The trust upon thy brow;
Since for the dear one God hath called
We have an angel now.

Our mother from the fields of heaven
Shall still her ear incline;
Nor need we fear her human love
Is less for love divine.

The songs are sweet they sing beneath
The trees of life so fair,
But sweetest of the songs of heaven
Shall be her children's prayer.

Then, darling, rest upon my breast,
And teach my heart to lean
With thy sweet trust upon the arm
Which folds us both unseen!

'THE ROCK' IN EL GHOR.

DEAD Petra in her hill-tomb sleeps,
Her stones of emptiness remain;
Around her sculptured mystery sweeps
The lonely waste of Edom's plain.

From the doomed dwellers in the cleft 5
The bow of vengeance turns not back;
Of all her myriads none are left
Along the Wady Mousa's track.

Clear in the hot Arabian day
Her arches spring, her statues climb; 10
Unchanged, the graven wonders pay
No tribute to the spoiler, Time!

Unchanged the awful lithograph
Of power and glory undertrod;
Of nations scattered like the chaff 15
Blown from the threshing-floor of God.

Yet shall the thoughtful stranger turn
From Petra's gates with deeper awe,
To mark afar the burial urn
Of Aaron on the cliffs of Hor; 20

And where upon its ancient guard
Thy Rock, El Ghor, is standing yet,—
Looks from its turrets desertward,
And keeps the watch that God has set.

The same as when in thunders loud 25
It heard the voice of God to man,
As when it saw in fire and cloud
The angels walk in Israel's van!

Or when from Ezion-Geber's way
It saw the long procession file, 30
And heard the Hebrew timbrels play
The music of the lordly Nile;

Or saw the tabernacle pause,
Cloud-bound, by Kadesh Barnea's
wells,
While Moses graved the sacred laws, 35
And Aaron swung his golden bells.

Rock of the desert, prophet-sung!
How grew its shadowing pile at length,
A symbol, in the Hebrew tongue,
Of God's eternal love and strength. 40

On lip of bard and scroll of seer,
From age to age went down the name,
Until the Shiloh's promised year,
And Christ, the Rock of Ages, came!

The path of life we walk to-day 45
Is strange as that the Hebrews trod;
We need the shadowing rock, as they,—
We need, like them, the guides of God.

God send His angels, Cloud and Fire,
To lead us o'er the desert sand ! 50
God give our hearts their long desire,
His shadow in a weary land !
1859.

THE OVER-HEART.

For of Him, and through Him, and to Him
are all things : to whom be glory forever !
ROMANS, xi 36.

ABOVE, below, in sky and sod,
In leaf and spar, in star and man,
Well might the wise Athenian scan
The geometric signs of God,
The measured order of His plan. 5

And India's mystics sang aright
Of the One Life pervading all,—
One Being's tidal rise and fall
In soul and form, in sound and sight,—
Eternal outflow and recall. 10

God is : and man in guilt and fear
The central fact of Nature owns ;
Kneels, trembling, by his altar-stones,
And darkly dreams the ghastly smear
Of blood appeases and atones. 15

Guilt shapes the Terror : deep within
The human heart the secret lies
Of all the hideous deities ;
And, painted on a ground of sin,
The fabled gods of torment rise ! 20

And what is He ? The ripe grain nods,
The sweet dew falls, the sweet flowers
blow ;
But darker signs His presence show :
The earthquake and the storm are God's,
And good and evil interflow. 25

O hearts of love ! O souls that turn
Like sunflowers to the pure and best !
To you the truth is manifest :
For they the mind of Christ discern Wholean like John upon His breast ! 30

In him of whom the sibyl told,
For whom the prophet's harp was toned,
Whose need the sage and magian owned,
The loving heart of God behold,
The hope for which the ages groaned ! 35

Fade, pomp of dreadful imagery
Wherewith mankind have deified
Their hate, and selfishness, and pride !
Let the scared dreamer wake to see
The Christ of Nazareth at his side ! 40

What doth that holy Guide require ?
No rite of pain, nor gift of blood,
But man a kindly brotherhood,
Looking, where duty is desire,
To Him, the beautiful and good 45

Gone be the faithlessness of fear,
And let the pitying heaven's sweet rain
Wash out the altar's bloody stain ;
The law of Hatred disappear,
The law of Love alone remain. 50

How fall the idols false and grim !
And lo ! their hideous wreck above
The emblems of the Lamb and Dove ✓
Man turns from God, not God from him ;
And guilt, in suffering, whispers Love !

The world sits at the feet of Christ, 56
Unknowning, blind, and unconsoled ;
It yet shall touch His garment's fold,
And feel the heavenly Alchemist
Transform its very dust to gold. 60

The theme befitting angel tongues
Beyond a mortal's scope has grown.
O heart of mine ! with reverence own
The fulness which to it belongs, 64
And trust the unknown for the known.

1859.

THE SHADOW AND THE LIGHT.

' And I sought, whence is Evil : I set before the eye of my spirit the whole creation ; whatsoever we see therein,— sea, earth, air, stars, trees, moral creatures,—yea, whatsoever there is we do not see,—angels and spiritual powers. Where is evil, and whence comes it, since God the Good hath created all things ? Why made He anything at all of evil, and not rather by His Almightiness cause it not to be ? These thoughts I turned in my miserable heart, overcharged with most gnawing cares.' ' And, admonished to return to myself, I entered even into my inmost soul, Thou being my guide, and beheld even beyond my soul and mind the Light unchangeable. He who knows the Truth knows what that Light is,

and he that knows it knows Eternity! O Truth, who art Eternity! Love, who art Truth! Eternity, who art Love! And I beheld that Thou madest all things good, and to Thee is nothing whatsoever evil. From the angel to the worm, from the first motion to the last, Thou settest each in its place, and everything is good in its kind. Woe is me!—how high art Thou in the highest, how deep in the deepest! and Thou never departest from us, and we scarcely return to Thee!—AUGUSTINE'S Soliloquies, Book VII.

THE fourteen centuries fall away
Between us and the Afric saint,
And at his side we urge, to-day,
The immemorial quest and old complaint.

No outward sign to us is given,— 5
From sea or earth comes no reply;
Hushed as the warm Numidian heaven
He vainly questioned bends our frozen sky.

No victory comes of all our strife,—
From all we grasp the meaning slips;
The Sphinx sits at the gate of life, 11
With the old question on her awful lips.

In paths unknown we hear the feet
Of fear before, and guilt behind;
We pluck the wayside fruit, and eat 15
Ashes and dust beneath its golden rind.

From age to age descends unchecked
The sad bequest of sire to son,
The body's taint, the mind's defect; 19
Through every web of life the dark threads
run.

Oh, why and whither? God knows all;
I only know that He is good,
And that whatever may befall
Or here or there, must be the best that could.

Between the dreadful cherubim 25
A Father's face I still discern,
As Moses looked of old on Him,
And saw His glory into goodness turn!

For He is merciful as just;
And so, by faith correcting sight, 30
I bow before His will, and trust
Howe'er they seem He doeth all things
right.

And dare to hope that He will make
The rugged smooth, the doubtful
plain;

His mercy never quite forsake; 35
His healing visit every realm of pain;

That suffering is not His revenge
Upon His creatures weak and frail,
Sent on a pathway new and strange
With feet that wander and with eyes that fail; 40

That, o'er the crucible of pain,
Watches the tender eye of Love
The slow transmuting of the chain
Whose links are iron below to gold above!

Ah me! we doubt the shining skies, 45
Seen through our shadows of offence,
And drown with our poor childish cries
The cradle-hymn of kindly Providence.

And still we love the evil cause,
And of the just effect complain: 50
We tread upon life's broken laws,
And murmur at our self-inflicted pain;

We turn us from the light, and find
Our spectral shapes before us thrown,
As they who leave the sun behind 55
Walk in the shadows of themselves alone.

And scarce by will or strength of ours
We set our faces to the day;
Weak, wavering, blind, the Eternal
Powers
Alone can turn us from ourselves away.

Our weakness is the strength of sin, 61
But love must needs be stronger far,
Outreaching all and gathering in
The erring spirit and the wandering star.

A Voice grows with the growing years;
Earth, hushing down her bitter cry,
Looks upward from her graves, and
hears, 67
'The Resurrection and the Life am I.'

O Love Divine!—whose constant beam
Shines on the eyes that will not see,
And waits to bless us, while we dream
Thou leavest us because we turn from
thee! 72

All souls that struggle and aspire,
All hearts of prayer by thee are lit ;
And, dim or clear, thy tongues of fire
On dusky tribes and twilight centuries
sit. 76

Nor bounds, nor clime, nor creed thou
know'st,
Wide as our need thy favors fall ;
The white wings of the Holy Ghost
Stoop, seen or unseen, o'er the heads
of all. 80

O Beauty, old yet ever new !⁷⁴
Eternal Voice, and Inward Word,
The Logos of the Greek and Jew,
The old sphere-music which the Samian
heard !

Truth which the sage and prophet saw,
Long sought without, but found
within, 86
The Law of Love beyond all law,
The Life o'erflooding mortal death and
sin !

Shine on us with the light which glowed
Upon the trance-bound shepherd's
way, 90
Who saw the Darkness overflowed
And drowned by tides of everlasting
Day.⁷⁵

Shine, light of God !—make broad thy scope
To all who sin and suffer ; more
And better than we dare to hope 95
With Heaven's compassion make our longings poor !

THE CRY OF A LOST SOUL.

Lieutenant Herndon's Report of the Exploration of the Amazon has a striking description of the peculiar and melancholy notes of a bird heard by night on the shores of the river. The Indian guides called it 'The Cry of a Lost Soul' ! Among the numerous translations of this poem is one by the Emperor of Brazil.⁷⁶

In that black forest, where, when day
is done,
With a snake's stillness glides the Amazon
Darkly from sunset to the rising sun,

A cry, as of the pained heart of the wood,
The long, despairing moan of solitude 5
And darkness and the absence of all good,

Startles the traveller, with a sound so drear,
So full of hopeless agony and fear,
His heart stands still and listens like his
ear.

The guide, as if he heard a dead-bell toll,
Starts, drops his oar against the gunwale's thole, 11
Crosses himself, and whispers, 'A lost
soul !'

'No, Señor, not a bird. I know it well,—
It is the pained soul of some infidel
Or curs'd heretic that cries from hell. 15

'Poor fool ! with hope still mocking his
despair,
He wanders, shrieking on the midnight
air
For human pity and for Christian prayer.

'Saints strike him dumb ! Our Holy Mother hath
No prayer for him who, sinning unto
death, 20
Burns always in the furnace of God's wrath !'

Thus to the baptized pagan's cruel lie,
Lending new horror to that mournful cry,
The voyager listens, making no reply.

Dim burns the boat-lamp ; shadows deepen round, 25
From giant trees with snake-like creepers
wound,
And the black water glides without a
sound.

But in the traveller's heart a secret sense
Of nature plastic to benign intents,
And an eternal good in Providence, 30

Lifts to the starry calm of heaven his eyes;
And lo! rebuking all earth's ominous
cries,
The Cross of pardon lights the tropic
skies!

'Father of all!' he urges his strong plea,
'Thou lovest all: Thy erring child may be Lost to himself, but never lost to Thee! 36

'All souls are Thine; the wings of morning bear
None from that Presence which is everywhere,
Nor hell itself can hide, for Thou art
there.

'Through sins of sense, perversities of
will, 40
Through doubt and pain, through guilt
and shame and ill,
Thy pitying eye is on Thy creature still.

'Wilt Thou not make, Eternal Source and Goal!
In Thy long years, life's broken circle
whole,
And change to praise the cry of a lost
soul?' 45

ANDREW RYKMAN'S PRAYER.

ANDREW RYKMAN's dead and gone;
You can see his leaning slate
In the graveyard, and thereon
Read his name and date.

'Trust is truer than our fears,' 5
Runs the legend through the moss,
'Guilt is not in added years,
Nor in death is loss.'

Still the feet that thither trod,
All the friendly eyes are dim: 10
Only Nature, now, and God
Have a care for him.

There the dew of quiet fall,
Singing birds and soft winds stray:
Shall the tender Heart of all 15
Be less kind than they?

What he was and what he is
They who ask may haply find,
If they read this prayer of his
Which he left behind. 20

Pardon, Lord, the lips that dare
Shape in words a mortal's prayer!
Prayer, that, when my day is done,
And I see its setting sun,
Shorn and beamless, cold and dim, 25
Sink beneath the horizon's rim,—
When this ball of rock and clay
Crumbles from my feet away,
And the solid shores of sense
Melt into the vague immense, 30
Father! I may come to Thee
Even with the beggar's plea,
As the poorest of Thy poor,
With my needs, and nothing more.

Not as one who seeks his home 35
With a step assured I come;
Still behind the tread I hear
Of my life-companion, Fear;
Still a shadow deep and vast
From my westerling feet is cast, 40
Wavering, doubtful, undefined,
Never shapen nor outlined:
From myself the fear has grown,
And the shadow is my own.
Yet, O Lord, through all a sense 45
Of Thy tender providence
Stays my failing heart on Thee,
And confirms the feeble knee;
And, at times, my worn feet press

Spaces of cool quietness, 50
Lilied whiteness shone upon
Not by light of moon or sun.
Hours there be of inmost calm,
Broken but by grateful psalm,
When I love Thee more than fear Thee, 55
And Thy blessed Christ seems near me,
With forgiving look, as when
He beheld the Magdalen.
Well I know that all things move
To the spherul rhythm of love, — 60
That to Thee, O Lord of all!
Nothing can of chance befall:
Child and seraph, mote and star,
Well Thou knowest what we are! 65
Through Thy vast creative plan

Looking, from the worm to man,
There is pity in Thine eyes,
But no hatred nor surprise.
Not in blind caprice of will,
Not in cunning sleight of skill, 70
Not for show of power, was wrought
Nature's marvel in Thy thought.
Never careless hand and vain
Smites these chords of joy and pain ;
No immortal selfishness 75
Plays the game of curse and bless :
Heaven and earth are witnesses
That Thy glory goodness is.
Not for sport of mind and force
Hast Thou made Thy universe,
But as atmosphere and zone 80
Of Thy loving heart alone.
Man, who walketh in a show,
Sees before him, to and fro,
Shadow and illusion go ;
All things flow and fluctuate,
Now contract and now dilate.
In the welter of this sea,
Nothing stable is but Thee ;
In this whirl of swooning trance, 90
Thou alone art permanence ;
All without Thee only seems,
All beside is choice of dreams.
Never yet in darkest mood
Doubted I that Thou wast good,
Normistook my will for fate,
Pain of sin for heavenly hate,—
Never dreamed the gates of pearl
Rise from out the burning marl,
Or that good can only live 100
Of the bad conservative,
And through counterpoise of hell
Heaven alone be possible.

For myself alone I doubt ;
All is well, I know, without ;
I alone the beauty mar,
I alone the music jar.
Yet, with hands by evil stained,
And an ear by discord pained,
I am groping for the keys 110
Of the heavenly harmonies ;
Still within my heart I bear
Love for all things good and fair.
Hands of want or souls in pain

Have not sought my door in vain ; 115
I have kept my fealty good
To the human brotherhood ;
Scarcely have I asked in prayer
That which others might not share.
I, who hear with secret shame 120
Praise that paineth more than blame,
Rich alone in favors lent,
Virtuous by accident,
Doubtful where I fain would rest,
Frailest where I seem the best, 125
Only strong for lack of test,—
What am I, that I should press
Special pleas of selfishness,
Coolly mounting into heaven
On my neighbor unforgiven ? 130
Ne'er to me, howe'er disguised,
Comes a saint unrecognized ;
Never fails my heart to greet
Noble deed with warmer beat ; 85
Halt and maimed, I own not less 135
All the grace of holiness ;
Nor, through shame or self-distrust,
Less I love the pure and just.
Lord, forgive these words of mine :
What have I that is not Thine ? 140
Whatsoever I fain would boast
Needs Thy pitying pardon most.
Thou, O Elder Brother ! who
In Thy flesh our trial knew,
Thou, who hast been touched by these 145
Our most sad infirmities,
Thou alone the gulf canst span
In the dual heart of man,
And between the soul and sense 100
Reconcile all difference, 150
Change the dream of me and mine
For the truth of Thee and Thine,
And, through chaos, doubt, and strife,
Interfuse Thy calm of life.
Haply, thus by Thee renewed, 155
In Thy borrowed goodness good,
Some sweet morning yet in God's Dim, æonian periods,
Joyful I shall wake to see
Those I love who rest in Thee, 160
And to them in Thee allied
Shall my soul be satisfied.

Scarcely Hope hath shaped for me
What the future life may be.

Other lips may well be bold ; 165
 Like the publican of old,
 I can only urge the plea,
 ' Lord, be merciful to me !'
 Nothing of desert I claim,
 Unto me belongeth shame. 170
 Not for me the crowns of gold,
 Palms, and harpings manifold ;
 Not for erring eye and feet
 Jasper wall and golden street.
 What Thou wilt, O Father, give ! 175
 All is gain that I receive.
 If my voice I may not raise
 In the elders' song of praise,
 If I may not, sin-defiled,
 Claim my birthright as a child, 180
 Suffer it that I to Thee
 As an hired servant be ;
 Let the lowliest task be mine,
 Grateful, so the work be Thine ;
 Let me find the humblest place 185
 In the shadow of Thy grace :
 Blest to me were any spot
 Where temptation whispers not.
 If there be some weaker one,
 Give me strength to help him on ; 190
 If a blinder soul there be,
 Let me guide him nearer Thee.
 Make my mortal dreams come true
 With the work I fain would do ;
 Clothe with life the weak intent, 195
 Let me be the thing I meant ;
 Let me find in Thy employ
 Peace that dearer is than joy ;
 Out of self to love be led
 And to heaven acclimated, 200
 Until all things sweet and good
 Seem my natural habitude.

So we read the prayer of him
 Who, with John of Labadie,
 Trod, of old, the oozy rim
 Of the Zuyder Zee.

Thus did Andrew Rykman pray.
 Are we wiser, better grown,
 That we may not, in our day,
 Make his prayer our own ?

1863.

THE ANSWER.

SPARE me, dread angel of reproof,
 And let the sunshine weave to-day
 Its gold-threads in the warp and woof
 Of life so poor and gray.

Spare me awhile ; the flesh is weak. 5
 These lingering feet, that fain would
 stray
 Among the flowers, shall some day seek
 The strait and narrow way.

Take off thy ever-watchful eye,
 The awe of thy rebuking frown ; 10
 The dullest slave at times must sigh
 To fling his burdens down ;

To drop his galley's straining oar,
 And press, in summer warmth and calm,
 The lap of some enchanted shore 15
 Of blossom and of balm.

Grudge not my life its hour of bloom,
 My heart its taste of long desire ;
 This day be mine : be those to come 20
 As duty shall require.

The deep voice answered to my own,
 Smiting my selfish prayers away ;
 'To-morrow is with God alone,
 And man hath but to-day.

'Say not, thy fond, vain heart within, 25
 The Father's arm shall still be wide,
 When from these pleasant ways of sin
 Thou turn'st at eventide.

"Cast thyself down," the tempter saith,
 "And angels shall thy feet upbear." 30
 He bids thee make a lie of faith,
 And blasphemy of prayer.

'Though God be good and free be heaven,
 No force divine can love compel ;
 And, though the song of sins forgiven 35
 May sound through lowest hell,

'The sweet persuasion of His voice
 Respects thy sanctity of will.
 He giveth day : thou hast thy choice 40
 To walk in darkness still ;

* As one who, turning from the light, Watches his own gray shadow fall, Doubting, upon his path of night, If there be day at all!	Who fathoms the Eternal Thought? Who talks of scheme and plan? The Lord is God! He needeth not The poor device of man. 15
* No word of doom may shut thee out, 45 No wind of wrath may downward whirl, No swords of fire keep watch about The open gates of pearl;	I walk with bare, hushed feet the ground Ye tread with boldness shod; I dare not fix with mete and bound The love and power of God. 20
* A tenderer light than moon or sun, Than song of earth a sweeter hymn, 50 May shine and sound forever on, And thou be deaf and dim.	Ye praise His justice; even such His pitying love I deem: Ye seek a king; I fain would touch The robe that hath no seam.
* Forever round the Mercy-seat The guiding lights of Love shall burn; But what if, habit-bound, thy feet 55 Shall lack the will to turn?	Ye see the curse which overbroods 25 A world of pain and loss; I hear our Lord's beatitudes And prayer upon the cross.
* What if thine eye refuse to see, Thine ear of Heaven's free welcome fail, And thou a willing captive be, Thyself thy own dark jail? 60	More than your schoolmen teach, within Myself, alas! I know: 30 Too dark ye cannot paint the sin, Too small the merit show.
* Oh, doom beyond the saddest guess, As the long years of God unroll, To make thy dreary selfishness The prison of a soul! 64	I bow my forehead to the dust, I veil mine eyes for shame, And urge, in trembling self-distrust, 35 A prayer without a claim.
* To doubt the love that fain would break The fetters from thy self-bound limb; And dream that God can thee forsake As thou forsakest Him!' 1863.	I see the wrong that round me lies, I feel the guilt within; I hear, with groan and travail-cries, The world confess its sin. 40
THE ETERNAL GOODNESS.
O FRIENDS! with whom my feet have trod The quiet aisles of prayer, Glad witness to your zeal for God And love of man I bear.	Yet, in the maddening maze of things, And tossed by storm and flood, To one fixed trust my spirit clings; I know that God is good!
I trace your lines of argument; Your logic linked and strong I weigh as one who dreads dissent, And fears a doubt as wrong.	Not mine to look where cherubim 45 And seraphs may not see, But nothing can be good in Him Which evil is in me.
But still my human hands are weak To hold your iron creeds: 10 Against the words ye bid me speak My heart within me pleads.	The wrong that pains my soul below I dare not throne above, 50 I know not of His hate,—I know His goodness and His love.
	I dimly guess from blessings known Of greater out of sight, And, with the chastened Psalmist, own His judgments too are right. 56

I long for household voices gone,
For vanished smiles I long,
But God hath led my dear ones on,
And He can do no wrong.

60

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.

And if my heart and flesh are weak
To bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed He will not break,
But strengthen and sustain.

65

No offering of my own I have,
Nor works my faith to prove;
I can but give the gifts He gave,
And plead His love for love.

70

And so beside the Silent Sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

75

I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.

80

O brothers! if my faith is vain,
If hopes like these betray,
Pray for me that my feet may gain
The sure and safer way.

And Thou, O Lord! by whom are seen
Thy creatures as they be,
Forgive me if too close I lean
My human heart on Thee!

THE COMMON QUESTION.

BEHIND us at our evening meal
The gray bird ate his fill,
Swung downward by a single claw,
And wiped his hooked bill.

He shook his wings and crimson tail,
And set his head aslant,
And, in his sharp, impatient way,
Asked, 'What does Charlie want?'

5

'Fie, silly bird!' I answered, 'tuck
Your head beneath your wing,
And go to sleep;'—but o'er and o'er,
He asked the self-same thing.

10

Then, smiling, to myself I said:
How like are men and birds!
We all are saying what he says,
In action or in words.

15

The boy with whip and top and drum,
The girl with hoop and doll,
And men with lands and houses, ask
The question of Poor Poll.

20

However full, with something more
We fain the bag would cram;
We sigh above our crowded nets
For fish that never swam.

No bounty of indulgent Heaven
The vague desire can stay;
Self-love is still a Tartar mill
For grinding prayers away.

25

The dear God hears and pities all;
He knoweth all our wants;
And what we blindly ask of Him
His love withholds or grants.

30

And so I sometimes think our prayers
Might well be merged in one;
And nest and perch and hearth and
church
Repeat, 'Thy will be done.'
1866.

35

OUR MASTER.

IMMORTAL Love, forever full,
Forever flowing free,
Forever shared, forever whole,
A never-ebbing sea!

Our outward lips confess the name
All other names above;
Love only knoweth whence it came,
And comprehendeth love.

5

Blow, winds of God, awake and blow
The mists of earth away!
Shine out, O Light Divine, and show
How wide and far we stray!

10

Hush every lip, close every book, The strife of tongues forbear ; Why forward reach, or backward look, 15 For love that clasps like air?	Through Him the first fond prayers are said Our lips of childhood frame, The last low whispers of our dead Are burdened with His name. 60
We may not climb the heavenly steep To bring the Lord Christ down : In vain we search the lowest deeps, For Him no depths can drown. 20	Our Lord and Master of us all ! Whate'er our name or sign, We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call, We test our lives by Thine.
Nor holy bread, nor blood of grape, The lineaments restore Of Him we know in outward shape And in the flesh no more.	Thou judgest us ; Thy purity 65 Doth all our lusts condemn ; The love that draws us nearer Thee Is hot with wrath to them.
He cometh not a king to reign ; 25 The world's long hope is dim ; The weary centuries watch in vain The clouds of heaven for Him.	Our thoughts lie open to Thy sight ; And, naked to Thy glance, 70 Our secret sins are in the light Of Thy pure countenance.
Death comes, life goes ; the asking eye And ear are answerless ; 30 The grave is dumb, the hollow sky Is sad with silentness.	Thy healing pains, a keen distress Thy tender light shines in ; Thy sweetness is the bitterness, 75 Thy grace the pang of sin.
The letter fails, and systems fall, And every symbol wanes ; The Spirit over-brooding all 35 Eternal Love remains.	Yet, weak and blinded though we be, Thou dost our service own ; We bring our varying gifts to Thee, And Thou rejectest none. 80
And not for signs in heaven above Or earth below they look, Who know with John His smile of love, With Peter His rebuke. 40	To Thee our full humanity, Its joys and pains, belong ; The wrong of man to man on Thee Inflicts a deeper wrong.
In joy of inward peace, or sense Of sorrow over sin, He is His own best evidence, His witness is within.	Who hates, hates Thee, who loves becomes Therein to Thee allied ; 86 All sweet accords of hearts and homes In Thee are multiplied.
No fable old, nor mythic lore, 45 Nor dream of bards and seers, No dead fact stranded on the shore Of the oblivious years ;—	Deep strike Thy roots, O heavenly Vine, Within our earthly sod, 90 Most human and yet most divine, The flower of man and God !
But warm, sweet, tender, even yet A present help is He ; 50 And faith has still its Olivet, And love its Galilee.	O Love ! O Life ! Our faith and sight Thy presence maketh one As through transfigured clouds of white We trace the noon-day sun. 96
The healing of His seamless dress Is by our beds of pain ; We touch Him in life's throng and press, And we are whole again. 56	So, to our mortal eyes subdued, Flesh-veiled, but not concealed, We know in Thee the fatherhood And heart of God revealed. 100

We faintly hear, we dimly see,
In differing phrase we pray ;
But, dim or clear, we own in Thee
The Light, the Truth, the Way !

The homage that we render Thee 105
Is still our Father's own ;
No jealous claim or rivalry
Divides the Cross and Throne.

To do Thy will is more than praise,
As words are less than deeds, 110
And simple trust can find Thy ways
We miss with chart of creeds.

No pride of self Thy service hath,
No place for me and mine ;
Our human strength is weakness, death
Our life, apart from Thine. 116

Apart from Thee all gain is loss,
All labor vainly done ;
The solemn shadow of Thy Cross
Is better than the sun. 120

Alone, O Love ineffable !
Thy saving name is given ;
To turn aside from Thee is hell,
To walk with Thee is heaven !

How vain, secure in all Thou art, 125
Our noisy championship !
The sighing of the contrite heart
Is more than flattering lip.

Not Thine the bigot's partial plea,
Nor Thine the zealot's ban ; 130
Thou well canst spare a love of Thee
Which ends in hate of man.

Our Friend, our Brother, and our Lord,
What may Thy service be ?—
Nor name, nor form, nor ritual word, 135
But simply following Thee.

We bring no ghastly holocaust,
We pile no graven stone ;
He serves Thee best who loveth most
His brothers and Thy own. 140

Thy litanies, sweet offices
Of love and gratitude ;
Thy sacramental liturgies,
The joy of doing good.

In vain shall waves of incense drift 145
The vaulted nave around,
In vain the minster turret lift
Its brazen weights of sound.

The heart must ring Thy Christmas bells,
Thy inward altars raise ; 150
Its faith and hope Thy canticles,
And its obedience praise !
1866.

THE MEETING.

The two speakers in the meeting referred to in this poem were Avis Keene, whose very presence was a benediction, a woman lovely in spirit and person, whose words seemed a message of love and tender concern to her hearers ; and Sibyl Jones, whose inspired eloquence and rare spirituality impressed all who knew her. In obedience to her apprehended duty she made visits of Christian love to various parts of Europe, and to the West Coast of Africa and Palestine.

THE elder folks shook hands at last,
Down seat by seat the signal passed.
To simple ways like ours unused,
Half solemnized and half amused,
With long-drawn breath and shrug, my guest 5
His sense of glad relief expressed.
Outside, the hills lay warm in sun ;
The cattle in the meadow-run
Stood half-leg deep ; a single bird
The green repose above us stirred. 10
'What part or lot have you,' he said,
'In these dull rites of drowsy-head ?
Is silence worship ? Seek it where
It soothes with dreams the summer air,
Not in this close and rude-benched hall, 15
But where soft lights and shadows fall,
And all the slow, sleep-walking hours
Glide soundless over grass and flowers !
From time and place and form apart,
Its holy ground the human heart, 20
Nor ritual-bound nor templeward
Walks the free spirit of the Lord !
Our common Master did not pen
His followers up from other men ;
His service liberty indeed, 25
He built no church, He framed no creed ;

But while the saintly Pharisee
 Made broader his phylactery,
 As from the synagogue was seen
 The dusty-sandalled Nazarene 30
 Through ripening cornfields lead the way
 Upon the awful Sabbath day,
 His sermons were the healthful talk
 That shorter made the mountain-walk, 34
 His wayside texts were flowers and birds,
 Where mingled with His gracious words
 The rustle of the tamarisk-tree
 And ripple-wash of Galilee.'

'Thy words are well, O friend,' I said ;
 'Unmeasured and unlimited, 40
 With noiseless slide of stone to stone,
 The mystic Church of God has grown.
 Invisible and silent stands
 The temple never made with hands,
 Unheard the voices still and small 45
 Of its unseen confessional.
 He needs no special place of prayer
 Whose hearing ear is everywhere ;
 He brings not back the childish days 49
 That ringed the earth with stones of praise,
 Roofed Karnak's hall of gods, and laid
 The plinths of Philæ's colonnade.
 Still less He owns the selfish good
 And sickly growth of solitude,—
 The worthless grace that, out of sight, 55
 Flowers in the desert anchorite ;
 Dissevered from the suffering whole,
 Love hath no power to save a soul.
 Not out of Self, the origin
 And native air and soil of sin, 60
 The living waters spring and flow,
 The trees with leaves of healing grow.

'Dream not, O friend, because I seek
 This quiet shelter twice a week,
 I better deem its pine-laid floor 65
 Than breezy hill or sea-sung shore ;
 But nature is not solitude :
 She crowds us with her thronging wood ;
 Her many hands reach out to us,
 Her many tongues are garrulous ; 70
 Perpetual riddles of surprise
 She offers to our ears and eyes ;
 She will not leave our senses still,
 But drags them captive at her will :
 And, making earth too great for heaven,
 She hides the Giver in the given. 76

'And so I find it well to come
 For deeper rest to this still room,
 For here the habit of the soul
 Feels less the outer world's control ; 80
 The strength of mutual purpose pleads
 More earnestly our common needs ;
 And from the silence multiplied
 By these still forms on either side,
 The world that time and sense have known
 Falls off and leaves us God alone. 86

'Yet rarely through the charmed repose
 Unmixed the stream of motive flows,
 A flavor of its many springs,
 The tints of earth and sky it brings ; 90
 In the still waters needs must be
 Some shade of human sympathy ;
 And here, in its accustomed place,
 I look on memory's dearest face ;
 The blind by-sitter guesseth not 95
 What shadow haunts that vacant spot ;
 No eyes save mine alone can see
 The love wherewith it welcomes me !
 And still, with those alone my kin,
 In doubt and weakness, want and sin, 100
 I bow my head, my heart I bare,
 As when that face was living there,
 And strive (too oft, alas ! in vain)
 The peace of simple trust to gain,
 Fold fancy's restless wings, and lay 105
 The idols of my heart away.

'Welcome the silence all unbroken,
 Nor less the words of fitness spoken,—
 Such golden words as hers for whom
 Our autumn flowers have just made room ;
 Whose hopeful utterance through and 111
 through
 The freshness of the morning blew ;
 Who loved not less the earth that light
 Fell on it from the heavens in sight,
 But saw in all fair forms more fair 115
 The Eternal beauty mirrored there.
 Whose eighty years but added grace
 And saintlier meaning to her face,—
 The look of one who bore away
 Glad tidings from the hills of day, 120
 While all our hearts went forth to meet
 The coming of her beautiful feet !
 Or haply hers, whose pilgrim tread
 Is in the paths where Jesus led ;

- Who dreams her childhood's sabbath dream 125
- By Jordan's willow-shaded stream,
And, of the hymns of hope and faith,
Sung by the monks of Nazareth,
Hears pious echoes, in the call
To prayer, from Moslem minarets fall, 130
Repeating where His works were wrought
The lesson that her Master taught,
Of whom an elder Sibyl gave,
The prophecies of Cumæ's cave !
- ' I ask no organ's soulless breath 135
To drone the themes of life and death,
No altar candle-lit by day,
No ornate wordsman's rhetoric-play,
No cool philosophy to teach
Its bland audacities of speech 140
To double-tasked idolaters
Themselves their gods and worshippers,
No pulpit hammered by the fist
Of loud-asserting dogmatist,
Who borrows for the Hand of love 145
The smoking thunderbolts of Jove.
I know how well the fathers taught,
What work the later schoolmen wrought ;
I reverence old-time faith and men,
But God is near us now as then ; 150
His force of love is still unspent,
His hate of sin as imminent ;
And still the measure of our needs
Outgrows the cramping bounds of creeds ;
The manna gathered yesterday 155
Already savors of decay ;
Doubts to the world's child-heart unknown
Question us now from star and stone ;
Too little or too much we know,
And sight is swift and faith is slow ; 160
The power is lost to self-deceive
With shallow forms of make-believe.
We walk at high noon, and the bells
Call to a thousand oracles,
But the sound deafens, and the light 165
Is stronger than our dazzled sight ;
The letters of the sacred Book
Glimmer and swim beneath our look ;
Still struggles in the Age's breast
With deepening agony of quest 170
The old entreaty : " Art Thou He,
Or look we for the Christ to be ? "
- ' God should be most where man is least :
So, where is neither church nor priest,
And never rag of form or creed 175
To clothe the nakedness of need,—
Where farmer-folk in silence meet,—
I turn my bell-unsummoned feet ;
I lay the critic's glass aside,
I tread upon my lettered pride, 180
And, lowest-seated, testify
To the oneness of humanity ;
Confess the universal want,
And share whatever Heaven may grant.
He findeth not who seeks his own, 185
The soul is lost that's saved alone.
Not on one favored forehead fell
Of old the fire-tongued miracle,
But flamed o'er all the thronging host
The baptism of the Holy Ghost ; 190
Heart answers heart : in one desire
The blending lines of prayer aspire ;
" Where, in My name, meet two or three,"
Our Lord hath said, " I there will be ! "
- ' So sometimes comes to soul and sense 195
The feeling which is evidence
That very near about us lies
The realm of spiritual mysteries.
The sphere of the supernal powers
Impinges on this world of ours. 200
The low and dark horizon lifts,
To light the scenic terror shifts ;
The breath of a diviner air
Blows down the answer of a prayer :
That all our sorrow, pain, and doubt 205
A great compassion clasps about,
And law and goodness, love and force,
Are wedded fast beyond divorce.
Then duty leaves to love its task,
The beggar Self forgets to ask ; 210
With smile of trust and folded hands,
The passive soul in waiting stands
To feel, as flowers the sun and dew,
The One true Life its own renew.
- ' So to the calmly gathered thought 215
The innermost of truth is taught,
The mystery dimly understood,
That love of God is love of good,
And, chiefly, its divinest trace
In Him of Nazareth's holy face ; 220
That to be saved is only this,— Salvation from our selfishness,

From more than elemental fire,
The soul's unsanctified desire,
From sin itself, and not the pain 225
That warns us of its chafing chain;
That worship's deeper meaning lies
In mercy, and not sacrifice,
Not proud humilities of sense
And posturing of penitence, 230
But love's unforced obedience;
That Book and Church and Day are given
For man, not God,—for earth, not
heaven,—
The blessed means to holiest ends,
Not masters, but benignant friends; 235
That the dear Christ dwells not afar,
The king of some remoter star,
Listening, at times, with flattered ear
To homage wrung from selfish fear,
But here, amidst the poor and blind, 240
The bound and suffering of our kind,
In works we do, in prayers we pray,
Life of our life, He lives to-day.'

THE CLEAR VISION.

I DID but dream. I never knew
What charms our sternest season wore.
Was never yet the sky so blue,
Was never earth so white before.
Till now I never saw the glow 5
Of sunset on yon hills of snow,
And never learned the bough's designs
Of beauty in its leafless lines.
Did ever such a morning break
As that my eastern windows see? 10
Did ever such a moonlight take
Weird photographs of shrub and tree?
Rang ever bells so wild and fleet
The music of the winter street?
Was ever yet a sound by half 15
So merry as yon school-boy's laugh?
O Earth! with gladness overfraught,
No added charm thy face hath found;
Within my heart the change is wrought,
My footsteps make enchanted ground. 20
From couch of pain and curtained room
Forth to thy light and air I come,
To find in all that meets my eyes
The freshness of a glad surprise.

Fair seem these winter days, and soon 25 Shall blow the warm west-winds of
spring,
To set the unbound rills in tune
And hither urge the bluebird's wing.
The vales shall laugh in flowers, the woods
Grow misty green with leafing buds, 30
And violets and wind-flowers sway
Against the throbbing heart of May.
Break forth, my lips, in praise, and own
The wiser love severely kind;
Since, richer for its chastening grown, 35
I see, whereas I once was blind.
The world, O Father! hath not wronged
With loss the life by Thee prolonged;
But still, with every added year,
More beautiful Thy works appear! 40
As Thou hast made Thy world without,
Make Thou more fair my world within;
Shine through its lingering clouds of
doubt;
Rebuke its haunting shapes of sin;
Fill, brief or long, my granted span 45
Of life with love to Thee and man;
Strike when Thou wilt the hour of rest,
But let my last days be my best!
2d mo., 1868.

DIVINE COMPASSION.

LONG since, a dream of heaven I had,
And still the vision haunts me oft;
I see the saints in white robes clad,
The martyrs with their palms aloft;
But hearing still, in middle song, 5
The ceaseless dissonance of wrong;
And shrinking, with hid faces, from the strain
Of sad, beseeching eyes, full of remorse and pain.
The glad song falters to a wail,
The harping sinks to low lament; 10
Before the still unlifted veil
I see the crown'd foreheads bent,
Making more sweet the heavenly air
With breathings of unselfish prayer;
And a Voice saith: 'O Pity which is pain,
O Love that weeps, fill up My sufferings which remain! 16

'Shall souls redeemed by Me refuse
To share My sorrow in their turn ?
Or, sin-forgiven, My gift abuse
Of peace with selfish unconcern ? 20
Has saintly ease no pitying care ?
Has faith no work, and love no prayer ?
While sin remains, and souls in darkness
dwell,
Can heaven itself be heaven, and look unmoved on hell ?'

Then through the Gates of Pain, I dream,
A wind of heaven blows coolly in ; 26
Fainter the awful discords seem,
The smoke of torment grows more thin,
Tears quench the burning soil, and thence
Spring sweet, pale flowers of penitence :
And through the dreary realm of man's despair, 31
Star-crowned an angel walks, and lo !
God's hope is there !

Is it a dream ? Is heaven so high
That pity cannot breathe its air ?
Its happy eyes forever dry, 35
Its holy lips without a prayer !
My God ! my God ! if thither led
By Thy free grace unmerited,
No crown nor palm be mine, but let me
keep
A heart that still can feel, and eyes that still can weep. 40

THE PRAYER-SEEKER.

ALONG the aisle where prayer was made,
A woman, all in black arrayed,
Close-veiled, between the kneeling host,
With gliding motion of a ghost,
Passed to the desk, and laid thereon 5
A scroll which bore these words alone,
Pray for me !

Back from the place of worshipping
She glided like a guilty thing :
The rustle of her draperies, stirred 10
By hurrying feet, alone was heard ;
While, full of awe, the preacher read,
As out into the dark she sped :
Pray for me !

Back to the night from whence she
came, 15
To unimagined grief or shame !
Across the threshold of that door
None knew the burden that she bore ;
Alone she left the written scroll,
The legend of a troubled soul,— 20
Pray for me !

Glide on, poor ghost of woe or sin !
Thou leav'st a common need within ;
Each bears, like thee, some nameless
weight,
Some misery inarticulate, 25
Some secret sin, some shrouded dread,
Some household sorrow all unsaid.
Pray for us !

Pass on ! The type of all thou art,
Sad witness to the common heart ! 30
With face in veil and seal on lip,
In mute and strange companionship,
Like thee we wander to and fro,
Dumbly imploring as we go :
Pray for us ! 35

Ah, who shall pray, since he who pleads
Our want perchance hath greater needs ?
Yet they who make their loss the gain
Of others shall not ask in vain,
And Heaven bends low to hear the
prayer 40
Of love from lips of self-despair :
Pray for us !

In vain remorse and fear and hate
Beat with bruised hands against a fate
Whose walls of iron only move 45
And open to the touch of love.
He only feels his burdens fall
Who, taught by suffering, pities all.
Pray for us !

He prayeth best who leaves unguessed 50
The mystery of another's breast.
Why cheeks grow pale, why eyes o'er-
flow,
Or heads are white, thou need'st not know.
Enough to note by many a sign
That every heart hath needs like thine. 55
Pray for us !

THE BREWING OF SOMA.

'These libations mixed with milk have been prepared for Indra; offer Soma to the drinker of Soma.'—Vashista, translated by MAX MÜLLER.

THE fagots blazed, the caldron's smoke
Up through the green wood curled;
'Bring honey from the hollow oak,
Bring milky sap,' the brewers spoke,
In the childhood of the world.

And brewed they well or brewed they ill,
The priests thrust in their rods,
First tasted, and then drank their fill,
And shouted, with one voice and will,
'Behold the drink of gods!'

They drank, and lo! in heart and brain
A new, glad life began;
The gray of hair grew young again,
The sick man laughed away his pain,
The cripple leaped and ran.

'Drink, mortals, what the gods have sent,
Forget your long annoy.'
So sang the priests. From tent to tent
The Soma's sacred madness went,
A storm of drunken joy.

Then knew each rapt inebriate
A winged and glorious birth,
Soared upward, with strange joy elate,
Beat, with dazed head, Varuna's gate,
And, sobered, sank to earth.

The land with Soma's praises rang;
On Gihon's banks of shade
Its hymns the dusky maidens sang;
In joy of life or mortal pang
All men to Soma prayed.

The morning twilight of the race
Sends down these matin psalms;
And still with wondering eyes we trace
The simple prayers to Soma's grace,
That Vedic verse embalms.

As in that child-world's early year,
Each after age has striven
By music, incense, vigils drear,
And trance, to bring the skies more near,
Or lift men up to heaven!

Some fever of the blood and brain,
Some self-exalting spell,
The scourger's keen delight of pain,
The Dervish dance, the Orphic strain,
The wild-haired Bacchant's yell,—

The desert's hair-grown hermit sunk
The saner brute below;
The naked Santon, hashish-drunk,
The cloister madness of the monk,
The fakir's torture-show!

And yet the past comes round again,
And new doth old fulfil;
In sensual transports wild as vain
We brew in many a Christian fane
The heathen Soma still!

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Forgive our foolish ways!
Reclothe us in our rightful mind,
In purer lives Thy service find,
In deeper reverence, praise.

In simple trust like theirs who heard
Beside the Syrian sea
The gracious calling of the Lord,
Let us, like them, without a word,
Rise up and follow Thee.

O Sabbath rest by Galilee!
O calm of hills above,
Where Jesus knelt to share with Thee
The silence of eternity
Interpreted by love!

With that deep hush subduing all
Our words and works that drown
The tender whisper of Thy call,
As noiseless let Thy blessing fall
As fell Thy manna down.

Drop Thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace.

Breathe through the heats of our desire
 Thy coolness and Thy balm ;
 Let sense be dumb, let flesh retire ,
 Speak through the earthquake, wind, and
 fire,
 O still, small voice of calm ! 85

A WOMAN.

Oh, dwarfed and wronged, and stained with ill,
 Behold ! thou art a woman still !
 And, by that sacred name and dear,
 I bid thy better self appear.
 Still, through thy foul disguise, I see 5
 The rudimental purity,
 That, spite of change and loss, makes good
 Thy birthright-claim of womanhood ;
 An inward loathing, deep, intense ;
 A shame that is half innocence, 10
 Cast off the grave-clothes of thy sin !
 Rise from the dust thou liest in,
 As Mary rose at Jesus' word,
 Redeemed and white before the Lord !
 Reclaim thy lost soul ! In His name, 15
 Rise up, and break thy bonds of shame.
 Art weak ? He's strong. Art fearful ?
 Hear
 The world's O'ercomer : ' Be of cheer !'
 What lip shall judge when He approves ?
 Who dare to scorn the child He loves ? 20

THE PRAYER OF AGASSIZ.

The island of Penikese in Buzzard's Bay was given by Mr John Anderson to Agassiz for the uses of a summer school of natural history. A large barn was cleared and improvised as a lecture-room. Here, on the first morning of the school, all the company was gathered. 'Agassiz had arranged no programme of exercises,' says Mrs. Agassiz, in Louis Agassiz ; his Life and Correspondence, 'trusting to the interest of the occasion to suggest what might best be said or done. But, as he looked upon his pupils gathered there to study nature with him, by an impulse as natural as it was unpremeditated, he called upon them to join in silently asking God's blessing on their work together. The pause was broken by the first words of an address no less fervent than its unspoken prelude.' This was in the summer of 1873, and Agassiz died the December following.

On the isle of Penikese,
 Ringed about by sapphire seas,
 Fanned by breezes salt and cool,
 Stood the Master with his school.
 Over sails that not in vain 5
 Wooed the west-wind's steady strain,
 Line of coast that low and far
 Stretched its undulating bar,
 Wings aslant across the rim
 Of the waves they stooped to skim, 10
 Rock and isle and glistening bay,
 Fell the beautiful white day.

Said the Master to the youth :
 ' We have come in search of truth,
 Trying with uncertain key 15
 Door by door of mystery ;
 We are reaching, through His laws,
 To the garment-hem of Cause,
 Him, the endless, unbegun,
 The Unnamable, the One 20
 Light of all our light the Source,
 Life of life, and Force of force.
 As with fingers of the blind,
 We are groping here to find
 What the hieroglyphics mean 25
 Of the Unseen in the seen,
 What the Thought which underlies
 Nature's masking and disguise,
 What it is that hides beneath
 Blight and bloom and birth and death. 30
 By past efforts unavailing,
 Doubt and error, loss and failing,
 Of our weakness made aware,
 On the threshold of our task
 Let us light and guidance ask, 35
 Let us pause in silent prayer !'

Then the Master in his place
 Bowed his head a little space,
 And the leaves by soft airs stirred,
 Lapse of wave and cry of bird, 40
 Left the solemn hush unbroken
 Of that wordless prayer unspoken,
 While its wish, on earth unsaid,
 Rose to heaven interpreted.
 As, in life's best hours, we hear 45
 By the spirit's finer ear

His low voice within us, thus
The All-Father heareth us ;
And His holy ear we pain
With our noisy words and vain.
Not for Him our violence
Storming at the gates of sense,
His the primal language, His
The eternal silences !

Even the careless heart was moved,
And the doubting gave assent,
With a gesture reverent,
To the Master well-beloved.
As thin mists are glorified
By the light they cannot hide,
All who gazed upon him saw,
Through its veil of tender awe,
How his face was still uplit
By the old sweet look of it,
Hopeful, trustful, full of cheer,
And the love that casts out fear.
Who the secret may declare
Of that brief, unuttered prayer ?
Did the shade before him come
Of th' inevitable doom,
Of the end of earth so near,
And Eternity's new year ?

In the lap of sheltering seas
Rests the isle of Penikese ;
But the lord of the domain
Comes not to his own again :
Where the eyes that follow fail,
On a vaster sea his sail
Drifts beyond our beck and hail.
Other lips within its bound
Shall the laws of life expound ;
Other eyes from rock and shell
Read the world's old riddles well :
But when breezes light and bland
Blow from Summer's blossomed land,
When the air is glad with wings,
And the blithe song-sparrow sings,
Many an eye with his still face
Shall the living ones displace,
Many an ear the word shall seek
He alone could fitly speak.
And one name forevermore
Shall be uttered o'er and o'er
By the waves that kiss the shore,
By the curlew's whistle sent
Down the cool, sea-scented air ;

In all voices known to her,
Nature owns her worshipper,
Half in triumph, half lament.
Thither Love shall tearful turn,
Friendship pause uncovered there,
And the wisest reverence learn
From the Master's silent prayer.
1873.

IN QUEST.

HAVE I not voyaged, friend beloved, with thee
On the great waters of the unsounded sea,
Momently listening with suspended oar
For the low rote of waves upon a shore
Changeless as heaven, where never fog-cloud drifts
Over its windless wood, nor mirage lifts
The steadfast hills ; where never birds of doubt
Sing to mislead, and every dream dies
out,
And the dark riddles which perplex us
here
In the sharp solvent of its light are clear ?
Thou knowest how vain our quest ; how,
soon or late,
The baffling tides and circles of debate
Swept back our bark unto its starting-
place,
Where, looking forth upon the blank,
gray space,
And round about us seeing, with sad eyes,
The same old difficult hills and cloud-cold
skies,
We said : ' This outward search availeth
not
To find Him. He is farther than we
thought,
Or, haply, nearer. To this very spot Whereon we wait, this commonplace of
home,
As to the well of Jacob, He may come
And tell us all things.' As I listened
there,
Through the expectant silences of prayer,
Somewhat I seemed to hear, which hath
to me
Been hope, strength, comfort, and I give it thee.

'The riddle of the world is understood
Only by him who feels that God is good,
As only he can feel who makes his love
The ladder of his faith, and climbs above
On th' rounds of his best instincts; draws no line 30

Between mere human goodness and divine,
But, judging God by what in him is best,
With a child's trust leans on a Father's
breast,

And hears unmoved the old creeds babble
still

Of kingly power and dread caprice of will,
Chary of blessing, prodigal of curse, 36
The pitiless doomsman of the universe.

Can Hatred ask for love? Can Selfishness
Invite to self-denial? Is He less Than man in kindly dealing? Can He break 40

His own great law of fatherhood, forsake
And curse His children? Not for earth
and heaven

Can separate tables of the law be given.
No rule can bind which He himself denies;
The truths of time are not eternal lies.' 45

So heard I; and the chaos round me
spread

To light and order grew; and, 'Lord,'
I said,

'Our sins are our tormentors, worst of all Felt in distrustful shame that dares not
call

Upon Thee as our Father. We have set
A strange god up, but Thou remainest
yet. 51

All that I feel of pity Thou hast known
Before I was; my best is all Thy own.

From Thy great heart of goodness mine but drew

Wishes and prayers; but Thou, O Lord, wilt do, 55

In Thy own time, by ways I cannot see,
All that I feel when I am nearest Thee!'
1873.

THE FRIEND'S BURIAL.

My thoughts are all in yonder town,
Where, wept by many tears,
To-day my mother's friend lays down
The burden of her years.

True as in life, no poor disguise 5
Of death with her is seen,
And on her simple casket lies
No wreath of bloom and green.

Oh, not for her the florist's art,
The mocking weeds of woe; 10
Dear memories in each mourner's heart
Like heaven's white lilies blow.

And all about the softening air
Of new-born sweetness tells,
And the ungathered May-flowers wear 15
The tints of ocean shells.

The old, assuring miracle
Is fresh as heretofore;
And earth takes up its parable
Of life from death once more. 20

Here organ-swell and church-bell toll
Methinks but discord were;
The prayerful silence of the soul
Is best befitting her.

No sound should break the quietude 25
Alike of earth and sky;
O wandering wind in Seabrook wood,
Breathe but a half-heard sigh!

Sing softly, spring-bird, for her sake;
And thou not distant sea, 30
Lapse lightly as if Jesus spake,
And thou wert Galilee!

For all her quiet life flowed on
As meadow streamlets flow,
Where fresher green reveals alone 35
The noiseless ways they go.

From her loved place of prayer I see
The plain-robed mourners pass,
With slow feet treading reverently
The graveyard's springing grass. 40

Make room, O mourning ones, for me,
Where, like the friends of Paul,
That you no more her face shall see
You sorrow most of all.

Her path shall brighten more and more 45
Unto the perfect day;
She cannot fail of peace who bore
Such peace with her away.

O sweet, calm face that seemed to wear
The look of sins forgiven ! 50
O voice of prayer that seemed to bear
Our own needs up to heaven !

How reverent in our midst she stood,
Or knelt in grateful praise !
What grace of Christian womanhood 55
Was in her household ways !

For still her holy living meant
No duty left undone ;
The heavenly and the human blent
Their kindred loves in one. 60

And if her life small leisure found
For feasting ear and eye,
And Pleasure, on her daily round,
She passed unpausing by,

Yet with her went a secret sense 65
Of all things sweet and fair,
And Beauty's gracious providence
Refreshed her unaware.

She kept her line of rectitude
With love's unconscious ease ; 70
Her kindly instincts understood
All gentle courtesies.

An inborn charm of graciousness
Made sweet her smile and tone,
And glorified her farm-wife dress 75
With beauty not its own.

The dear Lord's best interpreters
Are humble human souls ;
The Gospel of a life like hers
Is more than books or scrolls. 80

From scheme and creed the light goes out,
The saintly fact survives ;
The blessed Master none can doubt
Revealed in holy lives.

A CHRISTMAS CARMEN.

I.

SOUND over all waters, reach out from all
lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of
hands ;

Sing hymns that were sung by the stars
of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was
born !

With glad jubilations 5
Bring hope to the nations !
The dark night is ending and dawn has
begun :

Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the
sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts
beat as one !

II.

Sing the bridal of nations ! with chorals of love 10
Sing out the war-vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the hearts of the peoples keep time
in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord !

Clasp hands of the nations
In strong gratulations : 15
The dark night is ending and dawn has
begun ;

Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the
sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat
as one !

III.

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of
peace ;
East, west, north, and south let the long quarrel cease : 20
Sing the song of great joy that the angels
began,
Sing of glory to God and of good-will to
man !

Hark ! joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us !
The dark night is ending and dawn has
begun ; 25

Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the
sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat
as one !

1873.

VESTA.

O CHRIST of God ! whose life and death
Our own have reconciled,
Most quietly, most tenderly
Take home Thy star-named child !

Thy grace is in her patient eyes,
Thy words are on her tongue ;
The very silence round her seems
As if the angels sung.

Her smile is as a listening child's
Who hears its mother call ;
The lilies of Thy perfect peace
About her pillow fall.

She leans from out our clinging arms
To rest herself in Thine ;
Alone to Thee, dear Lord, can we
Our well-beloved resign !

Oh, less for her than for ourselves
We bow our heads and pray ;
Her setting star, like Bethlehem's,
To Thee shall point the way !
1874.

CHILD-SONGS.

STILL linger in our noon of time
And on our Saxon tongue
The echoes of the home-born hymns
The Aryan mothers sung.

And childhood had its litanies
In every age and clime ;
The earliest cradles of the race
Were rocked to poet's rhyme.

Nor sky, nor wave, nor tree, nor flower,
Nor green earth's virgin sod,
So moved the singer's heart of old
As these small ones of God.

The mystery of unfolding life
Was more than dawning morn,
Than opening flower or crescent moon
The human soul new-born !

And still to childhood's sweet appeal
The heart of genius turns,
And more than all the sages teach
From lisping voices learns, — 20

The voices loved of him who sang,
Where Tweed and Teviot glide,
That sound to-day on all the winds
That blow from Rydal-side, —

Heard in the Teuton's household songs,
And folk-lore of the Finn,
Where'er to holy Christmas hearths
The Christ-child enters in ! 26

Before life's sweetest mystery still
The heart in reverence kneels ;
The wonder of the primal birth
The latest mother feels. 30

We need love's tender lessons taught
As only weakness can ;
God hath His small interpreters ;
The child must teach the man. 35

We wander wide through evil years,
Our eyes of faith grow dim ;
But he is freshest from His hands
And nearest unto Him ! 40

And haply, pleading long with Him
For sin-sick hearts and cold,
The angels of our childhood still
The Father's face behold.

Of such the kingdom !—Teach Thou us,
O Master most divine, 46
To feel the deep significance
Of these wise words of Thine !

The haughty eye shall seek in vain
What innocence beholds ;
No cunning finds the key of heaven,
No strength its gate unfolds. 50

Alone to guilelessness and love
That gate shall open fall ;
The mind of pride is nothingness,
The childlike heart is all ! 55

THE HEALER.

TO A YOUNG PHYSICIAN, WITH DORÉ'S
PICTURE OF CHRIST HEALING THE SICK.

So stood of old the holy Christ
Amidst the suffering throng ;
With whom His lightest touch sufficed
To make the weakest strong.

That healing gift He lends to them 5
Who use it in His name ;
The power that filled His garment's hem
Is evermore the same.

For lo ! in human hearts unseen
The Healer dwelleth still, 10
And they who make His temples clean
The best subserve His will.

The holiest task by Heaven decreed,
An errand all divine,
The burden of our common need 15
To render less is thine.

The paths of pain are thine. Go forth
With patience, trust, and hope ;
The sufferings of a sin-sick earth
Shall give thee ample scope. 20

Beside the unveiled mysteries
Of life and death go stand,
With guarded lips and reverent eyes
And pure of heart and hand.

So shalt thou be with power endued 25
From Him who went about
The Syrian hillsides doing good,
And casting demons out.

That Good Physician liveth yet
Thy friend and guide to be ; 30
The Healer by Gennesaret
Shall walk the rounds with thee.
1875.

THE TWO ANGELS.

GOD called the nearest angels who dwell with Him above :
The tenderest one was Pity, the dearest
one was Love.

'Arise,' He said, 'My angels ! a wail of woe and sin
Steals through the gates of heaven, and saddens all within.

'My harps take up the mournful strain that from a lost world swells, 5
The smoke of torment clouds the light and blights the asphodels.

'Fly downward to that under world, and on its souls of pain
Let Love drop smiles like sunshine, and Pity tears like rain !'

Two faces bowed before the Throne, veiled in their golden hair ;
Four white wings lessened swiftly down
the dark abyss of air. 10

The way was strange, the flight was long ;
at last the angels came
Where swung the lost and nether world,
red-wrapped in rayless flame.

There Pity, shuddering, wept ; but Love,
with faith too strong for fear,
Took heart from God's almightiness and smiled a smile of cheer.

And lo ! that tear of Pity quenched the flame whereon it fell, 15
And, with the sunshine of that smile,
hope entered into hell !

Two unveiled faces full of joy looked upward to the Throne,
Four white wings folded at the feet of
Him who sat thereon !

And deeper than the sound of seas, more soft than falling flake,
Amidst the hush of wing and song the Voice Eternal spake : 20

'Welcome, My angels ! ye have brought a holier joy to heaven ;
Henceforth its sweetest song shall be the song of sin forgiven !'

1875.

OVERRULED.

THE threads our hands in blindness spin
No self-determined plan weaves in ;
The shuttle of the unseen powers
Works out a pattern not as ours.

Ah ! small the choice of him who sings 5
What sound shall leave the smitten
strings ;

Fate holds and guides the hand of art ;
The singer's is the servant's part.

The wind-harp chooses not the tone
That through its trembling threads is
blown ; 10

The patient organ cannot guess
What hand its passive keys shall press.

Through wish, resolve, and act, our will
Is moved by undreamed forces still ;
And no man measures in advance 15
His strength with untried circumstance.

As streams take hue from shade and sun,
As runs the life the song must run ;
But, glad or sad, to His good end
God grant the varying notes may tend ! 20

HYMN OF THE DUNKERS.

KLOSTER KEDAR, EPHRATA, PENNSYLVANIA (1738).

SISTER MARIA CHRISTINA sings.

WAKE, sisters, wake ! the day-star shines ;
Above Ephrata's eastern pines
The dawn is breaking, cool and calm.
Wake, sisters, wake to prayer and psalm !

Praised be the Lord for shade and light, 5
For toil by day, for rest by night !
Praised be His name who deigns to bless
Our Kedar of the wilderness !

Our refuge when the spoiler's hand
Was heavy on our native land ; 10
And freedom, to her children due,
The wolf and vulture only knew.

We praised Him when to prison led,
We owned Him when the stake blazed
red ;

We knew, whatever might befall, 15
His love and power were over all.

He heard our prayers ; with outstretched
arm

He led us forth from cruel harm ;
Still, wheresoe'er our steps were bent,
His cloud and fire before us went ! 20

The watch of faith and prayer He set,
We kept it then, we keep it yet.
At midnight, crow of cock, or noon,
He cometh sure, He cometh soon.

He comes to chasten, not destroy, 25
To purge the earth from sin's alloy.
At last, at last shall all confess
His mercy as His righteousness.

The dead shall live, the sick be whole,
The scarlet sin be white as wool ; 30
No discord mar below, above,
The music of eternal love !

Sound, welcome trump, the last alarm !
Lord God of hosts, make bare Thine arm,
Fulfil this day our long desire, 35
Make sweet and clean the world with fire !

Sweep, flaming besom, sweep from sight
The lies of time ; be swift to smite,
Sharp sword of God, all idols down,
Genevan creed and Roman crown. 40

Quake, earth, through all thy zones, till all

The fanes of pride and priestcraft fall ;
And lift thou up in place of them
Thy gates of pearl, Jerusalem !

Lo ! rising from baptismal flame, 45
Transfigured, glorious, yet the same,
Within the heavenly city's bound
Our Kloster Kedar shall be found.

He cometh soon ! at dawn or noon
Or set of sun, He cometh soon. 50
Our prayers shall meet Him on His way ;
Wake, sisters, wake ! arise and pray !

1877.

GIVING AND TAKING.

I have attempted to put in English verse
a prose translation of a poem by Tinnevalva,
a Hindoo poet of the third century of our era.

WHO gives and hides the giving hand,
Nor counts on favor, fame, or praise,
Shall find his smallest gift outweighs
The burden of the sea and land.

Who gives to whom hath naught been
given, 5
His gift in need, though small indeed
As is the grass-blade's wind-blown seed,
Is large as earth and rich as heaven.

Forget it not, O man, to whom
A gift shall fall, while yet on earth; 10
Yea, even to thy seven-fold birth
Recall it in the lives to come.

Who broods above a wrong in thought Sins much; but greater sin is his
Who, fed and clothed with kindnesses,
Shall count the holy alms as naught. 16

Who dares to curse the hands that bless
Shall know of sin the deadliest cost;
The patience of the heavens is lost
Beholding man's unthankfulness. 20

For he who breaks all laws may still
In Sivam's mercy be forgiven;
But none can save, in earth or heaven,
The wretch who answers good with ill.

THE VISION OF ECHARD.

THE Benedictine Echard
Sat by the wayside well,
Where Marsberg sees the bridal
Of the Sarre and the Moselle.

Fair with its sloping vineyards 5
And tawny chestnut bloom,
The happy vale Ansonius sung
For holy Treves made room.

On the shrine Helena builded
To keep the Christ coat well, 10
On minster tower and kloster cross,
The westering sunshine fell.

There, where the rock-hewn circles
O'erlooked the Roman's game,
The veil of sleep fell on him, 15
And his thought a dream became.

He felt the heart of silence
Throb with a soundless word,
And by the inward ear alone
A spirit's voice he heard. 20

And the spoken word seemed written
On air and wave and sod,
And the bending walls of sapphire
Blazed with the thought of God:

'What lack I, O My children? 25
All things are in My hand;
The vast earth and the awful stars
I hold as grains of sand.

'Need I your alms? The silver
And gold are Mine alone; 30
The gifts ye bring before Me
Were evermore My own.

'Heed I the noise of viols,
Your pomp of masque and show?
Have I not dawns and sunsets? 35
Have I not winds that blow?

'Do I smell your gums of incense?
Is My ear with chantings fed?
Taste I your wine of worship,
Or eat your holy bread? 40

'Of rank and name and honors
Am I vain as ye are vain?
What can Eternal Fulness
From your lip-service gain?

'Ye make Me not your debtor 45
Who serve yourselves alone;
Ye boast to Me of homage
Whose gain is all your own.

'For you I gave the prophets,
For you the Psalmist's lay: 50
For you the law's stone tables,
And holy book and day.

'Ye change to weary burdens The helps that should uplift; Ye lose in form the spirit, The Giver in the gift.	55	'His love all love exceeding The heart must needs recall, Its self-surrendering freedom, Its loss that gaineth all.	100
'Who called ye to self-torment, To fast and penance vain? Dream ye Eternal Goodness Has joy in mortal pain?	60	'Climb not the holy mountains, Their eagles know not Me; Seek not the Blessed Islands, I dwell not in the sea.
'For the death in life of Nitria, For your Chartreuse ever dumb, What better is the neighbor, Or happier the home?		'Gone is the mount of Meru, The triple gods are gone, And, deaf to all the lama's prayers, The Buddha slumbers on.	105
'Who counts his brother's welfare As sacred as his own, And loves, forgives, and pities, He serveth Me alone.	65	'No more from rocky Horeb The smitten waters gush; Fallen is Bethel's ladder, Quenched is the burning bush.	110
'I note each gracious purpose, Each kindly word and deed; Are ye not all My children? Shall not the Father heed?	70	'The jewels of the Urim And Thummim all are dim; The fire has left the altar, The sign the teraphim.	115
'No prayer for light and guidance Is lost upon Mine ear: The child's cry in the darkness Shall not the Father hear?	75	'No more in ark or hill grove The Holiest abides; Not in the scroll's dead letter The eternal secret hides.	120
'I loathe your wrangling councils, I tread upon your creeds; Who made ye Mine avengers, Or told ye of My needs;	80	'The eye shall fail that searches For Me the hollow sky; The far is even as the near, The low is as the high.
'I bless men and ye curse them, I love them and ye hate; Ye bite and tear each other, I suffer long and wait.		'What if the earth is hiding Her old faiths, long outworn? What is it to the changeless truth That yours shall fail in turn?	125
'Ye bow to ghastly symbols, To cross and scourge and thorn; Ye seek His Syrian manger Who in the heart is born.	85	'What if the o'erturned altar Lays bare the ancient lie? What if the dreams and legends Of the world's childhood die?	130
'For the dead Christ, not the living, Ye watch His empty grave, Whose life alone within you Has power to bless and save.	90	'Have ye not still My witness Within yourselves alway, My hand that on the keys of life For bliss or bale I lay?	135
'O blind ones, onward groping, The idle quest forego; Who listens to His inward voice Alone of Him shall know.	95	'Still, in perpetual judgment, I hold assize within, With sure reward of holiness, And dread rebuke of sin.	140

'A light, a guide, a warning,
A presence ever near,
Through the deep silence of the flesh
I reach the inward ear.

'My Gerizim and Ebal 145
Are in each human soul,
The still, small voice of blessing,
And Sinai's thunder-roll.

'The stern behest of duty,
The doom-book open thrown, 150
The heaven ye seek, the hell ye fear,
Are with yourselves alone.'

A gold and purple sunset
Flowed down the broad Moselle ;
On hills of vine and meadow lands 155
The peace of twilight fell.

A slow, cool wind of evening
Blew over leaf and bloom ;
And, faint and far, the Angelus
Rang from Saint Matthew's tomb. 160

Then up rose Master Echard,
And marvelled : 'Can it be
That here, in dream and vision,
The Lord hath talked with me ?'

He went his way ; behind him 165
The shrines of saintly dead,
The holy coat and nail of cross,
He left unvisited.

He sought the vale of Eltzbach
His burdened soul to free, 170
Where the foot-hills of the Eifel
Are glassed in Laachersee.

And, in his Order's kloster,
He sat, in night-long parle,
With Tauler of the Friends of God, 175
And Nicolas of Basle.

And lo ! the twain made answer :
'Yea, brother, even thus
The Voice above all voices
Hath spoken unto us. 180

'The world will have its idols,
And flesh and sense their sign :
But the blinded eyes shall open,
And the gross ear be fine.

'What if the vision tarry ? 185
God's time is always best ;
The true Light shall be witnessed,
The Christ within confessed.

'In mercy or in judgment
He shall turn and overturn, 190
Till the heart shall be His temple
Where all of Him shall learn.'

INSCRIPTIONS.

ON A SUN-DIAL.

FOR DR. HENRY I. BOWDITCH.

WITH warning hand I mark Time's rapid flight
From life's glad morning to its solemn
night ;
Yet, through the dear God's love, I also
show
There's Light above me by the Shade
below.
1879.

ON A FOUNTAIN.

FOR DOROTHEA L. DIX.

STRANGER and traveller,
Drink freely and bestow
A kindly thought on her
Who bade this fountain flow,
Yet hath no other claim 5
Than as the minister
Of blessing in God's name.
Drink, and in His peace go !
1879.

THE MINISTER'S DAUGHTER.

In the minister's morning sermon
He had told of the primal fall,
And how thenceforth the wrath of God
Rested on each and all.
And how of His will and pleasure, 5
All souls, save a chosen few,
Were doomed to the quenchless burning.
And held in the way thereto.

Yet never by faith's unreason
 A saintlier soul was tried,
 And never the harsh old lesson
 A tenderer heart belied.

And, after the painful service
 On that pleasant Sabbath day,
 He walked with his little daughter
 Through the apple-bloom of May.

Sweet in the fresh green meadows
 Sparrow and blackbird sung;
 Above him their tinted petals
 The blossoming orchards hung.

Around on the wonderful glory
 The minister looked and smiled;
 'How good is the Lord who gives us
 These gifts from His hand, my child!

'Behold in the bloom of apples
 And the violets in the sward
 A hint of the old, lost beauty
 Of the Garden of the Lord!'

Then up spake the little maiden,
 Treading on snow and pink:
 'O father! these pretty blossoms
 Are very wicked, I think.

'Had there been no Garden of Eden
 There never had been a fall;
 And if never a tree had blossomed
 God would have loved us all.'

'Hush, child!' the father answered,
 'By His decree man fell;
 His ways are in clouds and darkness,
 But He doeth all things well.

'And whether by His ordaining
 To us cometh good or ill,
 Joy or pain, or light or shadow,
 We must fear and love Him still.'

'Oh, I fear Him!' said the daughter,
 'And I try to love Him, too;
 But I wish He was good and gentle,
 Kind and loving as you.'

The minister groaned in spirit
 As the tremulous lips of pain
 And wide, wet eyes uplifted
 Questioned his own in vain.

Bowing his head he pondered
 The words of the little one;
 Had he erred in his life-long teaching?
 Had he wrong to his Master done?

To what grim and dreadful idol
 Had he lent the holiest name?
 Did his own heart, loving and human,
 The God of his worship shame?

And lo! from the bloom and greenness,
 From the tender skies above,
 And the face of his little daughter,
 He read a lesson of love.

No more as the cloudy terror
 Of Sinai's mount of law,
 But as Christ in the Syrian lilies
 The vision of God he saw.

And, as when, in the clefts of Horeb,
 Of old was His presence known,
 The dread Ineffable Glory
 Was Infinite Goodness alone.

Thereafter his hearers noted
 In his prayers a tenderer strain,
 And never the gospel of hatred
 Burned on his lips again.

And the scoffing tongue was prayerful,
 And the blinded eyes found sight,
 And hearts, as flint aforetime,
 Grew soft in his warmth and light.

1880.

BY THEIR WORKS.

CALL him not heretic whose works attest
 His faith in goodness by no creed confessed.
 Whatever in love's name is truly done
 To free the bound and lift the fallen one Is done to Christ. Whoso in deed and
 word

Is not against Him labors for our Lord.
 When He, who, sad and weary, longing
 sore

For love's sweet service, sought the sisters'
 door,

One saw the heavenly, one the human
 guest,

But who shall say which loved the Master
 best?

1881.

THE WORD.

VOICE of the Holy Spirit, making known Man to himself, a witness swift and
 sure,
 Warning, approving, true and wise and pure,
 Counsel and guidance that misleadeth
 none!
 By thee the mystery of life is read; 5
 The picture-writing of the world's gray
 seers,
 The myths and parables of the primal
 years,
 Whose letter kills, by thee interpreted Take healthful meanings fitted to our needs,
 And in the soul's vernacular express 10
 The common law of simple righteousness.
 Hatred of cant and doubt of human creeds
 May well be felt: the unpardonable sin
 Is to deny the Word of God within!
 1881.

THE BOOK.

GALLERY of sacred pictures manifold,
 A minster rich in holy effigies,
 And bearing on entablature and frieze
 The hieroglyphic oracles of old.
 Along its transept aureoled martyrs sit; 5
 And the low chancel side-lights half acquaint
 The eye with shrines of prophet, bard,
 and saint,
 Their age-dimmed tablets traced in doubtful writ!
 But only when on form and word obscure Falls from above the white supernal
 light 10
 We read the mystic characters aright,
 And life informs the silent portraiture,
 Until we pause at last, awe-held, before
 The One ineffable Face, love, wonder, and adore.
 1881.

REQUIREMENT.

We live by Faith; but Faith is not the
 slave
 Of text and legend. Reason's voice and God's,
 Nature's and Duty's, never are at odds.
 What asks our Father of His children,
 save
 Justice and mercy and humility, 5
 A reasonable service of good deeds,
 Pure living, tenderness to human needs,
 Reverence and trust, and prayer for light
 to see
 The Master's footprints in our daily ways?
 No knotted scourge nor sacrificial knife,
 But the calm beauty of an ordered life
 Whose very breathing is unworded
 praise!— 12
 A life that stands as all true lives have
 stood,
 Firm-rooted in the faith that God is Good.
 1881.

HELP.

DREAM not, O Soul, that easy is the task
 Thus set before thee. If it proves at length
 As well it may, beyond thy natural
 strength,
 Faint not, despair not. As a child may ask
 A father, pray the Everlasting Good 5
 For light and guidance midst the subtle snares
 Of sin thick planted in life's thoroughfares,
 For spiritual strength and moral hardi-
 hood;
 Still listening, through the noise of time
 and sense,
 To the still whisper of the Inward
 Word; 10
 Bitter in blame, sweet in approval heard,
 Itself its own confirming evidence:
 To health of soul a voice to cheer and
 please,
 To guilt the wrath of the Eumenides.
 1881.

UTTERANCE.

BUT what avail inadequate words to reach
The innermost of Truth? Who shall essay,

Blinded and weak, to point and lead
the way,

Or solve the mystery in familiar speech?

Yet, if it be that something not thy own, 5
Some shadow of the Thought to which our schemes,

Creeds, cult, and ritual are at best but
dreams,

Is even to thy unorthodoxy made known,
Thou mayst not hide what yet thou shouldst not dare

To utter lightly, lest on lips of thine 10
The real seem false, the beauty un-divine.

So, weighing duty in the scale of prayer,
Give what seems given thee. It may prove a seed

Of goodness dropped in fallow-grounds of need.

ORIENTAL MAXIMS.

PARAPHRASE OF SANSKRIT TRANSLA-TIONS.

THE INWARD JUDGE.

From Institutes of Manu.

THE soul itself its awful witness is.
Say not in evil doing, 'No one sees,'
And so offend the conscious One within,
Whose ear can hear the silences of sin
Ere they find voice, whose eyes unsleeping see 5

The secret motions of iniquity.

Nor in thy folly say, 'I am alone.'
For, seated in thy heart, as on a throne,
The ancient Judge and Witness liveth still,
To note thy act and thought; and as thy
ill 10

Or good goes from thee, far beyond thy
reach,

The solemn Doomsman's seal is set on each.
1878.

LAYING UP TREASURE.

From the Mahābhārata.

BEFORE the Ender comes, whose charioteer
Is swift or slow Disease, lay up each year Thy harvests of well-doing, wealth that kings

Nor thieves can take away. When all the things

Thou callest thine, goods, pleasures, honors fall, 5

Thou in thy virtue shalt survive them all.
1881.

CONDUCT.

From the Mahābhārata.

HEED how thou livest. Do no act by day
Which from the night shall drive thy peace away.

In months of sun so live that months of
rain

Shall still be happy. Evermore restrain
Evil and cherish good, so shall there be 5
Another and a happier life for thee.

1881.

AN EASTER FLOWER GIFT.

O DEAREST bloom the seasons know,
Flowers of the Resurrection, blow,
Our hope and faith restore;
And through the bitterness of death
And loss and sorrow, breathe a breath 5
Of life forevermore!

The thought of Love Immortal blends
With fond remembrances of friends;
In you, O sacred flowers,
By human love made doubly sweet, 10
The heavenly and the earthly meet,
The heart of Christ and ours!

1882.

THE MYSTIC'S CHRISTMAS.

'ALL hail!' the bells of Christmas rang,
'All hail!' the monks at Christmas sang,
The merry monks who kept with cheer
The gladdest day of all their year.

But still apart, unmoved thereat, 5
A pious elder brother sat
Silent, in his accustomed place,
With God's sweet peace upon his face.

'Whysitt'st thou thus?' his brethren cried.
'It is the blessed Christmas-tide; 10
The Christmas lights are all aglow,
The sacred lilies bud and blow.

'Above our heads the joy-bells ring,
Without the happy children sing,
And all God's creatures hail the morn 15
On which the holy Christ was born!

'Rejoice with us; no more rebuke
Our gladness with thy quiet look.'
The gray monk answered: 'Keep, I pray,
Even as ye list, the Lord's birthday. 20

'Let heathen Yule fires flicker red Where thronged refectory feasts are spread;
With mystery-play and masque and mime
And wait-songs speed the holy time!

'The blindest faith may haply save; 25
The Lord accepts the things we have;
And reverence, howsoever it strays,
May find at last the shining ways.

'They needs must grope who cannot see,
The blade before the ear must be; 30
As ye are feeling I have felt,
And where ye dwell I too have dwelt.

'But now, beyond the things of sense,
Beyond occasions and events,
I know, through God's exceeding grace, 35
Release from form and time and place.

'I listen, from no mortal tongue,
To hear the song the angels sung;
And wait within myself to know
The Christmas lilies bud and blow. 40

'The outward symbols disappear
From him whose inward sight is clear;
And small must be the choice of days
To him who fills them all with praise!

'Keep while you need it, brothers mine, 45
With honest zeal your Christmas sign,
But judge not him who every morn
Feels in his heart the Lord Christ born!' 1882.

AT LAST.

[Recited by one of the little group of relations, who stood by the poet's bedside, as the last moment of his life approached.]

WHEN on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the winds from unsunned spaces
blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant, 5
Leave not its tenant when its walls
decay;
O Love Divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me
drifting;
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine, 10
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, my Father! let Thy spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm
I merit, 15
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place. 20

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,

And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing, 25
I fain would learn the new and holy
song,
And find at last, beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.
1882.

WHAT THE TRAVELLER SAID AT SUNSET.

THE shadows grow and deepen round me,
I feel the dew-fall in the air ;
The muezzin of the darkening thicket,
I hear the night-thrush call to prayer.

The evening wind is sad with farewells, 5
And loving hands unclasp from mine ;
Alone I go to meet the darkness
Across an awful boundary-line.

As from the lighted hearths behind me
I pass with slow, reluctant feet, 10
What waits me in the land of strangeness?
What face shall smile, what voice shall greet ?

What space shall awe, what brightness blind me ?
What thunder-roll of music stun ?
What vast processions sweep before me 15
Of shapes unknown beneath the sun ?

I shrink from unaccustomed glory,
I dread the myriad-voic'd strain ;
Give me the unforgotten faces,
And let my lost ones speak again. 20

He will not chide my mortal yearning
Who is our Brother and our Friend ;
In whose full life, divine and human,
The heavenly and the earthly blend.

Mine be the joy of soul-communion, 25
The sense of spiritual strength renewed,
The reverence for the pure and holy,
The dear delight of doing good.

No fitting ear is mine to listen
An endless anthem's rise and fall ; 30
No curious eye is mine to measure
The pearl gate and the jasper wall.

For love must needs be more than knowledge :

What matter if I never know
Why Aldebaran's star is ruddy, 35
Or warmer Sirius white as snow !

Forgive my human words, O Father !
I go Thy larger truth to prove ;
Thy mercy shall transcend my longing :
I seek but love, and Thou art Love ! 40

I go to find my lost and mourned for Safe in Thy sheltering goodness still,
And all that hope and faith foreshadow
Made perfect in Thy holy will !

1883.

'THE STORY OF IDA.'

Francesca Alexander, whose pen and pencil have so reverently transcribed the simple faith and life of the Italian peasantry, wrote the narrative published with John Ruskin's introduction under the title, The Story of Ida.

WEARY of jangling noises never stilled,
The skeptic's sneer, the bigot's hate,
the din
Of clashing texts, the webs of creed men spin

Round simple truth, the children grown who build

With gilded cards their new Jerusalem, 5
Busy, with sacerdotal tailorings
And tinsel gauds, bedizening holy
things,

I turn, with glad and grateful heart, from
them

To the sweet story of the Florentine Immortal in her blameless maiden-
hood, 10
Beautiful as God's angels and as
good ;

Feeling that life, even now, may be divine

With love no wrong can ever change to
hate,

No sin make less than all-compassionate !
1884.

THE LIGHT THAT IS FELT.⁷

A TENDER child of summers three,
 Seeking her little bed at night,
 Paused on the dark stair timidly.
 'Oh, mother! Take my hand,' said she,
 'And then the dark will all be light.' 5

We older children grope our way
 From dark behind to dark before;
 And only when our hands we lay,
 Dear Lord, in Thine, the night is day,
 And there is darkness nevermore. 10

Reach downward to the sunless days
 Wherein our guides are blind as we
 And faith is small and hope delays;
 Take Thou the hands of prayer we raise,
 And let us feel the light of Thee ' 15 1884.

THE TWO LOVES.

SMOOTHING soft the nestling head
 Of a maiden fancy-led,
 Thus a grave-eyed woman said:

'Richest gifts are those we make,
 Dearer than the love we take
 That we give for love's own sake. 5

'Well I know the heart's unrest;
 Mine has been the common quest,
 To be loved and therefore blest.

'Favors undeserved were mine; 10
 At my feet as on a shrine
 Love has laid its gifts divine.

'Sweet the offerings seemed, and yet
 With their sweetness came regret,
 And a sense of unpaid debt. 15

'Heart of mine unsatisfied,
 Was it vanity or pride
 That a deeper joy denied?

'Hands that ope but to receive Empty close; they only live
 Richly who can richly give. 20

'Still,' she sighed, with moistening eyes,
 'Love is sweet in any guise;
 But its best is sacrifice!

'He who, giving, does not crave 25
 Liketh it to Him who gave Life itself the loved to save.

'Love, that self-forgetful gives,
 Sows surprise of ripened sheaves,
 Late or soon its own receives.' 30 1884.

ADJUSTMENT.

THE tree of Faith its bare, dry boughs must shed

That nearer heaven the living ones may climb;

The false must fail, though from our shores of time

The old lament be heard, 'Great Pan is
 dead!'

That wail is Error's, from his high place
 hurled; 5

This sharp recoil is Evil undertrod;

Our time's unrest, an angel sent of God Troubling with life the waters of the world.

Even as they list the winds of the Spirit
 blow

To turn or break our century-rusted
 vanes; 10

Sands shift and waste; the rock alone
 remains

Where, led of Heaven, the strong tides
 come and go,

And storm-clouds, rent by thunderbolt
 and wind,

Leave, free of mist, the permanent stars
 behind.

Therefore I trust, although to outward sense 15

Both true and false seem shaken; I will
 hold

With newer light my reverence for the
 old,

And calmly wait the births of Providence.
 No gain is lost; the clear-eyed saints look
 down

Untroubled on the wreck of schemes and creeds ; 20
Love yet remains, its rosary of good deeds
Counting in task-field and o'erpeopled
town.
Truth has charmed life; the Inward Word
survives,
And, day by day, its revelation brings;
Faith, hope, and charity, whatsoever
things 25
Which cannot be shaken, stand. Still holy lives
Reveal the Christ of whom the letter told,
And the new gospel verifies the old.

HYMNS OF THE BRAHMO SOMAJ.

I have attempted this paraphrase of the Hymns of the Brahmo Somaj of India, as I find them in Mozoomdar's account of the devotional exercises of that remarkable religious development which has attracted far less attention and sympathy from the Christian world than it deserves, as a fresh revelation of the direct action of the Divine Spirit upon the human heart

I.

THE mercy, O Eternal One !
By man unmeasured yet,
In joy or grief, in shade or sun,
I never will forget.
I give the whole, and not a part,
Of all Thou gavest me ;
My goods, my life, my soul and heart,
I yield them all to Thee !

II.

We fast and plead, we weep and pray,
From morning until even ; 10
We feel to find the holy way,
We knock at the gate of heaven !
And when in silent awe we wait,
And word and sign forbear,
The hinges of the golden gate 15
Move, soundless, to our prayer !
Who hears the eternal harmonies
Can heed no outward word ;
Blind to all else is he who sees
The vision of the Lord ! 20

III.

O soul, be patient, restrain thy tears,
Have hope, and not despair ;
As a tender mother heareth her child
God hears the penitent prayer.
And not forever shall grief be thine ; 25
On the Heavenly Mother's breast,
Washed clean and white in waters of joy
Shall His seeking child find rest.
Console thyself with His word of grace,
And cease thy wail of woe, 30
For His mercy never an equal hath,
And His love no bounds can know.
Lean close unto Him in faith and hope ;
How many like thee have found
In Him a shelter and home of peace, 35
By His mercy compassed round !
There, safe from sin and the sorrow it brings,
They sing their grateful psalms,
And rest, at noon, by the wells of God,
In the shade of His holy palms ! 40 1885.

REVELATION.

'And I went into the Vale of Beavor, and as I went I preached repentance to the people. And one morning sitting by the fire, a great cloud came over me, and a temptation beset me And it was said: All things come by Nature; and the Elements and the Stars came over me. And as I sat still and let it alone, a living hope arose in me, and a true Voice which said: There is a living God who made all things. And immediately the cloud and the temptation vanished, and Life rose over all, and my heart was glad and I praised the living God'—Journal of George Fox, 1690.

STILL, as of old, in Beavor's Vale,
O man of God ! our hope and faith
The Elements and Stars assail,
And the awed spirit holds its breath, 5
Blown over by a wind of death.
Takes Nature thought for such as we,
What place her human atom fills,
The weed-drift of her careless sea,
The mist on her unheeding hills ? 10
What reck's she of our helpless wills ? 20

Strange god of Force, with fear, not love,
Its trembling worshipper ! Can prayer
Reach the shut ear of Fate, or move
Unpitying Energy to spare?
What doth the cosmic Vastness care? 15

In vain to this dread Unconcern
For the All-Father's love we look ;
In vain, in quest of it, we turn
The storied leaves of Nature's book,
The prints her rocky tablets took. 20

I pray for faith, I long to trust ;
I listen with my heart, and hear
A Voice without a sound : ' Be just,
Be true, be merciful, revere
The Word within thee : God is near ! 25

' A light to sky and earth unknown
Pales all their lights : a mightier force
Than theirs the powers of Nature own,
And, to its goal as at its source,
His Spirit moves the Universe. 30

' Believe and trust. Through stars and
suns,
Through life and death, through soul
and sense,

His wise, paternal purpose runs ;
The darkness of His providence
Is star-lit with benign intents.' 35

O joy supreme ! I know the Voice,
Like none beside on earth or sea ;
Yea, more, O soul of mine, rejoice,
By all that He requires of me,
I know what God Himself must be. 40

No picture to my aid I call,
I shape no image in my prayer ;
I only know in Him is all
Of life, light, beauty, everywhere,
Eternal Goodness here and there ! 45

I know He is, and what He is,
Whose one great purpose is the good
Of all. I rest my soul on His Immortal Love and Fatherhood ;
And trust Him, as His children should.

I fear no more. The clouded face 51
Of Nature smiles ; through all her things
Of time and space and sense I trace
The moving of the Spirit's wings,
And hear the song of hope she sings. 55

At Sundown

TO E. C. S.

POET and friend of poets, if thy glass
 Detects no flower in winter's tuft of grass,
 Let this slight token of the debt I owe
 Outlive for thee December's frozen day,
 And, like the arbutus budding under
 snow, 5
 Take bloom and fragrance from some morn of May
 When he who gives it shall have gone the
 way
 Where faith shall see and reverent trust shall know.

THE CHRISTMAS OF 1888.

Low in the east, against a white, cold
 dawn,
 The black-lined silhouette of the woods
 was drawn,
 And on a wintry waste
 Of frosted streams and hillsides bare and
 brown,
 Through thin cloud-films a pallid ghost looked down, 5
 The waning moon half-faced !
 In that pale sky and sere, snow-waiting
 earth,
 What sign was there of the immortal
 birth ?
 What herald of the One ?
 Lo ! swift as thought the heavenly radiance came, 10
 A rose-red splendor swept the sky like
 flame,
 Up rolled the round, bright sun !

And all was changed. From a transfigured world
 The moon's ghost fled, the smoke of home-hearths curled
 Up the still air unblown. 15
 In Orient warmth and brightness, did that morn
 O'er Nain and Nazareth, when the Christ was born,
 Break fairer than our own ?

The morning's promise noon and eve fulfilled
 In warm, soft sky and landscape hazy-hilled 20
 And sunset fair as they ;
 A sweet reminder of His holiest time,
 A summer-miracle in our winter chime,
 God gave a perfect day.

The near was blended with the old and
 far, 25
 And Bethlehem's hillside and the Magi's
 star
 Seemed here, as there and then,—
 Our homestead pine-tree was the Syrian
 palm,
 Our heart's desire the angels' midnight
 psalm,
 Peace, and good-will to men ! 30

THE VOW OF WASHINGTON.

Read in New York, April 30, 1889, at the Centennial Celebration of the Inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States.

THE sword was sheathed : in April's sun
 Lay green the fields by Freedom won ;

And severed sections, weary of debates,
Joined hands at last and were United States.

O City sitting by the Sea! 5
How proud the day that dawned on
thee,
When the new era, long desired, began,
And, in its need, the hour had found the
man!

One thought the cannon salvos spoke,
Theresonant bell-tower's vibrant stroke,
The voiceful streets, the plaudit-echoing
halls, 11
And prayer and hymn borne heavenward from St. Paul's!

How felt the land in every part
The strong throb of a nation's heart,
As its great leader gave, with reverent awe, 15
His pledge to Union, Liberty, and Law!

That pledge the heavens above him
heard,
That vow the sleep of centuries stirred;
In world-wide wonder listening peoples
bent
Their gaze on Freedom's great experiment.

Could it succeed? Of honor sold 21
And hopes deceived all history told.
Above the wrecks that strewed the mournful past,
Was the long dream of ages true at last?

Thank God! the people's choice was
just, 25
The one man equal to his trust,
Wise beyond lore, and without weakness
good,
Calm in the strength of flawless rectitude!

His rule of justice, order, peace,
Made possible the world's release; 30 Taught prince and serf that power is but a trust,
And rule alone, which serves the ruled,
is just;

That Freedom generous is, but strong
In hate of fraud and selfish wrong, 34
Pretence that turns her holy truth to lies,
And lawless license masking in her guise.

Land of his love! with one glad voice
Let thy great sisterhood rejoice;
A century's suns o'er thee have risen and
set,
And, God be praised, we are one nation
yet. 40

And still we trust the years to be
Shall prove his hope was destiny,
Leaving our flag, with all its added stars,
Unrent by faction and unstained by wars.

Lo! where with patient toil he nursed
And trained the new-set plant at first, 46
The widening branches of a stately tree
Stretch from the sunrise to the sunset sea.

And in its broad and sheltering shade,
Sitting with none to make afraid, 50
Were we now silent, through each mighty
limb,
The winds of heaven would sing the praise
of him.

Our first and best!—his ashes lie
Beneath his own Virginian sky. 54
Forgive, forget, O true and just and brave,
The storm that swept above thy sacred
grave!

For, ever in the awful strife
And dark hours of the nation's life,
Through the fierce tumult pierced his warning word,
Their father's voice his erring children
heard! 60

The change for which he prayed and
sought
In that sharp agony was wrought;
No partial interest draws its alien line
'Twixt North and South, the cypress and the pine!

One people now, all doubt beyond, 65
His name shall be our Union-bond;
We lift our hands to Heaven, and here
and now
Take on our lips the old Centennial vow.

For rule and trust must needs be ours ;
 Chooser and chosen both are powers 70
 Equal in service as in rights ; the claim
 Of Duty rests on each and all the same.

Then let the sovereign millions, where
 Our banner floats in sun and air,
 From the warm palm-lands to Alaska's
 cold, 75
 Repeat with us the pledge a century old !

THE CAPTAIN'S WELL.

The story of the shipwreck of Captain Valentine Bagley, on the coast of Arabia, and his sufferings in the desert, has been familiar from my childhood. It has been partially told in the singularly beautiful lines of my friend, Harriet Prescott Spofford, on the occasion of a public celebration at the Newburyport Library. To the charm and felicity of her verse, as far as it goes, nothing can be added ; but in the following ballad I have endeavored to give a fuller detail of the touching incident upon which it is founded.

FROM pain and peril, by land and main,
 The shipwrecked sailor came back again ;

And like one from the dead, the threshold
 crossed
 Of his wondering home, that had mourned him lost,

Where he sat once more with his kith and kin, 5
 And welcomed his neighbors thronging in.

But when morning came he called for his spade.

'I must pay my debt to the Lord,' he
 said.

'Why dig you here ?' asked the passer-by ;
 'Is there gold or silver the road so nigh ?'

'No, friend,' he answered : 'but under this sod 11
 Is the blessed water, the wine of God.'

'Water ! the Powow is at your back,
 And right before you is the Merrimac,

'And look you up, or look you down, 15
 There's a well-sweep at every door in
 town.'

'True,' he said, 'we have wells of our
 own ;
 But this I dig for the Lord alone.'

Said the other : 'This soil is dry, you
 know, 19
 I doubt if a spring can be found below ;

'You had better consult, before you dig,
 Some water-witch, with a hazel twig.'

'No, wet or dry, I will dig it here,
 Shallow or deep, if it takes a year.

'In the Arab desert, where shade is none,
 The waterless land of sand and sun, 26

'Under the pitiless, brazen sky
 My burning throat as the sand was dry ;

'My crazed brain listened in fever dreams
 For plash of buckets and ripple of streams ;

'And opening my eyes to the blinding
 glare, 31
 And my lips to the breath of the blistering air,

'Tortured alike by the heavens and earth,
 I cursed, like Job, the day of my birth.

'Then something tender, and sad, and mild 35
 As a mother's voice to her wandering
 child,

'Rebuked my frenzy ; and bowing my
 head,
 I prayed as I never before had prayed :

'Pity me, God ! for I die of thirst ;
 Take me out of this land accursed ; 40

'And if ever I reach my home again,
 Where earth has springs, and the sky has
 rain,

'I will dig a well for the passers-by,
 And none shall suffer from thirst as I. 44

'I saw, as I prayed, my home once more,
 The house, the barn, the elms by the door,

'The grass-lined road, that riverward
 wound,
 The tall slate stones of the burying-
 ground,

'The belfry and steeple on meeting-house
hill,
The brook with its dam, and gray grist mill, 50

'And I knew in that vision beyond the
sea,

The very place where my well must be.

'God heard my prayer in that evil day;
He led my feet in their homeward way,

'From false mirage and dried-up well, 55
And the hot sand storms of a land of hell,

'Till I saw at last through the coast-hill's gap,

A city held in its stony lap,

'The mosques and the domes of scorched Muscat,

And my heart leaped up with joy thereat;

'For there was a ship at anchor lying, 61
A Christian flag at its mast-head flying,

'And sweetest of sounds to my homesick
ear

Was my native tongue in the sailor's
cheer.

'Now the Lord be thanked, I am back
again, 65

Where earth has springs, and the skies have rain,

'And the well I promised by Oman's Sea,
I am digging for Him in Amesbury.'

His kindred wept, and his neighbors said:
'The poor old captain is out of his head.'

But from morn to noon, and from noon to
night, 71

He toiled at his task with main and might;

And when at last, from the loosened earth,
Under his spade the stream gushed forth,

And fast as he climbed to his deep well's
brim, 75

The water he dug for followed him,

He shouted for joy: 'I have kept my
word,

And here is the well I promised the Lord!'

The long years came and the long years
went, 79

And he sat by his roadside well content;

He watched the travellers, heat-oppressed,
Pause by the way to drink and rest,

And the sweltering horses dip, as they
drank,

Their nostrils deep in the cool, sweet tank,

And grateful at heart, his memory went Back to that waterless Orient, 86

And the blessed answer of prayer, which
came

To the earth of iron and sky of flame.

And when a wayfarer weary and hot,
Kept to the mid road, pausing not 90

For the well's refreshing, he shook his
head;

'He don't know the value of water,' he
said;

'Had he prayed for a drop, as I have
done,

In the desert circle of sand and sun,

'He would drink and rest, and go home
to tell 95

That God's best gift is the wayside well!'

AN OUTDOOR RECEPTION.

The substance of these lines, hastily pencilled
several years ago, I find among such of my unprinted scraps as have escaped the waste-basket and the fire. In transcribing it I have made some changes, additions, and omissions.

On these green banks, where falls too
soon

The shade of Autumn's afternoon,

The south wind blowing soft and sweet,

The water gliding at my feet,

The distant northern range uplift 5

By the slant sunshine over it,

With changes of the mountain mist

From tender blush to amethyst,

The valley's stretch of shade and gleam

Fair as in Mirza's Bagdad dream, 10

With glad young faces smiling near
 And merry voices in my ear,
 I sit, methinks, as Hafiz might
 In Iran's Garden of Delight.
 For Persian roses blushing red, 15
 Aster and gentian bloom instead;
 For Shiraz wine, this mountain air;
 For feast, the blueberries which I share
 With one who proffers with stained hands
 Her gleanings from yon pasture lands, 20
 Wild fruit that art and culture spoil,
 The harvest of an untilled soil;
 And with her one whose tender eyes
 Reflect the change of April skies,
 Midway 'twixt child and maiden yet, 25
 Fresh as Spring's earliest violet;
 And one whose look and voice and
 ways

Make where she goes idyllic days;
 And one whose sweet, still countenance
 Seems dreamful of a child's romance; 30
 And others, welcome as are these,
 Like and unlike, varieties
 Of pearls on nature's chaplet strung,
 And all are fair, for all are young.
 Gathered from seaside cities old, 35
 From midland prairie, lake, and wold,
 From the great wheat-fields, which might
 feed

The hunger of a world at need,
 In healthful change of rest and play
 Their school-vacations glide away. 40
 No critics these: they only see
 An old and kindly friend in me,
 In whose amused, indulgent look
 Their innocent mirth has no rebuke.
 They scarce can know my rugged rhymes,
 The harsher songs of evil times, 46
 Nor graver themes in minor keys
 Of life's and death's solemnities;
 But haply, as they bear in mind
 Some verse of lighter, happier kind,— 50
 Hints of the boyhood of the man,
 Youth viewed from life's meridian.
 Half seriously and half in play
 My pleasant interviewers pay
 Their visit, with no fell intent 55
 Of taking notes and punishment.

As yonder solitary pine
 Is ringed below with flower and vine,

More favored than that lonely tree,
 The bloom of girlhood circles me. 60
 In such an atmosphere of youth
 I half forget my age's truth;
 The shadow of my life's long date
 Runs backward on the dial-plate,
 Until it seems a step might span 65
 The gulf between the boy and man.

My young friends smile, as if some jay
 On bleak December's leafless spray
 Essayed to sing the songs of May.
 Well, let them smile, and live to know, 70
 When their brown locks are flecked with
 snow,
 'Tis tedious to be always sage
 And pose the dignity of age,
 While so much of our early lives
 On memory's playground still survives, 75
 And owns, as at the present hour,
 The spell of youth's magnetic power.

But though I feel, with Solomon,
 'Tis pleasant to behold the sun,
 I would not if I could repeat 80
 A life which still is good and sweet;
 I keep in age, as in my prime,
 A not uncheerful step with time,
 And, grateful for all blessings sent,
 I go the common way, content 85
 To make no new experiment.
 On easy terms with law and fate,
 For what must be I calmly wait,
 And trust the path I cannot see,—
 That God is good sufficeth me. 90
 And when at last on life's strange play
 The curtain falls, I only pray
 That hope may lose itself in truth,
 And age in Heaven's immortal youth,
 And all our loves and longing prove 95
 The foretaste of diviner love!

The day is done. Its afterglow
 Along the west is burning low.
 My visitors, like birds, have flown;
 I hear their voices, fainter grown, 100
 And dimly through the dusk I see Their kerchiefs wave good-night to me,—
 Light hearts of girlhood, knowing naught
 Of all the cheer their coming brought;

And, in their going, unaware 105
Of silent-following feet of prayer :
Heaven make their budding promise good
With flowers of their gracious womanhood !

R. S. S., AT DEER ISLAND ON THE MERRIMAC.

MAKE, for he loved thee well, our Merrimac,
From wave and shore a low and long lament
For him whose last look sought thee, as he went

The unknown way from which no step comes back.

And ye, O ancient pine-trees, at whose
feet 5

He watched in life the sunset's reddening
glow,

Let the soft south wind through your needles blow

A fitting requiem tenderly and sweet !

No fonder lover of all lovely things Shall walk where once he walked, no smile more glad 10

Greet friends than his who friends in all men had,

Whose pleasant memory to that Island
clings,

Where a dear mourner in the home he left
Of love's sweet solace cannot be bereft.

BURNING DRIFT-WOOD.

BEFORE my drift-wood fire I sit,
And see, with every waif I burn,
Old dreams and fancies coloring it,
And folly's unlaid ghosts return.

O ships of mine, whose swift keels cleft 5
The enchanted sea on which they sailed,
Are these poor fragments only left
Of vain desires and hopes that failed ?

Did I not watch from them the light
Of sunset on my towers in Spain, 10
And see, far off, uploom in sight
The Fortunate Isles I might not gain ?

Did sudden lift of fog reveal
Arcadia's vales of song and spring,
And did I pass, with grazing keel, 15
The rocks whereon the sirens sing ?

Have I not drifted hard upon
The unmapped regions lost to man,
The cloud-pitched tents of Prester John,
The palace domes of Kubla Khan ? 20

Did land winds blow from jasmine flowers,
Where Youth the ageless Fountain fills ?
Did Love make sign from rose blown
bowers,
And gold from Eldorado's hells ?

Alas ! the gallant ships, that sailed 25
On blind Adventure's errand sent,
Howe'er they laid their courses, failed
To reach the haven of Content.

And of my ventures, those alone
Which Love had freighted, safely sped,
Seeking a good beyond my own, 31
By clear-eyed Duty piloted.

O mariners, hoping still to meet
The luck Arabian voyagers met,
And find in Bagdad's moonlit street, 35
Haroun al Raschid walking yet,

Take with you, on your Sea of Dreams,
The fair, fond fancies dear to youth.
I turn from all that only seems,
And seek the sober grounds of truth. 40

What matter that it is not May,
That birds have flown, and trees are
bare,
That darker grows the shortening day,
And colder blows the wintry air !

The wrecks of passion and desire, 45
The castles I no more rebuild,
May fitly feed my drift-wood fire,
And warm the hands that age has chilled.

Whatever perished with my ships,
I only know the best remains ; 50
A song of praise is on my lips
For losses which are now my gains.

Heap high my hearth ! No worth is lost ;
No wisdom with the folly dies.

Burn on, poor shreds, your holocaust 55
Shall be my evening sacrifice !

Far more than all I dared to dream,
Unsought before my door I see ;
On wings of fire and steeds of steam
The world's great wonders come to me,

And holier signs, unmarked before, 61
Of Love to seek and Power to save,—
The righting of the wronged and poor,
The man evolving from the slave ;

And life, no longer chance or fate, 65
Safe in the gracious Fatherhood.
I fold o'er-wearied hands and wait,
In full assurance of the good.

And well the waiting time must be,
Though brief or long its granted days,
If Faith and Hope and Charity 71
Sit by my evening hearth-fire's blaze.

And with them, friends whom Heaven has spared,
Whose love my heart has comforted,
And, sharing all my joys, has shared 75
My tender memories of the dead,—

Dear souls who left us lonely here,
Bound on their last, long voyage, to whom
We, day by day, are drawing near,
Where every bark has sailing room. 80

I know the solemn monotone
Of waters calling unto me ;
I know from whence the airs have blown
That whisper of the Eternal Sea.

As low my fires of drift-wood burn, 85
I hear that sea's deep sounds increase,
And, fair in sunset light, discern
Its mirage-lifted Isles of Peace.

O. W. HOLMES ON HIS EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

CLIMBING a path which leads back never
more
We heard behind his footsteps and his
cheer ;

Now, face to face, we greet him standing
here

Upon the lonely summit of Fourscore !
Welcome to us, o'er whom the lengthened
day 5

Is closing and the shadows colder grow,
His genial presence, like an afterglow,
Following the one just vanishing away.
Long be it ere the table shall be set

For the last breakfast of the Autocrat,
And love repeat with smiles and tears
thereat 11

His own sweet songs that time shall not forget.

Waiting with us the call to come up higher,
Life is not less, the heavens are only nigher !

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

FROM purest wells of English undefiled
None deeper drank than he, the New World's child,

Who in the language of their farm-fields
spoke

The wit and wisdom of New England folk, Shaming a monstrous wrong. The worldwide laugh 5

Provoked thereby might well have shaken half

The walls of Slavery down, ere yet the ball

And mine of battle overthrew them all.

HAVERHILL.

1640-1890.

Read at the Celebration of the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the City, July 2, 1890.

O RIVER winding to the sea !
We call the old time back to thee ;
From forest paths and water-ways
The century-woven veil we raise.

The voices of to-day are dumb, 5
Unheard its sounds that go and come ;
We listen, through long-lapsing years,
To footsteps of the pioneers.

Gone steeped town and cultured plain, The wilderness returns again, 10 The drear, untrodden solitude, The gloom and mystery of the wood !	And far and wide it stretches still, Along its southward sloping hill, 50 And overlooks on either hand A rich and many-watered land.
Once more the bear and panther prowl, The wolf repeats his hungry howl, And, peering through his leafy screen, 15 The Indian's copper face is seen.	And, gladdening all the landscape, fair As Pison was to Eden's pair, Our river to its valley brings 55 The blessing of its mountain springs.
We see, their rude-built huts beside, Grave men and women anxious-eyed, And wistful youth remembering still Dear homes in England's Haverhill. 20	And Nature holds with narrowing space, From mart and crowd, her old-time grace, And guards with fondly jealous arms The wild growths of outlying farms. 60
We summon forth to mortal view Dark Passaquo and Saggahew,— Wild chiefs, who owned the mighty sway Of wizard Passaconaway.	Her sunsets on Kenoza fall, Her autumn leaves by Saltonstall ; No lavished gold can richer make Her opulence of hill and lake.
Weird memories of the border town, 25 By old tradition handed down, In chance and change before us pass Like pictures in a magic glass,—	Wise was the choice which led oursires 65 To kindle here their household fires, And share the large content of all Whose lines in pleasant places fall.
The terror of the midnight raid, The death-concealing ambushade, 30 The winter march, through deserts wild, Of captive mother, wife, and child.	More dear, as years on years advance, We prize the old inheritance, 70 And feel, as far and wide we roam, That all we seek we leave at home.
Ah ! bleeding hands alone subdued And tamed the savage habitude Of forests hiding beasts of prey, 35 And human shapes as fierce as they.	Our palms are pines, our oranges Are apples on our orchard trees ; Our thrushes are our nightingales, 75 Our larks the blackbirds of our vales.
Slow from the plough the woods with- drew, Slowly each year the corn-lands grew ; Nor fire, nor frost, nor foe could kill The Saxon energy of will. 40	No incense which the Orient burns Is sweeter than our hillside ferns ; What tropic splendor can outvie Our autumn woods, our sunset sky ? 80
And never in the hamlet's bound Was lack of sturdy manhood found, And never failed the kindred good Of brave and helpful womanhood.	If, where the slow years came and went, And left not affluence, but content, Now flashes in our dazzled eyes The electric light of enterprise ;
That hamlet now a city is, 45 Its log-built huts are palaces ; The wood-path of the settler's cow Is Traffic's crowded highway now.	And if the old idyllic ease 85 Seems lost in keen activities, And crowded workshops now replace The hearth's and farm-field's rustic grace ;

No dull, mechanic round of toil
 Life's morning charm can quite despoil ;
 And youth and beauty, hand in hand, 91
 Will always find enchanted land.

No task is ill where hand and brain
 And skill and strength have equal gain,
 And each shall each in honor hold, 95
 And simple manhood outweigh gold.

Earth shall be near to Heaven when all
 That severs man from man shall fall,
 For, here or there, salvation's plan
 Alone is love of God and man. 100

O dwellers by the Merrimac,
 The heirs of centuries at your back,
 Still reaping where you have not sown,
 A broader field is now your own.

Hold fast your Puritan heritage, 105
 But let the free thought of the age
 Its light and hope and sweetness add
 To the stern faith the fathers had.

Adrift on Time's returnless tide,
 As waves that follow waves, we glide. 110
 God grant we leave upon the shore
 Some waif of good it lacked before ;

Some seed, or flower, or plant of worth,
 Some added beauty to the earth ;
 Some larger hope, some thought to
 make 115
 The sad world happier for its sake.

As tenants of uncertain stay,
 So may we live our little day
 That only grateful hearts shall fill
 The homes we leave in Haverhill. 120

The singer of a farewell rhyme,
 Upon whose outmost verge of time
 The shades of night are falling down,
 I pray, God bless the good old town !

TO G. G.

AN AUTOGRAPH.

The daughter of Daniel Gurteen, Esq., delegate from Haverhill, England, to the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration of Haverhill, Massachusetts The Rev John Ward of the former place and many of his old parishioners were the pioneer settlers of the new town on the Merrimac.

GRACEFUL in name and in thyself, our
 river
 None fairer saw in John Ward's pilgrim
 flock,
 Proof that upon their century-rooted stock
 The English roses bloom as fresh as ever.

Take the warm welcome of new friends
 with thee, 5
 And listening to thy home's familiar
 chime
 Dream that thou hearest, with it keeping time,
 The bells on Merrimac sound across the
 sea.

Think of our thrushes, when the lark sings
 clear,
 Of our sweet Mayflowers when the daisies bloom ; 10
 And bear to our and thy ancestral
 home
 The kindly greeting of its children here.

Say that our love survives the severing
 strain ;
 That the New England, with the Old, holds fast
 The proud, fond memories of a common
 past ; 15
 Unbroken still the ties of blood remain !

INSCRIPTION.

For the bass-relief by Preston Powers, carved upon the huge boulder in Denver Park, Col., and representing the Last Indian and the Last Bison.

THE eagle, stooping from yon snow-blown peaks,
For the wild hunter and the bison seeks,
In the changed world below; and finds alone
Their graven semblance in the eternal stone.

LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY.

Inscription on her Memorial Tablet in Christ Church at Hartford, Conn.

SHE sang alone, ere womanhood had known
The gift of song which fills the air to-day:
Tender and sweet, a music all her own
May fitly linger where she knelt to pray.

MILTON.

Inscription on the Memorial Window in St Margaret's Church, Westminster, the gift of George W. Childs, of America.

THE new world honors him whose lofty plea
For England's freedom made her own more sure,
Whose song, immortal as its theme, shall be
Their common freehold while both worlds endure.

THE BIRTHDAY WREATH.

December 17, 1891.

BLOSSOM and greenness, making all
The winter birthday tropical
And the plain Quaker parlors gay,
Have gone from bracket, stand, and wall;
We saw them fade, and droop, and fall, 5
And laid them tenderly away.

White virgin lilies, mignonette,
Blown rose, and pink, and violet,
A breath of fragrance passing by;
Visions of beauty and decay. 10
Colors and shapes that could not stay,
The fairest, sweetest, first to die.

But still this rustic wreath of mine,
Of acorned oak and needled pine,
And lighter growths of forest lands, 15
Woven and wound with careful pains,
And tender thoughts and prayers, remains,
As when it dropped from love's dear hands.

And not unfitly garlanded,
Is he, who, country-born and bred, 20
Welcomes the sylvan ring which gives
A feeling of old summer days,
The wild delight of woodland ways,
The glory of the autumn leaves.

And, if the flowery meed of song 25
To other bards may well belong,
Be his, who from the farm-field spoke
A word for Freedom when her need
Was not of dulcimer and reed, 29
This Isthmian wreath of pine and oak.

THE WIND OF MARCH.

Up from the sea the wild north wind is blowing
Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling, I watch the shaken elm-boughs,
knowing
It is the wind of March.

Between the passing and the coming season, 5

This stormy interlude
Gives to our winter-wearied hearts a reason
For trustful gratitude.

Welcome to waiting ears its harsh fore-warning

Of light and warmth to come, 10
The longed-for joy of Nature's Easter morning,
The earth arisen in bloom !

In the loud tumult winter's strength 18
breaking ;

I listen to the sound,
As to a voice of resurrection, waking 15
To life the dead, cold ground.

Between these gusts, to the soft lapse I hearken

Of rivulets on their way ;
I see these tossed and naked tree-tops
darken
With the fresh leaves of May. 20

This roar of storm, this sky so gray and lowering

Invite the airs of Spring,
A warmer sunshine over fields of flower-
ing,
The bluebird's song and wing.

Closely behind, the Gulf's warm breezes follow 25

This northern hurricane,
And, borne thereon, the bobolink and swallow
Shall visit us again.

And, in green wood-paths, in the kine-fed pasture

And by the whispering rills, 30
Shall flowers repeat the lesson of the Master,
Taught on His Syrian hilla.

Blow, then, wild wind ! thy roar shall end in singing,

Thy chill in blossoming ;
Come, like Bethesda's troubling angel, bringing 35
The healing of the Spring.

1892.

BETWEEN THE GATES.

BETWEEN the gates of birth and death
An old and saintly pilgrim passed,
With look of one who witnesseth
The long-sought goal at last.

'O thou whose reverent feet have found 5
The Master's footprints in thy way
And walked thereon as holy ground,
A boon of thee I pray.

'My lack would borrow thy excess,
My feeble faith the strength of thine ; 10
I need thy soul's white saintliness
To hide the stains of mine.

'The grace and favor else denied
May well be granted for thy sake.'
So, tempted, doubting, sorely tried, 15
A younger pilgrim spake.

'Thy prayer, my son, transcends my gift ;
No power is mine,' the sage replied,
'The burden of a soul to lift
Or stain of sin to hide. 20

'Howe'er the outward life may seem,
For pardoning grace we all must pray ;
No man his brother can redeem
Or a soul's ransom pay.

'Not always age is growth of good ; 25
Its years have losses with their gain ;
Against some evil youth withstood
Weak hands may strive in vain.

'With deeper voice than any speech
Of mortal lips from man to man, 30
What earth's unwisdom may not teach
The Spirit only can.

'Make thou that holy guide thine own,
And following where it leads the way,
The known shall lapse in the unknown 35
As twilight into day.

'The best of earth shall still remain,
And heaven's eternal years shall prove
That life and death, and joy and pain,
Are ministers of Love.' 40
1891.

THE LAST EVE OF SUMMER.

SUMMER's last sun nigh unto setting shines
Through yon columnar pines,
And on the deepening shadows of the lawn
Its golden lines are drawn.

Dreaming of long gone summer days like
this, 5
Feeling the wind's soft kiss, Grateful and glad that failing ear and
sight
Have still their old delight,

I sit alone, and watch the warm, sweet
day
Lapse tenderly away; 10
And, wistful, with a feeling of forecast,
I ask, 'Is this the last?

'Will nevermore for me the seasons run
Their round, and will the sun
Of ardent summers yet to come forget 15
For me to rise and set?'

Thou shouldst be here, or I should be
with thee
Wherever thou mayst be,
Lips mute, hands clasped, in silences of speech
Each answering unto each. 20

For this still hour, this sense of mystery
far
Beyond the evening star,
No words outworn suffice on lip or scroll :
The soul would fain with soul

Wait, while these few swift-passing days fulfil 25

The wise-disposing Will,
And, in the evening as at morning, trust
The All-Merciful and Just.

The solemn joy that soul-communion feels
Immortal life reveals; 30
And human love, its prophecy and sign,
Interprets love divine.

Come then, in thought, if that alone may
be,
O friend! and bring with thee
Thy calm assurance of transcendent
Spheres 35

And the Eternal Years!

1890.

TO OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

8TH MO 29TH, 1892.

[This, the last of Mr Whittier's poems, was written but a few weeks before his death]

AMONG the thousands who with hail and
cheer
Will welcome thy new year,
How few of all have passed, as thou and I,
So many milestones by!

We have grown old together; we have
seen, 5
Our youth and age between,
Two generations leave us, and to-day
We with the third hold way,

Loving and loved. If thought must backward run
To those who, one by one, 10
In the great silence and the dark beyond
Vanished with farewells fond,

Unseen, not lost; our grateful memories
still
Their vacant places fill,
And with the full-voiced greeting of new
friends 15
A tenderer whisper blends.

Linked close in a pathetic brotherhood
 Of mingled ill and good,
 Of joy and grief, of grandeur and of shame,
 For pity more than blame,— 20

The gift is thine the weary world to make
 More cheerful for thy sake,
 Soothing the ears its Miserere pains,
 With the old Hellenic strains,

Lighting the sullen face of discontent 25
 With smiles for blessing sent.
 Enough of selfish wailing has been had,
 Thank God ! for notes more glad.

Life is indeed no holiday ; therein
 Are want, and woe, and sin, 30
 Death and its nameless fears, and over all
 Our pitying tears must fall.

Sorrow is real ; but the counterfeit
 Which folly brings to it,
 We need thy wit and wisdom to resist, 35
 O rarest Optimist !

Thy hand, old friend ! the service of our
 days,
 In differing moods and ways
 May prove to those who follow in our train
 Not valueless nor vain. 40

Far off, and faint as echoes of a dream,
 The songs of boyhood seem,
 Yet on our autumn boughs, unflown with
 spring,
 The evening thrushes sing.

The hour draws near, howe'er delayed and late, 45
 When at the Eternal Gate
 We leave the words and works we call
 our own,
 And lift void hands alone

For love to fill. Our nakedness of soul
 Brings to that Gate no toll ; 50
 Giftless we come to Him, who all things
 gives,
 And live because He lives.

APPENDIXES

I. Early and Uncollected Verses

I AM yielding to what seems, under the circumstances, almost a necessity, in adding to the pieces assigned for one reason or another to the limbo of an appendix, some of my very earliest attempts at verse, which have been kept alive in the newspapers for the last half century. A few of them have even been printed in book form without my consent, and greatly to my annoyance, with all their accumulated errors of the press added to their original defects and crudity. I suppose they should have died a natural death long ago, but their feline tenacity of life seems to contradict the theory of the 'survival of the fittest.' I have consented, at my publishers' request, to take the poor vagrants home and give them a more presentable appearance, in the hope that they may at least be of some interest to those who are curious enough to note the weak beginnings of the graduate of a small country district school, sixty years ago. That they met with some degree of favor at that time may be accounted for by the fact that the makers of verse were then few in number, with little competition in their unprofitable vocation, and that the standard of criticism was not discouragingly high.

The earliest of the author's verses that found their way into print were published in the Newburyport Free Press, edited by William Lloyd Garrison, in 1826. [The poems here collected, with the exception of the last, were written during the years 1825-1833.]

THE EXILE'S DEPARTURE.

FOND scenes, which delighted my youthful existence,

With feelings of sorrow I bid ye adieu—
A lasting adieu! for now, dim in the distance,

The shores of Hibernia recede from my view.

Farewell to the cliffs, tempest-beaten and gray,

Which guard the lov'd shores of my own native land;

Farewell to the village and sail-shadow'd bay,

The forest-crown'd hill and the water-wash'd strand.

I've fought for my country-- I've brav'd all the dangers

That throng round the path of the warrior in strife; 10

I now must depart to a nation of strangers,
And pass in seclusion the remnant of life;

Far, far from the friends to my bosom most dear,

With none to support me in peril and pain,
And none but the stranger to drop the sad tear 15

On the grave where the heart-broken Exile is lain.

Friends of my youth! I must leave you forever,

And hasten to dwell in a region unknown:—

Yet time cannot change, nor the broad ocean sever,

Hearts firmly united and tried as our own. 20

Ah, no! though I wander, all sad and
forlorn,
In a far distant land, yet shall memory
trace,
When far o'er the ocean's white surges
I'm borne,
The scene of past pleasures,—my own native place.
Farewell, shores of Erin, green land of my fathers:— 25
Once more, and forever, a mournful
adieu!
For round thy dim headlands the ocean-
mist gathers,
And shrouds the fair isle I no longer
can view.
I go—but wherever my footsteps I bend,
For freedom and peace to my own native isle, 30
And contentment and joy to each warm-hearted friend
Shall be the heart's prayer of the lonely Exile!

THE DEITY.

THE Prophet stood
On the high mount, and saw the tempest
cloud
Pour the fierce whirlwind from its reservoir
Of congregated gloom. The mountain oak, Torn from the earth, heaved high its roots where once 5
Its branches waved. The fir-tree's shapely
form,
Smote by the tempest, lashed the mountain's side.
Yet, calm in conscious purity, the Seer
Beheld the awful desolation, for
The Eternal Spirit moved not in the
storm. 10
The tempest ceased. The caverned earthquake burst
Forth from its prison, and the mountain rocked
Even to its base. The topmost crags were thrown,
With fearful crashing, down its shudder-
ing sides.

Unawed, the Prophet saw and heard; he felt 15
Not in the earthquake moved the God of Heaven.
The murmur died away; and from the height,
Torn by the storm and shattered by the
shock,
Rose far and clear a pyramid of flame
Mighty and vast; the startled mountain
deer 20
Shrank from its glare, and cowered within
the shade;
The wild fowl shrieked—but even then the Seer
Untrembling stood and marked the fearful glow,
For Israel's God came not within the
flame!

The fiery beacon sank. A still, small voice, 25
Unlike to human sound, at once conveyed
Deep awe and reverence to his pious heart.
Then bowed the holy man; his face he veiled
Within his mantle—and in meekness
owned
The presence of his God, discerned not in
The storm, the earthquake, or the mighty
flame. 31

THE VALE OF THE MERRIMAC.

THERE are streams which are famous in history's story,
Whose names are familiar to pen and to
tongue,
Renowned in the records of love and of
glory,
Where knighthood has ridden and minstrels have sung:—
Fair streams thro' more populous regions are gliding, 5
Tower, temple, and palace their borders
adorning,
With tall-masted ships on their broad bosoms riding,
Their banners stretch'd out in the breezes of morning;

And their vales may be lovely and pleasant—but never
Was skiff ever wafted, or wav'd a white
sail 10
O'er a lovelier wave than my dear native
river,
Or brighter tides roll'd than in Merri-
mac's vale !

And fair streams may glide where the climate is milder,
Where winter ne'er gathers and spring
ever blooms,
And others may roll where the region is wilder, 15
Their dark waters hid in some forest's deep gloom,
Where the thunder-scath'd peaks of Helvetia are frowning,
And the Rhine's rapid waters encircle
their bases,
Where the snows of long years are the hoary Alps crowning,
And the tempest-charg'd vapor their tall tops embraces :— 20
There sure might be fix'd, amid scenery
so frightful,
The region of romance and wild fairy-tale,—
But such scenes could not be to my heart
so delightful
As the home of my fathers,—fair Merrimac's vale !

There are streams where the bounty of Providence musters 25
The fairest of fruits by their warm sunny sides,
The vine bending low with the grape's
heavy clusters,
And the orange-tree waving its fruit
o'er their tides :—
But I envy not him whose lot has been cast there,
For oppression is there—and the hand of the spoiler, 30
Regardless of justice or mercy, has past
there,
And made him a wretched and indigent
toiler.

No—dearer to me are the scenes of my childhood,
The moss-cover'd bank and the breeze-
wafted sail,
The age-stinted oak and the green groves of wild-wood 35
That wave round the borders of Merri-
mac's vale !

Oh, lovely the scene, when the gray misty vapor
Of morning is lifted from Merrimac's
shore ;
When the fire-fly, lighting his wild gleaming taper,
Thy dimly seen lowlands comes glimmering o'er ; 40
When on thy calm surface the moonbeam falls brightly,
And the dull bird of night is his covert
forsaking,
When the whippoorwill's notes from thy margin sound lightly,
And break on the sound which thy small waves are making,
O brightest of visions ! my heart shall forever, 45
Till memory shall perish and reason shall fail,
Still preference give to my own native
river,
The name of my fathers, and Merri-
mac's vale !
1825.

BENEVOLENCE.

HAIL, heavenly gift ! within the human
breast,
Germ of unnumber'd virtues—by thy aid
The fainting heart, with riving grief oppressed,
Survives the ruin adverse scenes have
made :
Woes that have wrung the bosom, cares that preyed 5
Long on the spirit, are dissolv'd by
thee—

Misfortune's frown, despair's disastrous shade,

Ghastly disease, and pining poverty,
Thy influence dread, and at thy approach
they flee.

Thy spirit led th' immortal Howard on; 10
Nurtur'd by thee, on many a foreign
shore

Imperishable fame, by virtue won,
Adorns his memory, tho' his course is
o'er;

Thy animating smile his aspect wore,
To cheer the sorrow-desolated soul, 15
Compassion's balm in grief-worn hearts to pour,

And snatch the prisoner from despair's
control,
Steal half his woes away, and lighter
make the whole.

Green be the sod on Cherson's honor'd
field,

Where wraps the turf around his mouldering clay; 20

There let the earth her choicest beauties yield,

And there the breeze in gentlest murmurs play;

There let the widow and the orphan
stray,

To wet with tears their benefactor's
tomb;

There let the rescued prisoner bend his
way, 25

And mourn o'er him, who in the dun-geon's gloom

Had sought him and averted misery's fearful doom.

His grave perfum'd with heartfelt sighs
of grief,

And moistened by the tear of gratitude,—
Oh, how unlike the spot where war's grim
chief 30

Sinks on the field, in sanguine waves imbrued!

Who mourns for him, whose footsteps can be viewed

With reverential awe imprinted near

The monument rear'd o'er the man of
blood?

Or who waste on it sorrow's balmy tear?
None! shame and misery rest alone upon his bier. 36

Offspring of heaven! Benevolence, thy pow'r

Bade Wilberforce its mighty champion
be,

And taught a Clarkson's ardent mind to soar 39

O'er every obstacle, when serving thee:—
Theirs was the task to set the sufferer free,
To break the bonds which bound th'
unwilling slave,

To shed abroad the light of liberty,
And leave to all the rights their Maker
gave,

To bid the world rejoice o'er hated slavery's grave. 45

Diffuse thy charms, Benevolence! let thy
light

Pierce the dark clouds which ages past have thrown

Before the beams of truth—and nature's
right,

Inborn, let every hardened tyrant own;
On our fair shore be thy mild presence
known; 50

And every portion of Columbia's land
Be as God's garden with thy blessings
sown;

Yea, o'er Earth's regions let thy love expand

Till all united are in friendship's sacred
band! 54

Then in that hour of joy will be fulfilled
The prophet's heart-consoling prophecy;
Then war's commotion shall on earth be stilled,

And men their swords to other use apply; 58

Then Afric's injured sons no more shall try
The bitterness of slavery's toil and pain,

Nor pride nor love of gain direct the eye
Of stern oppression to their homes again;

But peace, a lasting peace, throughout the world shall reign.

OCEAN.

UNFATHOMED deep, unfetter'd waste
 Of never-silent waves,
 Each by its rushing follower chas'd,
 Through unillumin'd caves,
 And o'er the rocks whose turrets rude, 5
 E'en since the birth of time,
 Have heard amid thy solitude
 The billow's ceaseless chime.

O'er what recesses, depths unknown,
 Dost thou thy waves impel, 10
 Where never yet a sunbeam shone,
 Or gleam of moonlight fell?
 For never yet did mortal eyes
 Thy gloom-wrapt deeps behold,
 And naught of thy dread mysteries 15
 The tongue of man hath told.

What, though proud man presume to hold
 His course upon thy tide,
 O'er thy dark billows uncontroll'd
 His fragile bark to guide— 20
 Yet who, upon thy mountain waves,
 Can feel himself secure
 While sweeping o'er thy yawning caves,
 Deep, awful, and obscure?

But thou art mild and tranquil now— 25
 Thy wrathful spirits sleep,
 And gentle billows, calm and slow,
 Across thy bosom sweep.
 Yet where the dim horizon's bound
 Rests on thy sparkling bed, 30
 The tempest-cloud, in gloom profound,
 Prepares its wrath to shed.

Thus, mild and calm in youth's bright
 hour
 The tide of life appears,
 When fancy paints, with magic spell, 35
 The bliss of coming years;
 But clouds will rise, and darkness bring
 O'er life's deceitful way,
 And cruel disappointment fling
 Its shade on hope's dim ray. 40

THE SICILIAN VESPERS.

SILENCE o'er sea and earth
 With the veil of evening fell,
 Till the convent-tower sent deeply forth
 The chime of its vesper bell.
 One moment—and that solemn sound 5
 Fell heavy on the ear;
 But a sterner echo passed around,
 And the boldest shook to hear.

The startled monks thronged up,
 In the torchlight cold and dim; 10
 And the priest let fall his incense-cup,
 And the virgin hushed her hymn,
 For a boding clash, and a clanging tramp,
 And a summoning voice were heard,
 And fretted wall, and dungeon damp, 15
 To the fearful echo stirred.

The peasant heard the sound,
 As he sat beside his hearth;
 And the song and the dance were hushed
 around,
 With the fire-side tale of mirth. 20
 The chieftain shook in his banner'd hall,
 As the sound of fear drew nigh,
 And the warder shrank from the castle
 wall,
 As the gleam of spears went by.

Woe! woe! to the stranger, then, 25
 At the feast and flow of wine,
 In the red array of mailed men,
 Or bowed at the holy shrine;
 For the wakened pride of an injured land
 Had burst its iron thrall, 30
 From the plum'd chief to the pilgrim
 band;
 Woe! woe! to the sons of Gaul!

Proud beings fell that hour,
 With the young and passing fair,
 And the flame went up from dome and
 tower, 35
 The avenger's arm was there!
 The stranger priest at the altar stood,
 And clasped his beads in prayer,
 But the holy shrine grew dim with blood,
 The avenger found him there! 40

Woe ! woe ! to the sons of Gaul,
 To the serf and mailed lord ;
 They were gathered darkly, one and all,
 To the harvest of the sword :
 And the morning sun, with a quiet smile,
 Shone out o'er hill and glen, 46
 On ruined temple and smouldering pile,
 And the ghastly forms of men.

Ay, the sunshine sweetly smiled,
 As its early glance came forth, 50
 It had no sympathy with the wild
 And terrible things of earth.
 And the man of blood that day might read,
 In a language freely given,
 How ill his dark and midnight deed 55
 Became the calm of Heaven.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NORTH.

SPIRIT of the frozen North,
 Where the wave is chained and still,
 And the savage bear looks forth
 Nightly from his caverned hill !
 Down from thy eternal throne,
 From thy land of cloud and storm,
 Where the meeting icebergs groan,
 Sweepeth on thy wrathful form.

Spirit of the frozen wing !
 Dweller of a voiceless clime, 10
 Where no coming on of spring
 Gilds the weary course of time !
 Monarch of a realm untrod
 By the restless feet of men,
 Where alone the hand of God 15
 'Mid His mighty works hath been !

Throned amid the ancient hills,
 Piled with undecaying snow,
 Flashing with the path of rills,
 Frozen in their first glad flow ; 20
 Thou hast seen the gloomy north,
 Gleaming with unearthly light,
 Spreading its pale banners forth,
 Checkered with the stars of night.

Thou hast gazed untrembling, where 25
 Giant forms of flame were driven,
 Like the spirits of the air,
 Striding up the vault of heaven !

Thou hast seen that midnight glow,
 Hiding moon and star and sky, 30
 And the icy hills below
 Reddening to the fearful dye.

Dark and desolate and lone,
 Curtained with the tempest-cloud,
 Drawn around thy ancient throne 35
 Like oblivion's moveless shroud,
 Dim and distantly the sun
 Glances on thy palace walls,
 But a shadow cold and dun
 Broods along its pillared halls. 40

Lord of sunless depths and cold !
 Chainer of the northern sea !
 At whose feet the storm is rolled,
 Who hath power to humble thee ?
 Spirit of the stormy north ! 45
 Bow thee to thy Maker's nod ;
 Bend to Him who sent thee forth,
 Servant of the living God.
 1829.

THE EARTHQUAKE.

CALMLY the night came down
 O'er Scylla's shatter'd walls ;
 How desolate that silent town !
 How tenantless the halls,
 Where yesterday her thousands trod, 5
 And princes graced their proud abode !

Low, on the wet sea sand,
 Humbled in anguish now,
 The despot, midst his menial band,
 Bent down his kingly brow ; 10
 And prince and peasant knelt in prayer,
 For grief had made them equal there.

Again as at the morn,
 The earthquake roll'd its car :
 Lowly the castle-towers were borne, 15
 That mock'd the storms of war ;
 The mountain reeled, its shiver'd brow
 Went down among the waves below.

Up rose the kneelers then,
 As the wave's rush was heard : 20
 The horror of those fated men
 Was uttered by no word.
 But closer still the mother prest
 The infant to her faithful breast.

One long, wild shriek went up, 25
 Full mighty in despair ;
 As bow'd to drink death's bitter cup,
 The thousands gathered there ;
 And man's strong wail and woman's cry
 Blent as the waters hurried by. 30

On swept the whelming sea ;
 The mountains felt its shock,
 As the long cry of agony
 Thrills thro' their towers of rock ;
 An echo round that fatal shore 35
 The death wail of the sufferers bore.

The morning sun shed forth
 Its light upon the scene,
 Where tower and palace strew'd the earth
 With wrecks of what had been. 40
 But of the thousands who were gone,
 No trace was left, no vestige shown.

JUDITH AT THE TENT OF HOLOFERNES.

NIGHT was down among the mountains,
 In her dim and quiet manner,
 Where Bethulia's silver fountains
 Gushed beneath the Assyrian banner.
 Moonlight, o'er her meek dominion, 5
 As a mighty flag unfurled,
 Like an angel's snowy pinion
 Resting on a darkened world !

Faintly rose the city's murmur,
 But the crowded camp was calm ; 10
 Girded in their battle armor,
 Each a falchion at his arm,
 Lordly chief and weary vassal
 In the arms of slumber fell ;
 It had been a day of wassail, 15
 And the wine had circled well.

Underneath his proud pavilion
 Lay Assyria's champion,
 Where the ruby's rich vermillion
 Shone beside the beryl-stone. 20
 With imperial purple laden,
 Breathing in the perfumed air.
 Dreams he of the Jewish maiden,
 With her dark and jewelled hair.

Who is she, the pale-browed stranger, 25
 Bending o'er that son of slaughter ?
 God be with thee in thy danger,
 Israel's lone and peerless daughter !
 She hath bared her queenly beauty
 To the dark Assyrian's glance ; 30
 Now a high and sterner duty
 Bids her to his couch advance.

Beautiful and pale she bendeth
 In her earnest prayer to Heaven ;
 Look again, that maiden standeth 35
 In the strength her God has given !
 Strangely is her dark eye kindled,
 Hot blood through her cheek is poured ;
 Lo, her every fear hath dwindled,
 And her hand is on the sword ! 40

Upward to the flashing curtain,
 See, that mighty blade is driven,
 And its fall '—t is swift and certain
 As the cloud-fire's track in heaven !
 Down, as with a power supernal, 45
 Twice the lifted weapon fell ;
 Twice, his slumber is eternal—
 Who shall wake the infidel ?

Sunlight on the mountains streameth
 Like an air-borne wave of gold ; 50
 And Bethulia's armor gleameth
 Round Judea's banner-fold.
 Down they go, the mailed warriors,
 As the upper torrents sally
 Headlong from their mountain-barriers 55
 Down upon the sleeping valley.

Rouse thee from thy couch, Assyrian !
 Dream no more of woman's smile ;
 10 Fiercer than the leaguered Tyrian,
 Or the dark-browed sons of Nile, 60
 Foes are on thy slumber breaking,
 Chieftain, to thy battle rise !
 Vain the call—he will not waken—
 15 Headless on his couch he lies.

Who hath dimmed your boasted glory ? 65
 What hath woman's weakness done ?
 Whose dark brow is up before ye,
 Blackening in the fierce-haired sun ?
 20 Lo ! an eye that never slumbers
 Looketh in its vengeance down ; 70
 And the thronged and mailed numbers
 Wither at Jehovah's frown !
 1829.

METACOM.

Metacom, or Phillip, the chief of the Wampanoags, was the most powerful and sagacious Sachem who ever made war upon the English.

RED as the banner which enshrouds

The warrior-dead, when strife is done,

A broken mass of crimson clouds

Hung over the departed sun.

The shadow of the western hill

Crept swiftly down, and darkly still,

As if a sullen wave of night

Were rushing on the pale twilight;

The forest-openings grew more dim,

As glimpses of the arching blue

And waking stars came softly through

The rifts of many a giant limb.

Above the wet and tangled swamp

White vapors gathered thick and damp,

And through their cloudy curtaining

Flapped many a brown and dusky wing—

Pinions that fan the moonless dun,

But fold them at the rising sun!

Beneath the closing veil of night,

And leafy bough and curling fog,

With his few warriors ranged in sight—

Scarred relics of his latest fight—

Rested the fiery Wampanoag.

He leaned upon his loaded gun,

Warm with its recent work of death,

And, save the struggling of his breath,

That, slow and hard and long-repressed,

Shook the damp folds around his breast,

An eye that was unused to scan

The sterner moods of that dark man

Had deemed his tall and silent form

With hidden passion fierce and warm,

With that fixed eye, as still and dark

As clouds which veil their lightning spark,

That of some forest-champion,

Whom sudden death had passed upon—

A giant frozen into stone!

Son of the thronéd Sachem!—Thou,

The sternest of the forest kings,—

Shall the scorned pale-one trample now, 40

Unambushed on thy mountain's brow,

Yea, drive his vile and hated plough

Among thy nation's holy things,

Crushing the warrior-skeleton

In scorn beneath his arméd heel, 45
And not a hand be left to deal
A kindred vengeance fiercely back,
And cross in blood the Spoiler's track?

He turned him to his truest one,
The old and war-tried Annawon— 50
'Brother!'—The favored warrior stood
In hushed and listening attitude—

'This night the Vision-Spirit hath Unrolled the scroll of fate before me;

And ere the sunrise cometh, Death 55
Will wave his dusky pinion o'er me!

Nay, start not—well I know thy faith—

Thy weapon now may keep its sheath;

But, when the bodeful morning breaks,

And the green forest widely wakes, 60

Unto the roar of English thunder,

Then trusted brother, be it thine

To burst upon the foeman's line,

And rend his serried strength asunder.

Perchance thyself and yet a few 65

Of faithful ones may struggle through,

And, rallying on the wooded plain,

Strike deep for vengeance once again,

And offer up in pale-face blood

An offering to the Indian's God.' 70

A musket shot—a sharp, quick yell—

And then the stifled groan of pain,

Told that another red man fell,—

And blazed a sudden light again

Across that kingly brow and eye, 75

Like lightning on a clouded sky,—

And a low growl, like that which thrills

The hunter of the Eastern hills,

Burst through clenched teeth and rigid
lip—

And, when the great chief spoke again 80

His deep voice shook beneath its rein,

As wrath and grief held fellowship.

'Brother! methought when as but now

I pondered on my nation's wrong,

With sadness on his shadowy brow 85

My father's spirit passed along!

He pointed to the far south-west,

Where sunset's gold was growing dim,

And seemed to beckon me to him,

And to the forests of the blest!— 90

My father loved the white men, when

They were but children, shelterless,
For his great spirit at distress
Melted to woman's tenderness—
Nor was it given him to know 95
That children whom he cherished
then

Would rise at length, like arm'd men,
To work his people's overthrow.
Yet thus it is;—the God before
Whose awful shrine the pale ones bow
Hath frowned upon, and given o'er 101
The red man to the stranger now!
A few more moons, and there will be
No gathering to the council tree;
The scorched earth—the blackened log—
The naked bones of warriors slain, 106
Be the sole relics which remain
Of the once mighty Wampanoag!
The forests of our hunting-land,
With all their old and solemn green, 110
Will bow before the Spoiler's axe—
The plough displace the hunter's tracks,
And the tall prayer-house steeple stand
Where the Great Spirit's shrine hath been!

'Yet, brother, from this awful hour 115
The dying curse of Metacom
Shall linger with abiding power
Upon the spoilers of my home.
The fearful veil of things to come,
By Kitchtan's hand is lifted from 120
The shadows of the embryo years;
And I can see more clearly through
Than ever visioned Powwow did,
For all the future comes unbid
Yet welcome to my tranced view, 125
As battle-yell to warrior-ears!
From stream and lake and hunting-hill
Our tribes may vanish like a dream,
And even my dark curse may seem Like idle winds when Heaven is still, 130
No bodeful harbinger of ill;
But, fiercer than the downright thunder,
When yawns the mountain-rock asunder,
And riven pine and knotted oak
Are reeling to the fearful stroke, 135
That curse shall work its master's will!
The bed of yon blue mountain stream
Shall pour a darker tide than rain—
The sea shall catch its blood-red stain,

And broadly on its banks shall gleam 140
The steel of those who should be brothers;
Yea, those whom one fond parent nursed
Shall meet in strife, like fiends accursed,
And trample down the once loved form,
While yet with breathing passion warm,
As fiercely as they would another's!' 146

The morning star sat dimly on
The lighted eastern horizon—
The deadly glare of levelled gun
Came streaking through the twilight
haze 150
And naked to its reddest blaze,
A hundred warriors sprang in view;
One dark red arm was tossed on high,
One giant shout came hoarsely through
The clangor and the charging cry, 155
Just as across the scattering gloom,
Red as the naked hand of Doom,
The English volley hurtled by—
The arm—the voice of Metacom!—
One piercing shriek—one vengeful yell,
Sent like an arrow to the sky, 161
'Told when the hunter-monarch fell!

1829.

MOUNT AGIOCHOOK.

The Indians supposed the White Mountains were the residence of powerful spirits, and in consequence rarely ascended them.

GRAY searcher of the upper air,
There's sunshine on thy ancient walls,
A crown upon thy forehead bare,
A flash upon thy waterfalls.
A rainbow glory in the cloud 5
Upon thine awful summit bowed,
The radiant ghost of a dead storm!
And music from the leafy shroud
Which swathes in green thy giant form,
Mellowed and softened from above 10
Steals downward to the lowland ear,
Sweet as the first, fond dream of love
That melts upon the maiden's ear.

The time has been, white giant, when
Thy shadows veiled the red man's home,
And over crag and serpent den, 16

And wild gorge where the steps of men
 In chase or battle might not come,
 The mountain eagle bore on high
 The emblem of the free of soul, 20
 And, midway in the fearful sky,
 Sent back the Indian battle cry,
 And answered to the thunder's roll.

The wigwam fires have all burned out,
 The moccasin has left no track ; 25
 Nor wolf nor panther roam about
 The Saco and the Merrimac.
 And thou, that liftest up on high
 Thy mighty barriers to the sky,
 Art not the haunted mount of old, 30
 Where on each crag of blasted stone
 Some dreadful spirit found his throne,
 And hid within the thick cloud fold,
 Heard only in the thunder's crash,
 Seen only in the lightning's flash, 35
 When crumbled rock and riven branch
 Went down before the avalanche!

No more that spirit moveth there ;
 The dwellers of the vale are dead ;
 No hunter's arrow cleaves the air ; 40
 No dry leaf rustles to his tread.
 The pale-face climbs thy tallest rock,
 His hands thy crystal gates unlock ;
 From steep to steep his maidens call,
 Light laughing, like the streams that
 fall 45
 In music down thy rocky wall,
 And only when their careless tread
 Lays bare an Indian arrow-head,
 Spent and forgetful of the deer,
 Think of the race that perished here. 50

Oh, sacred to the Indian seer,
 Gray altar of the men of old !
 Not vainly to the listening ear
 The legends of thy past are told, —
 Tales of the downward sweeping flood, 55
 When bowed like reeds thy ancient
 wood ;
 Of armed hands, and spectral forms ;
 Of giants in their leafy shroud,
 And voices calling long and loud
 In the dread pauses of thy storms. 60
 For still within their caverned home
 Dwell the strange gods of heathendom !

THE DRUNKARD TO HIS BOTTLE.

I was thinking of the temperance lyrics the great poet of Scotland might have written had he put his name to a pledge of abstinence, a thing unhappily unknown in his day. The result of my cogitation was this poor imitation of his dialect.

HOOT!—daur ye shaw ye're face again,
 Ye auld black thief o' purse an' brain?
 For foul disgrace, for dool an' pain
 An' shame I ban ye :
 Wae's me, that e'er my lips have ta'en 5
 Your kiss uncanny !

Nae mair, auld knave, without a shillin'
 To keep a starvin' wight frae stealin'
 Ye'll sen' me hameward, blin' and reelin',
 Frae nightly swagger, 10
 By wall an' post my pathway feelin',
 Wi' mony a stagger.

Nae mair o' fights that bruise an' mangle,
 Nae mair o' nets my feet to tangle,
 Nae mair o' senseless brawl an' wrangle,
 Wi' frien' an' wife too, 16
 Nae mair o' deavin' din an' jangle
 My feckless life through.

Ye thievin', cheatin' auld Cheap Jack,
 Poddlin' your poison brose, I crack 20
 Your banes against my ingle-back
 Wi' meikle pleasure.
 Deil mend ye i' his workshop black,
 E'en at his leisure !

I'll brak ye're neck, ye foul auld sinner,
 I'll spill ye're bluid, ye vile beginner 26
 O' a' the ills an' aches that winna
 Quat saul an' body !
 Gie me hale breeks an' weel-spread dinner—
 Deil tak' ye're toddy ! 30

Nae mair wi' witches' broo gane gyte,
 Gie me ance mair the auld delight
 O' sittin' wi' my bairns in sight,
 The gude wife near,
 The weel-spent day, the peacefu' night, 35
 The mornin' cheer !

Cock a' ye're heids, my bairns fu' gleg,
 My winsome Robin, Jean, an' Meg,
 For food and claes ye shall na beg
 A doited daddie. 40
 Dance, auld wife, on your girl-day leg,
 Ye've foun' your laddie!

THE FAIR QUAKERESS.

SHE was a fair young girl, yet on her brow
 No pale pearl shone, a blemish on the pure
 And snowy lustre of its living light,
 No radiant gem shone beautifully through
 The shadowing of her tresses, as a star 5
 Through the dark sky of midnight; and no wreath
 Of coral circled on her queenly neck,
 In mockery of the glowing cheek and lip,
 Whose hue the fairy guardian of the
 flowers 9
 Might never rival when her delicate touch
 Tinges the rose of springtime.

Unadorned,
 Save by her youthful charms, and with a garb
 Simple as Nature's self, why turn to her
 The proud and gifted, and the versed in all
 The pageantry of fashion?

She hath not 15
 Moved down the dance to music, when the hall
 Is lighted up like sunshine, and the thrill
 Of the light viol and the mellow flute,
 And the deep tones of manhood, softened
 down

To very music melt upon the ear. — 20
 She has not mingled with the hollow world
 Nor tampered with its mockeries, until all
 The delicate perceptions of the heart,
 The innate modesty, the watchful sense
 Of maiden dignity, are lost within 25
 The maze of fashion and the din of crowds.

Yet Beauty hath its homage. Kings have bowed
 From the tall majesty of ancient thrones
 With a prostrated knee, yea, cast aside
 The awfulness of time-created power 30
 For the regardful glances of a child.

Yea, the high ones and powerful of Earth,
 The helmed sons of victory, the grave
 And schooled philosophers, the giant men
 Of overmastering intellect, have turned 35
 Each from the separate idol of his high
 And vehement ambition for the low
 Idolatry of human loveliness;
 And bartered the sublimity of mind,
 The godlike and commanding intellect 40
 Which nations knelt to, for a woman's
 tear,
 A soft-toned answer, or a wanton's smile.

And in the chastened beauty of that eye,
 And in the beautiful play of that red lip,
 And in the quiet smile, and in the voice
 Sweet as the tuneful greeting of a bird 46
 To the first flowers of springtime, there is
 more

Than the perfection of the painter's skill
 Or statuary's moulding. Mind is there,
 The pure and holy attributes of soul, 50
 The seal of virtue, the exceeding grace
 Of meekness blended with a maiden pride;
 Nor deem ye that beneath the gentle smile,
 And the calm temper of a chastened mind
 No warmth of passion kindles, and no tide
 Of quick and earnest feeling courses on 56
 From the warm heart's pulsations. There are springs

Of deep and pure affection, hidden now,
 Within that quiet bosom, which but wait
 The thrilling of some kindly touch, to flow 60
 Like waters from the Desert-rock of old.

BOLIVAR.

A DIRGE is wailing from the Gulf of stormvexed Mexico,
 To where through Pampas' solitudes the mighty rivers flow;
 The dark Sierras hear the sound, and
 from each mountain rift,
 Where Andes and Cordilleras their awful summits lift,
 Where Cotopaxi's fiery eye glares redly upon heaven, 5
 And Chimborazo's shattered peak the upper sky has riven;

From mount to mount, from wave to wave,
 a wild and long lament,
 A sob that shakes like her earthquakes
 the startled continent!

A light dies out, a life is sped—the hero's
 at whose word

The nations started as from sleep, and girded on the sword; 10

The victor of a hundred fields where blood
 was poured like rain,

And Freedom's loosened avalanche hurled
 down the hosts of Spain,

The eaglesoul on Junin's slope who showed his shouting men

A grander sight than Balboa saw from wave-washed Darien,

As from the snows with battle red died out the sinking sun, 15

And broad and vast beneath him lay a world for freedom won.

How died that victor? In the field with banners o'er him thrown,

With trumpets in his failing ear, by charging squadrons blown,

With scattered foemen flying fast and fearfully before him,

With shouts of triumph swelling round and brave men bending o'er him? 20

Not on his fields of victory, nor in his council hall,

The worn and sorrowing leader heard the inevitable call.

Alone he perished in the land he saved
 from slavery's ban,

Maligned and doubted and denied, a broken-hearted man!

Now let the New World's banners droop above the fallen chief, 25

And let the mountaineer's dark eyes be wet with tears of grief!

For slander's sting, for envy's hiss, for friendship hatred grown,

Can funeral pomp, and tolling bell, and priestly mass atone?

Better to leave unmourned the dead than wrong men while they live;

What if the strong man failed or erred,
 could not his own forgive? 30

O people freed by him, repent above your hero's bier:

The sole resource of late remorse is now
 his tomb to rear!

ISABELLA OF AUSTRIA.

Isabella, Infanta of Parma, and consort of Joseph of Austria, predicted her own death, immediately after her marriage with the Emperor.
 Amidst the gayety and splendor of Vienna and Presburg, she was reserved and melancholy, she believed that Heaven had given her a view of the future, and that her child, the namesake of the great Maria Theresa, would perish with her.
 Her prediction was fulfilled.

'MIDST the palace bowers of Hungary,
 imperial Presburg's pride,

With the noble born and beautiful assembled at her side,

She stood beneath the summer heavens,
 the soft wind sighing on,

Stirring the green and arching boughs
 like dancers in the sun.

The beautiful pomegranate flower, the snowy orange bloom, 5

The lotus and the trailing vine, the rose's meek perfume,

The willow crossing with its green some statue's marble hair,

All that might charm the fresh young sense, or light the soul, was there!

But she, a monarch's treasured one, leaned gloomily apart,

With her dark eyes tearfully cast down,
 and a shadow on her heart. 10

Young, beautiful, and dearly loved, what sorrow hath she known?

Are not the hearts and swords of all held sacred as her own?

Is not her lord the kingliest in battle-field or tower?

The wisest in the council-hall, the gayest
 in the bower?

Is not his love as full and deep as his own
 Danube's tide? 15

And wherefore in her princely home weeps
 Isabel, his bride?

She raised her jewelled hand, and flung her veiling tresses back,
Bathing its snowy tapering within their glossy black.

A tear fell on the orange leaves, rich gem
and mimic blossom,

And fringed robe shook fearfully upon her sighing bosom. 20

'Smile on, smile on,' she murmured low,
'for all is joy around,

Shadow and sunshine, stainless sky, soft airs, and blossomed ground.

'Tis meet the light of heart should smile,
when nature's smile is fair,

And melody and fragrance meet, twin sisters of the air.

'But ask me not to share with you the beauty of the scene, 25

The fountain-fall, mosaic walk, and
breadths of tender green;

And point not to the mild blue sky, or glorious summer sun,

I know how very fair is all the hand of God has done.

The hills, the sky, the sunlit cloud, the waters leaping forth,

The swaying trees, the scented flowers,
the dark green robes of earth,— 30

I love them well, but I have learned to turn aside from all,

And nevermore my heart must own their sweet but fatal thrall.

'And I could love the noble one whose mighty name I bear,

And closer to my breaking heart his princely image wear,

And I could love our sweet young flower,
unfolding day by day, 35

And taste of that unearthly joy which mothers only may,—

But what am I to cling to these?—A voice
is in my ear,

A shadow lingers at my side, the death-
wail and the bier!

The cold and starless night of Death
where day may never beam,

The silence and forgetfulness, the sleep
that hath no dream! 40

'O God, to leave this fair bright world,
and more than all to know

The moment when the Spectral One shall strike his fearful blow;

To know the day, the very hour, to feel the tide roll on,

To shudder at the gloom before and weep
the sunshine gone;

To count the days, the few short days, of light and love and breath 45

Between me and the noisome grave, the voiceless home of death!

Alas!—if feeling, knowing this, I murmur
at my doom,

Let not Thy frowning, O my God! lend darkness to the tomb.

'Oh, I have borne my spirit up, and smiled amidst the chill

Remembrance of my certain doom which lingers with me still; 50

I would not cloud my fair child's brow,
nor let a tear-drop dim

The eye that met my wedded lord's, lest it should sadden him;

But there are moments when the strength
of feeling must have way;

That hidden tide of unnamed woe nor fear nor love can stay.

Smile on, smile on, light-hearted ones!
Your sun of joy is high: 55

Smile on, and leave the doomed of Heaven alone to weep and die!

A funeral chant was wailing through
Vienna's holy pile,

A coffin with its gorgeous pall was borne
along the aisle;

The drooping flags of many lands waved slow above the dead,

A mighty band of mourners came, a king
was at its head,— 60

A youthful king, with mournful tread,
and dim and tearful eye;

He scarce had dreamed that one so pure
as his fair bride could die.

And sad and long above the throng the funeral anthem rung:

'Mourn for the hope of Austria! Mourn
for the loved and young!'

The wail went up from other lands, the valleys of the Hun, 65 Fair Parma with its orange bowers, and hills of vine and sun :
The lilies of imperial France drooped as the sound went by,
The long lament of cloistered Spain was mingled with the cry.
The dwellers in Colorno's halls, the Slowak
at his cave,
The bowed at the Escorial, the Magyar
stoutly brave, 70
All wept the early stricken flower ; and still the anthem rung :
' Mourn for the pride of Austria ! Mourn
for the loved and young !'

THE FRATRICIDE.

HE stood on the brow of the well-known
hill,
Its few gray oaks moan'd over him still ;
The last of that forest which cast the gloom
Of its shadow at eve o'er his childhood's
home ;
And the beautiful valley beneath him lay
With its quivering leaves, and its streams at play, 6
And the sunshine over it all the while
Like the golden shower of the Eastern isle.
He knew the rock with its fingering vine,
And its gray top touch'd by the slant sunshine, 10
And the delicate stream which crept
beneath
Soft as the flow of an infant's breath ;
And the flowers which lean'd to the West
wind's sigh,
Kissing each ripple which glided by ;
And he knew every valley and wooded
swell, 15
For the visions of childhood are treasured
well.
Why shook the old man as his eye glanced
down
That narrow ravine where the rude cliffs
frown,

With their shaggy brows and their teeth
of stone,
And their grim shade back from the sunlight thrown ? 20
What saw he there save the dreary glen,
Where the shy fox crept from the eye of
men,
And the great owl sat on the leafy limb
That the hateful sun might not look on
him ?
Fix'd, glassy, and strange was that old man's eye, 25
As if a spectre were stealing by,
And glared it still on that narrow dell
Where thicker and browner the twilight
fell ;
Yet at every sigh of the fitful wind,
Or stirring of leaves in the wood behind,
His wild glance wander'd the landscape
o'er, 31
Then fix'd on that desolate dell once more.
Oh, who shall tell of the thoughts which ran Through the dizzied brain of that gray
old man ?
His childhood's home, and his father's toil, 35
And his sister's kiss, and his mother's
smile,
And his brother's laughter and gamesome
mirth,
At the village school and the winter
hearth ;
The beautiful thoughts of his early time,
Ere his heart grew dark with its later
crime. 40
And darker and wilder his visions came
Of the deadly feud and the midnight
flame,
Of the Indian's knife with its slaughter
red,
Of the ghastly forms of the scalpless dead,
Of his own fierce deeds in that fearful
hour 45
When the terrible Brandt was forth in
power,
And he clasp'd his hands o'er his burning
eye
To shadow the vision which glided by.

It came with the rush of the battle-
storm—

With a brother's shaken and kneeling
form, 50

And his prayer for life when a brother's arm

Was lifted above him for mortal harm,
And the fiendish curse, and the groan of
death,

And the welling of blood, and the gurgling
breath,

And the scalp torn off while each nerve
could feel 55

The wrenching hand and the jagged steel !

And the old man groan'd—for he saw,
again,

The mangled corse of his kinsman slain,
As it lay where his hand had hurl'd it then,
At the shadow'd foot of that fearful glen !

And it rose erect, with the death-pang
grim, 61

And pointed its bloodied finger at him !
And his heart grew cold—and the curse of Cain

Burn'd like a fire in the old man's brain.

Oh, had he not seen that spectre rise 65
On the blue of the cold Canadian skies ?

From the lakes which sleep in the ancient
wood,

It had risen to whisper its tale of blood,
And follow'd his bark to the sombre shore,
And glared by night through the wigwam
door ; 70

And here, on his own familiar hill,
It rose on his haunted vision still !

Whose corse was that which the morrow's
sun,

Through the opening boughs, look'd calmly on ?

There were those who bent o'er that rigid
face 75

Who well in its darken'd lines might trace
The features of him who, a traitor, fled
From a brother whose blood himself had shed,

And there, on the spot where he strangely
died, 79

They made the grave of the Fratricide !

ISABEL.

I DO not love thee, Isabel, and yet thou art most fair !

I know the tempting of thy lips, the witchcraft of thy hair,

The winsome smile that might beguile the shy bird from his tree ;

But from their spell I know so well, I shake my manhood free.

I might have loved thee, Isabel ; I know
I should if aught 5

Of all thy words and ways had told of one unselfish thought ;

If through the cloud of fashion, the pictured veil of art,

One casual flash had broken warm, earnest
from the heart.

But words are idle, Isabel, and if I praise or blame,

Or cheer or warn, it matters not ; thy life will be the same ; 10

Still free to use, and still abuse, unmindful of the harm,

The fatal gift of beauty, the power to choose and charm.

Then go thy way, fair Isabel, nor heed that from thy train

A doubtful follower falls away, enough will still remain.

But what the long-rebuking years may bring to them or thee 15

No prophet and no prophet's son am I to guess or see.

I do not love thee, Isabel ; I would as soon put on

A crown of slender frost-work beneath the heated sun,

Or chase the winds of summer, or trust
the sleeping sea,

Or lean upon a shadow as think of loving
thee. 20

STANZAS.

BIND up thy tresses, thou beautiful one,
Of brown in the shadow and gold in the
sun !

Free should their delicate lustre be thrown O'er a forehead more pure than the Parian
stone ;

Shaming the light of those Orient pearls
Which bind o'er its whiteness thy soft wreathing curls. 6

Smile, for thy glance on the mirror is
thrown,

And the face of an angel is meeting thine
own !

Beautiful creature, I marvel not
That thy cheek a lovelier tint hath caught ;
And the kindling light of thine eye hath
told 11

Of a dearer wealth than the miser's gold.

Away, away, there is danger here !
A terrible phantom is bending near :
Ghastly and sunken, his rayless eye 15
Scowls on thy loveliness scornfully,
With no human look, with no human
breath,

He stands beside thee, the haunter, Death !

Fly ! but, alas ! he will follow still,
Like a moonlight shadow, beyond thy
will ; 20

In thy noonday walk, in thy midnight
sleep,

Close at thy hand will that phantom keep ;
Still in thine ear shall his whispers be ;
Woe, that such phantom should follow
thee !

In the lighted hall where the dancers go,
Like beautiful spirits, to and fro ; 26
When thy fair arms glance in their stainless white,

Like ivory bathed in still moonlight ;
And not one star in the holy sky
Hath a clearer light than thine own blue
eye ! 30

Oh, then, even then, he will follow thee,
As the ripple follows the bark at sea ;
In the soften'd light, in the turning dance,
He will fix on thine his dead, cold glance ;
The chill of his breath on thy cheek shall linger, 35
And thy warm blood shrink from his icy finger !

And yet there is hope. Embrace it now,
While thy soul is open as thy brow ;
While thy heart is fresh, while its feelings
still

Gush clear as the unsoil'd mountain-rill ;
And thy smiles are free as the airs of
spring, 41
Greeting and blessing each breathing
thing.

When the after cares of thy life shall come,
When the bud shall wither before its
bloom ;

When thy soul is sick of the emptiness 45
And changeful fashion of human bliss ;
When the weary torpor of blighted feeling
Over thy heart as ice is stealing ;

Then, when thy spirit is turn'd above,
By the mild rebuke of the Chastener's
love ; 50

When the hope of that joy in thy heart is stirr'd,

Which eye hath not seen, nor ear hath
heard,

Then will that phantom of darkness be
Gladness, and promise, and bliss to thee.

1832.

MOGG MEGONE.

This poem was commenced in 1830, but did not assume its present shape until four years after. It deals with the border strife of the early settlers of eastern New England and their savage neighbors ; but its personages and incidents are mainly fictitious. Looking at it, at the present time, it suggests the idea of a big Indian in his war-paint strutting about in Sir Walter Scott's plaid.

PART I.

WHO stands on that cliff, like a figure of
stone,
Unmoving and tall in the light of the sky.

- Where the spray of the cataract sparkles on high,
Lonely and sternly, save Mogg Megone?⁷⁴
Close to the verge of the rock is he, 5
While beneath him the Saco its work is doing,
Hurrying down to its grave, the sea,
And slow through the rock its pathway
hewing!
Far down, through the mist of the falling
river,
Which rises up like an incense ever, 10
The splintered points of the crags are seen,
With water howling and vexed between,
While the scooping whirl of the pool
beneath
Seems an open throat, with its granite teeth!
- But Mogg Megone never trembled yet 15
Wherever his eye or his foot was set.
He is watchful: each form in the moonlight dim.
Of rock or of tree, is seen of him:
He listens; each sound from afar is caught,
The faintest shiver of leaf and limb: 20
But he sees not the waters, which foam
and fret,
Whose moonlit spray has his moccasin
wet,—
And the roar of their rushing, he hears it
not.
- The moonlight, through the open bough
Of the gnarled beech, whose naked root
Coils like a serpent at his foot, 26
Falls, checkered, on the Indian's brow.
His head is bare, save only where
Waves in the wind one lock of hair,
Reserved for him, whoe'er he be, 30
More mighty than Megone in strife,
When breast to breast and knee to knee,
Above the fallen warrior's life
Gleams, quick and keen, the scalping-
knife.
- Megone hath his knife and hatchet and gun, 35
And his gaudy and tasselled blanket on:
His knife hath a handle with gold inlaid,
And magic words on its polished blade,—
- 'T was the gift of Castine to Mogg
Megone,⁷⁹
For a scalp or twain from the Yengees
torn: 40
His gun was the gift of the Tarrantine,
And Modocawando's wives had strung
The brass and the beads, which tinkle and shine
On the polished breech, and broad bright line
Of beaded wampum around it hung. 45
- What seeks Megone? His foes are near,— Grey Jocelyn's eye is never sleeping,⁸⁰
And the garrison lights are burning
clear,
Where Philip's men their watch are keeping.⁸¹
Let him hie him away through the dank river fog, 50
Never rustling the boughs nor displacing the rocks,
For the eyes and the ears which are watching for Mogg
Are keener than those of the wolf or the fox.
- He starts,—there's a rustle among the
leaves.
Another,—the click of his gun is heard!
A footstep,—is it the step of Cleaves, 56
With Indian blood on his English sword?
Steals Harmon down from the sands of York,⁸²
With hand of iron and foot of cork?
Has Scamman, versed in Indian wile, 60
For vengeance left his vine-hung isle?⁸³
Hark! at that whistle, soft and low,
How lights the eye of Mogg Megone!
A smile gleams o'er his dusky brow,—
'Boon welcome, Johnny Boniton!' 65
- Out steps, with cautious foot and slow,
And quick, keen glances to and fro,
The hunted outlaw, Boniton!⁸⁴
A low, lean, swarthy man is he,
With blanket-garb and buskined knee, 70
And naught of English fashion on;
For he hates the race from whence he
sprung,
And he couches his words in the Indian
tongue.

'Hush,—let the Sachem's voice be weak ;
The water-rat shall hear him speak,— 75
The owl shall whoop in the white man's
ear,

That Mogg Megone, with his scalps, is
here!'

He pauses,—dark, over cheek and brow,
A flush, as of shame, is stealing now :

'Sachem!' he says, 'let me have the land,
Which stretches away upon either hand,
As far about as my feet can stray 82

In the half of a gentle summer's day,
From the leaping brook to the Saco
river,— 85

And the fair-haired girl thou hast sought of me 85

Shall sit in the Sachem's wigwam, and be
The wife of Mogg Megone forever.'

There's a sudden light in the Indian's
glance,

A moment's trace of powerful feeling,
Of love or triumph, or both perchance, 90

Over his proud, calm features stealing.
'The words of my father are very good ;
He shall have the land, and water, and
wood ;

And he who harms the Sagamore John,
Shall feel the knife of Mogg Megone ; 95

But the fawn of the Yengees shall sleep
on my breast,

And the bird of the clearing shall sing in my nest.'

'But, father!'—and the Indian's hand
Falls gently on the white man's arm,

And with a smile as shrewdly bland 100
As the deep voice is slow and calm,—

'Where is my father's singing-bird,—
The sunny eye, and sunset hair?

I know I have my father's word
And that his word is good and fair ; 105

But will my father tell me where Megone shall go and look for his bride?—

For he sees her not by her father's side.'

The dark, stern eye of Boniton
Flashes over the features of Mogg
Megone, 110

In one of those glances which search
within ;

But the stolid calm of the Indian alone
Remains where the trace of emotion has been.

Does the Sachem doubt? Let him go
with me,

And the eyes of the Sachem his bride shall see.' 115

Cautious and slow, with pauses oft,
And watchful eyes and whispers soft,

The twain are stealing through the wood,
Leaving the downward-rushing flood,

Whose deep and solemn roar behind 120
Grows fainter on the evening wind.

Hark!—is that the angry howl
Of the wolf, the hills among?

Or the hooting of the owl,
On his leafy cradle swung?— 125

Quickly glancing, to and fro,
Listening to each sound they go

Round the columns of the pine,
Indistinct, in shadow, seeming 129

Like some old and pillared shrine ;
With the soft and white moonshine,

Round the foliage-tracery shed
Of each column's branching head,

For its lamps of worship gleaming !
And the sounds awakened there, 135

In the pine-leaves fine and small,
Soft and sweetly musical,

By the fingers of the air,
For the anthem's dying fall 139

Lingering round some temple's wall !
Niche and cornice round and round

Wailing like the ghost of sound !
Is not Nature's worship thus,

Ceaseless ever, going on ?
Hath it not a voice for us 145

In the thunder, or the tone
Of the leaf-harp faint and small,

Speaking to the unsealed ear
Words of blended love and fear,

Of the mighty Soul of all? 150

Naught had the twain of thoughts like
these

As they wound along through the crowded trees,

Where never had rung the axeman's stroke
On the gnarled trunk of the rough-barked
oak ;—

Climbing the dead tree's mossy log, 155
 Breaking the mesh of the bramble fine,
 Turning aside the wild grapevine,
 And lightly crossing the quaking bog
 Whose surface shakes at the leap of the frog,
 And out of whose pools the ghostly fog
 Creeps into the chill moonshine! 161

Yet, even that Indian's ear had heard
 The preaching of the Holy Word:
 Sanchekantacket's isle of sand
 Was once his father's hunting land, 165
 Where zealous Hiacomies stood,—⁸⁶
 The wild apostle of the wood,
 Shook from his soul the fear of harm,
 And trampled on the Powwow's charm;
 Until the wizard's curses hung 170
 Suspended on his palsyng tongue,
 And the fierce warrior, grim and tall,
 Trembled before the forest Paul!

A cottage hidden in the wood,—
 Red through its seams a light is glowing,
 On rock and bough and tree-trunk rude,
 A narrow lustre throwing. 177
 'Who's there?' a clear, firm voice demands;
 'Hold, Ruth,—'t is I, the Sagamore!
 Quick, at the summons, hasty hands 180
 Unclose the bolted door;
 And on the outlaw's daughter shine
 The flashes of the kindled pine.

Tall and erect the maiden stands,
 Like some young priestess of the wood,
 The freeborn child of Solitude, 186
 And bearing still the wild and rude,
 Yet noble trace of Nature's hands.
 Her dark brown cheek has caught its stain
 More from the sunshine than the rain; 190
 Yet, where her long fair hair is parting,
 A pure white brow into light is starting;
 And, where the folds of her blanket sever,
 Are neck and a bosom as white as ever
 The foam-wreaths rise on the leaping
 river. 195
 But in the convulsive quiver and grip
 Of the muscles around her bloodless lip,
 There is something painful and sad to
 see;

And her eye has a glance more sternly
 wild

Than even that of a forest child 200
 In its fearless and untamed freedom
 should be.

Yet, seldom in hall or court are seen
 So queenly a form and so noble a mien,
 As freely and smiling she welcomes them there,—

Her outlawed sire and Mogg Megone:
 'Pray, father, how does thy hunting fare? 206
 And, Sachem, say,—does Scamman
 wear,

In spite of thy promise, a scalp of his
 own?'

Hurried and light is the maiden's tone;
 But a fearful meaning lurks within 210
 Her glance, as it questions the eye of Megone,—

An awful meaning of guilt and sin!—
 The Indian hath opened his blanket, and
 there

Hangs a human scalp by its long damp
 hair!

With hand upraised, with quick-drawn
 breath, 215

She meets that ghastly sign of death.
 In one long, glassy, spectral stare
 The enlarging eye is fastened there,
 As if that mesh of pale brown hair

Had power to change at sight alone 220
 Even as the fearful locks which wound
 Medusa's fatal forehead round,
 The gazer into stone.

With such a look Herodias read
 The features of the bleeding head, 225
 So looked the mad Moor on his dead,
 Or the young Cenci as she stood,
 O'er-dabbled with a father's blood!

Look!—feeling melts that frozen glance,
 It moves that marble countenance, 230
 As if at once within her strove
 Pity with shame, and hate with love.
 The Past recalls its joy and pain,
 Old memories rise before her brain,—
 The lips which love's embraces met, 235
 The hand her tears of parting wet,
 The voice whose pleading tones beguiled
 The pleased ear of the forest-child.—

And tears she may no more repress
Reveal her lingering tenderness. 240

Oh, woman wronged can cherish hate
More deep and dark than manhood
may;

But when the mockery of Fate
Hath left Revenge its chosen way,
And the fell curse, which years have nursed, 245

Full on the spoiler's head hath burst,—
When all her wrong, and shame, and pain,
Burns fiercely on his heart and brain,—
Still lingers something of the spell

Which bound her to the traitor's bosom,—
Still, midst the vengeful fires of hell, 251
Some flowers of old affection blossom.

John Boniton's eyebrows together are drawn

With a fierce expression of wrath and scorn,—

He hoarsely whispers, 'Ruth, beware! 255
Is this the time to be playing the fool,—

Crying over a paltry lock of hair,
Like a love-sick girl at school?— 258

Curse on it! an Indian can see and hear:
Away,—and prepare our evening cheer!'

How keenly the Indian is watching now
Her tearful eye and her varying brow,—
With a serpent eye, which kindles and
burns,

Like a fiery star in the upper air:
On sire and daughter his fierce glance turns:— 265

'Has my old white father a scalp to
spare?

For his young one loves the pale brown
hair

Of the scalp of an English dog far more
Than Mogg Megone, or his wigwam floor;
Go,—Mogg is wise: he will keep his
land,— 270

And Sagamore John, when he feels with his hand,
Shall miss his scalp where it grew before.'

The moment's gust of grief is gone,— Thelip is clenched,—the tears are still,—

God pity thee, Ruth Boniton! 275

With what a strength of will
Are nature's feelings in thy breast,
As with an iron hand, repressed!
And how, upon that nameless woe,
Quick as the pulse can come and go, 280
While shakes the unsteadfast knee, and
yet

The bosom heaves,—the eye is wet,—
Has thy dark spirit power to stay
The heart's wild current on its way?

And whence that baleful strength of guile, 285

Which over that still working brow
And tearful eye and cheek can throw
The mockery of a smile?

Warned by her father's blackening frown,
With one strong effort crushing down 290
Grief, hate, remorse, she meets again

The savage murderer's sullen gaze,
And scarcely look or tone betrays
How the heart strives beneath its chain.

'Is the Sachem angry,—angry with Ruth,
Because she cries with an ache in her tooth,— 296

Which would make a Sagamore jump and cry,

And look about with a woman's eye?
No,—Ruth will sit in the Sachem's door
And braid the mats for his wigwam floor,
And broil his fish and tender fawn, 301
And weave his wampum, and grind his
corn,—

For she loves the brave and the wise, and none

Are braver and wiser than Mogg Megone!'

The Indian's brow is clear once more: 305
With grave, calm face, and half-shut eye,
He sits upon the wigwam floor,

And watches Ruth go by,
Intent upon her household care;
And ever and anon, the while, 310

Or on the maiden, or her fare,
Which smokes in grateful promise there,
Bestows his quiet smile.

Ah, Mogg Megone!—what dreams are
thine,

But those which love's own fancies
dress,— 315

The sum of Indian happiness !—
 A wigwam, where the warm sunshine
 Looks in among the groves of pine,—
 A stream, where, round thy light canoe,
 The trout and salmon dart in view, 320
 And the fair girl, before thee now,
 Spreading thy mat with hand of snow,
 Or plying, in the dews of morn,
 Her hoe amidst thy patch of corn,
 Or offering up, at eve, to thee, 325
 Thy birchen dish of hominy !

From the rude board of Boniton,
 Venison and suocotash have gone,—
 For long these dwellers of the wood
 Have felt the gnawing want of food. 330
 But untasted of Ruth is the frugal cheer,—
 With head averted, yet ready ear,
 She stands by the side of her austere sire,
 Feeding, at times, the unequal fire
 With the yellow knots of the pitch-pine
 tree. 335
 Whose flaring light, as they kindle, falls
 On the cottage-roof, and its black log
 walls,
 And over its inmates three.

From Sagamore Boniton's hunting flask
 The fire-water burns at the lip of Megone: 340
 'Will the Sachem hear what his father shall ask?

Will he make his mark, that it may be
 known,
 On the speaking-leaf, that he gives the
 land,
 From the Sachem's own, to his father's
 hand?'

The fire-water shines in the Indian's eyes,
 As he rises, the white man's bidding to
 do: 346

'Wuttamuttata—weekan !⁸⁸ Mogg is
 wise,—

For the water he drinks is strong and
 new,—

Mogg's heart is great !—will he shut his
 hand,

When his father asks for a little land?—
 With unsteady fingers, the Indian has drawn 351

On the parchment the shape of a hunter's bow,

'Boon water,—boon water,—Sagamore
 John !

Wuttamuttata,—weekan ! our hearts
 will grow !'

He drinks yet deeper,—he mutters low,—
 He reels on his bear-skin to and fro,—356
 His head falls down on his naked breast,—
 He struggles, and sinks to a drunken rest.

'Humph—drunk as a beast !'—and Boni-ton's brow

Is darker than ever with evil thought—
 'The fool has signed his warrant ; but how 361

And when shall the deed be wrought ?
 Speak, Ruth ! why, what the devil is
 there,

To fix thy gaze in that empty air?—
 Speak, Ruth ! by my soul, if I thought that tear 365

Which shames thyself and our purpose
 here,

Were shed for that cursed and pale-faced dog,

Whose green scalp hangs from the belt of Mogg,

And whose beastly soul is in Satan's
 keeping ;

This—this !—he dashes his hand upon 370
 The rattling stock of his loaded gun,—

'Should send thee with him to do thy weeping !'

'Father !'—the eye of Boniton
 Sinks at that low, sepulchral tone,
 Hollow and deep, as it were spoken 375

By the unmoving tongue of death,—
 Or from some statue's lips had broken,—

A sound without a breath !
 'Father !—my life I value less

Than yonder fool his gaudy dress ; 380
 And how it ends it matters not,

By heart-break or by rifle-shot ; ●
 But spare awhile the scoff and threat,—
 Our business is not finished yet.'

'True, true, my girl,—I only meant 385
 To draw up again the bow unbent.

Harm thee, my Ruth ! I only sought
 To frighten off thy gloomy thought ;

Come,—let's be friends !' He seeks to clasp

His daughter's cold, damp hand in his. 390
 Ruth startles from her father's grasp,
 As if each nerve and muscle felt,
 Instinctively, the touch of guilt
 Through all their subtle sympathies.

He points her to the sleeping Mogg: 395
 'What shall be done with yonder dog?
 Scamman is dead, and revenge is thine,—
 The deed is signed and the land is mine;
 And this drunken fool is of use no more,
 Save as thy hopeful bridegroom, and
 sooth, 400

'T were Christian mercy to finish him,
 Ruth,
 Now, while he lies like a beast on our
 floor,—

If not for thine, at least for his sake,
 Rather than let the poor dog awake 404
 To drain my flask, and claim as his bride
 Such a forest devil to run by his side,—
 Such a Wetuomant⁸⁹ as thou wouldst
 make!'

He laughs at his jest. Hush—what is
 there?—

The sleeping Indian is striving to rise,
 With his knife in his hand, and glaring
 eyes!— 410

'Wagh!—Mogg will have the pale-face's
 hair,

For his knife is sharp, and his fingers can help

The hair to pull and the skin to peel,—
 Let him cry like a woman and twist like an eel,

The great Captain Scamman must lose his scalp! 415

And Ruth, when she sees it, shall dance with Mogg.'

His eyes are fixed,—but his lips draw in,—
 With a low, hoarse chuckle, and fiendish grin,—

And he sinks again, like a senseless log.

Ruth does not speak,—she does not stir;
 But she gazes down on the murderer, 421
 Whose broken and dreamful slumbers tell
 Too much for her ear of that deed of hell.
 She sees the knife, with its slaughter red,
 And the dark fingers clenching the bear-skin bed! 425

What thoughts of horror and madness
 whirl
 Through the burning brain of that fallen
 girl!

John Boniton lifts his gun to his eye,
 Its muzzle is close to the Indian's ear,—
 But he drops it again. 'Some one may be nigh, 430

And I would not that even the wolves should hear.'

He draws his knife from his deer-skin belt,—

Its edge with his fingers is slowly felt;—
 Kneeling down on one knee, by the Indian's side,

From his throat he opens the blanket
 wide; 435

And twice or thrice he feebly essays
 A trembling hand with the knife to raise.

'I cannot,'—he mutters,—'did he not save
 My life from a cold and wintry grave,
 When the storm came down from Agiochook, 440

And the north-wind howled, and the treetops shook,—

And I strove, in the drifts of the rushing
 snow,

Till my knees grew weak and I could not go,

And I felt the cold to my vitals creep,
 And my heart's blood stiffen, and pulses
 sleep! 445

I cannot strike him—Ruth Boniton!
 In the Devil's name, tell me—what's to be
 done?'

Oh, when the soul, once pure and high,
 Is stricken down from Virtue's sky,
 As, with the downcast star of morn, 450
 Some gems of light are with it drawn,
 And, through its night of darkness, play
 Some tokens of its primal day,
 Some lofty feelings linger still,—

The strength to dare, the nerve to meet
 Whatever threatens with defeat 455

Its all-indomitable will!—
 But lacks the mean of mind and heart,
 Though eager for the gains of crime,
 Or, at his chosen place and time, 460

The strength to bear his evil part ;
And, shielded by his very Vice,
Escapes from Crime by Cowardice.

Ruth starts erect,—with bloodshot eye,
And lips drawn tight across her teeth
Showing their locked embrace beneath, 466
In the red firelight : ' Mogg must die !
' Give me the knife ! ' The outlaw turns,
Shuddering in heart and limb away,
But, fitfully there, the hearth-fire burns,
And he sees on the wall strange shadows
play. 471

A lifted arm, a tremulous blade,
Are dimly pictured in light and shade,
Plunging down in the darkness. Hark,
that cry

Again—and again—he sees it fall, 475
That shadowy arm down the lighted wall !
He hears quick footsteps—a shape flits
by—

The door on its rusted hinges creaks :—
' Ruth—daughter Ruth ! ' the outlaw shrieks.

But no sound comes back,—he is standing
alone 480
By the mangled corse of Mogg Megone !

PART II.

'T is morning over Norridgewock,—
On tree and wigwam, wave and rock,
Bathed in the autumnal sunshine, stirred
At intervals by breeze and bird, 485

And wearing all the hues which glow
In heaven's own pure and perfect bow,
That glorious picture of the air,
Which summer's light-robed angel forms
On the dark ground of fading storms, 490

With pencil dipped in sunbeams there,—
And, stretching out, on either hand,
O'er all that wide and unshorn land,
Till, weary of its gorgeousness,
The aching and the dazzled eye 495
Rests, gladdened, on the calm blue sky,—
Slumbers the mighty wilderness !

The oak, upon the windy hill,
Its dark green burthen upward heaves—
The hemlock broods above its rill, 500
Its cone-like foliage darker still,
Against the birch's graceful stem,

And the rough walnut-bough receives
The sun upon its crowded leaves,
Each colored like a topaz gem ; 505
And the tall maple wears with them
The coronal, which autumn gives,
The brief, bright sign of ruin near,
The hectic of a dying year !

The hermit priest, who lingers now 510
On the Bald Mountain's shrubless brow,
The gray and thunder-smitten pile
Which marks afar the Desert Isle,⁹⁰

While gazing on the scene below,
May half forget the dreams of home, 515
That nightly with his slumbers come,—
The tranquil skies of sunny France,
The peasant's harvest song and dance,
The vines around the hillsides wreathing,
The soft airs midst their clusters breathing, 520

The wings which dipped, the stars which
shone

Within thy bosom, blue Garonne !
And round the Abbey's shadowed wall,
At morning spring and even-fall,
Sweet voices in the still air singing,—

The chant of many a holy hymn,— 526
The solemn bell of vespers ringing,—
And hallowed torchlight falling dim
On pictured saint and seraphim !

For here beneath him lies unrolled, 530
Bathed deep in morning's flood of gold,
A vision gorgeous as the dream
Of the beatified may seem,

When, as his Church's legends say,
Borne upward in ecstatic bliss, 535
The rapt enthusiast soars away,
Unto a brighter world than this :
A mortal's glimpse beyond the pale,—
A moment's lifting of the veil !

Far eastward o'er the lovely bay, 540
Penobscot's clustered wigwams lay ;
And gently from that Indian town
The verdant hillside slopes adown,
To where the sparkling waters play

Upon the yellow sands below ; 545
And shooting round the winding shores
Of narrow capes, and isles which lie
Slumbering to ocean's lullaby,—
With birchen boat and glancing oars,

The red men to their fishing go ; 550
While from their planting ground is borne
The treasure of the golden corn,
By laughing girls, whose dark eyes glow
Wild through the locks which o'er them
flow.

The wrinkled squaw, whose toil is done,
Sits on her bear-skin in the sun, 556
Watching the huskers, with a smile
For each full ear which swells the pile ;
And the old chief, who nevermore
May bend the bow or pull the oar, 560
Smokes gravely in his wigwam door,
Or slowly shapes, with axe of stone,
The arrow-head from flint and bone.

Beneath the westward turning eye
A thousand wooded islands lie, 565
Gems of the waters ! with each hue
Of brightness set in ocean's blue.
Each bears aloft its tuft of trees

Touched by the pencil of the frost,
And, with the motion of each breeze, 570
A moment seen, a moment lost,
Changing and blent, confused and
tossed,

The brighter with the darker crossed,
Their thousand tints of beauty glow
Down in the restless waves below,
And tremble in the sunny skies.
As if, from waving bough to bough,
Flitted the birds of paradise.

There sleep Placentia's group, and there
Père Breteaux marks the hour of prayer ;
And there, beneath the sea-worn cliff, 581

On which the Father's hut is seen,
The Indian stays his rocking skiff,

And peers the hemlock-boughs between,
Half trembling, as he seeks to look ⁹¹ 585
Upon the Jesuit's Cross and Book.

There, gloomily against the sky
The Dark Isles rear their summits high ;
And Desert Rock, abrupt and bare,
Lifts its gray turrets in the air, 590
Seen from afar, like some stronghold
Built by the ocean kings of old ;
And, faint as smoke-wreath white and thin,

Swells in the north vast Katahdin :
And, wandering from its marshy feet, 595
The broad Penobscot comes to meet

And mingle with his own bright bay.
Slow sweep his dark and gathering floods,
Arched over by the ancient woods,
Which Time, in those dim solitudes, 600
Wielding the dull axe of Decay,
Alone hath ever shorn away.

Not thus, within the woods which hide
The beauty of thy azure tide,

And with their falling timbers block 605
Thy broken currents, Kennebec !

Gazes the white man on the wreck
Of the down-trodden Norridgewock ;
In one lone village hemmed at length,
In battle shorn of half their strength, 610
Turned, like the panther in his lair,

With his fast-flowing life-blood wet,
For one last struggle of despair,
Wounded and faint, but tameless yet !
Unreaped, upon the planting lands, 615
The scant, neglected harvest stands :

No shout is there, no dance, no song :
The aspect of the very child
Scowls with a meaning sad and wild
Of bitterness and wrong. 620

The almost infant Norridgewock
Essays to lift the tomahawk ;
And plucks his father's knife away,
To mimic, in his frightful play,

The scalping of an English foe : 625
Wreathes on his lip a horrid smile,
Burns, like a snake's, his small eye, while
Some bough or sapling meets his blow.

The fisher, as he drops his line,
Starts, when he sees the hazels quiver 630
Along the margin of the river,
Looks up and down the rippling tide,
And grasps the firelock at his side.

For Bomazeen from Taconock ⁹²
Has sent his runners to Norridgewock,
With tidings that Moulton and Harmon of York 636

Far up the river have come :
They have left their boats, they have entered the wood,
And filled the depths of the solitude
With the sound of the ranger's drum. 640

On the brow of a hill, which slopes to meet

The flowing river, and bathe its feet ;

The bare-washed rock, and the drooping
grass,

And the creeping vine, as the waters pass,
A rude and unshapely chapel stands, 645
Built up in that wild by unskilled hands,
Yet the traveller knows it a place of
prayer,

For the holy sign of the cross is there :
And should he chance at that place to be,
Of a Sabbath morn, or some hallowed
day, 650

When prayers are made and masses are
said,

Some for the living and some for the dead,
Well might that traveller start to see

The tall dark forms, that take their way
From the birch canoe, on the river shore,
And the forest paths, to that chapel
door; 656

And marvel to mark the naked knees

And the dusky foreheads bending there,
While, in coarse white vesture, over these
In blessing or in prayer, 660

Stretching abroad his thin pale hands,
Like a shrouded ghost, the Jesuit stands.⁸³

Two forms are now in that chapel dim,
The Jesuit, silent and sad and pale,
Anxiously heeding some fearful tale, 665

Which a stranger is telling him.

That stranger's garb is soiled and torn,
And wet with dew and loosely worn ;
Her fair neglected hair falls down
O'er cheeks with wind and sunshine
brown; 670

Yet still, in that disordered face,
The Jesuit's cautious eye can trace
Those elements of former grace
Which, half effaced, seem scarcely less,
Even now, than perfect loveliness. 675

With drooping head, and voice so low
That scarce it meets the Jesuit's ears,
While through her clasped fingers flow,
From the heart's fountain, hot and slow,
Her penitential tears,— 680

She tells the story of the woe
And evil of her years.

'O father, bear with me; my heart
Is sick and death-like, and my brain

Seems girdled with a fiery chain, 685
Whose scorching links will never part,
And never cool again.

Bear with me while I speak, but turn Away that gentle eye, the while;
The fires of guilt more fiercely burn 690
Beneath its holy smile ;
For half I fancy I can see
My mother's sainted look in thee.

'My dear lost mother! sad and pale,
Mournfully sinking day by day, 695
And with a hold on life as frail

As frosted leaves, that, thin and gray,
Hang feebly on their parent spray,
And tremble in the gale ;

Yet watching o'er my childishness 700
With patient fondness, not the less
For all the agony which kept

Her blue eye wakeful, while I slept ;
And checking every tear and groan
That haply might have waked my own,

And bearing still, without offence, 706
My idle words, and petulance ;
Reproving with a tear, and, while

The tooth of pain was keenly preying
Upon her very heart, repaying 710
My brief repentance with a smile.

'Oh, in her meek, forgiving eye
There was a brightness not of mirth,
A light whose clear intensity

Was borrowed not of earth. 715
Along her cheek a deepening red
Told where the feverish hectic fed ;

And yet, each fatal token gave
To the mild beauty of her face
A newer and a dearer grace, 720

Unwarning of the grave.
'T was like the hue which Autumn gives
To yonder changed and dying leaves,

Breathed over by his frosty breath ;
Scarce can the gazer feel that this 725
Is but the spoiler's treacherous kiss,
The mocking-smile of Death !

'Sweet were the tales she used to tell
When summer's eve was dear to us,
And, fading from the darkening dell, 730

The glory of the sunset fell
On wooded Agamemnon,—

When, sitting by our cottage wall,
The murmur of the Saco's fall,

And the south-wind's expiring sighs,
Came, softly blending, on my ear 736
With the low tones I loved to hear:

Tales of the pure, the good, the wise,
The holy men and maids of old,
In the all-sacred pages told; 740

Of Rachel, stooped at Haran's fountains,
Amid her father's thirsty flock,
Beautiful to her kinsman seeming
As the bright angels of his dreaming,

On Padan-aran's holy rock; 745
Of gentle Ruth, and her who kept
Her awful vigil on the mountains,

By Israel's virgin daughters wept;
Of Miriam, with her maidens, singing
The song for grateful Israel meet, 750

While every crimson wave was bringing
The spoils of Egypt at her feet;
Of her, Samaria's humble daughter,

Who paused to hear, beside her well,
Lessons of love and truth, which fell
Softly as Shiloh's flowing water; 756

And saw, beneath His pilgrim guise,
The Promised One, so long foretold
By holy seer and bard of old,

Revealed before her wondering eyes !

'Slowly she faded. Day by day 761
Her step grew weaker in our hall,
And fainter, at each even-fall,

Her sad voice died away.
Yet on her thin, pale lip, the while, 765

Sat Resignation's holy smile:
And even my father checked his tread,
And hushed his voice, beside her bed:

Beneath the calm and sad rebuke
Of her meek eye's imploring look, 770
The scowl of hate his brow forsook,

And in his stern and gloomy eye,
At times, a few unwonted tears
Wet the dark lashes, which for years

Hatred and pride had kept so dry. 775

'Calm as a child to slumber soothed,
As if an angel's hand had smoothed
The still, white features into rest,

Silent and cold, without a breath
To stir the drapery on her breast, 780

Pain, with its keen and poisoned fang,
The horror of the mortal pang,
The suffering look her brow had worn,
The fear, the strife, the anguish gone,—
She slept at last in death ! 785

'Oh, tell me, father, can the dead
Walk on the earth, and look on us,
And lay upon the living's head
Their blessing or their curse?

For, oh, last night she stood by me, 790
As I lay beneath the woodland tree !'

The Jesuit crosses himself in awe, —
'Jesu ! what was it my daughter saw ?'

'She came to me last night.
The dried leaves did not feel her tread ;
She stood by me in the wan moonlight, 796

In the white robes of the dead !
Pale, and very mournfully
She bent her light form over me.

I heard no sound, I felt no breath 800
Breathe o'er me from that face of death :

Its blue eyes rested on my own,
Rayless and cold as eyes of stone ;
Yet, in their fixed, unchanging gaze,

Something, which spoke of early days,—
A sadness in their quiet glare, 806
As if love's smile were frozen there,—

Came o'er me with an icy thrill;
O God ! I feel its presence still !'

The Jesuit makes the holy sign,— 810
'How passed the vision, daughter mine ?'

'All dimly in the wan moonshine,
As a wreath of mist will twist and twine,
And scatter, and melt into the light ;

So scattering, melting on my sight, 815
The pale, cold vision passed ;
But those sad eyes were fixed on mine

Mournfully to the last.'

'God help thee, daughter, tell me why
That spirit passed before thine eye !' 820

'Father, I know not, save it be
That deeds of mine have summoned her
From the unbreathing sepulchre,

To leave her last rebuke with me.
Ah, woe for me ! my mother died 825

Just at the moment when I stood
Close on the verge of womanhood,
A child in everything beside;
And when my wild heart needed most
Her gentle counsels, they were lost. 830

' My father lived a stormy life,
Of frequent change and daily strife;
And—God forgive him! left his child
To feel, like him, a freedom wild;
To love the red man's dwelling-place, 835

The birch boat on his shaded floods,
The wild excitement of the chase
Sweeping the ancient woods,
The camp-fire, blazing on the shore
Of the still lakes, the clear stream
where 840

The idle fisher sets his weir,
Or angles in the shade, far more
Than that restraining awe I felt
Beneath my gentle mother's care,
When nightly at her knee I knelt, 845
With childhood's simple prayer.

' There came a change. The wild, glad mood

Of unchecked freedom passed.
Amid the ancient solitude
Of unshorn grass and waving wood 850
And waters glancing bright and fast,
A softened voice was in my ear,
Sweet as those lulling sounds and fine
The hunter lifts his head to hear,
Now far and faint, now full and near—855

The murmur of the wind-swept pine.
A manly form was ever nigh,
A bold, free hunter, with an eye
Whose dark, keen glance had power to wake

Both fear and love, to awe and charm;
'T was as the wizard rattlesnake, 861
Whose evil glances lure to harm—
Whose cold and small and glittering eye,
And brilliant coil, and changing dye,
Draw, step by step, the gazer near, 865
With drooping wing and cry of fear,
Yet powerless all to turn away,
A conscious, but a willing prey!

' Fear, doubt, thought, life itself, erelong
Merged in one feeling deep and strong. 870

Faded the world which I had known,
A poor vain shadow, cold and waste;
In the warm present bliss alone
Seemed I of actual life to taste.
Fond longings dimly understood, 875
The glow of passion's quickening blood,
And cherished fantasies which press
The young lip with a dream's caress;
The heart's forecast and prophecy
Took form and life before my eye, 880
Seen in the glance which met my own,
Heard in the soft and pleading tone,
Felt in the arms around me cast,
And warm heart-pulses beating fast.
Ah! scarcely yet to God above 885
With deeper trust, with stronger love,
Has prayerful saint his meek heart lent,
Or cloistered nun at twilight bent,
Than I, before a human shrine,
As mortal and as frail as mine, 890
With heart, and soul, and mind, and form,
Knelt madly to a fellow-worm.

' Full soon, upon that dream of sin,
An awful light came bursting in.
The shrine was cold at which I knelt, 895
The idol of that shrine was gone;
A humbled thing of shame and guilt,
Outcast, and spurned and lone,
Wrapt in the shadows of my crime,
With withering heart and burning brain,
And tears that fell like fiery rain, 901
I passed a fearful time.

' There came a voice—it checked the tear,
In heart and soul it wrought a change;
My father's voice was in my ears; 905
It whispered of revenge!
A new and fiercer feeling swept
All lingering tenderness away;
And tiger passions, which had slept
In childhood's better day, 910
Unknown, unfelt, arose at length
In all their own demoniac strength.

' A youthful warrior of the wild,
By words deceived, by smiles beguiled,
Of crime the cheated instrument, 915
Upon our fatal errands went.

Through camp and town and wilderness
He tracked his victim; and at last,
Just when the tide of hate had passed,

- And milder thoughts came warm and fast,
Exulting, at my feet he cast 921
The bloody token of success.
- 'O God! with what an awful power
I saw the buried past arise,
And gather, in a single hour, 925
Its ghost-like memories!
And then I felt, alas! too late,
That underneath the mask of hate,
That shame and guilt and wrong had
thrown
O'er feelings which they might not own,
The heart's wild love had known no
change; 931
And still that deep and hidden love,
With its first fondness, wept above
The victim of its own revenge!
There lay the fearful scalp, and there 935
The blood was on its pale brown hair!
I thought not of the victim's scorn,
I thought not of his baleful guile,
My deadly wrong, my outcast name,
The characters of sin and shame 940
On heart and forehead drawn;
I only saw that victim's smile,
The still green places where we met,—
The moonlit branches, dewy wet;
I only felt, I only heard, 945
The greeting and the parting word,—
The smile, the embrace, the tone, which
made
An Eden of the forest shade.
- 'And oh, with what a loathing eye,
With what a deadly hate, and deep,
I saw that Indian murderer lie 951
Before me, in his drunken sleep!
What 'though for me the deed was done,
And words of mine had sped him on!
Yet when he murmured, as he slept, 955
The horrors of that deed of blood,
The tide of utter madness swept
O'er brain and bosom, like a flood,
And, father, with this hand of mine'—
'Ha! what didst thou?' the Jesuit
cries, 960
Shuddering, as smitten with sudden pain,
And shading, with one thin hand, his
eyes,
With the other he makes the holy sign.
- '—I smote him as I would a worm;
With heart as steeled, with nerves as firm:
He never woke again!' 966
- 'Woman of sin and blood and shame,
Speak, I would know that victim's name.'
- 'Father,' she gasped, 'a chieftain, known
As Saco's Sachem,—Mogg Megone!' 970
- Pale priest! What proud and lofty
dreams, 94
What keen desires, what cherished
schemes,
What hopes, that time may not recall,
Are darkened by that chieftain's fall!
Was he not pledged, by cross and vow,
To lift the hatchet of his sire, 976
And, round his own, the Church's foe,
To light the avenging fire?
Who now the Tarrantine shall wake,
For thine and for the Church's sake? 980
Who summon to the scene
Of conquest and unsparing strife,
And vengeance dearer than his life,
The fiery-souled Castine?
Three backward steps the Jesuit takes,
His long, thin frame as ague shakes; 986
And loathing hate is in his eye,
As from his lips these words of fear
Fall hoarsely on the maiden's ear,—
'The soul that sinneth shall surely die!'
- She stands, as stands the stricken deer, 991
Checked midway in the fearful chase,
When bursts, upon his eye and ear,
The gaunt, gray robber, baying near,
Between him and his hiding-place; 995
While still behind, with yell and blow,
Sweeps, like a storm, the coming foe.
'Save me, O holy man!' her cry
Fills all the void, as if a tongue
Unseen, from rib and rafter hung, 1000
Thrilling with mortal agony;
Her hands are clasping the Jesuit's knee,
And her eye looks fearfully into his
own;—
'Off, woman of sin! nay, touch not me
With the fingers of blood; begone!'
With a gesture of horror, he spurns the
form 1006
That writhes at his feet like a trodden worm.

Ever thus the spirit must,
 Guilty in the sight of Heaven,
 With a keener woe be riven, 1010
 For its weak and sinful trust
 In the strength of human dust;
 And its anguish thrill afresh,
 For each vain reliance given
 To the failing arm of flesh. 1015

PART III.

Ah, weary priest! with pale hands
 pressed

On thy throbbing brow of pain,
 Baffled in thy life-long quest,
 Overworn with toiling vain,
 How ill thy troubled musings fit 1020
 The holy quiet of a breast
 With the Dove of Peace at rest,
 Sweetly brooding over it.

Thoughts are thine which have no part
 With the meek and pure of heart, 1025
 Undisturbed by outward things,
 Resting in the heavenly shade,
 By the overspreading wings
 Of the Blessed Spirit made.

Thoughts of strife and hate and wrong
 Sweep thy heated brain along, 1031
 Fading hopes for whose success
 It were sin to breathe a prayer;—

Schemes which Heaven may never bless,— Fears which darken to despair. 1035

Hoary priest! thy dream is done
 Of a hundred red tribes won
 To the pale of Holy Church;

And the heretic o'erthrown,
 And his name no longer known, 1040
 And thy weary brethren turning,
 Joyful from their years of mourning
 'Twixt the altar and the porch.

Hark! what sudden sound is heard
 In the wood and in the sky, 1045

Shriller than the scream of bird,
 Than the trumpet's clang more high!

Every wolf-cave of the hills,
 Forest arch and mountain gorge,

Rock and dell, and river verge, 1050
 With an answering echo thrills.

Well does the Jesuit know that cry,
 Which summons the Norridgewock to die,
 And tells that the foe of his flock is nigh.

He listens, and hears the rangers come,
 With loud hurrah, and jar of drum, 1056
 And hurrying feet (for the chase is hot),
 And the short, sharp sound of rifle shot,
 And taunt and menace,—answered well
 By the Indians' mocking cry and yell,—
 The bark of dogs,—the squaw's mad scream, 1061

The dash of paddles along the stream,
 The whistle of shot as it cuts the leaves
 Of the maples around the church's eaves,
 And the gride of hatchets fiercely thrown
 On wigwam-log and tree and stone. 1066

Black with the grime of paint and dust,
 Spotted and streaked with human gore,
 A grim and naked head is thrust

Within the chapel-door. 1070

'Ha—Bomazeen! In God's name say,
 What mean these sounds of bloody fray?'
 Silent, the Indian points his hand

To where across the echoing glen

Sweep Harmon's dreaded ranger-band,
 And Moulton with his men. 1076

'Where are thy warriors, Bomazeen?'
 Where are De Rouville and Castine,⁹⁵

And where the braves of Sawga's queen?'
 'Let my father find the winter snow 1080

Which the sun drank up long moons ago!

Under the falls of Tacconock,

The wolves are eating the Norridgewock;

Castine with his wives lies closely hid

Like a fox in the woods of Pemaquid!

On Sawga's banks the man of war 1086

Sits in his wigwam like a squaw;

Squando has fled, and Mogg Megone,

Struck by the knife of Sagamore John,

Lies stiff and stark and cold as a stone.'

Fearfully over the Jesuit's face, 1091

Of a thousand thoughts, trace after trace,

Like swift cloud-shadows, each other chase.

One instant, his fingers grasp his knife,

For a last vain struggle for cherished life,—

The next, he hurls the blade away, 1096

And kneels at his altar's foot to pray;

Over his beads his fingers stray,

And he kisses the cross, and calls aloud

On the Virgin and her Son; 1100

For terrible thoughts his memory crowd

Of evil seen and done,

Of scalps brought home by his savage
flock

From Casco and Sawga and Sagadahock
In the Church's service won. 1105

No shrift the gloomy savage brooks,
As scowling on the priest he looks:
'Cowessass?—cowessass?—tawhich wessa-
seen?'⁹⁰

Let my father look upon Bomazeen,—
My father's heart is the heart of a squaw,
But mine is so hard that it does not thaw;
Let my father ask his God to make 1112
A dance and a feast for a great saga-
more,

When he paddles across the western lake,
With his dogs and his squaws to the spirit's shore. 1115

Cowessass?—cowessass?—tawhich wessa-
seen?

Let my father die like Bomazeen !'

Through the chapel's narrow doors,
And through each window in the walls,
Round the priest and warrior pours 1120
The deadly shower of English balls.

Low on his cross the Jesuit falls;
While at his side the Norridgewock,
With failing breath, essays to mock
And menace yet the hated foe, 1125
Shakes his scalp-trophies to and fro
Exultingly before their eyes,
Till, cleft and torn by shot and blow,
Defiant still, he dies.

'So fare all eaters of the frog ! 1130
Death to the Babylonish dog !
Down with the beast of Rome !'
With shouts like these, around the dead,
Unconscious on his bloody bed,

The rangers crowding come. 1135
Brave men ! the dead priest cannot hear
The unfeeling taunt,—the brutal jeer;
Spurn—for he sees ye not—in wrath,
The symbol of your Saviour's death;
Tear from his death-grasp, in your zeal,
And trample, as a thing accursed, 1141
The cross he cherished in the dust:
The dead man cannot feel !

Brutal alike in deed and word,
With callous heart and hand of strife,

How like a fiend may man be made, 1146
Plying the foul and monstrous trade

Whose harvest-field is human life,
Whose sickle is the reeking sword !
Quenching, with reckless hand in blood,
Sparks kindled by the breath of God ; 1151
Urging the deathless soul, unshriven,

Of open guilt or secret sin,
Before the bar of that pure Heaven
The holy only enter in ! 1155

Oh, by the widow's sore distress,
The orphan's wailing wretchedness,
By Virtue's struggling in the accursed
Embraces of polluting Lust,
By the fell discord of the Pit, 1160
And the pained souls that people it,
And by the blessed peace which fills

The Paradise of God forever,
Resting on all its holy hills,
And flowing with its crystal river,—
Let Christian hands no longer bear 1166
In triumph on his crimson car
The foul and idol god of war ;

No more the purple wreaths prepare
To bind amid his snaky hair ; 1170
Nor Christian bards his glories tell,
Nor Christian tongues his praises swell.

Through the gun-smoke wreathing white.
Glances on the soldier's sight
A thing of human shape I ween, 1175
For a moment only seen,
With its loose hair backward streaming,
And its eyeballs madly gleaming,
Shrieking, like a soul in pain,
From the world of light and breath,
Hurrying to its place again, 1181
Spectre-like it vanisheth !

Wretched girl ! one eye alone
Notes the way which thou hast gone.
That great Eye, which slumbers never,
Watching o'er a lost world ever, 1186
Tracks thee over vale and mountain,
By the gushing forest-fountain,
Plucking from the vine its fruit,
Searching for the ground-nut's root, 1190
Peering in the she-wolf's den,
Wading through the marshy fen,
Where the sluggish water-snake
Basks beside the sunny brake,

- Coiling in his slimy bed, 1195
 Smooth and cold against thy tread;
 Purposeless, thy mazy way
 Threading through the lingering day,
 And at night securely sleeping 1199
 Where the dogwood's dewes are weeping!
 Still, though earth and man discard thee,
 Doth thy Heavenly Father guard thee:
 He who spared the guilty Cain,
 Even when a brother's blood,
 Crying in the ear of God, 1205
 Gave the earth its primal stain;
 He whose mercy ever liveth,
 Who repenting guilt forgiveth,
 And the broken heart receiveth;
 Wanderer of the wilderness, 1210
 Haunted, guilty, crazed and wild,
 He regardeth thy distress,
 And careth for His sinful child!
- 'Tis springtime on the eastern hills!
 Like torrents gush the summer rills; 1215
 Through winter's moss and dry dead
 leaves
 The bladed grass revives and lives,
 Pushes the mouldering waste away,
 For glimpses to the April day.
 In kindly shower and sunshine bud 1220
 The branches of the dull gray wood;
 Out from its sunned and sheltered nooks
 The blue eye of the violet looks;
 The southwest wind is warmly blowing,
 And odors from the springing grass, 1225
 The pine-tree and the sassafras,
 Are with it on its errands going.
- A band is marching through the wood
 Where rolls the Kennebec his flood;
 The warriors of the wilderness, 1230
 Painted, and in their battle dress;
 And with them one whose bearded cheek,
 And white and wrinkled brow, bespeak
 A wanderer from the shores of France.
 A few long locks of scattering snow 1235
 Beneath a battered morion flow,
 And from the rivets of the vest
 Which girds in steel his ample breast,
 The slanted sunbeams glance.
 In the harsh outlines of his face 1240
 Passion and sin have left their trace;
 Yet, save worn brow and thin gray hair,
 No signs of weary age are there.
- His step is firm, his eye is keen,
 Nor years in broil and battle spent, 1245
 Nor toil, nor wounds, nor pain have bent
 The lordly frame of old Castine.
- No purpose now of strife and blood
 Urges the hoary veteran on:
 The fire of conquest and the mood 1250
 Of chivalry have gone.
 A mournful task is his,—to lay
 Within the earth the bones of those
 Who perished in that fearful day,
 When Norridgewock became the prey
 Of all unsparing foes. 1256
 Sadly and still, dark thoughts between,
 Of coming vengeance mused Castine,
 Of the fallen chieftain Bomazeen,
 Who bade for him the Norridgewocks 1260
 Dig up their buried tomahawks
 For firm defence or swift attack;
 And him whose friendship formed the tie
 Which held the stern self-exile back
 From lapsing into savagery; 1265
 Whose garb and tone and kindly glance
 Recalled a younger, happier day,
 And prompted memory's fond essay,
 To bridge the mighty waste which lay
 Between his wild home and that gray,
 Tall chateau of his native France: 1271
 Whose chapel bell, with far-heard din,
 Ushered his birth-hour gayly in,
 And counted with its solemn toll
 The masses for his father's soul. 1275
- Hark! from the foremost of the band
 Suddenly bursts the Indian yell;
 For now on the very spot they stand
 Where the Norridgewocks fighting fell.
 No wigwam smoke is curling there; 1280
 The very earth is scorched and bare:
 And they pause and listen to catch a
 sound
 Of breathing life,—but there comes not
 one.
 Save the fox's bark and the rabbit's bound;
 But here and there, on the blackened
 ground, 1285
 White bones are glistening in the sun.
 And where the house of prayer arose,
 And the holy hymn, at daylight's close,
 And the aged priest stood up to bless
 The children of the wilderness, 1290

There is naught save ashes sodden and dank ;

And the birchen boats of the Norridge-work,

Tethered to tree and stump and rock
Rotting along the river bank !

Blessed Mary ! who is she 1295

Leaning against that maple-tree ?

The sun upon her face burns hot,

But the fixed eyelid moveth not ;

The squirrel's chirp is shrill and clear

From the dry bough above her ear ; 1300

Dashing from rock and root its spray,

Close at her feet the river rushes ;

The blackbird's wing against her brushes,

And sweetly through the hazel-bushes

The robin's mellow music gushes ; 1305

God save her ! will she sleep away ?

Castine hath bent him over the sleeper :

'Wake, daughter,—wake !' but she stirs
no limb :

The eye that looks on him is fixed and
dim ;

And the sleep she is sleeping shall be no deeper, 1310

Until the angel's oath is said,

And the final blast of the trump goes
forth

To the graves of the sea and the graves of earth.

Ruth Boniton is dead !

1834.

THE PAST AND COMING YEAR.

WAVE of an awful torrent, thronging
down,

With all the wealth of centuries, and the
cold

Embraces of eternity, o'erstrown

With the great wrecks of empire, and the
old

Magnificence of nations, who are gone ; 5

Thy last, faint murmur—thy departing sigh,

Along the shore of being, like a tone

Thrilling on broken harp-strings, or the swell

Of the chained winds' last whisper, hath gone by,

And thou hast floated from the world of
breath 10

To the still guidance of o'ermastering
Death,

Thy pilot to eternity. Farewell !

Go, swell the throngful past. Go, blend with all

The garnered things of Death ; and bear
with thee

The treasures of thy pilgrimage, the tall
And beautiful dreams of Hope, the ministry 16

Of Love and high Ambition. Man remains

To dream again as idly ; and the stains

Of passion will be visible once more.

The winged spirit will not be confined 20

By the experience of thy journey. Mind

Will struggle in its prison-house, and
still,

With Earth's strong fetters binding it to
ill,

Unfurl the pinions fitted but to soar

In that pure atmosphere, where spirits
range— 25

The home of high existences—where
change

And blighting may not enter. Love
again

Will bloom, a fickle flower, upon the grave

Of old affections ; and Ambition wave

His eagle-plume most proudly, for the rein 30

Of Conscience will be loosened from the
soul

To give his purpose freedom. The control

Of reason will be changeful, and the ties
Which gather hearts together, and make up

The romance of existence, will be rent : 35

Yea, poison will be poured in Friend-ship's cup ;

And for Earth's low familiar element,

Even Love itself forsake its kindred skies.

But not alone dark visions ! happier
things

Will float above existence, like the wings

Of the starred bird of paradise ; and Love
Will not be all a dream, or rather prove
A dream—as sweet forgetfulness—that hath
No wakeful changes, ending but in Death.
Yea, pure hearts shall be pledged beneath the eyes 45

Of the beholding heaven, and in the light
Of the love-hallowed moon. The quiet
Night

Shall hear that language underneath the
skies

Which whispereth above them, as the
prayer

And the deep vow are spoken. Passing
fair 50

And gifted creatures, with the light of truth

And undebarr'd affection, as a crown,
Resting upon the beautiful brow of youth,
Shall smile on stately manhood, kneeling
down

Before them, as to Idols. Friendship's
hand 55

Shall clasp its brother's ; and Affection's
tear

Be sanctified with sympathy. The bier
Of stricken love shall lose the fears, which
Death

Giveth his awful work, and earnest Faith
Shall look beyond the shadow of the clay,
The pulseless sepulchre, the cold decay ;
And to the quiet of the spirit-land 62

Follow the mourned and lovely. Gifted ones

Lighting the Heaven of Intellect, like
suns,

Shall wrestle well with circumstance, and
bear 65

The agony of scorn, the preying care,
Wedded to burning bosoms ; and go down
In sorrow to the noteless sepulchre,
With one lone hope embracing like a
crown

The cold and death-like forehead of Despair, 70

That after times shall treasure up their
fame

Even as a proud inheritance and high ;
And beautiful beings love to breathe their name

With the recorded things that never die.

And thou, gray voyager to the breeze-less sea 75

Of infinite Oblivion—speed thou on ;
Another gift of time succeedeth thee
Fresh from the hand of God ; for thou hast done

The errand of thy destiny ; and none
May dream of thy returning. Go, and bear 80

Mortality's frail records to thy cold,
Eternal prison-house ; the midnight
prayer

Of suffering bosoms, and the fevered care
Of worldly hearts ; the miser's dream of
gold ;

Ambition's grasp at greatness ; the quenched light 85

Of broken spirits ; the forgiven wrong
And the abiding curse—ay, bear along These wrecks of thy own making. Lo, thy knell

Gathers upon the windy breath of night,
Its last and faintest echo. Fare thee
well ! 90

THE MISSIONARY.

'It is an awful, an arduous thing to root out every affection for earthly things, so as to live only for another world. I am now far, very far, from you all, and as often as I look around and see the Indian scenery, I sigh to think of the distance which separates us'—Letters of Henry Martyn, from India

'SAY, whose is this fair picture, which the
light

From the unshutter'd window rests
upon

Even as a lingering halo? Beautiful !

The keen, fine eye of manhood, and a lip
Lovely as that of Hylas, and impressed 5
With the bright signet of some brilliant
thought ;

That broad expanse of forehead, clear and
high,

Marked visibly with the characters of
mind,

And the free locks around it, raven black,
Luxuriant and unsilver'd !—who was he?'

A friend, a more than brother. In the
spring 11
And glory of his being he went forth
From the embraces of devoted friends,
From ease and quiet happiness, from
more—

From the warm heart that loved him with a love 15

Holier than earthly passion, and to whom
The beauty of his spirit shone above
The charms of perishing nature. He went forth

Strengthened to suffer, gifted to subdue
The might of human passion, to pass on Quietly to the sacrifice of all 21

The lofty hopes of boyhood, and to turn
The high ambition written on that brow,
From its first dream of power and human
fame,

Unto a task of seeming lowliness, 25
Yet God-like in its purpose. He went
forth

To bind the broken spirit, to pluck back
The heathen from the wheel of Juggernaut;

To place the spiritual image of a God
Holy and just and true, before the eye 30
Of the dark-minded Brahmin, and unseal
The holy pages of the Book of Life,
Fraught with sublimer mysteries than all
The sacred tomes of Vedas, to unbind
The widow from her sacrifice, and save 35
The perishing infant from the worshipped
river!

'And, lady, where is he? He slumbers
well

Beneath the shadow of an Indian palm.
There is no stone above his grave. The
wind,

Hot from the desert, as it stirs the leaves
Heavy and long above him, sighs alone 41
Over his place of slumber.

'God forbid
That he should die alone!' Nay, not
alone.

His God was with him in that last dread
hour;

His great arm underneath him, and His
smile 45

Melting into a spirit full of peace.
And one kind friend, a human friend, was near—

One whom his teachings and his earnest
prayers

Had snatch'd as from the burning. He
alone

Felt the last pressure of his failing hand,
Caught the last glimpse of his closing
eye, 51

And laid the green turf over him with
tears,

And left him with his God.

'And was it well,
Dear lady, that this noble mind should cast

Its rich gifts on the waters? That a
heart 55

Full of all gentleness and truth and love
Should wither on the suicidal shrine
Of a mistaken duty? If I read

Aright the fine intelligence which fills
That amplitude of brow, and gazes out 60
Like an indwelling spirit from that eye,
He might have borne him loftily among
The proudest of his land, and with a step
Unfaltering ever, steadfast and secure,
Gone up the paths of greatness,—bearing
still 65

A sister spirit with him, as some star,
Preeminent in Heaven, leads steadily up
A kindred watcher, with its fainter beams
Baptized in its great glory. Was it well
That all this promise of the heart and mind 70

Should perish from the earth, and leave no trace,

Unfolding like the Cereus of the clime
Which hath its sepulchre, but in the night
Of pagan desolation—was it well?' 75

Thy will be done, O Father!—it was
well. 75

What are the honors of a perishing world
Grasp'd by a palsied finger? the applause
Of the unthoughtful multitude which greets

The dull ear of decay? the wealth that loads

The bier with costly drapery, and shines

In tinsel on the coffin, and builds up 81
The cold substantial monument? Can
these

Bear up the sinking spirit in that hour
When heart and flesh are failing, and the grave

Is opening under us? Oh, dearer then 85
The memory of a kind deed done to him
Who was our enemy, one grateful tear
In the meek eye of virtuous suffering,
One smile call'd up by unseen charity
On the wan lips of hunger, or one prayer
Breathed from the bosom of the peni-
tent— 91

The stain'd with crime and outcast, unto whom

Our mild rebuke and tenderness of love
A merciful God hath bless'd.

'But, lady, say,
Did he not sometimes almost sink beneath 95

The burden of his toil, and turn aside
To weep above his sacrifice, and cast
A sorrowing glance upon his childhood's
home,

Still green in memory? Clung not to his
heart

Something of earthly hope uncrucified, 100
Of earthly thought unchastened? Did he bring

Life's warm affections to the sacrifice—
Its loves, hopes, sorrows—and become
as one

Knowing no kindred but a perishing
world,

No love but of the sin-endangered soul, 105
No hope but of the winning back to life
Of the dead nations, and no passing
thought

Save of the errand wherewith he was sent
As to a martyrdom?'

Nay, though the heart
Be consecrated to the holiest work 110
Vouchsafed to mortal effort, there will be
Ties of the earth around it, and, through all
Its perilous devotion, it must keep
Its own humanity. And it is well.
Else why wept He, who with our nature
veiled 115

The spirit of a God, o'er lost Jerusalem,
And the cold grave of Lazarus? And why
In the dim garden rose His earnest prayer,
That from His lips the cup of suffering
Might pass, if it were possible?

My friend 120
Was of a gentle nature, and his heart
Gushed like a river-fountain of the hills,
Ceaseless and lavish, at a kindly smile,
A word of welcome, or a tone of love.
Freely his letters to his friends disclosed
His yearnings for the quiet haunts of
home, 126

For love and its companionship, and all
The blessings left behind him; yet above
Its sorrows and its clouds his spirit rose,
Tearful and yet triumphant, taking hold
Of the eternal promises of God, 131
And steadfast in its faith.

Here are some lines
Penned in his lonely mission-house and sent

To a dear friend at home who even now
Lingers above them with a mournful joy,
Holding them well-nigh sacred as a leaf
Plucked from the record of a breaking
heart. 137

EVENING IN BURMAH.

A night of wonder! piled afar
With ebon feet and crests of snow,
Like Himalaya's peaks, which bar 140
The sunset and the sunset's star
From half the shadowed vale below,
Volumed and vast the dense clouds lie,
And over them, and down the sky, 144
Paled in the moon, the lightnings go.

And what a strength of light and shade
Is chequering all the earth below!
And, through the jungle's verdant braid,
Of tangled vine and wild reed made,
What blossoms in the moonlight glow!
The Indian rose's loveliness, 151
The ceiba with its crimson dress,
The twining myrtle dropped with snow.

And fitting in the fragrant air,
Or nestling in the shadowy trees, 155
A thousand bright-hued birds are there—Strange plumage, quivering wild and rare,

With every faintly breathing breeze;
And, wet with dew from roses shed,
The bulbul droops her weary head, 160
Forgetful of her melodies.

Uprising from the orange-leaves,
The tall pagoda's turrets glow;
O'er graceful shaft and fretted eaves,
Its verdant web the myrtle weaves, 165
And hangs in flowering wreaths below;
And where the clustered palms eclipse
The moonbeams, from its marble lips
The fountain's silver waters flow. 169

Strange beauty fills the earth and air,
The fragrant grove and flowering tree,
And yet my thoughts are wandering where
My native rocks lie bleak and bare,
A weary way beyond the sea.
The yearning spirit is not here; 175
It lingers on a spot more dear
Than India's brightest bowers to me.

Methinks I tread the well-known street—
The tree my childhood loved is there,
Its bare-worn roots are at my feet, 180
And through its open boughs I meet
White glimpses of the place of prayer;
And forgotten eyes again
Are glancing through the cottage pane,
Than Asia's lustrous eyes more fair. 185

Oh, holy haunts! oh, childhood's home!
Where, now, my wandering heart, is
thine?
Here, where the dusky heathen come
To bow before the deaf and dumb,
Dead idols of their own design; 190
Where in their worshipped river's tide
The infant sinks, and on its side
The widow's funeral altars shine!

Here, where, mid light and song and
flowers,
The priceless soul in ruin lies; 195
Lost, dead to all those better powers
Which link this fallen world of ours

To God's clear-shining Paradise;
And wrong and shame and hideous crime
Are like the foliage of their clime, 200
The unshorn growth of centuries!

Turn, then, my heart; thy home is here;
No other now remains for thee:
The smile of love, and friendship's tear,
The tones that melted on thine ear, 205
The mutual thrill of sympathy,
The welcome of the household band,
The pressure of the lip and hand,
Thou mayst not hear, nor feel, nor see.

God of my spirit! Thou, alone, 210
Who watchest o'er my pillowed head,
Whose ear is open to the moan
And sorrowing of Thy child, hast known
The grief which at my heart has fed;
The struggle of my soul to rise 215
Above its earth-born sympathies;
The tears of many a sleepless bed!

Oh! be Thine arm, as it hath been,
In every test of heart and faith,—
The tempter's doubt, the wiles of men,
The heathen's scoff, the bosom sin,— 221
A helper and a stay beneath;
A strength in weakness, through the strife
And anguish of my wasting life—
My solace and my hope, in death! 225

MASSACHUSETTS.

Written on hearing that the Resolutions of the Legislature of Massachusetts on the subject of Slavery, presented by Hon. C. Cushing to the House of Representatives of the United States (in 1837) had been laid on the table unread and un-referred, under the infamous rule of 'Patton's Resolution'

AND have they spurned thy word,
Thou of the old Thirteen!
Whose soil, where Freedom's blood first poured,
Hath yet a darker green?
To outworn patience suffering long 5
Is insult added to the wrong?

And have they closed thy mouth, And fixed the padlock fast? Dumb as the black slave of the South ! Is this thy fate at last ? Oh shame ! thy honored seal and sign Trod under hoofs so asinine !		The slumberings of thy honored dead 35 Are for thy sake disquieted.
Call from the Capitol Thy chosen ones agam, Unmeet for them the base control Of Slavery's curbing rein ! Unmeet for men like them to feel The spurring of a rider's heel.	10 15	So let thy Faneuil Hall By freemen's feet be trod, And give the echoes of its wall Once more to Freedom's God ! 40 And in the midst unseen shall stand The mighty fathers of thy land.
When votes are things of trade And force is argument, Call back to Quincy's shade Thy old man eloquent. Why leave him longer striving thus With the wild beasts of Ephesus ?	20	Thy gathered sons shall feel The soul of Adams near, And Otis with his fiery zeal, 45 And Warren's onward cheer ; And heart to heart shall thrill as when They moved and spake as living men.
Back from the Capitol - It is no place for thee ! Beneath the arch of Heaven's blue wall, Thy voice may still be free ! What power shall chain thy utterance there, In God's free sun and freer air ?	25 30	Not on Potomac's side, With treason in thy rear, 50 Can Freedom's holy cause be tried : Not there, my State, but here. Here must thy needed work be done, The battle at thy hearth-stone won.
A voice is calling thee, From all the martyr graves Of those stern men, in death made free, Who could not live as slaves.		Proclaim a new crusade 55 Against the foes within ; From bar and pulpit, press and trade, Cast out the shame and sin. Then speak thy now-unheeded word, Its lightest whisper shall be heard. 60

II. Poems printed in the 'Life of Whittier'

THE HOME-COMING OF THE BRIDE.

[The home of Sarah Greenleaf was upon the Newbury shore of the Merrimac, nearly opposite the home of the Whittiers. The house was standing until a recent date. Among Mr. Whittier's papers was found the following fragment of a ballad about the home-coming, as a bride, of his grandmother, Sarah Greenleaf.]

SARAH GREENLEAF, of eighteen years,
Stepped lightly her bridegroom's boat
within,

Waving mid-river, through smiles and
tears,

A farewell back to her kith and kin.
With her sweet blue eyes and her new gold gown, 5

She sat by her stalwart lover's side—
Oh, never was brought to Haverhill town
By land or water so fair a bride.

Glad as the glad autumnal weather,
The Indian summer so soft and warm, 10
They walked through the golden woods
together,

His arm the girdle about her form.

They passed the dam and the gray grist-
mill,

Whose walls with the jar of grinding
shook,

And crossed, for the moment awed and
still, 15

The haunted bridge of the Country
Brook.

The great oaks seemed on Job's Hill
crown

To wave in welcome then branches
strong,

And an upland streamlet came rippling
down

Over root and rock, like a bridal song. 20
And lo! in the midst of a clearing stood

The rough-built farmhouse, low and lone,

While all about it the unhewn wood
Seemed drawing closer to claim its own.

But the red apples dropped from orchard
trees, 25

The red cock crowed on the low fence
rail,

From the garden hives came the sound of
bees,

On the barn floor pealed the smiting flail.

THE SONG OF THE VERMONTERS, 1779.

[Written during school-days, and published anonymously in 1883. The secret of authorship was not discovered for sixty years.]

Ho—all to the borders! Vermonters,
come down,

With your breeches of deerskin and jackets
of brown;

With your red woollen caps, and your moccasins, come,

To the gathering summons of trumpet and drum.

Come down with your rifles ! Let gray wolf and fox 5
Howl on in the shade of their primitive
rocks ;
Let the bear feed securely from pig-pen
and stall ;
Here's two-legged game for your powder
and ball.

On our south came the Dutchmen, enveloped in grease ;
And arming for battle while canting of
peace ; 10
On our east, crafty Meshech has gathered his band
To hang up our leaders and eat up our
land.

Ho—all to the rescue ! For Satan shall work
No gain for his legions of Hampshire and York !
They claim our possessions—the pitiful knaves— 15
The tribute we pay shall be prisons and
graves !

Let Clinton and Ten Broek, with bribes
in their hands,
Still seek to divide and parcel our lands ;
We've coats for our traitors, whoever they are ;
The warp is of feathers—the filling of tar : 20

Does the 'old Bay State' threaten ? Does Congress complain ?
Swarms Hampshire in arms on our borders
again ?
Bark the war-dogs of Britain aloud on
the lake—
Let 'em come ; what they can they are welcome to take.

What seek they among us ? The pride of our wealth 25
Is comfort, contentment, and labor, and
health,
And lands which, as Freeman, we only
have trod,
Independent of all, save the mercies of
God.

Yet we owe no allegiance, we bow to no
throne,
Our ruler is law, and the law is our own ;
Our leaders themselves are our own fellow-
men, 31
Who can handle the sword, or the scythe, or the pen.

Our wives are all true, and our daughters are fair,
With their blue eyes of smiles and their light flowing hair,
All brisk at their wheels till the dark even-fall, 35
Then blithe at the sleigh-ride, the husking,
and ball !

We've sheep on the hillsides, we've cows
on the plain,
And gay-tasselled corn-fields and rank-
growing grain ;
There are deer on the mountains, and wood-pigeons fly
From the crack of our muskets, like clouds on the sky. 40

And there's fish in our streamlets and rivers which take
Their course from the hills to our broad bosomed lake ;
Through rock-arched Winooski the salmon
leaps free,
And the portly shad follows all fresh from the sea.

Like a sunbeam the pickerel glides through the pool, 45
And the spotted trout sleeps where the water is cool,
Or darts from his shelter of rock and of
root
At the beaver's quick plunge, or the angler's pursuit.

And ours are the mountains, which awfully
rise,
Till they rest their green heads on the blue of the skies ; 50
And ours are the forests unwasted, un-
shorn,
Save where the wild path of the tempest is torn.

And though savage and wild be this climate of ours,
 And brief be our season of fruits and of
 flowers,
 Far dearer the blast round our mountains
 which raves, 55
 Than the sweet summer zephyr which
 breathes over slaves !

Hurrah for Vermont ! For the land which we till

Must have sons to defend her from valley and hill ;

Leave the harvest to rot on the fields
 where it grows,

And the reaping of wheat for the reaping of foes. 60

From far Michiscom's wild valley, to
 where

Poosoonuck steals down from his wood-
 circled lair,

From Shocticook River to Lutterlock
 town—

Ho— all to the rescue ! Vermonters,
 come down !

Come York or come Hampshire, come traitors or knaves, 65

If ye rule o'er our land, ye shall rule o'er
 our graves ;

Our vow is recorded—our banner unfurled,
 In the name of Vermont we defy all the world !

1828.

TO A POETICAL TRIO IN THE CITY OF GOTHAM.

[This jeu d'esprit was written by Whittier in 1832. The notes are his own. The authorship was not discovered till after his death.]

Three wise men of Gotham
 Went to sea in a bowl

BARDS of the island city !—where of old
 The Dutchman smoked beneath his favorite tree,

And the wild eyes of Indian hunters
 rolled

On Hudson plunging in the Tappaan
 Zee,

Scene of Stuyvesant's might and chivalry, 5

And Knickerbocker's fame,—I have made bold

To come before ye, at the present time,
 And reason with ye in the way of rhyme.

Time was when poets kept the quiet tenor
 Of their green pathway through th'
 Arcadian vale,— 10

Chiming their music in the low sweet manner

Of song-birds warbling to the 'Soft South' gale ;

wooing the Muse where gentle zephyrs fan her,

Where all is peace and earth may not assail ;

Telling of lutes and flowers, of love and
 fear, 15

Of shepherds, sheep and lambs, and 'such small deer.'

But ye ! lost recreants—straying from the
 green

And pleasant vista of your early time,
 With broken lutes and crownless skulls—are seen

Spattering your neighbors with abhorrent slime 20

Of the low world's pollution ! Ye have been

So long apostates from the Heaven of rhyme,

That of the Muses, every mother's daughter

Blushes to own such graceless bards e'er sought her.

'Hurrah for Jackson !' is the music now
 Which your cracked lutes have learned alone to utter, 25

As, crouching in Corruption's shadow
 low,

Ye daily sweep them for your bread and butter².

¹ Editors of the Mercantile Advertiser and the Evening Post in New York,—the present organs of Jacksonism

² Perhaps, after all, they get something better ;
 inasmuch as the Heroites have for some time had exclusive possession of the hall of St.

Cheered by the applauses of the friends who show

Their heads above the offal of the gutter, 30

And, like the trees which Orpheus moved at will,

Reel, as in token of your matchless skill!

Thou son of Scotia¹!—nursed beside the
grave

Of the proud peasant-minstrel, and to whom

The wild muse of thy mountain-dwelling
gave 35

A portion of its spirit,— if the tomb
Could burst its silence, o'er the Atlantic's
wave,

To thee his voice of stern rebuke would
come,

Who dared to waken with a master's
hand

The lyre of freedom in a fettered land. 40

And thou!—once treading firmly the proud deck

O'er which thy country's honored flag
was sleeping,

Calmly in peace, or to the hostile beck
Of coming foes in starry splendor sweeping,—

Thy graphic tales of battle or of wreck, 45
Or lone night-watch in middle ocean
keeping,

Have made thy 'Leisure Hours' more prized by far

Than those now spent in Party's wordy war².

Tammany, and we have the authority of Halleck
that

'There's a barrel of porter in Tammany hall
And the Bucktalls are swigging it all the night
long.'

unfortunately blundered into Jacksonism, is wondering 'how I' the Doll's name' he got there.

Sketches*, and of the tragedy of Giordano.

² William Leggett, Esq., of the Post, a gentle-

And last, not least, thou!—now nurtured
in the land

Where thy bold-hearted fathers long ago 50

Rocked Freedom's cradle, till its infant
hand

Strangled the serpent fierceness of its foe,—

Thou, whose clear brow in early time was fanned

By the soft airs which from Castalia
flow³!—

Where art thou now? feeding with hickory ladle 55

The curs of Faction with thy daily
twaddle!

Men have looked up to thee, as one to be
A portion of our glory; and the light

And fairy hands of woman beckoned
thee

On to thy laurel guerdon; and those bright 60

And gifted spirits, whom the broad blue
sea

Hath shut from thy communion, bid thee, 'Write,'

Like John of Patmos. Is all this forgotten,

For Yankee brawls and Carolina cotton?

Are autumn's rainbow hues no longer
seen? 65

Flows the 'Green River' through its vale no more?

Steals not thy 'Rivulet' by its banks of
green?

Wheels upward from its dark and sedgy
shore

Thy 'Water Fowl' no longer?—that the mean

And vulgar strife, the ranting and the
roar 70

man of good talents, favorably known as the editor of the New York Critic, etc.

³ William C. Bryant, Esq., well known to the public at large as a poet of acknowledged excellence; and as a very dull editor to the people of New York.

Extempore, like Bottom's should be
thine,—

Thou feeblest truck-horse in the Hero's
line!

Lost trio!—turn ye to the minstrel
pride

Of classic Britain. Even effeminate
Moore

Has cast the wine-cup and the lute
aside 75

For Erin and O'Connell; and before His country's altar, Bulwer breasts the tide

Of old oppression. Sadly brooding
o'er

The fate of heroes struggling to be free, Even Campbell speaks for Poland. Where are ye? 80

Hirelings of traitors! know ye not that
men

Are rousing up around ye to retrieve
Our country's honor, which too long has been

Debased by those for whom ye daily weave

Your web of fustian; that from tongue and pen 85

Of those who o'er our tarnished honor
grieve,

Of the pure-hearted and the gifted,
come

Hourly the tokens of your master's doom?

Turn from their ruin! Dash your chains
aside!

Stand up like men for Liberty and
Law, 90

And free opinion. Check Corruption's
pride,

Soothe the loud storm of fratricidal
war,—

And the bright honors of your eventide
Shall share the glory which your morning saw;

The patriot's heart shall gladden at your
name, 95

Ye shall be blessed with, and not 'damned to fame'!

ALBUM VERSES.

[Written in the album of May Pillsbury of West Newbury, in the fall of 1838, when Whittier was at home on a visit from Philadelphia, where he was engaged in editorial
work]

PARDON a stranger hand that gives
Its impress to these gilded leaves.
As one who graves in idle mood
An idler's name on rock or wood,
So in a careless hour I claim 5

A page to leave my humble name.
Accept it; and when o'er my head
A Pennsylvanian sky is spread,
And but in dreams my eye looks back
On broad and lovely Merrimac, 10

And on my ear no longer breaks
The murmuring music which it makes,
When but in dreams I look again
On Salisbury beach—Grasshopper plain—
Or Powow stream—or Amesbury mills, 15
Or old Crane neck, or Pipestave hills,

Think of me then as one who keeps,
Where Delaware's broad current sweeps,
And down its rugged limestone-bed
The Schuylkill's arrowy flight is sped, 20

Deep in his heart the scenes which grace
And glorify his 'native place';
Loves every spot to childhood dear,
And leaves his heart 'untraveled' here;
Longs, midst the Dutchman's kraut and greens, 25

For pumpkin-pie and pork and beans,
And sighs to think when, sweetly near,
The soft piano greets his ear,
That the fair hands which, small and
white,

Glance on its ivory polished light, 30
Have ne'er an Indian pudding made,
Nor fashioned rye and Indian bread.
And oh! whene'er his footsteps turn,

Whatever stars above him burn,
Though dwelling where a Yankee's name
Is coupled with reproach or shame, 36

Still true to his New England birth,
Still faithful to his home and hearth,
Even 'midst the scornful stranger band
His boast shall be of YANKEE LAND. 40

WHAT STATE STREET SAID TO SOUTH CAROLINA, AND WHAT
SOUTH CAROLINA SAID TO STATE
STREET.

[Published in The National Era, May 22, 1861.]

MUTTERING 'fine upland staple,' 'prime Sea Island finer,'
With cotton bales pictured on either retina,
'Your pardon!' said State Street to South Carolina;
'We feel and acknowledge your laws are diviner
Than any promulgated by the thunders of Sinai!' 5
Sorely pricked in the sensitive conscience of business
We own and repent of our sins of remiss-
ness:
Our honor we've yielded, our words we have swallowed;
And quenching the lights which our forefathers followed,
And turning from graves by their memories hallowed, 10
With teeth on ball-cartridge, and finger
on trigger,
Reversed Boston Notions, and sent back
a nigger!'
'Get away!' cried the Chivalry, busy a-drumming,
And fifing and drilling, and such Quattlebumming;
'With your April-fool slave hunt! Just wait till December 15
Shall see your new Senator stalk through the Chamber,
And Puritan heresy prove neither dumb
nor
Blind in that pestilent Anakim, Sumner!'

A FRÉMONT CAMPAIGN SONG.

SOUND now the trumpet warningly!
The storm is rolling nearer,
The hour is striking clearer,
In the dusky dome of sky.

If dark and wild the morning be, 5
A darker morn before us
Shall fling its shadows o'er us
If we let the hour go by.
Sound we then the trumpet chorus!
Sound the onset wild and high! 10
Country and Liberty!
Freedom and Victory!
These words shall be our cry,—
Frémont and Victory!

Sound, sound the trumpet fearlessly!
Each arm its vigor lending, 16
Bravely with wrong contending,
And shouting Freedom's cry!
The Kansas homes stand cheerlessly,
The sky with flame is ruddy, 20
The prairie turf is bloody,
Where the brave and gentle die.
Sound the trumpet stern and steady!
Sound the trumpet strong and high!
Country and Liberty! 25
Freedom and Victory!
These words shall be our cry,—
Frémont and Victory!

Sound now the trumpet cheerily!
Nor dream of Heaven's forsaking 30
The issue of its making,
The Right with Wrong must try.
The cloud that hung so drearily
The Northern winds are breaking;
The Northern Lights are shaking 35
Their fire-flags in the sky.
Sound the signal of awaking;
Sound the onset wild and high!
Country and Liberty!
Freedom and Victory! 40
These words shall be our cry,—
Frémont and Victory!

THE QUAKERS ARE OUT.

[A campaign song written to be sung at a Republican Mass Meeting held in Newburyport,
Mass., October 11, 1860.]

NOT vainly we waited and counted the
hours,
The buds of our hope have all burst into
flowers.

No room for misgiving—no loop-hole of doubt,—		To the little hamlet lying
We've heard from the Keystone! The Quakers are out.		White in its mountain fold,	19
		Asleep by the lake and dreaming
		A dream that is never told,—
The plot has exploded—we've found out the trick ;	5	And in the Red Hill's shadow
The bribe goes a-begging; the poison won't stick.		Your pilgrim home you make,
When the Wide-awake lanterns are shining about,		Where the chambers open to sunrise,	15
The rogues stay at home, and the true men are out !		The mountains, and the lake,—
		If the pleasant picture wearies,
The good State has broken the cords for her spun ;		As the fairest sometimes will,
Her oil-springs and water won't fuse into one ;	10	And the weight of the hills lies on you
The Dutchman has seasoned with Freedom his krout,		And the water is all too still, --	20
And slow, late, but certain, the Quakers are out !
		If in vain the peaks of Gunstock
Give the flags to the winds! set the hills all aflame!		Redden with sunrise fire,
Make way for the man with the Patriarch's name!		And the sky and the purple mountains
Away with misgiving—away with all doubt,	15	And the sunset islands tire,—
For Lincoln goes in, when the Quakers are out!
		If you turn from in-door thrumming	25
		And the clatter of bowls without,
		And the folly that goes on its travels,
		Bearing the city about,—
		And the cares you left behind you
		Come hunting along your track,	30
		As Blue-Cap in German fable
		Rode on the traveller's pack,—
		Let me tell you a tender story
		Of one who is now no more,
		A tale to haunt like a spirit	35
		The Winnepesaukee shore,—
		Of one who was brave and gentle,
		And strong for manly strife,
		Riding with cheering and music
		Into the journey of life.	40
		Faltering and failing midway
		In the Tempter's subtle snare,
		The chains of an evil habit
		He bowed himself to bear.
		Over his fresh young manhood	45
		The bestial veil was flung,—
		The curse of the wine of Circe,
		The spell her weavers sung.

A LEGEND OF THE LAKE.

[This poem, originally printed in the 'Atlantic Monthly,' was withheld from publication in his volumes by Mr. Whittier, in deference to living relatives of the hero of the poem. Death finally removed the restriction.]

SHOULD you go to Centre Harbor,
As haply you some time may Sailing up the Winnepesaukee
From the hills of Alton Bay,—

Into the heart of the highlands, 5
Into the north wind free,
Through the rising and vanishing islands,
Over the mountain sea,—

Yearly did hill and lakeside Their summer idyls frame ; Alone in his darkened dwelling He hid his face for shame.	50	The red light flashed from its windows And flared from its sinking roof ; And baffled and awed before it The villagers stood aloof.	90
The music of life's great marches Sounded for him in vain ; The voices of human duty Smote on his ear like pain.	55	They shrank from the falling rafters, They turned from the furnace glare ; But its tenant cried, 'God help me ! I must save my mother's chair.'	95
In vain over island and water The curtains of sunset swung ; In vain on the beautiful mountains The pictures of God were hung.	60	Under the blazing portal, Over the floor of fire, He seemed, in the terrible splendor, A martyr on his pyre.	100
The wretched years crept onward, Each sadder than the last ; All the bloom of life fell from him, All the freshness and greenness past.		In his face the mad flames smote him, And stung him on either side ; But he clung to the sacred relic,-- By his mother's chair he died !
But deep in his heart forever And unprofaned he kept The love of his saintly mother, Who in the graveyard slept.	65	O mother, with human yearnings ! O saint, by the altar stairs ! Shall not the dear God give thee The child of thy many prayers ?	105
His house had no pleasant pictures ; Its comfortless walls were bare : But the riches of earth and ocean Could not purchase his mother's chair.	70	O Christ ! by whom the loving, Though erring, are forgiven, Hast Thou for him no refuge, No quiet place in heaven ?	110
The old chair, quaintly carven, With oaken arms outspread, Whereby, in the long gone twilights, His childish prayers were said.	75	Give palms to Thy strong martyrs, And crown Thy saints with gold, But let the mother welcome Her lost one to Thy fold !	115
For thence in his long night watches, By moon or starlight dim, A face full of love and pity And tenderness looked on him.	80	1861.
And oft, as the grieving presence Sat in his mother's chair, The groan of his self-upbraiding Grew into wordless prayer.		LETTER TO LUCY LARCOM.
At last, in the moonless midnight, The summoning angel came, Severe in his pity, touching The house with fingers of flame.	85	25th 3d mo, 1866. BELIEVE me, Lucy Larcom, it gives me real sorrow That I cannot take my carpet-bag and go to town to-morrow ; But I'm 'snow-bound,' and cold on cold, like layers of an onion, Have piled my back and weighed me down as with the pack of Bunyan.

The north-east wind is damper and the north-west wind is colder, 5
Or else the matter simply is that I am growing older.

And then I dare not trust a moon seen over one's left shoulder,

As I saw this with slender horns caught in a west hill-pine,

As on a Stamboul minaret curves the arch-impostor's sign,—

So I must stay in Amesbury, and let you go your way, 10

And guess what colors greet your eyes,
what shapes your steps delay;

What pictured forms of heathen lore, of god and goddess please you,

What idol graven images you bend your wicked knees to.

But why should I of evil dream, well knowing at your head goes

That flower of Christian womanhood,
our dear good Anna Meadows. 15

She'll be discreet, I'm sure, although once, in a freak romantic,

She flung the Doge's bridal ring, and married 'The Atlantic'!

And spite of all appearances, like the woman in a shoe,

She's got so many 'Young Folks' now,
she don't know what to do.

But I must say I think it strange that thee and Mrs. Spaulding, 20

Whose lives with Calvin's five-railed creed have been so tightly walled in,

Should quit your Puritan homes, and take the pains to go

So far, with malice aforethought, to 'walk in a vain show'!

Did Emmons hunt for pictures? Was Jonathan Edwards peeping

Into the chambers of imagery, with maids for Tammuz weeping? 25

Ah well! the times are sadly changed,
and I myself am feeling

The wicked world my Quaker coat from off my shoulders peeling.

God grant that in the strange new sea of change wherein we swim,

We still may keep the good old plank, of simple faith in Him!

LINES ON LEAVING APPLEDORE.

[Sent in a letter to Celia Thaxter.]

UNDER the shadow of a cloud, the light
Died out upon the waters, like a smile Chased from a face by grief. Following the flight

Of a lone bird that, scudding with the
breeze,

Dipped its crank wing in leaden-colored
seas, 5

I saw in sunshine lifted, clear and
bright,

On the horizon's rim the Fortunate Isle
That claims thee as its fair inhabitant,

And glad of heart I whispered, 'Be to
her,

Bird of the summer sea, my messenger;
Tell her, if Heaven a fervent prayer will grant, 11

This light that falls her island home
above

Making its slopes of rock and greenness
gay,

A partial glory midst surrounding gray,
Shall prove an earnest of our Father's

love, 15

More and more shining to the perfect
day.'

MRS. CHOATE'S HOUSE-WARMING.

[His washerwoman, Mrs. Choate, by industry and thrift had been enabled to build for her family a comfortable house. When it was ready for occupancy, there was a house-warming, attended by all the neighbors, who brought substantial tokens of their good-will, including all the furniture needed in her new parlor. Mr. Whittier's hand was to be seen in the whole movement; he was present at the festivity, and made a little speech, congratulating Mrs. Choate upon her well-deserved success in life, and said he would read a piece of machine poetry which had been intrusted to him for the occasion. These are the lines, which were, of course, of his own composition.—S. T. PICKARI, Life and Letters of John Greenleaf Whittier.]

OF rights and of wrongs
 Let the feminine tongues
 Talk on—none forbid it.
 Our hostess best knew
 What her hands found to do, 5
 Asked no questions, but DID IT.

Here the lesson of work,
 Which so many folks shirk,
 Is so plain all may learn it;
 Each brick in this dwelling, 10
 Each timber is telling,
 If you want a home, EARN IT.

The question of labor
 Is solved by our neighbor,
 The old riddle guessed out: 15
 The wisdom sore needed,
 The truth long unheeded,
 Her flat-iron's pressed out!

Thanks, then, to Kate Choate!
 Let the idle take note 20
 What their fingers were made for;
 She, cheerful and jolly,
 Worked on late and early,
 And bought—what she paid for!

Never vainly repining, 25
 Nor begging, nor whining;
 The morning-star twinkles
 On no heart that's lighter
 As she makes the world whiter
 And smoothes out its wrinkles. 30

So, long life to Kate!
 May her heirs have to wait
 Till they're gray in attendance;
 And her flat-iron press on,
 Still teaching its lesson 35
 Of brave independence!

AN AUTOGRAPH.

[Written for an old friend, Rev. S. H. Emery, of Quincy, Ill., who revisited Whittier in 1868.]

THE years that since we met have flown
 Leave as they found me, still alone:
 No wife, nor child, nor grandchild dear,
 Are mine the heart of age to cheer.

More favored thou, with hair less gray 5
 Than mine, canst let thy fancy stray
 To where thy little Constance sees
 The prairie ripple in the breeze;
 For one like her to lip thy name
 Is better than the voice of fame. 10

TO LUCY LARCOM.

3d mo., 1870.

PRAY give the 'Atlantic'
 A brief unpedantic
 Review of Miss Phelps' book,
 Which teaches and helps folk
 To deal with the offenders 5
 In love which surrenders
 All pride unforgiving,
 The lost one receiving
 With truthful believing
 That she like all others, 10
 Our sisters and brothers,
 Is only a sinner
 Whom God's love within her
 Can change to the whiteness
 Of heaven's own brightness. 15
 For who shall see tarnish
 If He sweep and garnish?
 When He is the cleanser
 Shall we dare to censure?
 Say to Fields, if he ask of it, 20
 I can't take the task of it.

P. S.—For myself, if I'm able,
 And half comfortable,
 I shall run for the seashore
 To some place as before, 25
 Where blunt we at least find
 The teeth of the East wind,
 And spring does not tarry
 As it does at Amesbury;
 But where it will be to 30
 I cannot yet see to.

A FAREWELL.

[Written for Mr. and Mrs. Claflin as they were about to sail to Europe.]

WHAT shall I say, dear friends, to whom
 I owe
 The choicest blessings, dropping from the
 hands

Of trustful love and friendship, as you go Forth on your journey to those older
lands,

By saint and sage and bard and hero
trod?

Scarcely the simple farewell of the Friends⁵
Sufficeth; after you my full heart sends
Such benediction as the pilgrim hears
Where the Greek faith its golden dome
uprears,

From Crimea's roses to Archangel snows,
The fittest prayer of parting: 'Go with
God!'

1875.

ON A FLY-LEAF OF LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.

[Written at the Asquam House in the summer of 1882.]

HUSHED now the sweet consoling tongue
Of him whose lyre the Muses strung;
His last low swan-song has been sung!

His last! And ours, dear friend, is near;

As clouds that rake the mountains here,⁵
We too shall pass and disappear.

Yet howsoever changed or tost,
Not even a wreath of mist is lost,
No atom can itself exhaust.

So shall the soul's superior force¹⁰
Live on and run its endless course
In God's unlimited universe.

And we, whose brief reflections seem
To fade like clouds from lake and stream,
Shall brighten in a holier beam.¹⁵

SAMUEL E. SEWALL.

[An Inscription for a marble bust, modelled by Anne Whitney, and placed in the Cary Library,
Lexington, Mass., May, 1884.]

LIKE that ancestral judge who bore his
name,

Faithful to Freedom and to Truth, he
gave,

When all the air was hot with wrath and
blame,

His youth and manhood to the fettered
slave.

And never Woman in her suffering saw⁵
A helper tender, wise, and brave as he;
Lifting her burden of unrighteous law,
Heshamed the breast of ancient chivalry.

Noiseless as light that melts the darkness is,
He wrought as duty led and honor bid,¹⁰

No trumpet heralds victories like his,—
The unselfish worker in his work is hid.

LINES WRITTEN IN AN ALBUM.

[The album belonged to the grandson of Whittier's life-long friend, Theodore D. Weld, and the lines were written in April, 1884.]

WHAT shall I wish him? Strength and health

May be abused, and so may wealth.
Even fame itself may come to be
But wearying notoriety.

What better can I ask than this?—⁵
A life of brave unselfishness,
Wisdom for council, eloquence
For Freedom's need, for Truth's defence,
The championship of all that's good,
The manliest faith in womanhood,¹⁰

The steadfast friendship changing not
With change of time or place or lot,
Hatred of sin, but not the less
A heart of pitying tenderness
And charity, that, suffering long,¹⁵
Shames the wrong-doer from his wrong:
One wish expresses all—that he
May even as his grandsire be!

A DAY'S JOURNEY.

[Written in 1886, for the tenth anniversary of the wedding of his niece.]

AFTER your pleasant morning travel
You pause as at a wayside inn,
And take with grateful hearts your breakfast
Though served in dishes all of TIN.

Then go, while years as hours are counted,
Until the dial's hand at noon⁶
Invites you to a dinner table
Garnished with SILVER fork and spoon.

And when the vesper bell to supper
 Is calling, and the day is old, 10
 May love transmute the tin of morning
 And noonday's silver into GOLD.

A FRAGMENT.

[Found among Mr. Whittier's papers, in his handwriting, but undated]

THE dreadful burden of our sins we feel,
 The pain of wounds which Thou alone
 canst heal,
 To whom our weakness is our strong
 appeal.

From the black depths, the ashes, and the dross
 Of our waste lives, we reach out to Thy cross, 5
 And by its fullness measure all our loss!
 That holy sign reveals Thee: throned
 above
 No Moloch sits, no false, vindictive Jove—
 'Thou art our Father, and Thy name is Love!¹

¹ This is an alternative reading which has been cancelled:—

'No lawless Terror dwells in light above,
 Cruel as Moloch, deaf and false as Jove—
 Thou art our Father, and Thy name is Love!'

NOTES

1. Sole Pythoness of ancient Lynn.

The Pythoness of ancient Lynn was the redoubtable Moll Pitcher, who lived under the shadow of High Rock in that town, and was sought far and wide for her supposed powers of divination. She died about 1810. Mr. Upham, in his Salem Witchcraft, has given an account of her.

2. St. John.

[Dr. Francis Parkman has given a detailed account of this episode in New England history in The Feudal Chiefs of Acadia, published in The Atlantic Monthly, January, February, 1893. The same series of incidents forms the basis of the romance by Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, entitled The Lady of Fort St. John.]

3. The New Wife and the Old.

[General Moulton's mansion may still be seen [1894] from the train, a hip-roofed house, standing on the right-hand side of the track, just before reaching the Hampton station as one comes from Boston. Twenty-five years after writing the poem, Mr. Whittier received a letter from a lady who had been spending a summer in the Moulton house, in which she said: 'I remember my mother's repeating to me her recollections of the exorcising of the ghosts of General Moulton and his wife by a parson Milton or Bodily [the Rev. John Boddily, who died in 1802, and is buried in a Newburyport burying-ground]. My grandfather Whipple being absent, the servants (several of them had been slaves in Newport) insisted that General Moulton and his wife disturbed the house so much at night, he thumping with his cane, and her dress "a-rustling up and down the stairs," that nothing could allay their terror; and one Mrs. Williams, the housekeeper, persisted so strongly that she frequently saw them both, he in a snuff-colored suit and enormous wig, holding a gold-headed cane, that nothing could induce them to remain in the house. Many persons in the vicinity came to the exorcising, or "laying the ghosts," as they termed it. My mother said the scene was very impressive to her as a child, and she could never forget the white and black servants and neighbors, standing in solemn awe, and the abjuring of the minister. The servants, I believe, never afterwards complained of being disturbed or of seeing the ghosts, after this ceremony.'

In his work on The Supernaturalism of New England, published in 1847, Mr. Whittier relates the legend of the ancient house. 'General Moulton's house was once burned in revenge, it is said, by the fiend, whom the former had outwitted. He had agreed, it seems, to furnish the general with a boot full of gold and silver, poured annually down the chimney. The shrewd Yankee cut off on one occasion the foot of the boot, and the Devil kept pouring down the coin from the chimney top, in a vain attempt to fill it, until the room was literally packed with the precious metal. When the general died, he was laid out, and put in a coffin as usual; but on the day of the funeral it was whispered about that his body was missing, and the neighbors came to the charitable conclusion that the enemy had got his own at last.']

4. Here the mighty Bashaba.

Bashaba was the name which the Indians of New England gave to two or three of their principal chiefs, to whom all their inferior sagamores acknowledged allegiance. Passaconaway seems to have been one of these chiefs. His residence was at Pennacook. (Mass. Hist. Coll., vol. iii. pp. 21, 22.) 'He was regarded,' says Hubbard, 'as a great sorcerer, and his fame was widely spread. It was said of him that he could cause a green leaf to grow in winter, trees to dance, water to burn, etc. He was, undoubtedly, one of those shrewd and powerful men whose achievements are always regarded by a barbarous people as the result of supernatural aid. The Indians gave to such the names of Powahs or Panisees.'

'The Panisees are men of great courage and wisdom, and to these the Devil appeareth more familiarly than to others.'—Winslow's Relation.

5. Thus o'er the heart of Wectamoo.

'The Indians,' says Roger Williams, 'have a god whom they call Wetuonamit, who presides over the household.'

6. Drawn from that great stone vase.

There are rocks in the river at the Falls of Amoskeag, in the cavities of which, tradition says, the Indians formerly stored and concealed their corn.

7. Aukecetamit.

The Spring God.—See Roger Williams's Key to the Indian Language.

8. Mat wonck kunna-monee.

We shall see thee or her no more.—See Roger Williams's Key.

9. Sowanna.

'The Great South West God.'—See Roger Williams's Observations, etc.

10. As we charged on Tilly's line.

The barbarities of Count De Tilly after the siege of Magdeburg made such an impression upon our forefathers that the phrase 'like old Tilly' is still heard sometimes in New England of any piece of special ferocity.

11. A fire-mountain in a frozen zone.

Dr. Hooker, who accompanied Sir James Ross in his expedition of 1841, thus describes the appearance of that unknown land of frost and fire which was seen in latitude 77° south,—a stupendous chain of mountains, the whole mass of which, from its highest point to the ocean, was covered with everlasting snow and ice:—

'The water and the sky were both as blue, or rather more intensely blue, than

I have ever seen them in the tropics, and all the coast was one mass of dazlingly beautiful peaks of snow, which, when the sun approached the horizon, reflected the most brilliant tints of golden yellow and scarlet; and then, to see the dark cloud of smoke, tinged with flame, rising from the volcano in a perfect unbroken column, one side jet-black, the other giving back the colors of the sun, sometimes turning off at a right angle by some current of wind, and stretching many miles to leeward! This was a sight so surpassing everything that can be imagined, and so heightened by the consciousness that we had penetrated, under the guidance of our commander, into regions far beyond what was ever deemed practicable, that it caused a feeling of awe to steal over us at the consideration of our own comparative insignificance and helplessness, and at the same time an indescribable feeling of the greatness of the Creator in the works of His hand.'

12. Here is the place.

[The place Whittier had in mind was his birthplace. There were beehives on the garden terrace near the well-sweep, occupied perhaps by the descendants of Thomas Whittier's bees. The approach to the house from over the northern shoulder of Job's Hill by a path that was in constant use in his boyhood and still in existence, is accurately described in the poem. The "gap in the old wall" is still to be seen, and "the stepping-stones in the shallow brook" are still in use. His sister's garden was down by the brook-side in front of the house, and her daffodils are perpetuated and may now be found in their season each year in that place. The red-barred gate, the poplars, the cattle-yard with "the white horns tossing above the wall," were all part of Whittier's boy life on the old farm. Even the touch of "the sundown's blaze on her window-pane" is realistic. The only place from which the blaze of the setting sun could be seen reflected in the windows of the old mansion is from the path so perfectly described. . . . All the story about Mary and her lover is wholly imaginative.'—S. T. PICKARD in his Life and Letters of John Greenleaf Whittier.

13. Of the fast which the good man life-long kept.

It was the custom in Sewall's time for churches and individuals to hold fasts whenever any public or private need suggested the fitness; and as state and church were very closely connected, the General Court sometimes ordered a fast. Out of this custom sprang the annual fast in spring, now observed [1888], but it is of comparatively recent date. Such a fast was ordered on the 14th of January, 1697, when Sewall made his special confession of guilt in condemning innocent persons under the supposition that they were witches. He is said to have observed the day privately on each annual return thereafter.

14. His burden of prophecy yet remains.
[In point of fact the 'old man wise and good,' 'propped on his staff of age,' was forty-five years old when he uttered his prophecy.]

15. The Red River Voyageur.
[The church of St. Boniface was burned in 1860, the year after The Red River Voyageur was printed. The bells were broken in their fall, and the fragments were sent to London, recast by their original founder, and restored to their place in the new cathedral of St. Boniface.]

16. Cobbler Keezar's Vision.
[For a fuller account of Cobbler Keezar, see Whittier's paper on The Border War of 1708 in his Prose Works, vol. ii. pp. 375, 376. Cobbler Keezar was wont to pitch his tent on Po Hill and mend the foot-gear of the Amesbury people. The old towns of Amesbury and Salisbury, within a few years consolidated, were divided by the Powow River. The falls described in the poem are concealed from view now by the factories and the arches which span the river.]

17. Or the stone of Dr. Dee.
Dr. John Dee was a man of erudition, who had an extensive museum, library, and apparatus; he claimed to be an astrologer, and had acquired the reputation of having dealings with evil spirits, and a mob was raised which destroyed the greater part of his possessions. He professed to raise the dead and had a magic crystal. He died a pauper in 1608.

18. The Countess.
[There is a slight inaccuracy in Whittier's head-note to The Countess. According to Miss Rebecca I. Davis, Gleanings from the Valley of the Merrimac, where she gives her authorities, the marriage took place March 21, 1805. The Countess died January 5, 1807. Count Vipart returned to Guadeloupe, whence he had come to this country at the time of the insurrection; there he married again, and there he died and was buried, but his remains were afterward removed to the family tomb in Bordeaux, France. Mr. Matthew Whittier, the poet's only brother, married Abby, daughter of Joseph Rochemont de Poyen.]

19. As once he heard in sweet Von Merlane's bowers.

Eleonora Johanna Von Merlau, or, as Sewall the Quaker Historian gives it, Von Merlane, a noble young lady of Frankfort, seems to have held among the Mystics of that city very much such a position as Anna Maria Schurmaus did among the Labadists of Holland. William Penn appears to have shared the admiration of her own immediate circle for this accomplished and gifted lady.

20. Or painful Kelpius from his hermit den.

Magister Johann Kelpius, a graduate of the University of Helmstadt, came to Pennsylvania in 1691, with a company of German Mystics. They made their home in the woods on the Wissahickon, a little west of the Quaker settlement of Germantown. Kelpius was a believer in the near approach of the Millennium, and was a devout student of the Book of Revelation, and the Morgen-Rothe of Jacob Behmen. He called his settlement 'The Woman in the Wilderness' (Das Weib in der Wueste). He was only twenty-four years of age when he came to America, but his gravity, learning, and devotion placed him at the head of the settlement. He disliked the Quakers, because he thought they were too exclusive in the matter of ministers. He was, like most of the Mystics, opposed to the severe doctrinal views of Calvin and even Luther, declaring 'that he could as little agree with the Dannamus of the Augsburg Confession as with the Anathema of the Council of Trent.'

He died in 1704, sitting in his little garden surrounded by his grieving disciples. Previous to his death it is said that he cast his famous 'Stone of Wisdom' into the river, where that mystic souvenir of the times of Van Helmont, Paracelsus, and Agrippa has lain ever since, undisturbed.

21. Or Sluyter, saintly familist, whose word.

Peter Sluyter, or Schluter, a native of Wesel, united himself with the sect of Labadists, who believed in the Divine commission of John De Labadie, a Roman Catholic priest converted to Protestantism, enthusiastic, eloquent, and evidently sincere in his special calling and election to separate the true and living members of the Church of Christ from the formalism and hypocrisy of the ruling sects. George Keith and Robert Barclay visited him at Amsterdam, and afterward at the communities of Herford and Wieward; and, according to Gerard Croes, found him so near to them on some points, that they offered to take him into the Society of Friends. This offer, if it was really made, which is certainly doubtful, was, happily for the Friends at least, declined. Invited to Herford in Westphalia by Elizabeth, daughter of the Elector Palatine, De Labadie and his followers preached incessantly, and succeeded in arousing a wild enthusiasm among the people, who neglected their business and gave way to excitements and strange practices. Men and women, it was said, at the Communion drank and danced together, and private marriages, or spiritual unions, were formed. Labadie died in 1674 at Altona, in Denmark, maintaining his testimonies to the last. 'Nothing remains for me,' he said, 'except to go to my God.' Death is merely ascending from a lower and narrower chamber to one higher and holier.'

In 1679, Peter Sluyter and Jasper Dankers were sent to America by the community at the Castle of Wieward. Their journal, translated from the Dutch and edited by Henry C. Murphy, has been recently (1872) published by the Long Island Historical Society. They made some converts, and among them was the eldest son of Hermanns, the proprietor of a rich tract of land at the head of Chesapeake Bay, known as Bohemia Manor. Sluyter obtained a grant of this tract, and established upon it a community numbering at one time a hundred souls. Very contradictory statements are on record regarding his headship of this spiritual family, the discipline of which seems to have been of more than monastic severity. Certain it is that he bought and sold slaves, and manifested more interest in the world's goods than became a believer in the near Millennium. He evinces in his journal an overweening spiritual pride, and speaks contemptuously of other professors, especially the Quakers whom he met in his travels. The latter, on the contrary, seem to have looked favorably upon the Labadists, and uniformly speak of them courteously and kindly. His journal shows him to have been destitute of common gratitude and Christian charity. He threw himself upon the generous hospitality of the Friends wherever he went, and repaid their kindness by the coarsest abuse and misrepresentation.

22. His long-disused and half-forgotten lore.

Among the pioneer Friends were many men of learning and broad and liberal views. Penn was conversant with every department of literature and philosophy. Thomas Lloyd was a ripe and rare scholar. The great Loganian Library of Philadelphia bears witness to the varied learning and classical taste of its donor, James Logan. Thomas Story, member of the Council of State, Master of the Rolls and Commissioner of Claims under William Penn, and an able minister of his Society, took a deep interest in scientific questions, and in a letter to his friend Logan, written while on a religious visit to Great Britain, seems to have anticipated the conclusion of modern geologists. 'I spent,' he says, 'some months, especially at Scarborough, during the season attending meetings, at whose high cliffs and the variety of strata therein and their several positions I further learned and was confirmed in some things,—that the earth is of much older date as to the beginning of it than the time assigned in the Holy Scriptures as commonly understood, which is suited to the common capacities of mankind, as to six days of progressive work, by which I understand certain long and competent periods of time, and not natural days.' It was sometimes made a matter of reproach by the Anabaptists and other sects, that the Quakers read profane writings and philosophies, and that they quoted heathen moralists in support of their views. Sluyter and Dankers, in their journal of American travels, visiting a Quaker preacher's house at Burlington, on the Delaware, found 'a volume of Virgil lying on the window, as if it were a common hand-book; also Helmont's book on Medicine (Ortus Medicinæ, id est Initia Physica inaudita progressus medicinæ novus in morborum ultionem ad vitam longam), whom, in an introduction they have made to it, they make to pass for one of their own sect, although in his lifetime he did not know anything about Quakers.' It would appear from this that the half-mystical, half-scientific writings of the alchemist and philosopher of Vilverde had not escaped the notice of Friends, and that they had included him in their broad eclecticism.

23. As still in Hemskerck's Quaker Meeting.

'The Quaker's Meeting,' a painting by E. Hemskerck (supposed to be Egbert Hemskerck the younger, son of Egbert Hemskerck the old), in which William Penn and others—among them Charles II., or the Duke of York—are represented along with the rudest and most stolid class of the British rural population at that period. Hemsckerck came to London from Holland with King William in 1689. He delighted in wild, grotesque subjects, such as the nocturnal intercourse of witches and the temptation of St. Anthony. Whatever was strange and uncommon attracted his free pencil. Judging from the portrait of Penn, he must have drawn his faces, figures, and costumes from life, although there may be something of caricature in the convulsed attitudes of two or three of the figures.

24. The Indian from his face washed all his war-paint off.

In one of his letters addressed to German Friends, Pastorius says: 'These wild men, who never in their life heard Christ's teachings about temperance and contentment, herein far surpass the Christians. They live far more contented and unconcerned for the morrow. They do not overreach in trade. They know nothing of our everlasting pomp and stylishness. They neither curse nor swear, are temperate in food and drink, and if any of them get drunk, the mouth-Christians are at fault, who, for the sake of accursed lucre, sell them strong drink.'

Again he wrote in 1698 to his father that he finds the Indians reasonable people, willing to accept good teaching and manners, evincing an inward piety toward God, and more eager, in fact, to understand things divine than many among those who in the pulpit teach Christ in word, but by ungodly life deny Him.

'It is evident,' says Professor Seidensticker, 'Pastorius holds up the Indian as Nature's unspoiled child to the eyes of the "European Babel," somewhat after the same manner in which Tacitus used the barbarian Germani to shame his degenerate countrymen.'

As believers in the universality of the Saving Light, the outlook of early Friends upon the heathen was a very cheerful and hopeful one. God was as near to them as to Jew or Anglo-Saxon; as accessible at Timbuctoo as at Rome or Geneva. Not the letter of Scripture, but the spirit which dictated it, was of saving efficacy. Robert Barclay is nowhere more powerful than in his argument for the salvation of the heathen, who live according to their light, without knowing even the name of Christ. William Penn thought Socrates as good a Christian as Richard Baxter.

Early Fathers of the Church, as Origen and Justin Martyr, held broader views on this point than modern Evangelicals. Even Augustine, from whom Calvin borrowed his theology, admits that he has no controversy with the admirable philosophers Plato and Plotinus. 'Nor do I think,' he says in De Civ. Dei, lib. xviii., cap. 47, 'that the Jews dare affirm that none belonged unto God but the Israelites.'

25. To-morrow shall bring another day.

A common saying of Valdemar; hence his sobriquet Allerdag.

26. The Witch of Wenham.

[The house referred to in the head-note is that known as the old Prince house, near Oak Knoll, on the estate now owned by the Xaverian Brothers. In sending the poem to The Atlantic, where it was first published, Whittier wrote to the editor: 'I do not know how it may strike thee; to me (who am no good judge) it seems one of my best.']

27. The Homestead.

[In a letter written after the appearance of The Homestead, Whittier wrote: 'I saw in the country several of these melancholy spectacles of abandoned homes. I think the farmers of New England are better off as a class, on their hard soil, than those who are on the rich lands of the West. They are not rich, but they are not poor; they live comfortably, and as a rule own their farms clear of mortgage. If they were content to live and toil as the poorer farmers in the West do, they would double their deposits in the saving-banks.']

28. And led by Him, nor man nor devils I fear.

'He [Macy] shook the dust from off his feet, and departed with all his worldly goods and his family. He encountered a severe storm, and his wife, influenced by some omens of disaster, besought him to put back. He told her not to fear, for his faith was perfect. But she entreated him again. Then the spirit that impelled him broke forth: "Woman, go below and seek thy God. I fear not the witches on earth, or the devils in hell!"'—Life of Robert Pike, page 55.

29. The hardy Anglo-Saxon stood.

The celebrated Captain Smith, after resigning the government of the Colony in Virginia, in his capacity of 'Admiral of New England,' made a careful survey of the coast from Penobscot to Cape Cod, in the summer of 1614.

30. The sweetest name in all his story.

Captain Smith gave to the promontory, now called Cape Ann, the name of Tragabazanda, in memory of his young and beautiful mistress of that name, who, while he was a captive at Constantinople, like Desdemona, 'loved him for the dangers he had passed.'

31. The Old Burying-Ground.

[This poem was written with a thought of the ancient cemetery at East Haverhill, near Rocks Village. 'The entire piece,' Whittier wrote to Lowell, 'has now to me a deep and solemn significance. It was written in part while watching at the sick-bed of my dear mother—now no longer with us. She passed away a few days ago, in the beautiful serenity of a Christian faith, a quiet and peaceful dismissal.']

32. The River Path.

[To a friend who inquired as to the origin of this poem, Whittier wrote: 'The poem was suggested by an evening on the Merrimac River in company with my dear sister, who is no longer with me, having crossed the river (as I fervently hope), to the glorified hill of God.']

33. The Vanishers.

[This was the first poem written by Whittier after the death of his sister Elizabeth. In a letter to Mr. Fields he says: 'If thee have read Schoolcraft thee will remember what he says of the Packwud-jinnies or "little vanishers." The reference is to History, Condition and Prospects of the American Indians, pp. 122, 123.]

34. I see the gray fort's broken wall.

[The place that was in the mind of the poet when he wrote this stanza was on the rocks at Marblehead, where he had spent an early morning more than forty years before.]

35. Over Sihmah's vine.

'O vine of Sihmah! I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer!'—Jeremiah, xlviii. 32.

36. Even as the great Augustine

Questioned earth and sea and sky.
'Interrogavi Terram,' etc. August., Soliloq., Cap. xxxi.

37. To a Friend.

[The friend was Elizabeth Neall, afterward Mrs. Sydney Howard Gay.]

38. Lucy Hooper.

[It was in the summer of 1837, while residing in New York, that Whittier made the acquaintance of Lucy Hooper. She was a native of Essex County, and was at that time living with her parents in Brooklyn. Whittier encouraged her literary ambition, for she had given promise of poetic excellence, and was considering the advisability of publishing a volume. When Whittier shortly afterward was editing The Pennsylvania Freeman, he printed several of her poems. Later in 1839 he was with her by the Merrimac one August afternoon.]

39. *And the goodman's voice, at strife
With his shrill and tipsy wife.*

[When Whittier first went to school with his sister Mary, the school-house was undergoing repairs, and the school was held in a dwelling-house, the other part of which was occupied by a tipsy and quarrelsome couple.]

40. Homilies from Oldbug hear.

Dr. Withington, author of The Puritan, under the name of Jonathan Oldbug.

41. The holy monk of Kempen spake.

Thomas à Kempis in De Imitatione Christi.

42. When, years ago, beside the summer sea.

[In the great political contest of 1850, in Massachusetts, when the United States senatorship was in question, Whittier took an active part in forming the coalition between the Free Soilers and the Democrats. He went to Phillips Beach, Swampscott, to see Sumner and induce him to accept the nomination.]

43. I thank you for sweet summer days.

[At one of the Laurel festivals the guests who had so often enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Ashby presented them with an album containing photographs and other tokens of their appreciation. Upon the first page were written these lines by Whittier:—

DEAR FRIENDS —

Accept this book whose pages hold
The sun-traced shadows manifold
Of friends, who 've known you long and well
At city hearth, in sylvan dell,
Enjoying under roof and tree
Your liberal hospitality;
Who grateful own that while you gave
Your life-long labor to the slave,
(A labor crowned with more success
Than hope could dream, or wisdom guess)
You kept warm hearts, and opened wide
Your windows on life's sunny side.
Take, then, the volume with our thanks,
And long upon your river banks
When in azalia-gladdened woods
The June sun swells the laurel buds,
May we still meet as we have met,
And larger make to you our debt.]

44. Hymn for the House of Worship at Georgetown.

[Whittier published the following card in the Boston Transcript, January 30, 1868: 'In writing the Hymn for the Memorial Church at Georgetown, the author, as his verses indicate, has sole reference to the tribute of a brother and sister to the memory of a departed mother, —a tribute which seemed, and still seems to him in itself considered, very beautiful and appropriate; but he has since seen with surprise and sorrow a letter read at the dedication, imposing certain extraordinary restrictions upon the society which is to occupy the house. It is due to himself, as a simple act of justice, to say that had he known of the existence of that letter previously, the Hymn would never have been written, nor his name in any way connected with the proceedings.' The restrictions imposed were designed to prevent the use of the building for any lecture or discussion on political subjects or other matters inconsistent with the preaching of the gospel.]

45. Fie on the witch!

Goody Cole was brought before the Quarter Sessions in 1680 to answer to the charge of being a witch. The Court could not find satisfactory evidence of witchcraft, but so strong was the feeling against her that Major Waldron, the presiding magistrate, ordered her to be imprisoned, with a 'lock kept on her leg,' at the pleasure of the Court. In such judicial action one can read the fear and vindictive spirit of the community at large.

46. 'Amen' said Father Bachiler.

[Evidence found in favor of the Rev. Stephen Bachiler, an ancestor of the poet, after the poem was first printed, led Whittier to modify lines which implied the guilt of the clergyman.]

47. His Crimean camp-song, hints to us.

The reference is to Bayard Taylor's poem, The Song of the Camp.

48. The Palatine.

[The legend on which this ballad is founded was told to Mr. Whittier by his friend, Joseph P. Hazard, of Newport, R. I., two years before the poem was written. About two years after it was published, he received a curious letter from Mr. Benjamin Corydon, of Napoli, N. Y., then in the ninety-second year of his age, who wrote:—

'The Palatine was a ship that was driven upon Block Island, in a storm, more than a hundred years ago. Her people had just got ashore, and were on their knees thanking God for saving them from drowning, when the Islanders rushed upon them and murdered them all. That was a little more than the Almighty could stand, so He sent the Fire or Phantom Ship, to let them know He had not forgotten their wickedness. She was seen once a year on the same night of the year on which the murders occurred, as long as any of the wreckers were living; but never after all were dead. I must have seen her eight or ten times—perhaps more—in my early days. It is seventy years or more since she was last seen. My father lived right opposite Block Island, on the mainland, so we had a fair view of her as she passed down by the island, then she would disappear. She resembled a full-rigged ship, with her sails all set and all ablaze. It was the grandest sight I ever saw in all my life. I know of only two living who ever saw her,—Benjamin L. Knowles, of Rhode Island, now ninety-four years old, and myself, now in my ninety-second year.]

49. Toussaint L'Ouverture.

The reader may, perhaps, call to mind the beautiful sonnet of William Wordsworth, addressed to Toussaint L'Ouverture, during his confinement in France:—

Toussaint!—thou most unhappy man of men!
Whether the whistling rustic tends his plough
Within thy bearing, or thou liest now
Buried in some deep dungeon's earless den;
O miserable chieftain!—where and when
Wilt thou find patience?—Yet, do not, do thou
Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful brow;
Though fallen thyself, never to rise again,
Live and take comfort. Thou hast left behind Powers that will work for thee, air, earth, and skies,—
There's not a breathing of the common wind
That will forget thee; thou hast great allies.
Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable mind.

50. And he, the basest of the base.

The Northern author of the Congressional rule against receiving petitions of the people on the subject of Slavery.

50a. So shalt thou deftly raise

The market price of human flesh.

There was at the time when this poem was written an Association in Liberty County, Georgia, for the religious instruction of negroes. One of their annual reports contains an address by the Rev. Josiah Spry Law, in which the following passage occurs: 'There is a growing interest in this community in the religious instruction of Negroes. There is a conviction that religious instruction promotes the quiet and order of the people, and the pecuniary interest of the owners.'

51. The Pine-Tree.

[Whittier wrote this poem immediately upon reading the proceedings of the convention. He enclosed it in the following note to Charles Sumner: 'I have just read the proceedings of your Whig convention, and the lines enclosed are a feeble expression of my feelings. I look upon the rejection of Stephen C. Phillips's resolutions as an evidence that the end and aim of the managers of the convention was to go just far enough to scare the party and no farther. All thanks for the free voices of thyself, Phillips, Allen, and Adams. Notwithstanding the result you have not spoken in vain. If thee think well enough of these verses, hand them to the Whig or Chronotype.']

52. I hear the Free-Wills singing.

The book-establishment of the Free-Will Baptists in Dover was refused the act of incorporation by the New Hampshire Legislature, for the reason that the newspaper organ of that sect and its leading preachers favored abolition.

53. Our Belknap brother heard with awe.
The senatorial editor of the Belknap Gazette all along manifested a peculiar horror of 'niggers' and 'nigger parties.'

54. At Pittsfield Reuben Learmitt saw.

The justice before whom Elder Storrs was brought, for preaching abolition, on a writ drawn by Hon. M. N., Jr., of Pittsfield. The sheriff served the writ while the elder was praying.

55. The schoolhouse, out of Canaan hauled.

The academy at Canaan, N.H., received one or two colored scholars, and was in consequence dragged off into a swamp by Democratic teams.

56. What boots it that we pelted out

The anti-slavery women.

The Female Anti-Slavery Society, at its first meeting in Concord, was assailed with stones and brickbats.

57. For this did shifty Atherton

Make gag rules for the Great House?

'Papers and memorials touching the subject of slavery shall be laid on the table without reading, debate, or reference.' So read the gag-law, as it was called, introduced into the House by Mr. Atherton.

58. The first great triumph won
In Freedom's name.

The election of Charles Sumner to the United States Senate 'followed hard upon' the rendition of the fugitive Sims by the United States officials and the armed police of Boston.

59. To William H. Seward.

['Tell Mr. Seward,' Whittier wrote to A. W. Thayer, February 1, 1861, 'I have bound him to good behavior in my verse, and that if he yields the ground upon which the election was carried and consents to the further extension of slavery he will compromise me, as well as the country and himself.']

60. Garrison.

[Whittier's tribute to 'Garrison' was published in the Independent, June 5, 1879, and was accompanied by the following letter to the editor:—

'At the solemn and impressive funeral of my beloved and early friend, William Lloyd Garrison, one of the speakers read a part of the following poem, which I now send, asking a place for it in thy paper, although after the surpassingly beautiful tribute of Wendell Phillips, and the perhaps still more touchingly eloquent words of Theodore D. Weld, it may seem almost superfluous. Something on my part seems due to the intimate friendship of more than fifty years, unbroken and undisturbed by any differences of opinion and action during the long anti-slavery struggle.']

61. And beauty is its own excuse.

For the idea of this line, I am indebted to Emerson, in his inimitable sonnet to the Rhodora:—

If eyes were made for seeing,
Then Beauty is its own excuse for being.

62. No social smoke

Curled over woods of snow-hung oak.

[So isolated was the Whittier homestead that from the date of its erection to the present time no neighbor's roof has been in sight.]

63. Ah, brother! only I and thou.

[Matthew Franklin Whittier, born July 4, 1812, died January 7, 1883. In middle life, during his residence in Portland, he took a deep interest in the anti-slavery movement, and wrote a series of caustic letters under the signature Ethan Spike of Hornby.]

64. The African Chief was the title of a poem by Mrs. Sarah Wentworth Morton, wife of the Hon. Perez Morton, a former attorney-general of Massachusetts. Mrs. Morton's nom de plume was Philetia.

The school book in which The African Chief was printed was Caleb Bingham's The American Precceptor, and the poem contained fifteen stanzas, of which the first four were as follows:—

See how the black ship cleaves the main
High-bounding o'er the violet wave,
Remurmuring with the groans of pain,
Deep freighted with the princely slave

Did all the gods of Afric sleep,
Forgetful of their guardian love,
When the white traitors of the deep
Betrayed him in the pained grove?

A chief of Gambia's golden shore,
Whose arm the band of warriors led,
Perhaps the lord of boundless power,
By whom the foodless poor were fed

Does not the voice of reason cry,
'Claim the first right which nature gave,
From the red scourge of bondage fly,
Nor deign to live a burdened slave'?

65. Or Chalkley's Journal, old and quaint.

Chalkley's own narrative of this incident, as given in his Journal, is as follows: 'To stop their murmuring, I told them they should not need to cast lots, which was usual in such cases, which of us should die first, for I would freely offer up my life to do them good. One said, "God bless you! I will not eat any of you." Another said, "He would die before he would eat any of me," and so said several. I can truly say, on that occasion, at that time, my life was not dear to me, and that I was serious and ingenuous in my proposition: and as I was leaning over the side of the vessel, thoughtfully considering my proposal to the company, and looking in my mind to Him that made me, a very large dolphin came up towards the top or surface of the water, and looked me in the face; and I called the people to put a hook into the sea, and take him, for here is one come to redeem me (I said to them). And they put a hook into the sea, and the fish readily took it and they caught him. He was longer than myself. I think he was about six feet long, and the largest that ever I saw. This plainly showed us that we ought not to distrust the providence of the Almighty. The people were quieted by this act of Providence, and murmured no more. We caught enough to eat plentifully of, till we got into the capes of Delaware.'

66. Our uncle, innocent of books.

[For further account of Whittier's uncle Moses, the reader is referred to Whittier's Prose Works, vol. i. p. 323.]

67. There, too, our elder sister plied.

[Mary Whittier, born September 3, 1806, married Jacob Caldwell of Haverhill, had two children, Lewis Henry and Mary Elizabeth, and died January 7, 1860.]

68. Our youngest and our dearest sat.

[Elizabeth Hussey Whittier, born December 7, 1815, was to her brother John what Dorothy Wordsworth was to William. It was her brother's opinion that 'had her health, sense of duty, and almost morbid dread of spiritual and intellectual egotism permitted, she might have taken a high place among lyrical singers.' She died September 3, 1864.]

69. The master of the district school.

[Until near the end of his life, Whittier was unable to recall the name of the schoolmaster who stood for this figure in Snow-Bound. At last he remembered his name as Haskell, and from this clue the person was traced. He was George Haskell from Waterford, Maine, a Dartmouth student, who studied medicine, and died in Vineland, New Jersey, in 1876.]

70. Another guest that winter night.

[In his introductory note, Whittier adds somewhat to his characterization of Harriet Livermore. At the time when Snow-Bound was written he did not know that she was living, or he might not have introduced her. She died in 1867.]

71. The crazy Queen of Lebanon.

An interesting account of Lady Hester Stanhope may be found in Kinglake's Edothen, chap. viii.

72. These Flemish pictures of old days.

[In 1888 Whittier wrote the following lines on the fly-leaf of a copy of the first edition of Snow-Bound:—

Twenty years have taken flight
Since these pages saw the light.
All home loves are gone,
But not all with sadness, still,
Do the eyes of memory fill
As I gaze thereon.

Long and weary life seemed when
First these pictures of the pen
Grew upon my page;
But I still have loving friends
And the peace our Father sends
Cheers the heart of age.

73. From the Bay State's graceful daughter.

[The late Mrs. Jettie Morrill Wason, daughter of the late Hon. George Morrill of Amesbury.]

74. O Beauty, old yet ever new.

'Too late I loved Thee, O Beauty of ancient days, yet ever new! And lo! Thou wert within, and I abroad searching for Thee. Thou wert with me, but I was not with Thee.'—August, Soliloq., Book X.

75. Who saw the Darkness overflowed.

'And I saw that there was an Ocean of Darkness and Death: but an infinite Ocean of Light and Love flowed over the Ocean of Darkness: And in that I saw the infinite Love of God.' George Fox's Journal.

76. The Cry of a Lost Soul.

The story of the origin of this name, El alma perdida, is thus related by Lieut. Herndon. 'An Indian and his wife went out from the village to work their chacia, carrying their infant with them. The woman went to the spring to get water, leaving the man in charge of the child, with many cautions to take good care of it. When she arrived at the spring, she found it dried up, and went further to look for another. The husband, alarmed at her long absence, left the child and went in search. When they returned the child was gone; and to their repeated cries, as they wandered through the woods in search, they could get no response save the wailing cry of this little bird heard for the first time, whose notes their anxious and excited imagination syllabled into pa-pa, ma-ma (the present Quichua name of the bird). I suppose the Spaniards heard this story, and with that religious poetic turn of thought which seems peculiar to this people, called the bird "The Lost Soul." Exploration of the Valley of the Amazon made under direction of the Navy Department. By William Lewis Herndon and Lardner Gibbon, Part I. p. 156.

77. The Light that is felt.

[The origin of this poem is explained in the following letter from Mrs. George A. Palmer, of Elmira, N. Y.—

'When my oldest daughter was two and a half years old she knew Whittier's Barefoot Boy by heart, thus: when I would repeat it to her the omission of a line would be instantly corrected, as one day she said to me, "Mamma, you skipped out 'apples of Cusperides.'" Once, in going ahead of me in a dark hall, she turned with sudden fear, and said, "Mamma, take hold of my hand, so it will not be so dark." This incident and the fact of her affection for Mr. Whittier's poetry was reported to him by a friend of the family. My surprise and delight were great when, in April, 1884, I received a kind letter from the poet and a manuscript copy of the poem, which was afterward published in the Christmas number of St. Nicholas. In his letter Mr. Whittier said, "I am glad to have such a friend in thy little girl. Her good opinion of my verses is worth more to me than that of a learned reviewer. I send a rhymed paraphrase of her own beautiful thought."']

78. Mogg Megone.

Mogg Megone, or Hegone, was a leader among the Saco Indians, in the bloody war of 1677. He attacked and captured the garrison at Black Point, October 12th of that year; and cut off, at the same time, a party of Englishmen near Saco River. From a deed signed by this Indian in 1664, and from other circumstances, it seems that, previous to the war, he had mingled much with the colonists. On this account, he was probably selected by the principal sachems as their agent in the treaty signed in November, 1676.

79. 'Twas the gift of Castine to Mogg Megone.

Baron de St. Castine came to Canada in 1644. Leaving his civilized companions, he plunged into the great wilderness, and settled among the Penobscot Indians, near the mouth of their noble river. He here took for his wives the daughters of the great Modocawando, — the most powerful sachem of the East. His castle was plundered by Governor Andros, during his reckless administration; and the enraged Baron is supposed to have excited the Indians into open hostility to the English.

80. Grey Jocelyn's eye is never sleeping.

The owner and commander of the garrison at Black Point, which Mogg attacked and plundered. He was an old man at the period to which the tale relates.

81. Where Philip's men their watch are keeping.

Major Phillips, one of the principal men of the Colony. His garrison sustained a long and terrible siege by the savages. As a magistrate and a gentleman, he exacted of his plebeian neighbors a remarkable degree of deference. The Court Records of the settlement inform us that an individual was fined for the heinous offence of saying that 'Major Phillips's mare was as lean as an Indian dog.'

82. Steals Harmon down from the sands of York.

Captain Harmon, of Georgeana, now

York, was for many years the terror of the Eastern Indians. In one of his expeditions up the Kennebec River, at the head of a party of rangers, he discovered twenty of the savages asleep by a large fire. Cautiously creeping towards them until he was certain of his aim, he ordered his men to single out their objects. The first discharge killed or mortally wounded the whole number of the unconscious sleepers.

83. For vengeance left his vine-hung isle.

Wood Island, near the mouth of the Saco. It was visited by the Sieur de Monts and Champlain, in 1603. The following extract, from the journal of the latter, relates to it: 'Having left the Kennebec, we ran along the coast to the westward, and cast anchor under a small island, near the mainland, where we saw twenty or more natives. I here visited an island, beautifully clothed with a fine growth of forest trees, particularly of the oak and walnut; and overspread with vines, that, in their season, produce excellent grapes. We named it the island of Bacehus.'—Les Voyages de Sieur Champlain, liv. 2, c. 8.

84. The hunted outlaw, Bonython.

John Bonython was the son of Richard Bonython, Gent., one of the most efficient and able magistrates of the Colony. John proved to be 'a degenerate plant.' In 1635, we find by the Court Records that, for some offence, he was fined 40s. In 1640, he was fined for abuse toward R. Gilson, the minister, and Mary, his wife. Soon after he was fined for disorderly conduct in the house of his father. In 1645, the 'Great and General Court adjudged John Bonython outlawed, and incapable of any of his Majesty's laws, and proclaimed him a rebel.' (Court Records of the Province, 1645.) In 1651, he bade defiance to the laws of Massachusetts, and was again outlawed. He acted independently of all law and authority; and hence, doubtless, his burlesque title of 'the Sagamore of Saco,' which has come down to the present generation in the following epitaph:—

Here lies Bonython, the Sagamore of Saco;
He lived a rogue, and died a knave, and went to Hobomoko.

By some means or other, he obtained a large estate. In this poem, I have taken some liberties with him, not strictly warranted by historical facts, although the conduct imputed to him is in keeping with his general character. Over the last years of his life lingers a deep obscurity. Even the manner of his death is uncertain.

He was supposed to have been killed by the Indians; but this is doubted by the able and indefatigable author of the History of Saco and Biddeford.—Part I. p. 115.

85. From the leaping brook to the Saco River.

Foxwell's Brook flows from a marsh or bog, called the 'Heath,' in Saco, containing thirteen hundred acres. In this brook, and surrounded by wild and romantic scenery, is a beautiful waterfall, of more than sixty feet.

86. Where zealous Hiacoomes stood.

Hiacoomes, the first Christian preacher on Martha's Vineyard; for a biography of whom the reader is referred to Increase Mayhew's account of the Praying Indians, 1726. The following is related of him: 'One Lord's day, after meeting, where Hiacoomes had been preaching, there came in a Powwaw very angry, and said, "I know all the meeting Indians are liars. You say you don't care for the Powwaws;" then calling two or three of them by name, he railed at them, and told them they were deceived, for the Powwaws could kill all the meeting Indians, if they set about it. But Hiacoomes told him that he would be in the midst of all the Powwaws in the island, and they should do the utmost they could against him; and when they should do their worst by their witchcraft to kill him, he would without fear set himself against them, by remembering Jehovah. He told them also he did put all the Powwaws under his heel. Such was the faith of this good man. Nor were these Powwaws ever able to do these Christian Indians any hurt, though others were frequently hurt and killed by them.'—Mayhew, pp. 6, 7, c. 1.

87. Because she cries with an ache in her tooth.

'The tooth-ache,' says Roger Williams in his observations upon the language and customs of the New England tribes, 'is the only pain which will force their stoute hearts to cry.' He afterwards remarks that even the Indian women never cry as he has heard 'some of their men in this paine.'

88. Wuttamuttata, 'Let us drink,' Weekan, 'It is sweet.' Vide Roger Williams's Key to the Indian Language, 'in that parte of America called New England.'—London, 1643, p. 35.

89. Wetuomanit,—a house god, or demon. 'They—the Indians—have given me the names of thirty-seven gods which I have, all which in their solemn Worship they invoke!"—R. Williams's Briefe Observations of the Customs, Manners, Worships, etc., of the Natives, in Peace and Warre, in Life and Death: on all which is added Spiritual Observations, General and Particular, of Chiefe and Special use—upon all occasions—to all the English inhabiting these parts; yet Pleasant and Profitable to the view of all Men: p. 110, c. 21.

90. Which marks afar the Desert Isle.

Mt. Desert Island, the Bald Mountain upon which overlooks Frenchman's and Penobscot Bay. It was upon this island that the Jesuits made their earliest settlement.

91. Half trembling, as he seeks to look.

Father Hennepin, a missionary among the Iroquois, mentions that the Indians believed him to be a conjurer, and that they were particularly afraid of a bright silver chalice which he had in his possession. 'The Indians,' says Père Jerome Lallamant, 'feared us as the greatest sorcerers on earth.'

92. For Bomazeen from Tacconock.

Bomazeen is spoken of by Penhallow as 'the famous warrior and chieftain of Norridgewock.' He was killed in the attack of the English upon Norridgewock, in 1724.

93. Like a shrouded ghost, the Jesuit stunds.

Père Ralle, or Rasles, was one of the most zealous and indefatigable of that band of Jesuit missionaries who at the beginning of the seventeenth century penetrated the forests of America, with the avowed object of converting the heathen. The first religious mission of the Jesuits to the savages in North America was in 1611. The zeal of the fathers for the conversion of the Indians to the Catholic faith knew no bounds. For this they plunged into the depths of the wilderness; habituated themselves to all the hardships and privations of the natives; suffered cold, hunger, and some of them death itself, by the extremest tortures. Père Brebeuf, after laboring in the cause of his mission for twenty years, together with his companion, Père Lallamant, was burned alive. To these might be added the names of those Jesuits who were put to death by the Iroquois,—Daniel, Garnier, Buteaux, La Riborède, Goupil, Constantin, and Liegeouis. 'For bed,' says Father Lallamant, in his Rela- tion de ce qui s'est dans le pays des Hurons, 1640, c. 3, 'we have nothing but a miserable piece of bark of a tree; for nourishment, a handful or two of corn, either roasted or soaked in water, which seldom satisfies our hunger; and after all, not venturing to perform even the ceremonies of our religion without being considered as sorcerers.' Their success among the natives, however, by no means equalled their exertions. Père Lallamant says: 'With respect to adult persons, in good health, there is little apparent success; on the contrary, there have been nothing but storms and whirlwinds from that quarter.'

Sebastian Ralle established himself, some time about the year 1670, at Norridgewock, where he continued more than forty years. He was accused, and perhaps not without justice, of exciting his Praying Indians against the English, whom he looked upon as the enemies not only of his king, but also of the Catholic religion. He was killed by the English in 1724, at the foot of the cross which his own hands had planted. His Indian church was broken up, and its members either killed outright or dispersed.

In a letter written by Ralle to his nephew he gives the following account of his church and his own labors: 'All my converts repair to the church regularly twice every day: first, very early in the morning, to attend mass, and again in the evening, to assist in the prayers at sunset. As it is necessary to fix the imagination of savages, whose attention is easily distracted, I have composed prayers, calculated to inspire them with just sentiments of the august sacrifice of our altars; they chant, or at least recite them aloud, during mass. Besides preaching to them on Sundays and saints' days, I seldom let a working-day pass without making a concise exhortation, for the purpose of inspiring them with horror at those vices to which they are most addicted, or to confirm them in the practice of some particular virtue.'—Vide Lettres Edifiantes et Cur., vol. vi. p. 127.

94. Pale priest! What proud and lofty dreams.

The character of Ralle has probably never been correctly delineated. By his brethren of the Romish Church, he has been nearly apotheosized. On the other hand, our Puritan historians have represented him as a demon in human form. He was undoubtedly sincere in his devotion to the interests of his church, and not over-scrupulous as to the means of advancing those interests. 'The French,' says the author of the History of Saco and Biddeford, 'after the peace of 1713, secretly promised to supply the Indians with arms and ammunition, if they would renew hostilities. Their principal agent was the celebrated Ralle, the French Jesuit.'—p. 215.

95. Where are De Rouville and Castine.

Hertel de Rouville was an active and unsparing enemy of the English. He was the leader of the combined French and Indian forces which destroyed Deerfield and massacred its inhabitants, in 1703. He was afterwards killed in the attack upon Haverhill. Tradition says that, on examining his dead body, his head and face were found to be perfectly smooth, without the slightest appearance of hair or beard.

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

- A beautiful and happy girl, 422.
 A bending staff I would not break, 470.
 A blush as of roses, 349.
 Above, below, in sky and sod, 475.
 Accept this book, whose pages hold, 576
 A Christian ' going, gone, 314.
 A cloud, like that the old-time Hebrew saw, 181.
 Across the frozen marshes, 412
 Across the sea I heard the groans, 416
 Across the Stony Mountains, o'er the desert's drouth and sand, 336
 A dirge is wailing from the Gulf of storm-vexed
 Mexico, 531
 A drear and desolate shore, 139.
 A few brief years have passed away, 324
 After your pleasant morning travel, 568
 Against the sunset's glowing wall, 463
 Against the wooded hills it stands, 148.
 A gold fringe on the purpling hem, 177
 All day the darkness and the cold, 158
 All grim and soiled and brown with tan, 398
 'All hail!' the bells of Christmas rang, 50.
 All night above their rocky bed, 350
 'All ready?' cried the captain, 289
 Among the legends sung or said, 112.
 Along Crane River's sunny slopes, 129
 Along the aisle where prayer was made, 488
 Along the roadside, like the flowers of gold, 60
 Amidst these glorious works of Thine, 48
 Amidst Thuringia's wooded hills she dwelt, 140.
 Amidst thy sacred edifices, 381.
 Among their graven shapes to whom, 230
 Among the legends sung or said, 112.
 Among the thousands who with hail and cheer,
 519.
 A moony breadth of virgin face, 338.
 And have they spurned thy word, 556.
 Andrew Rykman's dead and gone, 478
 And where now, Bayard, will thy footsteps tend?
 232.
 A night of wonder! piled afar, 555
 Annie and Rhoda, sisters twain, 108.
 A noteless stream, the Buchbrook runs, 146
 Another hand is beckoning us, 195
 A picture memory brings to me, 448.
 A pious magistrate ' sound his praise throughout,
 343.
 Around Sebago's lonely lake, 11
 As Adam did in Paradise, 739.
 As a guest who may not stay, 234
 A score of years had come and gone, 1-6
 A shallow stream, from fountains 446
 As Islam's Prophet, when his last day drew, 148
 As o'er his furrowed fields which lie, 386
 A sound as if from bells of silver, 173
 A sound of tumult troubles all the air, 351.
 As they who, tossing midst the storm at night,
 332.
 As they who watch by sick-beds find relief, 85
 A strength Thy service cannot tire, 427.
 A strong and mighty Angel, 376
 A tale for Roman guides to tell, 145
 A tender child of summers three, 505
 At morn I prayed 'I fain would see, 47:
 A track of moonlight on a quiet lake, 206.
 Bards of the island city ' where of old, 500
 Beams of noon, like burning lances, through the tree tops flash and glisten, 332
 Bearer of Freedom's holy light, 384.
 Bear him, comrades, to his grave, 348.
 Before my drift-wood fire I sit, 51:
 Before the Fender comes, whose charioteer, 502
 Behind us at our evening meal, 482.
 Believe me, Lucy Larcom, it gives me real sorrow, 565.
 Beneath the low-hung night cloud, 125.
 Beneath the moonlight and the snow, 444.
 Beneath thy skies, November, 352.
 Beside a stricken field I stood, 367.

- Beside that milestone, where the level sun, 446
 Between the gates of birth and death, 518.
 Bind up thy tresses, thou beautiful one, 536.
 Bland as the morning breath of June, 157.
 Blessings on thee, little man, 431
 Blest land of Judea! thrice hallowed of song, 456
 Blossom and greenness, making all, 517.
 'Bring out your dead!' The midnight street, 1.
 Build at Kallundborg by the sea, 277
 But what avail inadequate words to reach, 502
 By fire and cloud, across the desert sand, 411
 Call him not heretic whose works attest, 500
 'Calm on the breast of Loch Maree, 41
 'Calmy the night came down, 506.
 Champion of those who groan beneath, 285
 'Climbing a path which leads back never more, 514
 Conductor Bradley, (always may his name, 128
 Dark the halls, and cold the feast, 72
 Dead Petra in her hill-tomb sleeps, 474
 Dear friends, who read the world aright, 205
 Dear Sister! while the wise and sage, 426
 Dream not, O Soul, that easy is the task, 501.
 Dry the tears for holy Eva, 238
 Ere down yon blue Carpathian hills, 18
 Fair Nature's priestesses! to whom, 206.
 Far away in the twilight time, 65.
 Far from his close and noisome cell, 387.
 Fate summoned, in gray-headed age, to act, 270
 Father! to Thy suffering poor, 459
 Fond scenes which delighted my youthful existence, 521
 For ages on our river borders, 168
 For the fairest maid in Hampton, 274
 For weeks the clouds had raked the hills, 92.
 Friend of mine! whose lot was cast, 427
 Friend of my many years, 450
 Friend of my soul! as with moist eye, 192
 Friend of the Slave, and yet the friend of all, 377
 From Alton Bay to Sandwich Down, 183
 From gold to gray, 414
 From pain and peril, by land and main, 510
 From purest wells of English undrilled, 514
 From the green Amesbury hill which bears the
 name, 140
 From the heart of Wambeck Methua, from the lake that never fails, 52
 From the hills of home forth looking, far beneath the tent-like span, 56
 From these wild rocks I look to-day, 247.
 From the well springs of Hudson, the sea-cliffs of Maine, 241.
 From Yorktown's ruins, ranked and still, 329.
 Gallery of sacred pictures manifold, 501.
 Get ye up from the wrath of God's terrible day,
 454
 Gift from the cold and silent past, 10.
 God bless New Hampshire! from her granite peaks, 319
 God bless ye, brothers! in the flight, 386
 God called the nearest angels who dwell with Him above, 495.
 God's love and peace be with thee, where, 207
 Gone before us, O our brother, 187
 Gone, gone,—sold and gone, 303
 Gone hath the spring, with all its flowers, 158.
 Gone to thy Heavenly Father's rest, 308
 Graceful in name and in thyself, our river, 516
 Gray searcher of the upper air, 520
 Great peace in Europe! Order reigns, 407
 Hall, heavenly gift! within the human breast, 523
 Hail to posterity, 113
 Hands off! thou tithe-fat plunderer! play, 203.
 Happy young friends, sit by me, 149
 Haunted of Beauty, like the marvellous youth, 237
 Have I not voyaged, friend beloved, with thee, 491.
 Have ye heard of our hunting, o'er mountain
 and glen, 293
 Heap high the farmer's wintry hoard, 397
 He comes,—he comes,—the Frost Spirit comes, 154.
 Heed how thou livest—Do no act by day, 500
 He had bowed down to drunkenness, 408
 He has done the work of a true man, 54
 Here is the place, right over the hill, 61
 Here, while the loom of Winter weaves, 430
 Her fingers shame the ivory keys, 80
 Her window opens to the bay, 172
 He stood on the brow of the well-known hill, 534
 His laurels fresh from song and laud, 233
 Ho—all to the borders! Vermonters, come down, 558
 Ho! thou who seekest late and long, 316
 Ho! workers of the old time styled, 390
 Hoot!—dair ye shaw ye're face again, 530.
 How bland and sweet the greeting of this breeze,
 104
 How has New England's romance fled, 5
 How smiled the land of France, 100.
 How strange to greet, this frosty morn, 162.
 How sweetly come the holy psalms, 217
 How sweetly on the wood-gilt town, 9
 Hurrah! the seaward breezes, 391
 Hushed now the sweet consoling tongue, 568.
 I ask not now for gold to gild, 469.
 I call the old time back: I bring my lay, 67
 I did but dream. I never knew, 487
 I do believe, and yet, in grief, 42.

I do not love thee, Isabel, and yet thou art most fair, 535.

If I have seemed more prompt to censure wrong, 214.

I give thee joy !—I know to thee, 220.

I have been thinking of the victims bound, 406.

I have not felt, o'er seas of sand, 468.

I heard the train's shrill whistle call, 344

I know not, Time and Space so intervene, 87.

I love the old melodious lays, 1

Immortal Love, forever full, 482.

I mourn no more my vanished years, 433.

In calm and cool and silence, once again, 472

I need not ask thee, for my sake, 223.

In my dream, methought I trod, 431.

In sky and wave the white clouds swam, 275

In that black forest, where, when day is done, 477.

In the fair land o'erwatched by Ischia's mountains, 218

In the minister's morning sermon, 499

In the old days (a custom laid aside, 282

In the old Hebrew myth the lion's frame, 380

In the outskirts of the village, 60

In the solemn days of old, 405.

In trance and dream of old, God's prophet saw, 224.

In Westminster's royal halls, 334.

I said 'I stood upon thy grave, 344.

I shall not soon forget that sight, 422.

I sing the Pilgrim of a softer clime, 113.

Is it the palm, the cocoa-palm, 169.

I spread a scanty board too late, 447.

Is this the land our fathers loved, 494

Is this thy voice whose treble notes of fear, 321

It chanced that while the pious troops of France, 409.

It is done, 377.

Its windows flashing to the sky, 74

It was late in mild October, and the long autumnal rain, 396.

I wait and watch ; before my eyes, 433.

I wandered lonely where the pine-trees made, 179

I would I were a painter, for the sake, 171.

I would not sin, in this half-playful strain, 263

I would the gift I offer here, 390.

I write my name as one, 449.

John Brown of Ossawatimie spake on his dying day, 219.

Just God ! and these are they, 296.

Know'st thou, O slave-cursed land, 368.

Last night, just as the tints of autumn's sky, 162.

Last week—the Lord be praised for all His mercies, 346.

Leagues north, as fly the gull and auk, 280.

'Let there be light' God spake of old, 254.

Lift again the stately emblem on the Bay State's rusted shield, 320.

Light, warmth, and sprouting greenness, and o'er all, 160.

Like that ancestral judge who bore his name, 568.

Long since, a dream of heaven I had, 487.

Look on him ! through his dungeon grate, 401.

Low in the east, against a white, cold dawn, 508.

Luck to the craft that bears this name of mine, 237.

Maddened by Earth's wrong and evil, 462

Maiden ! with the fair brown tresses, 187.

Make, for he loved thee well, our Merrimac, 513.

Maud Muller on a summer's day, 50.

Men ! if manhood still ye claim, 318.

Men of the North-land ! where's the manly spirit, 297.

Men said at vespers : 'All is well,' 251.

'Midst the men and things which will, 450.

'Midst the Paris bowers of Hungary, Imperial Presburg's pride, 532.

Muttering 'fine upland staple,' 'prime Sea-Island finer,' 563.

My ear is full of summer sounds, 363

My garden roses long ago, 260.

My heart was heavy, for its trust had been, 426.

My lady walks her morning round, 132.

My old Welsh neighbor over the way, 110.

My thoughts are all in yonder town, 492.

Nauhaught, the Indian deacon, who of old, 106.

'Neath skies that winter never knew, 255.

Never in tenderer quiet lapsed the day, 113

Night on the city of the Moor, 338.

Night was down among the mountains, 527.

No aimless wanderers, by the fend Unrest, 402.

No Berserk thirst of blood had they, 253.

No bird-song floated down the hill, 170.

No more these simple flowers belong, 215

Not always as the whirlwind's rush, 455.

Not as a poor requital of the joy, 194.

Not on Penobscot's wooded bank the spires, 261

Not unto us who did but seek, 379.

Not vainly did old poets tell, 197.

Not vainly we waited and counted the hours, 563

Not without envy Wealth at times must look, 418.

Not with the splendors of the days of old, 304.

Now, joy and thanks forevermore, 335.

O Ary Scheffer ! when beneath thine eye, 361.

O Christ of God ! whose life and death, 494.

O dearest bloom the seasons know, 502.

O dearly loved, 199.

O dwellers in the stately towns, 247.

O'er the bare woods, whose outstretched hands, 164.

Of all that Orient lands can vaunt, 345

Of all the rides since the birth of time, 50.

- O friends! with whom my feet have trod, 481
 Oh, dwarfed and wronged, and stained with ill, 490
 Oh, for a knight like Bayard, 210.
 Oh, greenly and fair in the lands of the sun, 425.
 Oh, none in all the world before, 372.
 O Holy Father! just and true, 302
 Oh, praise an' tanks! Do Lord He come, 369.
 Oh, thicker, deeper, darker growing, 221
 Oh, well may Essex sit forlorn, 231.
 Oh, who the speed of bird and wind, 458.
 O lady fair, these silks of mine are beautiful and
 rare, 3
 Old friend, kind friend! lightly down, 208.
 O lonely bay of Trinity, 278.
 Olor Iscarnus queries: 'Why should we, 364
 O Mother Earth! upon thy lap, 330.
 O Mother State! the winds of March, 227
 Once more, dear friends, you meet beneath, 373
 Once more, O all-adjusting Death, 237.
 Once more, O Mountains of the North, unwell, 171
 Once more on yonder laurelled height, 245
 One day, along the electric wire, 212.
 One morning of the first sad Fall, 238.
 One Sabbath day my friend and I, 101.
 O Norah, lay your basket down, 40.
 On page of thine I cannot trace, 423
 On the Isle of Penikese, 490.
 On these green bunks, where falls too soon, 511.
 On the wide lawn the snow lay deep, 445.
 O Painter of the fruits and flowers, 258.
 O people-chosen! are ye not, 379.
 O Poet rare and old, 408.
 O river winding to the sea, 514
 O State prayer-founded! never hung, 349.
 O storied vale of Merrimac, 262.
 O strong, upwelling prayers of faith, 49.
 O Thou, whose presence went before, 292
 Our fathers' God! from out whose hand, 255
 Our fellow-countrymen in chains, 291.
 Our vales are sweet with fern and rose, 168.
 Out and in the river is winding, 74
 Outbound, your bark awaits you. Were I one, 259.
 Out from Jerusalem, 131
 Over the threshold of his pleasant home, 150.
 Over the wooded northern ridge, 88.

 Pardon a stranger hand that gives, 562.
 Pardon, Lord, the lips that dare, 478.
 Piero Luca, known of all the town, 272.
 Pipes of the misty moorlands, 62
 Poet and friend of poets, if thy glass, 508
 Poor and inadequate the shadow-play, 446.
 Pray give the 'Atlantic,' 567.
 'Put up the sword!' The voice of Christ once
 more, 417.

 Raze these long blocks of brick and stone, 79.
 Red as the banner which enshrouds, 528.

 Right in the track where Sherman, 381.
 Rivermouth Rocks are fair to see, 266.
 Robert Rawlin!—Frosts were falling, 54

 Sad Mayflower! watched by winter stars, 163.
 Saint Patrick, slave to Milcho of the herds, 372.
 Sarah Greenleaf, of eighteen years, 558.
 Say, whose is this fair picture, which the light,
 553.
 Scarce had the solemn Sabbath-bell, 340.
 Seeress of the misty Norland, 201
 She came and stood in the Old South Church, 132.
 She sang alone, ere womanhood had known, 517
 She sings by her wheel at that low cottage-door, 292
 She was a fair young girl, yet on her brow, 531
 Should you go to Centre Harbor, 564.
 Silence o'er sea and earth, 525.
 Smoothing soft the nestling head, 505.
 So fallen! so lost! the light withdrawn, 204
 Some die too late and some too soon, 204
 So spake Esauas so, in words of flame, 216
 So stood of old the holy Christ, 495
 So this is all,—the utmost reach, 301.
 Sound now the trumpet warningly, 563
 Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands, 493.
 Spare me, dread angel of reproof, 480.
 Speak and tell us, our Ximena, looking northward far away, 37.
 Spirit of the frozen North, 526.
 Stand still, my soul, in the silent dark, 404
 Statesman, I thank thee! and, if yet dissent, 363
 Still, as of old, in Beaver's Vale, 300.
 Still in thy streets, O Paris! doth the stain, 399.
 Still linger in our noon of tin e, 494.
 Still sits the school-house by the road, 444
 Stranger and traveller 499
 Stream of my fathers! sweetly still, 154.
 Strike home, strong-hearted man! Down to the root 196.
 Summer's last sun high unto setting shines, 519
 Sunlight upon Judaea's hills, 455.
 Sweetest of all childlike dreams, 172.

 Take our hands, James Russell Lowell, 236.
 Talk not of sad November, when a day, 184
 Tauler, the preacher, walked, one autumn day, 47.
 Thank God for rest, where none molest, 379
 Thank God for the token! one lip is still free, 299
 Thanks for thy gift, 201
 The age is dull and mean Men creep, 346.
 The autumn-time has come, 443
 The beaver cut his timber, 83.
 The Benedictine Echard, 497
 The birds against the April wind, 375.
 The blast from Freedom's Northern Hills, upon its Southern way, 312.

The Brownie sits in the Scotchman's room, 6.
 The burly driver at my side, 202.
 The cannon's brazen lips are cold, 404.
 The circle is broken, one seat is forsaken 185.
 The clouds, which rise with thunder, slake, 470.
 The cross, if rightly borne, shall be, 210.
 The day is closing dark and cold, 39.
 The day's sharp strife is ended now, 117.
 The dreadful burden of our sins we feel, 509.
 The eagle, stooping from yon snow-blown peak,
 517.
 The elder folks shook hands at last, 484.
 The end has come, as come it must, 256.
 The evil days have come, the pool, 341.
 The fagots blazed, the caldron's smoke, 489.
 The firmament breaks up In black eclipse, 305.
 The flags of war like storm-birds fly, 371.
 The fourteen centuries fall away, 476.
 The Goodman sat beside his door, 15.
 The great work laid upon his twoscore years, 212.
 The gulf of seven and fifty years, 260.
 The harp at Nature's advent strung, 283.
 The Khan came from Bokhara town, 135.
 The land, that, from the rule of kings, 261.
 The land was pale with famine, 96.
 The lowliest born of all the land, 235.
 The mercy, O Eternal One, 506.
 The moon has set while yet the dawn, 342.
 The naive the Gallic exile bore, 446.
 The new world honors him whose lofty plea, 517.
 The old Squire said, as he stood by his gate, 113.
 The Pagan's myths through marble lips are spoken, 467.
 The Persian's flowery gifts, the shrine, 240.
 The pines were dark on Ramoth hill, 82.
 The pleasant isle of Rügen looks the Baltic water o'er, 151.
 The Prophet stood, 522.
 The proudest now is but my peer, 409.
 The Quaker of the olden time, 385.
 The Rabbi Ishmael, with the woe and sin, 138.
 The Rabbi Nathan twoscore years and ten, 97.
 There are streams which are famous in history's
 story, 522.
 The river hemmed with leaning trees, 174.
 The robins sang in the orchard, the buds into blossoms grew, 100.
 The roll of drums and the bugle's wailing, 245.
 The same old baffling questions! O my friend, 472.
 The shade for me, but over thee, 474.
 The shadows grow and deepen round me, 504.
 The shadows round the inland sea, 157.
 The skipper sailed out of the harbor mouth, 140.
 The sky is ruddy in the east, 394.
 The soul itself its awful witness is, 502.
 The South-land boasts its teeming cane, 405.
 The storm and peril overpast, 382.
 The subtle power in perfume found, 182.
 The summer waruth has left the sky, 176.

The sunlight glitters keen and bright, 156.
 The suns of eighteen centuries have shone, 384.
 The sun that brief December day, 435.
 The sweet spring day is glad with music, 225.
 The sword was slathed: in April's sun, 508.
 The tall, sallow guardsmen their horsetails have sprawl, 414.
 The tent lights glimmer on the land, 369.
 The threads our hands in blindness spin, 496.
 The time of gifts has come again, 174.
 The tossing spray of Cochecco's fall, 143.
 The tree of Faith its bare, dry boughs must
 shed, 505.
 The wave is breaking on the shore, 306.
 The winding way the serpent takes, 99.
 The years are but half a score, 420.
 The years are many since his hand, 213.
 The years are many since, in youth and hope, 100.
 The years that since we met have flown, 567.
 They hear Thee not, O God! nor see, 461.
 They left their home of summer ease, 178.
 They sat in silent watchfulness, 14.
 They tell me, Lucy, thou art dead, 191.
 Thine are all the gifts, O God, 256.
 Thine is a grief, the depth of which another, 198.
 This day, two hundred years ago, 239.
 Thou dwellest not, O Lord of all, 249.
 Though flowers have perished at the touch, 180.
 Thou hast fallen in thine armor, 186.
 Thrice welcome from the Land of Flowers, 259.
 Thrice welcome to thy sisters of the East, 329.
 Through heat and cold, and shower and sun, 395.
 Through the long hall the shuttered windows
 shed, 352.
 Through the streets of Marblehead, 257.
 Through Thy clear spaces, Lord, of old, 470.
 Thy error, Frémont, simply was to act, 366.
 'Tis over, Moses! All is lost, 325.
 'Tis said that in the Holy Land, 426.
 'Tis the noon of the spring time, yet never a
 bird, 159.
 To-day the plant by Williams set, 249.
 Token of friendship, true and tried, 308.
 To kneel before some saintly shrine, 181.
 To the God of all sure mercies let my blessing rise to-day, 19.
 To the winds give our banner! 13.
 To weary hearts, to mourning homes, 463.
 Traveller! on thy journey tolling, 7.
 Tritemius of Herbiopsis, one day, 58.
 'T was night The tranquil moonlight smile, 286.
 Twenty years have taken flight, 579.
 Type of two mighty continents!—combining, 207.
 Under the great hill sloping bare, 136.
 Under the shadow of a cloud, the light, 566.
 Unfathomed deep, unfetter'd waste, 525.
 Unnoted as the setting of a star, 237.
 Up and down the village streets, 71.

- Up from the meadows rich with corn, 374.
 Up from the sea the wild north wind is blowing,
 517.
 Up, laggards of Freedom!—our free flag is cast, 350.
 Up the hillside, down the glen, 317.
 Up the streets of Aberdeen, 36.

 Voice of a people suffering long, 382
 Voice of the Holy Spirit, making known, 301

 Wake, sisters, wake! the day-star shines, 496
 Wave of an awful torrent, thronging down, 552.
 Weary of jangling noises never stilled, 504.
 We cross the prairie as of old, 346.
 We give thy natal day to hope, 418.
 We had been wandering for many days, 14.
 We have opened the door, 134.
 Welcome home again, brave seaman! with thy thoughtful brow and gray, 323
 We live by Faith, but Faith is not the slave, 501
 Well speed thy mission, bold Iconoclast, 403.
 Well thought! who would not rather hear, 216.
 We praise not now the poet's art, 222.
 We sat together, last May-day, and talked, 233
 We saw the slow tides go and come, 175.
 We see not, know not, all our way, 364.
 We wait beneath the furnace-blast, 365.
 What flecks the outer gray beyond, 279.
 What shall I say, dear friends, to whom I owe,
 567
 What shall I wish him? Strength and health, 568
 What though around thee blazes, 319.
 When first I saw our banner wave, 370.

 When Freedom, on her natal day, 299.
 When on my day of life the night is falling, 503
 When the breath divine is flowing, 458.
 When the reaper's task was ended, and the summer wearing late, 64
 Where are we going? where are we going, 328.
 Where ceaseless Spring her garland twines, 252.
 Where, over heathen doom-rings and gray stones
 of the Horg, 123.
 Where the great Lake's sunny smiles, 269.
 Where Time the measure of his hours, 453.
 White clouds, whose shadows haunt the deep,
 160
 Who gives and hides the giving hand, 497.
 Who, looking backward from his manhood's
 prime, 469
 Who stands on that cliff, like a figure of stone, 536
 Why urge the long, unequal fight, 410
 Wildly round our woodland quarters, 392.
 With a cold and wintry noon-light, 321.
 With a glory of winter sunshine, 236.
 With clearer light, Cross of the South, shine
 forth, 416.
 With fifty years between you and your well-kept wedding vow, 252
 With warning hand I mark Time's rapid flight, 499
 With wisdom far beyond her years, 227.

 Years since (but names to me before), 225.
 Yes, let them gather! Summon forth, 309.
 Yes, pile the marble o'er him! It is well, 189.
 You flung your taunt across the wave, 368.
 You scarcely need my tardy thanks, 428.
